Buckeye Lake Shore Film Co., 422 N. High St., Columbus.
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co., 315 W. 4th St., Cincinnati.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 106 Prospect Ave., S. E., Cleveland.
Toledo Film Service, 120 Erie St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OREGON
Independent W. F. Exch., 84 Seventh St., Portland.
Laemmle Film Service Alliance, 333 Oak St., Portland.

OKLAHOMA
United Motion Picture Co., 112 Main St., Oklahoma City.

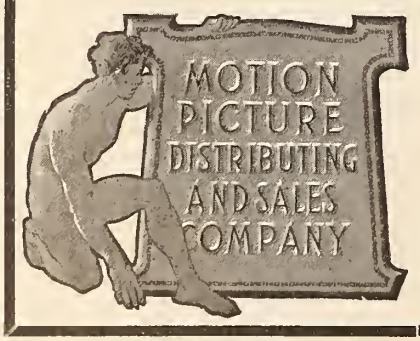
PENNSYLVANIA
Eagle Film Exchange, 23 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Exhibitors' Film Service Co., 49 So. Penn Ave., Wilkesbarre.
Philadelphia Film Exch., 934 Arch St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Projection Co., 44 No. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Swaab Film Service Co., 129 N. 8th St., Philadelphia.
Independent Film Exchange, 415 Ferry St., Pittsburg.
Pittsburg Photoplay Co., 412 Ferry St., Pittsburg.

TEXAS
Texas Film Exchange, 1315½ Elm St., Dallas.

UTAH
Co-Operative Ind. Film Co., 320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City.

WASHINGTON
Western Film Exchange, 807 Third Ave., Seattle.
Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN
Western Film Exchange, 307 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.



WE INTEND TO SELL OUR FILMS ON QUALITY

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

IMP

IMP

FREEMAN OWENS

THIS IS THE YOUNG CHAP WHO RISKED HIS LIFE

to obtain FOR YOU a marvelously exciting moving picture of the

CHARLESTON FLOOD AND HURRICANE

(Regular Imp Release of Sept. 18th.) (Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

It is a great picture, a grand scoop, a climax to the Imp's special efforts to make you glad you're Independent. Despite the fact that the picture was taken in the midst of flood and hurricane, it is clear and sharp. It is a marvelous feat in photography. There are scenes of tremendous waves dashing over docks with buildings in the background denuded of windows and roofs askew; buildings crumbled like houses of cards; railroad tracks lifted from their beds; heavily loaded freight cars overturned; huge trees uprooted; vessels driven ashore and stranded high and dry; streets flooded; vehicles almost hub deep in the flood. In the midst of all this, Freeman Owens kept turning the crank of his moving picture camera, thinking nothing of his own neck but glorying in the fact that the Imp would have another beat-of-the-world! Wire your exchange this very instant. Show your colors! Help the Imp in its efforts to give you what you want.

"THE CO-ED PROFESSOR" (Sept. 25)

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A college comedy that will bring shouts of laughter. On the same reel we give 250 feet of beautiful scenic film entitled "Through the Dells of Wisconsin in a Motor Boat." Get 'em!

"'TWEEN TWO LOVES" (Sept. 28)

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

You'll take off your hat to the Imp when you see the perfect combination of acting, staging and photography in this fine drama. It will only emphasize the fact that "Imps are getting better every week!" Go after it!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America. 102 W. 101*st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres. Are you getting our free lobby circulars? Are you on our mailing list? If not, get on!*

Demand Two Imps Every Week

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

FACTORY AND STUDIO 25th AND MONTGOMERY

ST. LOUIS, MO.

WRITE FOR DESCRIPTIVE LITERATURE

OCT 11 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 38

September 23
1911

PRICE
TEN
CENTS

"A ROSE BETWEEN TWO THORNS"
OWEN MOORE
LITTLE MARY
TOM COCHRANE

COWBOY FILMS

CLASSY AND CHARACTERISTIC

THRILLING, GRIPPING, INTENSE.

"The Rustler Sheriff"

The most noteworthy Western production of the season—released this week—THURSDAY, SEPT. 28th.

GET IT—GET IT—GET IT. A clever and a gripping story. Photography absolutely stereoscopic in its clearness and detail. Production that is masterly. Scenery that is ultra-magnificent. A climax that is the most effective, impressive, and brilliant ever pictured. ALL YOU HAVE TO DO TO GET THIS FEATURE IS ASK FOR IT—BUT ASK FOR IT TODAY. This film is released this week. THURSDAY, SEPT. 28th. NOTE:—There are two Flying A Cowboy features released each week. Some of these features are better than others, but they are all good. The release days are MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS. Your Exchange will give you both, each week, if you ask for them. Our regular releases are described in the Film Synopsis Department of this publication.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY PRODUCERS OF FLYING A COWBOY PICTURES, BANK FLOOR—ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

Solax

WEDNESDAY
COMEDY

"A BREEZY MORNING"
RELEASED OCTOBER 4th

Here is an Especially Good Comedy Full of Bright, Laughable Humor.

"HE WAS A MILLIONAIRE"
COMEDY

RELEASED OCTOBER 11th

An Especially Good Comedy of a Man Who Thought He Was a Millionaire.

FRIDAY
MILITARY AND WESTERN

"AN ITALIAN'S GRATITUDE"
RELEASED SEPTEMBER 29th

Splendid Life-Like Drama of Love and Gratitude.

"His Sister's Sweetheart"
MILITARY

RELEASED OCTOBER 6th

Big Military Picture With a Tender Love Story.

THESE 4 PICTURES
ARE ALL ESPECIALLY GOOD. WE THINK THEM THE BEST WE HAVE EVER MADE

Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED

Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

Our Agents in Austro-Hungary, Messrs. Rady Maller, g.m.b.h., of Vienna, have installed in the palace of the a Power's Cameragraph. It was used in a private exhibition before the King and the pictures projected by it pleased him so much that he expressed the wish to keep it. To the best of our knowledge this is the only moving picture machine permanently installed in a royal palace.

KING OF ROUMANIA

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

THE PERFECT MOTION PICTURE MACHINE

is also the choice of His Excellency, the American Exhibitor. If you are not using a Power's No. 6 it is your own fault. The price is no higher than that of inferior machines. Write at once for Catalog D.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115 Nassau Street, New York

For fourteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

DAVID COPPERFIELD SERIAL ADVANCE NOTICE

The Early Life of David Copperfield	First of the Series Released Tuesday, Oct. 17
Little Em'ly and David Copperfield	Second of the Series Released Tuesday, Oct. 24
The Loves of David Copperfield	Third of the Series Released Tuesday, Oct. 31

REMEMBER—Each release pictures the most dramatic incidents of the period it covers and is a complete story.

AS MR. MICAWBER WOULD SAY: Any manifestation of weaknesses in the box office or excruciating symptoms of pecuniary difficulties developed by past dissatisfactions will, perhaps, be remedied by the felicitous appearance of David Copperfield on the screen—in short, I would say that an Exhibitor would indeed show a regrettable lack of enterprise if he failed to appreciate the drawing power of my creator's masterpiece.

THE FIVE ROSE SISTERS

RELEASED TUESDAY, OCTOBER 3

Five sisters, although successful on the stage, tire of the life peculiar to their profession, and decide, when they receive a legacy of a house and farm in the country, to retire from the footlights and buckle down to milking cows and feeding chickens.

There are a number of complicating incidents, which make the life of the girls in the country almost impossible. But through the failings of a scheming and jealous neighbor and a dishonest deacon, they finally take a prominent place among the village folk.

THE EAST AND THE WEST

RELEASED FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6

This is a quaint story of Japanese and American life and deals with the unrequited love of a dainty Japanese dancer for a strong and forceful American, who in spite of Japanese wiles and seductiveness is true to the "girl he left behind."

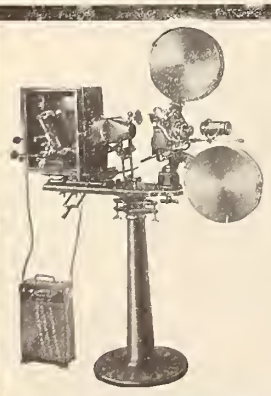
This release is a distinct novelty and introduces an atmosphere entirely new to motion pictures.

THANHOUSER COMPANY NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.



BUILT RIGHT---RUNS RIGHT---IS RIGHT

The Makers of THE MOTIOGRAPH have been manufacturing Motion Picture Machines for MORE THAN THIRTEEN YEARS and EVERYBODY that is ANYBODY in the Motion Picture world knows that our motto is QUALITY, NOT QUANTITY.

QUALITY IN PRODUCTION IS OUR WATCHWORD

We are manufacturers in the true sense of the word. We make in our own factory EVERY GEAR—SCREW—SPROCKET—BUSHING and part that goes to make up THE BEST CONSTRUCTED MOTION PICTURE MACHINE IN AMERICA. REMEMBER—We do not depend on other factories.

OUR GUARANTEE covers the FREE REPLACEMENT OF ALL PARTS broken through defective material or workmanship.

BEWARE OF THESE FACTS ADVERTISED BY OTHERS. THEY ARE NOT ALWAYS TO BE DEPENDED UPON.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT THAT THE MOTIOGRAPH IS FAST REPLACING MACHINES OF ALL OTHER MAKES. IT IS ALSO A WELL KNOWN FACT THAT THE MOTIOGRAPH LAMP HOUSE AND ARC LAMP ARE BEING FITTED TO ALL OTHER MAKES OF MECHANISMS—WHY?—Because it is the LARGEST—HEAVIEST AND BEST.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 564 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

For Sale by every wide-awake dealer in North America

(C CLB248269

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Correspondent and Agent for advertisements in Great Britain
B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W.

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy.
844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV September 23, 1911 Number 38

A QUESTION OF TRUSTS

UNCLE SAM certainly seems to be getting after some of the bad people. The shoe machinery Trust and the kindling wood Trust are both attacked under the Sherman Act in one day. How long will it be before the moving picture combination realize that the law and the Government mean business. How long will it be before Uncle Sam takes action to break up the M. P. Trust? Will somebody answer, please?

A QUESTION OF PATENTS

DURING the last three or four weeks we have been requested to reply to correspondents and state what patents the M. P. P. Co. are using to bring their suits on. We are also asked to state our opinion of the validity or otherwise of those patents.

The former question we can answer, but the latter we leave to the legal minds and luminaries and the judges before whom the cases will shortly be argued. Regarding the first, there are twelve patents which the Patents Company claim they hold the rights of, and on which all the suits regarding the projection machines are based, and for the benefit of those readers who have inquired, we herewith give them in due order with the date of application and when granted:

No.	Name.	App.	Granted.
578185	T. Armat	Sept. 26/96	Mar. 2/97
580749	T. Armat	Nov. 25/96	Apr. 13/97
586953	Jenkins & Armat	Aug. 28/95	July 20/97
673329	A. E. Smith	Mar. 15/1900	Apr. 30/01
673992	T. Armat	Feb. 19/96	May 14/01
707934	W. Latham	June 1/96	Aug. 26/02
722382	J. A. Pross	Jan. 19/03	Mar. 10/03
744251	A. E. Smith	Mar. 5/03	Nov. 17/03
770937	A. E. Smith	Apr. 20/03	Sept. 27/04
771280	A. E. Smith	Feb. 1/04	Oct. 4/04
785205	W. Ellwood	Mar. 30/04	Mar. 21/05
785237	A. E. Smith	Apr. 2/04	Mar. 21/05

For the benefit of those who desire to look into the question themselves, we may say that an application to the Patents Office, Washington, enclosing Sixty Cents and the numbers of patents required, will obtain them. At the same time we can inform those exhibitors who have written to us recently that they need have no fear that their license or otherwise will be taken from them until the cases are properly adjudicated.

MOVING PICTURES VINDICATED

IT is a trite saying that "a straw shows which way the wind blows" and "all things come to those who wait." Another saying is "time levels all ranks and shows the truth," and we, as representing all that is best in cinematography welcome the following clipping from the New York Tribune of Monday, September 18th. We believe the information was also given out by the Associated Press, and when we saw it in our Tribune coming over on the boat to business, we almost threw our bonnet up in the air, shouting "Hurrah!" There have been so many reports that everything that is bad, every boy or girl who goes wrong, every little bit of evil in existence on this mundane sphere of ours is directly or indirectly attributed to the moving pictures, in public sentiment the straw showing the wind and the daily papers are now beginning to take heed of what their readers think about the same, and now that the press has commenced we hope they will continue the good work of defending moving pictures from the attacks of people who can never see any good, outside their own narrow sphere of shortsightedness.

Cause Young Thief to Come Back and Confess

Belleville, N. J., Sept. 17. (Special).—"Nickeldromes" are not so bad, after all, when they drive thieves to homesickness and repentance. That is what happened to William Austin, seventeen years old, of this town, who ran away with more than $50 from his employer, Henry J. Rice, a grocer.

The lad went to Boston. Shortly after his arrival he went to see the moving pictures. A scene depicting a bad boy who was sorry for a wrong act preyed on the mind of young Austin, who, as soon as the show was over, bought a ticket for Belleville. He told his parents the reason for his return and was ready to take his medicine. Later he went out on the street to visit a chum and was picked up by detectives and locked up.

The boy confessed in court to embezzlement and was held for the grand jury's action.

A NEW COMPANY

(Preliminary Notice)

THE Independent ranks are to be augmented by the entrance of a new, yet an old friend, in the shape of Tom D. Cochrane (one of the organizers of the Sales Company and a former president), who has formed a company entitled The Majestic Motion Picture Company, and to give our readers the full particulars concerning the same, we extended an invitation to our old friend to give us an interview and explain his position to our readers. We now give Mr. Tom Cochrane the floor.

Mr. Cochrane stated that (as we already knew) his great ambition was to elevate the industry and give only the very highest quality and class of motion pictures. He is now in a position to carry out his ambition, and he fully believes that, with the people he is gathering round him, the industry at large will be able to soon judge for the quality of the pictures they are going to put on the market. He has secured the services of Mr. Owen Moore as director of the new company, and has also secured the services of Mary Pickford of the Biograph, universally known as "Little Mary."

MR. TOM COCHRANE

Mr. Moore needs no recommendation from us, as the pictures he has already made more than speak for themselves (this was not meant as a pun), and the acting of "Little Mary" has endeared her to the hearts of all lovers of good pictures.

Offices have been secured in the New Exchange building, 145 West 45th street, and pictures are now being rapidly produced towards the opening day of release, which will be announced in the columns of the News at a little later date. In addition to the above we may say that very careful selection has been made in the quality of the actors and actresses, thus assuring the very highest talent known in motion picturedom. Another advancement is the careful selection of scenarios of which only the very highest class will be selected from which to produce the pictures. It is the hope of the management using the brains of the most successful manufacturers and helpers, with up-to-date methods of laboratory and studio appliances, to make the pictures "Majestic" in tone and quality. No effort will be spared to carry out these ideals, and we are sure our readers will look forward with a great deal of delight and anticipation to the first release of the new company which we believe is destined to appeal to the hearts and understanding of Nickelodia.

Mr. Harry E. Aitken, President of the Western Film Exchange, of Milwaukee and New York, also largely interested with industries in St. Louis, Chicago, London, England, and other centers is actively interested in this new venture. It is a well-known fact to the trade that Mr. Aitken is a born organizer and that these companies are wonderfully successful owing to his management, assisted by men with whom he has surrounded himself for their known integrity. The new company will have the benefit of the use of one of the most successful non-infringing cameras on the market.

Mr. Roy E. Aitken (brother of Mr. Harry E. Aitken), who is now in London as the manager of the very successful Western Import and Film Company, will be interested in and have charge of the company's business abroad, they having already at their disposal ten offices in various cities of Europe which give them an assured market for what we believe will be among the highest productions in the moving picture industry.

MANUFACTURER, LOOK TO THE DETAIL OF YOUR PICTURES AND EMPLOY COMPETENT PEOPLE

By Margaret I. MacDonald

ALTHOUGH the quality of the moving picture production has been rapidly improving, there are many reasons why we are not yet, as they say, "up to snuff." Many of these reasons can be overcome by careful attention to detail on the part of stage directors. Each individual moving picture requires a distinct and individual atmosphere, which some of the directors are not always careful to secure and maintain. In looking at some of the pictures which are put forth, I am often disappointed by evidence of inattention to perhaps merely one little detail which stands out like an ugly scar, marring to a certain extent the whole production. Many of these faults could be very easily overcome by the exercise of a little forethought.

To speak of forethought in connection with overworked directors, seems almost cruel, no doubt; for it is only too true that some of the more conscientious ones work not only all day, but all night as well—the night work consisting principally of writing and re-arranging scenarios.

Not long ago it was my privilege to look at a picture, previous to its release, which in many respects was good. The picture was one depicting a scene of the Civil War, and what an unfortunate mistake that the director allowed the soldiers of the "Sixties" to wear khaki hats, and the weather-stained flag which was supposed to have been shot full of bullet holes, to be supplanted by a brilliant new article. Also in a Scottish production the clansmen were seen in hot pursuit of a runaway couple minus their "Kilties" and "Sporans." Instead, they wore the rich, heavy cloaks of the English nobles. In fact, there was scarcely any evidence of the picturesque Scottish costume to be seen. One longed for the appearance of a genuine Scotch bonnet with the eagle's feather, or the graceful fling of the "plaidie" caught with the cairngorm on the shoulder. It seems such a pity to spoil otherwise beautiful productions by just a little careless-

To make a good, true picture it is absolutely necessary to study closely the customs and dress of the nationality intended to be represented. The costuming, and such details, are almost as important as the acting—in fact, they are equally so. At another time I noticed that a young lady who had hurriedly changed her horse—a bay one for a gray one—was seen in the next portion of the picture still furiously riding through the mountains on the discarded bay.

And, again, in the cutting of films some ludicrous mistakes are made. Sometimes you will find "Jack," who has been sent a message of some few hundred miles, serenely bobbing up at the place of his destination in the succeeding scene as though shot out of the mouth of a cannon. All of these things detract extensively from the interest of the picture. A moving picture production should be so absolutely perfect in detail that the mind of the onlooker is unconsciously freed from any tension or concern regarding same. The detail should be as smooth as a polished floor, so that the story itself is enabled to stand out with vivid reality. It would be infinitely better to have fewer releases and more perfect work.

Some of the crying needs in the business are directors who recognize art in the making of a picture, actors and actresses who are experienced and competent in their work, and last but not least by any means, producers who not only have the right idea of what an artistic picture is, but who realize the necessity of the competent director and actor as important requisites, and are willing to pay the price for the services of the best.

Don't forget, producers, that there is money for you in the employment of the best.

MORE INDEPENDENT FOLLY

WE understand that Klaw & Erlanger (the sole lessee and copyright holders of Ben Hur) are bringing action against a film exchange at Washington for exhibiting the film which is under the ban of the court, and which to exhibit entails a penalty of $50 for every time shown. Not only are charges being made against the theater that exhibited the film, but also the manager of the exchange and proprietor thereof. We cannot under stand why men are so foolish taking such risks, and bringing odium upon the industry as represented by the Independents. It looks as though they will take any risks, selling their soul for a paltry dollar.

We were under the impression that every copy of this film had been recalled. Two were offered us for sale, and we to take out our commission. We refused, and said we would not have them even as a gift. The Kalem have had about enough of Ben Hur, and we hope the people who are responsible for the folly this time, will get their just deserts.

THEATER VS. PICTURE SHOW

A CORRESPONDENT calls our attention to the fact that while the moving picture film must not depict Beulah Binford, that the theaters are wide open for any immoral woman to blazon herself before the audiences. Our correspondent asks "Why"? and we reiterate the question, "why do not the censors and the city authorities in New York prevents this notorious character from debasing and degrading the boards of decent theaters in the city? Will they take action? We give our correspondent's letter in full, and hope something may be done to purify the stage as well as the picture film.

Brookfield, Mo.—Jas. N. Dove will establish a picture show in the Yancey Building.

Middletown, Pa.—E. H. Condran will establish a moving picture show in the rear of the Realty Building, Union and Emmanus streets.

CARL LAEMMLE COMING HOME

President of the I. M. P. Company Much Improved in Health and Very Enthusiastic

WRITING from Berlin, Germany, Carl Laemmle, the president of the I. M. P. Company, announces that he will return to America some time in October. Mr. Laemmle has toured Europe in the interests of The Independent Moving Picture Company of America and the Independent cause, and is very enthusiastic as to the outlook. He writes that film conditions are becoming very much better and the prospects are bright for the Independent cause. He has visited the numerous Imp agencies all over the continent and will return home with many new ideas which he proposes to work out in the manufacture of films. He writes he has some innovations that will be welcomed by exhibitors and the picture loving public. Mr. Laemmle has spent some time at Carlsbad enjoying the health-giving baths, and will return enthusiastic and very much improved in health, ready to renew the vigorous campaign he has always pursued in the production of Imp stories.

H. Z. LEVINE

Mr. H. Z. Levine is temporarily filling Mr. Adler's place with Thanhouser Company as advertising and publicity manager. Mr. Adler is much improved and his many friends are hoping for his complete recovery and return to health.

E. Las Vegas, N. Mex.—J. K. Martin will establish a new picture show on Sixth street.

Dalton, Ga.—A new opera house company is being organized here and will establish an opera house.

Edwardsville, Pa.—Thomas Pestak and William Beckers have purchased the Casino Theatre and will conduct moving picture shows.

ADVERTISING WITH MOVING PICTURES.

By A. L. Barrett

WE hear of many possibilities for the moving pictures, that they will be the educators of the future, we know that they are being used in religious work, we see them in travelogues, and it seems to be dawning on some people that there are other uses for them, but as yet they do not seem to have occurred to the heads of the various industries as an advertising medium. No other amusement seems to have such a strong hold on the popular fancy as the moving pictures. Their audience is immense, the theaters, and during the warm weather, the open-air shows, being generally well filled, lines of people frequently waiting patiently for their turn, and when, among the pictured stories of the day, one is shown which portrays hatmaking in Java for instance, the sardine industry, or anything of a like nature, they receive just as cordial a welcome as those which are merely amusing.

The principal methods of advertising a food product, or anything else, is by filling the billboards with a description of its virtues, with pictures representing the article itself or of some individual smirking with satisfaction at his anticipated feast; also the distribution of advertising matter, which, for various reasons, does not, in many cases, reach the hands of those it is intended for; sometimes the distribution of expensive little samples of the product advertised, and through the various magazines.

Occasionally, but this is very seldom, the thought strikes some enterprising individual that people would be interested in pictures showing just how a given food was manufactured and he therefore has stereopticon views prepared whch give an accurate representation of the buildings, equipment, work people and methods employed by this particular manufacturer. In such an event, pictures of the various departments are shown with heaps of the vegetables or fruits, for instance, depicted in the most tempting and realistic manner, everything spotless, immaculately clean utensils awaiting them, and the peeling, cutting, slicing mixing, and all the details of preparation being done by irreproachable cooks and their bands of assistants, male and female.

This method creates a longer and more favorable impression than is possible with any amount of advertising by means of bill posting, signboards, distribution of advertising matter, or the magazine advertisements, for people are naturally far more interested in seeing the actual process of manufacture of the food they eat than any number of pictures or descriptions of the finished product. The stereopticons appeal to nearly everyone for they represent actual facts very vividly, and they have always been popular at entertainments. It seems strange, therefore, that manufacturers should have so completely overlooked them as advertising mediums, for in comparison to their value they have been practically ignored. Almost everyone will go to see stereopticon views, no matter what the subject, but the pictures showing various industries are always sure of a warm welcome and, if used for advertising purposes, the majority in any community. Such an advertising campaign would certainly have a more permanent effect on the minds of a community than any other method, for the stereopticon pictures appeal to its intelligence and interest and people go to see them for instruction as well as entertainment whereas the pictures of descriptive matter on a billboard or in a magazine will only reach the passerby or reader in a very casual manner. Stereopticons, however, have their limitations, for they can only picture the appearance of a food in a certain stage, and the lecturer tells the audience just how it has been brought to this condition; he then puts on another slide which shows the food in a more advanced stage of preparation, then a little more lecture and another picture is shown. But although this is very interesting, and was highly satisfactory until the invention of moving pictures, we do not see the cooks actually measuring, mixing, stirring, boiling, and skimming, supposing it to be soups, catsups, jams, sauces, etc., being pictured. The moving pictures have, as it were, endowed the stereopticon with life, and while witnessing the actual process of the manufacture of jams, soups, sauces, catsups, canning of fruits, vegetables, meats, fish and other products, the audience becomes deeply interested in it and the step from this interest to the purchase of the goods is but a short one.

Apropos of the exposé last winter of the rotten egg industry, any firm could reinstate itself in the public favor by having a set of films made which would depict the manner in which the cakes and pies are manufactured. There is always considerable skepticism concerning the methods of preparing any article of food in which eggs are used, the pies, for instance, baked at a pie factory, and the exposé of the rotten egg industry has confirmed people in their suspicions on this particular point. One exhibition by any reputable firm of its methods of preparing pies and cakes would bring it more into public favor than any amount of advertising showing the cake or pie already cooked. The public, being on the alert for the "rots and spots" and waiting for the strainer which debars the enterprising embryo chicken from entering into partnership with cake or pies, anxiously awaiting the elevated noses of the various cooks who were preparing the eggs for the part they were to play in the said cake or pie, and failing to see any of this, would depart with a very exalted opinion of Grandmother's Old-fashioned Cake Company or Mothers' Homemade Pie Association. If, in addition to these pictures, such a company would invite the public to visit the bakeshops, its prestige would be forever established and its fortunes assured beyond question.

(To be continued.)

THE EAST AND THE WEST

Miss Tokie Takayi, as O San of Tokio in the Thanhouser production of "The East and the West," portrays, amidst an atmosphere wholly Japanese, the character of a dancer from the land of the rising sun, with such finesse that one is moved to a delectable enthusiasm.

The action takes place in both the East and the West, but the quaintness of Japanese scenery and the peculiarity of their customs makes that portion of the picture the most interesting although the settings in the West are elaborate and real.

Miss Takayi comes from Tokio. She supervised a large part of the production and lent a considerable portion of her personal property and also had property especially imported for this presentation. One seeing the picture would really come to the conclusion that a greater part of it was taken in Japan.

Miss Tokie Takayi, herself, is a beautiful little Japanese lady possessing all the captivating traits of her nationality. She is dainty, chic, elusive, kittenish and combines with these a lithe and buoyant spirit. She fairly sparkles on the screen and injects her audience with her liveliness of spirit.

MIRROR SCREENS.

We learn on good authority that Frank Manning, traveling for the Mirror Screen has sold a screen to H. A. Levey, Comic Theatre, 102 Third avenue, and one to Manager Kauffman, Comedy Theatre, 46 East Fourteenth street, both New York City. These were sold last week, making four hundred mirror screens installed in the last eight months. A pretty good showing, we think, and a good example of the fact that the exhibitors are awakening to their responsibilities and the value of a good screen.

Above is shown, in an automobile, Director Davis and his assistants of the Champion Film Company, photographing the various views of the encampment of National Guard troops at Fort Riley, Kansas.

These pictures are embodied in Champ's release of October 9. However, as the negative totals about 4,000 feet, three separate reels have been formed, of which the release of October 9 is the forerunner.

HERALD SQUARE THEATER

Opening September 17th, the Kinemacolor Pictures will return to the Herald Square Theater

Commemorating their return, the Kinemacolor Company has put on an entirely new program, including a wonderful botanical flower study; scenes taken in the Sahara Desert; the celebrated Coronation Derby run at Epsom Downs during the Coronation festivities; Trooping of the Colors, and other views.

THE HEREAFTER

is an important phrase, to which we give much speculation. But what you are

HERE AFTER

is good film, and there's not much speculation involved if hereafter you

RUN REX!

Ordinary curtains. 40 Amperes.

Mirror Screen. 20 Amperes.

NOTE THE DIFFERENCE

DO YOU WANT TO Increase your box office receipts? Improve your pictures? Save on your light bill? Please your patrons?

Then Install a "MIRROR SCREEN"

It will do all this and more too.

The "Mirror Screen" stands in a class by itself. It has no equal. Let us show you that we can improve your pictures, no matter what kind of a curtain you are using. We stand ready to prove all we claim for the "MIRROR SCREEN." Let us send one of our salesmen to demonstrate in your own theatre. Address:

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO., SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA.

Our Release of THURSDAY, Sept. 28th, is

"THE DERELICT"

More than six or eight times life has been compared to the sea; both have their storms, their ebb and tide; both have their reefs and shoals; both have their flotsam. Yet every Derelict, floating rudderless and aimless on the sea of life is human evidence of the dereliction of his fellowmen. The picture will grip you!

If You Fail to Get "The Derelict" YOU Commit a Dereliction!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

REX

Makes one each week at 573 ELEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY. (Although a million and eighty people are begging for two.)

Sales Co. says every emotional picture ever released will be licked by "THE DERELICT"

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE CINEMATOGRAPH

The Scientific Film

By L. W. D.

"IN the day as well as night, diseases unbidden haunt mankind, silently bearing ills to men," so quoth Hesiod about 720 years B. C. Although nearly 26½ centuries have passed since these words were penned, yet mankind is very far from having understood everything. The "man in the street" knows little or nothing about his own physical construction and the diseases to which his body is subject. This ignorance is largely the result of imperfect education. Since the days of Hesiod science and invention has certainly advanced, and the many diseases which beset the human frame have been studied by means of these inventions.

In a previous article I drew attention to the potentialities of the picture theater for educational purposes. In both France and in your own country, Cousin America, the scientific purposes have been recognized and utilized to a far greater extent than is the case in my country on the "other side. A French journal, referring to this matter recently, remarked, "We are insufficiently informed as to what takes place within us, and, in particular, we are ignorant of the terrible combats of which our bodies are the theaters, whilst we are contentedly going about our trivial affairs. It is true that our forefathers were ignorant on this point, that they knew less than we, and lived in peace; but since some have seen fit to draw us from our state of quietude, is it not wise to seek further into these things and to see them with a clear vision? This is indeed a true assertion, and it would be well that it should be taken to heart by those responsible for the management of the picture theater. If the picture theater is to be placed on not only a permanent basis, but a sound and solid foundation, the magnitude of the scope it offers must be clearly comprehended. The program at many theaters has been, and still is, too full of items of a frivolous or semi-frivolous nature. Humor, like pathos, has its place, and one can have too much of either. It is because I believe the picture theater has a mission to deal with, and to represent every side, every phase of life, that I am convinced of its permanency. If one believed that its function was only the production of "side splitters" one would feel no doubt that it would go the way of other fashions—disappear into oblivion; cast aside by a fickle public.

The possibilities of the picture theater as an educational force are undoubtedly tremendous. For example, let us take the matter to which I have referred—the human frame and its diseases. It is no exaggeration to assert that every human being is, as it were, a miniature world inhabited by minute creatures—many of them at war with one another. The picture theater affords an excellent means of studying these minute organisms and their grim work. Films to this end have already been prepared and exhibited. One of these I have recently seen, deals with the sleeping sickness, and it has worked great interest in the United Kingdom. Another represents the microbes of recurrent fever, while others illustrative of diseases of various kinds are now in preparation in England. I am confident that exhibitors showing this type of film will derive profit—pecuniary profit—and will have, moreover, the satisfaction of knowing that they have to a great extent aided in the spread of that valuable knowledge which is to prove of inestimable benefit to mankind.

A CANDID CRITICISM BY A CANDID CRITIC

In the humble opinion of the writer, the programs submitted at picture theaters, generally, are of far too stereotyped a nature. There is considerable monotony in the faces and figures of the characters in different films emanating from the same maker. There is one girl in particular of whose smiles and frowns and mannerisms generally we are—may we be permitted to assert—thoroughly weary. We have seen her in innumerable pictures and each time we have mentally wished her a fond farewell, but she appears again and again in varied roles. Surely this monotony is neither desirable or necessary. After all, it is the opinion of the patron that matters, and my statements are only based upon remarks I have heard whilst visiting the picture theater. It is a mistake to suppose that anything will do so long as it is pictures. Exhibitors who continue to draw up their programs imbued with that belief are certain sooner or later to have the fallaciousness of it brought home to them in a very practical manner.

There is also room for improvement in the compiling of the program. The comic element, or rather the farcical element, is far too pronounced, and the greater number of the pictures are, metaphorically speaking, flung at the audience instead of being rendered interesting and instructive by proper elucidation, whether on the screen by means of judiciously introduced sub-titles, or by word of mouth. I have long been of the opinion that the "orator," as my American cousins term him, will in the near future be as necessary in the picture theater as the films themselves. By "orator" I mean a live speaker who will explain scenes and incidents in a graphic manner and arrest the attention of the audience.

As I have before remarked, these observations are not penned in any ultra critical spirit or from a desire to find fault for the mere purpose of so doing. Feeling assured, as I do, that the picture theater is destined to assume very large proportions as a material factor in ministering to the amusement of the masses, it is the sincere desire of the writer and the editor, paper and people to whom he writes, that it shall in every respect be rendered worthy of its vocation and the functions it is destined to fill, both in amusing, instructing and delighting. The picture theater is still, in many respects, in the experimental stage, and it is only by experience of its working and criticism of the details thereof that knowledge can be gained; that knowledge which will undoubtedly bear fruit and result in the picture theater, justifying all that has been said in the News regarding potentialities.

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

Our Service is not the BEST Service; but it is a GOOD Service.

When you are tired of other exchange's BEST service, try our GOOD Service.

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

INTERESTING FACTS FROM ABROAD, GLEANED FROM AN INTERVIEW WITH MR. I. C. OES, MANAGER OF THE GREAT NORTHERN

By Our "Roving Commissioner"

I HAD come from my home nervous and tired with the strain of overwork. Though the sun shone with all its might to restrain departing summer and to put a gladdened face for a brief day on the fading bloom of the flowers, it was hard for me to catch the spirit of the morn for I was weary—at least I thought I was. After all, so much that we think we feel is merely in the thought. I came hurriedly across Fourteenth street—the blocks seemed very long, for I was late for my appointment. Fifth avenue reached, I cut diagonally across the street to where 7 East Fourteenth street actually shouts itself at passers-by from the big sign over the door. It is so convenient when the numbers stand out boldly in a conspicuous place—so much more so than when you have to take up valuable time in hunting for them.

Mounting the stairway leading to the office of the Great Northern Film Company, I was soon in the presence of Mr. I. C. Oes, by descent a Norwegian, inheriting the dignity and repose of his Scandinavian forefathers. I had not been long in conversation with him when I forgot my weariness—it fell from me like an old moth-eaten cloak; my spirit flitted to far Copenhagen—to picturesque Denmark.

"I was but nine days in Europe," said Mr. Oes, in rather a dubious tone, "and I am afraid that I have not much to tell the trade that is of interest." However, what he did eventually tell me was intensely interesting to me, though what I have to say may not be news to my readers. But, after all, some things bear repeating, and I trust you will bear me if I repeat again the oft-told story.

The plant of the Great Northern Film Company is situated in what is called a free port, near Copenhagen. This free port is under the control of the customs. It is authorized by the Government of Denmark to maintain there the manufactories for foreign firms; here they are allowed not only to manufacture their goods, but to bring raw material from other parts of the world for use in the said manufactories, free of duty; also to ship their goods backward and forward free of duty; no duty being imposed except where goods are sold in Denmark, when the customary duty therefor is imposed. The maintenance of these foreign concerns enables Denmark not only to find employment for a number of her citizens, but also to compete with international trade. Sweden is also about to establish a free port, recognizing its advantages to other countries enjoying its privileges.

The trade of the Great Northern Film Company has so increased that it has been necessary to build an additional studio; and also an addition is being added to the factory. There are many interesting things to be said of the Great Northern Film Company. No regular stock company is employed by them—their artists are employed from among the very best actors and actresses that Europe can boast, some from the royal theater itself pose for the moving pictures of the Great Northern.

"It was a very difficult matter, for some time, to get these artists to pose for moving pictures," said Mr. Oes. "They seemed to feel it was beneath them, and the way we managed to interest them was this: We got one of the best authors in Denmark to write a scenario, then we interested the actors and actresses to the extent that they consented, as a favor, to pose for this one picture. The result was that they were so pleased with themselves in the picture, and interested in discussing the mistakes they had made, that they were willing to continue the work, and now almost the entire profession is available in Denmark for service at the moving picture studios.

Some of those who come from the royal theater are paid as high as 15,000 a year for their services, and others are paid as much as 100 a day. The King of Denmark has shown a good deal of interest in the moving picture, to the extent that the Great Northern has been allowed the use of certain old historical costumes for the taking of pictures. Also it has been permitted to take pictures at Kronborg and Fredericksborg castles for the "Hamlet" and other productions.

"In Europe," says Mr. Oes, "they have most elaborate theaters in which to show moving pictures. At Alhambra Platz in Berlin is a beautiful theater building, which would hold 1,500 to 2,000 people; rich draperies and upholstering, large foyer for promenading, and restaurant attached. The most unique thing about it is that on the back of each seat is a small shelf affair which folds up against the back of the seat, and when raised up and adjusted forms a table. This is to place the beer glasses on, which are replenished by the waiters as desired."

These theaters have orchestras of ten to twelve pieces. The Germans having a natural taste for music, and a better idea of the fitness of the thing, musically speaking, than Americans; the music that they play is very well suited to the pictures, a close watch being kept on the light and shade, so as to fit the music accordingly. Everything is rehearsed beforehand to be sure that it is right. One three-reel picture of the Great Northern had a four weeks run in a Copenhagen theater. These films are the most popular in Germany at the present time. There is no vaudeville—all moving pictures—in the moving picture theaters there. This gives some idea of the place awarded the moving picture in artistic Europe.

There are two directors employed by the Great Northern or Nordisk Film Company, as it is called in Copenhagen. Mr. Blom and Mr. Schnedler Petersen, one a dramatic director and the other for refined comedy. A good deal of refined comedy is being produced by the Great Northern Film Company at the present time, as well as drama. They keep about three months to half a year ahead with their work, so I am told.

THE ROYAL THEATER, COPENHAGEN

It is probably a well-known fact that the European manufacturers deal direct with the exhibitors in a good many cases; there is no trust to make any particular method of doing business compulsory. The exchanges also have a fair share of the trade. The criticism in Europe is so pointed that it is useless for a manufacturer to send out a film that has any imperfection, either in a technical or an artistic way: the exhibitor will probably not buy any more of his produce, and if he sends it to an exchange he will experience the same difficulty. Therefore it is best for the manufacturer if he happens to turn out a film with any kind of a flaw in it, to destroy it at once, rather than endanger his reputation by attempting to place it on the market. Thus is the standard of the moving picture in Europe kept on an elevated plane, as are all things connected with art.

The Great Northern constructs and invents a great deal of its own machinery, making improvements as they are found necessary. Denmark is an ideal spot for the taking of moving pictures. Probably no more picturesque spot could be found in the entire world than is found in Denmark.

During the past week I had the pleasure of witnessing some pictures of the Great Northern, which were run off at the Sales Company for the purpose of ascertaining just what cuts were necessary for the proper concentration of the pictures. The acting displayed in these films is marvelously fine quality. One of the pictures entitled "The Victim of a Bad Character" is a wonderful piece of work—I might almost say, the most wonderful, from the actor's viewpoint, that I have ever seen among moving pictures. The "bad character" is a woman—a beautiful, richly dressed woman with the most atrociously vile character one could imagine—a veritable siren. The story is good—the contrast drawn between the pure and the vile is very marked, but what strikes one most forcibly in the whole production is the superb manner in which the story is enacted. One forgets the repulsive atmosphere with which the woman surrounds herself in the magnificent rendering which the actress has given the part.

The work of the Great Northern is par excellence. Why cannot some of our American firms aspire to a like perfection of theme and production?

These films of the Great Northern will not be released until late in October, after their final correction in Copenhagen and their return here.

Some of the Celebrated Actors from the Denmark Theatres

MR. N. BRECHLING—ROYAL

ELSE FROHLICH—THE NEW THEATER

CARL ALSTRUP—FREDERIKSBERG THEATER

MRS. BETTY NANSEN—ROYAL THEATER

Who Have Helped to Make the Great Northern Films Famous

MR. LAURITZ OLSEN—THE NEW THEATER

E. ZANGENBERG—CASINO THEATER

INGEBORG LARSEN—ROYAL THEATER

EMILE SANNOW—FREDERIKSBERG THEATER

A TALK WITH MR. C. FRANCIS JENKINS

By Our Washington Correspondent

Mr. C. Francis Jenkins, who has just returned from the "Ocean to Ocean" auto tour, had lots of experiences. In his genial way he told me of some of the things that happened and I will endeavor to recount them to you, only there will be the absence of that wholesome laugh and the merry facial expressions which added so much to my own enjoyment of the instances.

Of course Mrs. Jenkins was of the party, as were also a number of other ladies, all of whom were delightfully disappointed in having no real hardships to endure. They were sure they were going to get thin and even feared not being able to get to the end of the journey. In fact, they all gained in weight, which is not at all stylish in the present cut of gowns.

With twelve autos and a party of forty the tour from "Ocean to Ocean" was made in fifty-five days, not all of which were on the road. Owners ran their own cars and in a sense this was an amateur venture, accomplishing what the Glidden tour of last year proclaimed as impossible. The route led through the central part of the United States, over all kinds of roads and trails, without a real disaster.

An important member of the party was the Jenkins moving picture camera, which brought back to the East 8,000 feet of film. This has been reduced to a 1,000-foot reel, which the Imp Company is printing for circulation. The fact that this trip was the first of its kind gives special value to the film, educationally and entertainingly.

"It may be of interest to note," remarked Mr. Jenkins, "that of all the films taken (none of which were developed until our return) only one set of exposures was out of focus or blurred in any way, and we had all sorts of conditions to contend with. This marring I lay to some accidental moving of the shutter.

"In coming through Echo Cañon, approaching Salt Lake City, I strapped the camera on the front of the auto and in this way secured a beautiful set of films of this winding, enchanting landscape. I might add that the uncomfortable and humorous position of sitting on the camera to keep it quiet fell to my lot. Really, the scheme worked wonderfully, as you will see when the films are exhibited."

It might be well to state that the Jenkins motion picture camera used is a much condensed apparatus, containing all things necessary for the taking of animated pictures. When boxed for carrying, it is scarcely heavier than the portable typewriters so many business men use to-day.

"One of our remarkable pieces of photography," continued Mr. Jenkins, "is that of the fish swimming in Lake Tah-Hoe, on the Nevada-California line. This body of water itself is noteworthy, as it lies in an extinct crater high up the mountains. The clearness is so great that one can see the fish many feet below the surface. Of this we secured an excellent piece of film, which will be a novelty to most people.

"When in an alkali desert we made a diversion with an improvised baseball game. We did not propose to even outdo our own Nationals, but we had heaps of fun. This, too, has been preserved by the camera, but it will never be as funny as on that open, trackless country.

"Since Santa Barbara possesses such beautiful gardens, we obtained a series of views of these, in which the autos pass in review over the roads. Of course this landscape is artificial and it loses that rustic beauty of natural scenery, but the planning is so artistically unique that the gardens are at once impressive to the visitor.

"I want to say here," went on my genial informer, "that we were treated royally at every turn. Officials and citizens turned out to meet us, while in Salt Lake City the Fire Department escorted us through the city. Since I was riding the heaviest-powered car, it was my business to test all dubious washouts and other undesirable places in the road. I never got stuck once, but the speed I took over such spots and the splashes I made were a caution. I don't know as it prepared the road any better for the others, but it gave them confidence to follow.

"We met new towns that had sprung up on barren wastes of not long ago, where the hum of business told of western development. Then we passed through deserted villages, where fate or the trusts had turned the tide of mining operations in another direction. In this connection a place in Nevada particularly depressed me, for the open mines were still full of ore, and furnished houses, showing past occupancy, were moulding in the dust. It was most impossible to believe that this same spot was once a thriving city of some 30,000 inhabitants with an output of $92,000,000 of gold and silver ore.

"There were lots of humorous incidents, the amusing side of which can best be appreciated by those of the party. The reel that depicts this will be one of exceptional value to everyone, and we feel somewhat proud that we were the first to accomplish it.

"No, we weren't so glad to get back," went on Mr. Jenkins in answer to my question. "We had such a jolly time we had no reason to want it to end. And now, I've got the 'auto bug' so deep in me I'm ready to start off again, which I expect to do shortly."

DR. KUNZ TO BE PRESIDENT OF THE HISTORICAL RECORDS PRESERVATION SOCIETY

An intimation has been received by us to the effect that Dr. Kunz, of the Historical Preservation Society of New York, also associated with the Museum of National History and a member of the firm of Tiffany, has consented to become president of the Historical Records Preservation Society, about to be organized.

Mr. Alex. Konta, original investigator of the movement, has also succeeded in interesting the corporation of the Museum, and the corporation of thepublic library. "In Paris," said Mr. Konta, "a movement is on foot among the governmental body for the formation of a Dialect Preservation Society. Such movements on foot in all parts of the world make us feel that ours is not only very timely, but worthy of recognition and support. Not long ago an old Indian died 110 years old; he was a good story-teller. Think what wonderful information could have been handed down to the coming generations could there but have been records kept of them.

Mr. Manager

Get acquainted with our AERIAL PUBLICITY NOVELTIES, catering to the advertising of 5c theaters.
The illustration shows our CIRCULAR DISTRIBUTING AIRSHIP IN ACTION.
Tell us to-day, you are interested, and learn, to-morrow, of our many inexpensive, but effective, Aerial Stunts, that will arouse public interest, draw large crowds, and gather the shekels.

THE B. N. MFG. CO.
NORTHSIDE, CINCINNATI, O.

"AS THINGS USED TO BE." CHAMPION RELEASE OF OCT. 4.

SALES COMPANY.

The following films have been released during the week of September 25th by the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company:

Monday, September 25th

Through the Dell by Motor Boat.....Imp
Circular Fence .....American
For the Wearing of the Green.....Yankee
Black Horse Troop of Culver.....Champion
A Just General.....Eclair

Tuesday, September 26th

Lucky Bob .....Bison
Young Lochinvar .....Thanhouser
Imaginative Billy—Bohemia .....Powers

Wednesday, September 27th

How Hopkins Raised the Rent.....Solax
For His Sake.....Reliance
The Cook of the Ranch.....Champion
Young Doctor .....Nestor
Alice's Dream .....Ambrosio
Tweedledum Auto Skates.....Ambrosio

Thursday, September 28th

The Co-Ed Professor.....Imp
Between Two Loves.....Imp
The Rustler Sheriff.....American
The Derelict .....Rex

Friday, September 29th

Man .....Yankee
White Fan's Peril.....Bison
Love's Sacrifice .....Thanhouser
An Italian's Gratitude .....Solax
Bill and His Friend.....Lux
The Little Goatherd.....Lux

Saturday, September 30th

Half Breed's Atonement.....Powers
Weighed in the Scale.....Reliance
Mutt and Jeff as Reporters.....Nestor
Law of Retaliation.....Ambrosio
Strange Invitation to Dinner.....Ambrosio
The Conspirators .....Great Northern

THERE ARE SEVERAL "STANDARD" MAKES OF PROJECTING MACHINES

THERE ARE NUMEROUS "STANDARD" MAKES OF FILMS

BUT

THERE IS BUT ONE "STANDARD" MAKE OF MOTION PICTURE SCREENS

"SUNLIGHT"

Metallic Cloth Screens and Curtains

Our special frame with patent tightening device insures an absolutely perfect picture field, permanently free from all wrinkles and similar defects. This frame is used for either a fixed screen or as a drop curtain.

We also manufacture a special barrel or roll when a roll curtain is needed.

"SUNLIGHT" SCREENS SECURE THREE IMPORTANT FEATURES FOR EVERY EXHIBITOR:

1. THE BEST KNOWN PICTURE RESULT—VIZ.: A SOFT, WELL-LIGHTED PICTURE WITH ALL THE PERSPECTIVE AND DETAIL THAT IS ON THE FILM.
2. THIS WONDERFUL IMPROVEMENT AT A SAVING OF FROM ONE-THIRD TO ONE-HALF IN COST OF PROJECTION.
3. A PLEASINGLY LIGHTED THEATRE WITHOUT PREJUDICE TO THE QUALITY OF YOUR PICTURE.

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co.

Suite 1101 Fisher Building CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE AGGRESSOR.

One of the strongest dramas ever produced by the Imp Company will be for release Thursday, October 19, to be called "The Aggressor." It is a story of a mining district on the peaks—in a country where the law is ignored and every man sets about it to right his own wrongs with gun and knife. It is a tale of the sufferings of a young wife who is compelled to bear the brutality of her husband until, goaded to desperation, she tries to leave the life of misery and seek companionship with strangers. After a furious outburst of temper the miner goes away leaving the wife in despair. She is obsessed by only one idea—to get away—to leave it all and she prepares for flight. A miner, a stranger, enters the cabin, having lost his bearings. He sees her plight and questions her. She tells him and he suggests the way. He is honest and without ulterior motive. She accompanies him in her simplicity, pure and honest in her intentions, and they arrive at his camp. In endeavoring to secure water for her he falls over a cliff and when she reaches him he is unconscious. The husband has followed and comes upon them. He is about to kill the stranger, when his vengeance takes a different form. He carries the man to his cabin, his wife following sorrowfully. When the stranger recovers he is followed out on the mountain by the husband who provokes him to a revolver duel. The husband falls and the man who befriended the wife walks down the slope, leaving her alone with the man whom she interested in life. The scenery chosen for the drama is splendid and the photography is perfect, making it one of the best things ever produced by this company that has a well-earned reputation for its clear and sharp prints.

REORGANIZATION OF THE SOLAX COMPANY

The Solax Company is now in the midst of the extensive reorganizing of its forces and will announce within the next two weeks the personnel of its new stock company. A new director having the highest qualifications will be engaged. An entire new staff will be installed, and no expense or pains will be spared to secure the best talent that can be had. It is the intention of the Solax Company to produce the very finest pictures, and quality will be their keynote. With this company, surrounded by an array of high-class assistants in all of its branches, we may expect some wonderful results, and judging from their past enterprises, we know that the Solax Company will let us announce for them shortly the names of the best talent as members of their organization that can be secured in the motion picture field.

THEIR NUMBERS ARE LEGION.

We refer to Motion Picture projects. They spring up like a thief in the night, and then like the proverbial Arabs of old, they silently fold their tents and dissolve into innocuous desuetude. Once in a while one does materialize, with stamina, brains, and sufficient financial strength to stand the delay and uncertainty attached to the organization of such an enterprise, and when such a one does appear in the world of cinematography, it should be encouraged. The St. Louis Motion Picture Company, it is said, is certain to realize all that has been promised by its projectors.

They are scarcely a month old, and yet they have at this moment six full reels which, it is promised, will make the public sit up and take notice. But, working along the same conservative lines that have characterized their conduct from the beginning, they have decided to wait for further developments of promise before venturing their first release, for they fully realize the mighty ordeal they have to combat in order to approach the degree of excellence attained by their more advanced and mellowed competitors in the ranks of the Independents.

Their start has been most propitious, for from the beginning the elements have smiled upon them most graciously. The clearest skies and ideal sunshine have greeted them in all outdoor work.

This, combined with a most willing and competent company of artists, a most able producer, and in fact an entire staff of experienced heads in the several departments, inspires President Goebel and Manager of Production Hamilton with the confidence and belief that Shamrock films' future will prove indicative of St. Louis' emblem: To the Front.

WHY MOVING PICTURE FILM OF ANSCO QUALITY CAN NOT BE HAD AT PRESENT

The request that we supply film of Ansco quality for moving picture purposes has been so insistent and from so many different quarters that we deem it necessary to make a general announcement of the reasons which prevent us from contributing to the higher quality of moving picture film, lest we be misunderstood. The reasons are as follows:

First: The demand for Ansco cartridge film is so large and is increasing so rapidly that every addition to our film plant has been required to augment the output of cartridge film, in order to meet the ever-growing demand.

Second: The making of moving picture film requires a separate installation from that required for cartridge film, because the two films are substantially different. For instance, the cartridge film for general photography is non-curling, whereas the moving picture film is only coated on one side and must be necessarily so. The base of the moving picture film is heavier and the emulsion more contrastive. In other words, the emulsion that would be most desirable for cartridge film would be totally unsuited for moving picture film. Any attempt, therefore, to manufacture both kinds of film in the same department, would curtail the total output, thus diminishing our profits and inconveniencing the dealers who rely on us for cartridge film.

Third: The market for moving picture films in sufficient quantities to make the industry profitable is at present closed against any manufacturer other than the Rochester Trust, by virtue of an agreement existing between it and the Motion Picture Patents Company, which company is said to control all the valuable patents applying to moving picture cameras and projecting devices, and which controls, besides, the greater part of the moving picture theaters. The Motion Picture Patents Company under this agreement may only buy film from the Rochester Trust.

Fourth: The outcome of the decision in the Goodwin patent litigation, if favorable to us, as owners of this fundamental patent covering the manufacture of film, howsoever made, can alone quickly upset the alliance between the Rochester Film Trust and the Motion Picture Trust, and the decision in this important patent litigation is now only the matter of a few months. In the meantime our building operations continue uninterruptedly, so as to reach completion in all departments at the psychological time. Moving picture film of Ansco quality is hence a possibility of the near future.

Fifth: Remember that we are looking out for the Independent field in all branches of photography, and if we decline now to supply film for moving pictures it is so that we may be better equipped to take care of the moving picture market when our assistance will be most needed.

Madison, Wis.—Orpheum Theater Company, capital $5,000. R. W. Jackman, Marcus Heiman and Sam T. Swanson.

Houston, Tex.—Jesse H. Jones will erect a new theater at Capitol and Main streets.

PICTURE SHOW ORDINANCE WOULD PUT AN END TO INTERESTING PICTURES

An Ordinance Introduced in the Council Would Prohibit Pictures or Plays Showing Commission of Murder in Any of Its Forms—Under It Shakespeare's Plays Could Not Be Given

If the ordinance regulating picture shows, which was introduced in the council Monday night, should become a law, one of the most popular class of pictures, those of the wild West and Indian life, could not be shown, as well as many other pictures. Under the terms of the ordinance even the war pictures could not be shown, and these pictures, which show scenes of the civil, the revolutionary and other noted wars of history, are not only of great interest to picture show patrons, but are actually instructive and educational.

The ordinance prohibits moving picture shows and theaters from running on Sunday and prohibits pictures or plays of any kind containing scenes of the commission of murder in any of its forms, or manslaughter, or highway robberies, or burglaries.

This is probably the broadest picture show and theater ordinance ever drawn. It would practically put the picture shows here out of business, and would prohibit many of the shows that are considered proper in every way. This ordinance would prohibit such an excellent play as "The Wolf," which will show here on September 16. There is a murder scene in that play, and it is the great feature of the play. Under this ordinance most of Shakespeare's plays, except the comedies, would be prohibited.

The author of the ordinance is not known. The Journal reporter asked the clerk and several of the councilmen, who introduced it, but they said they did not know. It was not signed.

The moving picture show has become the greatest national amusement. Probably more people attend picture shows than all other amusements combined. The many picture companies have combined to produce only picture stories that are unobjectionable to children. Most of the pictures are passed on by the National Censorship Board.

It is said that $100,000,000 is now invested in the picture show business in the United States alone. The film companies are now showing pictures with as many as a thousand people in the scenes. Famous historical plays, noted military campaigns, and, in fact, everything of interest to the world is being shown daily in the picture show houses of the country, which now number close to 100 000. Events of interest are being shown in picture form all over the civilized world shortly after they take place.

It is said that the authors of the picture show ordinance believe that pictures showing the commission of murder in any of its forms have a bad effect on children. This is hardly probable, for there is a moral to every picture. Right and virtue always triumph in the end.

The film companies are careful in this matter and seldom is a picture shown that would have a bad effect on any child.

The ordinance will not be voted on for two weeks or possibly four.—Evening Journal, Plattsmouth, Neb.

SUNDAY THEATERS IN KANSAS

The path of the "Sunday Blue Law" has been far from being a smooth one in Kansas, and especially in Sedgwick County, for the last two months. At the opening of the park season, the attorney-general of the state notified all of the different managers that they would not be permitted to open their places of amusement and run on Sunday. To this notice none of the park managers paid any attention, but opened and ran for several weeks unmolested, but this was a silver cloud with a dark lining, for on Sunday afternoon the sheriff went to the theater in Wonderland Park and as fast as an act would appear and finish their act they were arrested. The orchestra did not play, they only used the piano player, and he was arrested at the conclusion of the first act, the balance of the acts doing their acts without music.

After the last act was over, all of the actors, Manager Nuttle, pianist, etc., were taken to the police station, where Mr. Nuttle gave bond for their appearance in police court the next day (Monday). On Monday the case was continued until the following Wednesday; it was then continued until Thursday. The case was then continued indefinitely, the county officials stating that they had referred the matter to the attorney-general and were waiting for instructions from him. For the two Sundays following this the arrests were made just the same, with the exception that the officers only served notice that they would have to appear in court the next day (Monday) to answer to the charge of violating the Sunday labor law. As before, the cases were continued each time they came to trial. Since that time nothing has been heard of the cases and the park is open and running unmolested on Sundays as heretofore. At the time of the first arrest, an indignation meeting was held in the Forum, and several more followed at the Chamber of Commerce by the citizens of Wichita, who were very much against the Sunday closing.

Following on the heels of the park experience comes that of the moving picture theaters. For several years they had not attempted to run on Sunday, but when they saw the easy manner in which the park got by they decided that what was good for the goose was good for the gander, and they immediately set about to see how they could arrange to run on Sunday. There being an ordinance in Wichita against the operation of Sunday theaters, and Wonderland Park being on an island in the Arkansas River, they were at a loss just how to proceed. After a meeting held by the managers of the picture shows, they retained a lawyer and decided to ask the district judge to grant a temporary injunction restraining the city from interfering with them for two weeks in order to allow the state and county officials to take action on the matter.

In order to make a test case out of it, they decided to open one of the theaters and then divide the cost of the litigation. The Colonial was selected as the house to open, and they opened on Sunday, July 2, and played to capacity business throughout the entire day. The same house opened the following Sunday and again the S. R. O. prevailed. The injunction was off July 15, but when the case was tried the judge announced he would make his decision the next week, so the house again opened July 22, with the decision to be given Friday, July 28.

The decision was given, and while it held that moving picture theaters were not to be classed as a theater proper and could not be closed on Sundays under the ordinance, yet under the "Blue Laws" of the state they could be closed for laboring on Sunday, so the theaters opened Sunday, July 30, and after running one reel of film all of the managers and employees were arrested, the managers being fined $25 and the employees $10 each. The managers appealed to a higher court and the employees' fines were remitted as the court said they could not be held.

On Sunday, August 6, another attempt was made to open, and this time the theaters were allowed to give one complete performance before being closed, after which the managers and employees were given the regulation free ride to the city bastile, where the same fines were again assessed, and the cases were again appealed.

There seems to be some reformers who are under the impression that the salvation of the entire world rests alone on their shoulders and that it is only to be accomplished through a rigidly enforced Puritan Sunday. The Sunday saint makes the Sunday sinner, these so-called reformers (but in reality only fanatics) should have lived three thousand years ago; they are not broad-minded or liberal enough to belong to this day and age. They desire to close the theaters, for these they can see, but the dives and resorts of ill fame are unmolested, for they dare not enter these for fear their good names will be besmirched and they are not seeking anything of that class or character.

After being repeatedly arrested by the city authorities, the theater managers succeeded in winning out over the city ordinance and for the last two Sundays have run unmolested.

C. W. L.

Swaab Film Service Co.

PIONEER FILM RENTERS OF PHILADELPHIA

Agents for

MOTIOGRAPH and POWER MACHINES
CARY COATED CARBONS and SPIEGEL MOTION SLIDES

Machine Parts Always in Stock, Current Savers. Tickets and General Supplies

129 N. EIGHTH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE "SKYDOME" MOVING PICTURE HOUSE, SPRINGFIELD, MO.

ONE of the most strictly up-to-date moving picture houses in this country is that run by the Skydome Company, of Springfield, Mo., of which Mr. J. A. Gehrs is the manager.

In April last a co-operative company was formed by Mr. Gehrs. The best material for an orchestra that could be had in the city was picked out, and a moving picture house was started. The orchestra of the Skydome Theater has the distinction of being the first large orchestra in Springfield, there having never been more than seven pieces in any orchestra there, while this one has twelve. Mr. Gehrs, we understand, has been connected with music since 1882, and has had charge of orchestras and bands for the past sixteen years. Mr. W. R. Keet, leader of the orchestra, is a graduate of a Chicago Conservatory of music, and in Mr. Gehr's words, "knows how to handle the bow and lead a bunch of musicians." Thus it is that the "Skydome" is musically so well equipped.

The accompanying illustrations show the orchestra, the exterior and the interior of the building. The "Skydome" seats some 600 people, and is an open structure, 40 x 90 feet, with a portable canvas roof adjusted with ropes, so that it can be lowered or raised as desired. Since its opening on May 4th, not one evening has been lost and business has been good, and three or four nights out of the week the place is only about half large enough to accommodate the crowds which flock to this little theater. Two and a half shows are given a night. The orchestra of tried musicians, some of them of thirty years' experience, is doubtless a great attraction. Would that other moving picture exhibitors would take the tip. Even in New York City, a city of such large dimensions and advanced theories, we have not more than one or two moving picture theatres that support more than five or six pieces in the orchestra, and in most instances there is but a piano and drum. One of the handicaps with which the Skydome Company have met, is the fact that their theater is not dark enough to show pictures in the daytime, therefore all their profit has to be made on the night performances. Says Mr. Gehrs in a letter to the Moving Picture News, "I don't have a chance to run films over beforehand to see what's coming, therefore have to guess at what kind of music to play. I think it would be a great move if film manufacturers would have a competent man on the ground when rehearsals take place, to arrange music to suit picture. It would be a winner for many a picture." We would like to supplement Mr. Gehrs' remarks by suggesting that the manufacturers send out with each film released, a program of music to be used for that particular picture. To be sure it would require a competent person to look after that end of the business, but is not the musical atmosphere given to a picture of very large importance? The employment of an inteligent musician—one of intuitive temperament—by each manufacturer of moving picture films, would enhance the beauty, or intensify the comedy of his product. Only the other night a remark was heard by us which goes to show the dire necessity of making proper provision for the musical end of the moving picture show. An intelligent woman of our acquaintance said, "I went to a moving picture show the other night and I saw a picture which ended happily by the uniting of the young couple who had been meeting with distressful circumstances on the course of true love that never runs smooth. Just when they were joyfully embracing each other what do you think the orchestra was playing?" "I don't know," was the answer. "Well, it was playing 'Ah, I Have Sighed to Rest Me Deep in the Quiet Grave.' Can you beat that?"

THE SK

Just such ludicrous things as this are happening all the time in the moving picture houses.

The Swanson Crawford Film Co. of St. Louis supplies the Skydome with films—strictly independent ones, for Mr. Gehrs adheres firmly to independent tactics, and independent products. There is a strong spirit of enterprise shown by the management of the "Skydome" which we like, and a leaning toward advancement and improvement of the moving picture show. That a thought is given to propriety in connection with the adjustment of the musical part of the program looks good—another sign of the times.

We extend to the "Skydome" our heartiest good wishes for success to the very day of closing for the season, which will be probably about the 1st of November.

EXTERIOR VIEW OF THE "SKYDOME"

SOFA PILLOW SOUVENIRS FOR SALES CO. EMPLOYEES' BALL.

The preparations for the second semi-annual ball, to be given by the employees of the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company on Saturday evening, October 14th, at Alhambra Hall, One Hundred Twenty-Sixth street and Seventh avenue, New York City, are going ahead with great gusto. At their office, 111 East Fourteenth street, a glimpse can be had of a sample of the souvenir pillow to be given away with each ticket purchased. To each ticket a coupon is attached, and upon the presentation of this coupon a pillow will be handed out to the owner. This pillow is very unique in design. It is made of fringed leather, crimson in color, and in the center is the trade-mark of the Sales Company most artistically arranged in rich, appropriate shades. The souvenir is worth really more than the price of admission.

The officers of the ball committee are as follows: H. A. Spanuth, president; J. R. Miles, treasurer; E. B. Garrett, secretary; E. B. Diel, corresponding secretary; H. L. Taylor, vice-president; E. G. Brown, assistant treasurer; F. E. Gibbons, assistant secretary; G. Ryan, assistant corresponding secretary.

ORCHESTRA

Excellent support is being given by the manufacturers in the way of taking advertising space on the program, which will be, as one of the boys was heard to say, "some pamphlet." As the program will be very shortly sent to press it would be well for all those who have obtained space, and also those who have not already done so, to send in at once the material for their advertisements. Our attention was drawn some few days ago to the fact that the advertising space on the program is rapidly filling in, so rapidly that there are but a limited number of good locations left. As Mr. H. A. Spanuth, president of the committee, was heard the other day to remark, "We are going to have a good time. It will be the one night on which the office boy can slap the 'big man' on the back and say 'Hello, old chap!' and not be called down. Everybody is going to be on an equal footing that night and everybody is welcome to come and have a real good, jolly time."

Let's all go!

"THE JAMES BOYS" CENSURED BY AUDIENCE.

During the past week that disgraceful film, "The James Boys of Missouri," was run off at one of the city theatres. Although we were not present at the time, the news reached our ears that many in the audience had hard work sitting still throughout the ordeal. It is said that women in the audience arose with exclamations of "Oh, I can't stand this any longer!" and "This is too much for me!" Said our informant, "You couldn't imagine anything very much worse; from murdering the landlord up to wrecking a train, it was all there; and the photography was about as bad as the picture. And then," continued the gentleman, "to cap the climax, after the killing of Jesse James, his brother seeks a pardon from the governor, and after refusing and sending the man away, the governor is shown as sending again for him and handing out his pardon with a promise from him to the effect that from then on he will live the life of an honorable citizen." It does seem rather Utopian to suppose that a man with such a long repertoire of crime could possibly be brought to look in a civilized way upon life. However we hope the picture will be permanently tabooed by the authorities.

CHICAGO LETTER

Moore, Hubbel & Co. are busily engaged in getting out their catalogue issued in two parts, viz., the Mechanical and the Slide catalog. The Mechanical catalog has just been issued, and is complete in every detail. The Slide catalog is a complete list of slides, covering all countries and subjects of interest—from educational and scientific standpoints, both in detail list and lecture sets. The catalogue for 1911 will contain over 15,000 new negatives, that have never before been listed. Many of them were taken by Mr. Moore, president of the company, during his recent trip around the world. This catalog is eagerly looked forward to by exhibitors all over the United States.

* * * *

Mr. A. F. Beck, general manager of the Central Film Service Company, of Indianapolis, is getting ready to feature a special reel which will be of interest to all exhibitors in that section of the country. This is a Champion release of Monday, September 25, entitled "The Black Horse Troop of Culver." taken at the Culver Military Academy, at Culver, Ind. They are deploring the present over-production in the Independent ranks of Western and Indian films, stating that among their 21 purchases each week there are frequently as many as eight or nine releases. Mr. Beck states that goods of an educational character seem to be gaining in demand, and that business is prosperous and everybody is happy.

* * * *

Charles C. Pyle, formerly assistant-manager of the Wabash Avenue branch of the General Film Company, resigned his position Saturday, September 16, in order to devote his entire time to the Exhibitors Advertising Association, of which he is part owner. He states that their New York office is doing a big business, and also the Chicago office has all it can do to deliver the goods.

* * * *

"Shorty" Tompkins, of Local No. 2, will be out for thirty-six weeks on the Orpheum Circuit with Janeiro's Band. Watch his smoke.

* * * *

Dick Lawrence, manager of the Hoke Supply Company, states that they are doing a tremendous business as they have almost more orders than they can handle for machines. Mr. Hoke at the present time is out of the city but will return next week.

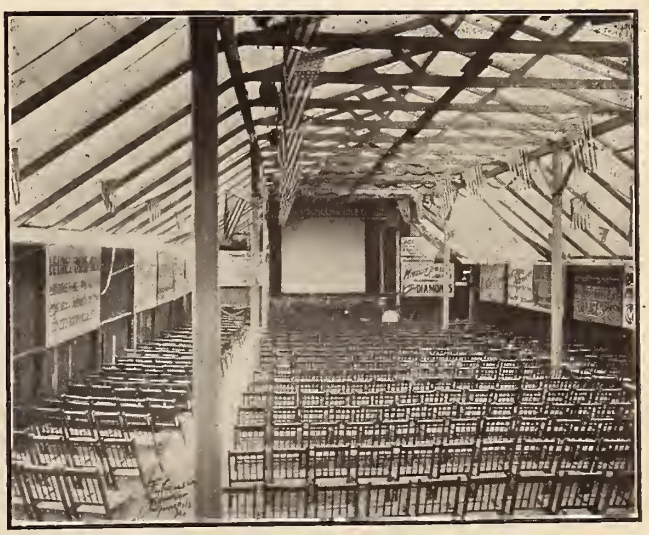
* * * *

The Co-operative Independent Film Exchange, of which Mr. Phil Louis has been general manager for the past two years, was sold recently to Wm. H. Swanson & Co. Mr. Louis will return to Chicago shortly accompanied by his brother, Harry Louis, who left Chicago several weeks ago to close the sale. Mr. Harry Louis is the president of the General Film Brokers, which firm is now being successfully managed by his brother, Max Louis.

* * * *

Mr. Spencer, of the General Film Company, is now connected with the Anti-Trust Company, where his many friends will give him the glad hand.

W. K.



INTERIOR VIEW THE SKYDOME

FROM THE OBSERVATORY.

By G. F. Blaisdell.

The pastor of the Dr. Fry Memorial M. E. Church of Buffalo, the Rev. John W. Coontz, as a means of increasing the attendance at the services of his church and thereby extending its influence, on the Sunday before Labor Day introduced the motion picture in his edifice as a means to an end. The success of the experiment exceeded his highest anticipations. The house was filled to its limits. The exhibitions of pictures continued throughout the week. The subjects comprised Biblical and historical events, classical and Shakesperean dramas, battles, Western life and customs and wild bird and animal life. The exhibition each evening was preceded by a short talk by the Rev. Mr. Coontz.

* * *

The Rev. Wallace F. Thompson, pastor of Christ Episcopal Church of Lockport, N. Y., has installed in his parish house a complete motion picture apparatus, and intends to give several picture exhibitions each week. Explanations and instructive lectures will supplement the display. The films will be confined to educational and semi-religious subjects. The minister hopes largely to extend the field of church work in East Lockport, where there are many foreigners.

* * *

A special dispatch to the Times from Paris announces that Sarah Bernhardt has at last been conquered by the tempting offers of a cinematograph firm. The message well says that she will give the manufacturer an opportunity of "making records of her magnificent histrionic powers." "Camille" is the play selected by "the divine Sarah," and it is considered her greatest success. A special adaptation has been prepared for the purpose. In order to obtain the fullest dramatic effect in her acting, Bernhardt spoke all the lines, as if before an audience.

This is good news to picture lovers. It is a regrettable fact that the great American actors are, by the terms of their contracts with the stage barons, debarred from screen work. When in the fullness of years Bernhardt is gathered to her fathers her art will live. It will not be thus with the greater Americans. Their art will die with them. For this posterity will have to thank the prevailing centralization of control over the speaking stage.

This sort of proscription, happily, does not extend to the operatic stage. There the singers are permitted the privilege of transferring to the phonograph and consequently bequeathing to posterity the wonderful voices that have thrilled those privileged to hear them.

* * *

Possibly in the days to come, when the Modern Historic Records Association, the splendid project of Mr. Alexander Konta, shall be on a working basis, arrangements may be made with the opera managers to complete the phonographic records by supplementing them with cinematographic films depicting the great operatic artists in the equally important work of the stage. Great artists come and pass. Why should we wait for the day when synchronization of phonograph and camera is an established fact? Let us have now the cinematograph representations of the great singers—the most impressive scenes of the famous musical dramas.

Mr. Konta has stated his belief that the records obtained by the Modern Historic Records Association should not be publicly used during the present generation. Should the association adopt this suggestion, there is no valid reason why operatic and theatrical managers should not heartily co-operate with the new organization in reproducing in film the dramatic work of the greatest actors on the American stage of today.

* * *

William N. Selig is making pictures of Buffalo and Cleveland. These reels will form a part of the Selig program, intended to cover all the large cities of the country. It is of a piece with the splendid advice to "see America first." The educational value of these pictures will be undoubted. We have had scenes of foreign cities and foreign lands and have enjoyed them. Now we may have a chance to get acquainted with the great home centers.

In this connection the writer has often thought, when looking at the picture of an unusually good landscape, how much more interesting the drama would be to the beholders if on the initial screen there should be a line or two indicating the locality. For instance, "The scenes of this play are laid in the Catskill Mountains." In that way in great measure a dramatic film might also become educational.

* * *

John Cort, general manager of the Northwestern Theatrical Syndicate, was in Salt Lake City recently, and four hours after his arrival was discovered by a reporter of the Herald in a five-cent gallery at a local picture house. His talk was interesting.

"Mighty pleasant up here," he said, "and it reminds me of my 'kid' days, when I was just as lustly lunged a 'gallery god' as the rest of them. I like the gallery on a night like this.

"Moving pictures? Yes, they have knocked a hole in our gallery receipts, but they have their good features. They paid our rent at the Colonial this year, amounting to about $1,000 per month. If you took these out of the season receipts it would make a difference. No, the moving pictures are not a fad. They have come to stay. I like them and everyone else likes them. Take that picture on the screen now. It alone is worth the price of admission and I would sooner see it than a play. Wouldn't you?" the theatrical manager asked, as he viewed the film.

"The moving picture field is surely a great one, but it eventually will dwindle down to the larger houses. That is the tendency in the East. There one or two first-class houses run pictures exclusively. The smaller ones are being driven out. Serious accident and fires, with the lack of facilities for meeting emergencies are responsible largely for this condition. This condition, I believe, eventually will spread to the West."

* * *

A question of personal privilege: The invitation to the writer of this column to visit Hot Springs, so heartily extended by "The Man in the Baths" and so graciously phrased by his splendid helpmeet—in fact as well as in name—"The Lady in the Baths," was read with deep interest. There is a possibility that the invitation may be accepted this winter, in which event the Observer is certain that the acquaintanceship so auspiciously, if unusually, begun will be ripened.

* * *

On Sunday, September 10, the fleet off Norfolk, Va., suspended target practice and the men enjoyed a day of rest. In the evening the crews of the various ships gathered on deck and were entertained by moving pictures. Can you imagine the scene? It would of itself make a mighty interesting picture.

* * *

Judge Bacon of Memphis, Tenn., has stirred up the followers of fisticuffs in his jurisdiction. It seems that boxing contests are permitted in Tennessee, and that women often attend. The judge has decided, somewhat bluntly, perhaps, that prizefight pictures are just about as appropriate in a theater visited by women and children as would be the singing of "Steamboat Bill" at a church service. In this decision Judge Bacon backed up the local board of censors, which had barred the films of the Wolgast-Moran fight. The magistrate added that he would uphold the board in every decision it made, basing his action on the ground that the board, if it erred, would tend to the side of leniency. The case arose over the exhibition of the films in defiance of the censors, with the resulting arrest of the theater owner. Judge Bacon ruled that the pictures could be exhibited if women and children were barred from witnessing them. The upshot of the matter may be a test of the law creating the board.

* * *

Corporation Counsel Hammond of Buffalo, on the application of the superintendent of police, has ruled, in a written opinion, that the state apprenticeship law is unconstitutional. As the statutes read, no applicant shall be granted a license to operate a moving picture machine unless he has served an apprenticeship of six months under a licensed operator. Mr. Hammond in his decision, which undoubtedly will simplify and clarify the situation in Buffalo, says:

"As there are no licensed operators in Buffalo at present this would result in the closing up of all the moving picture shows in Buffalo. So construed this would be unconstitutional as depriving persons of liberty of action without due process of law.

"The law may be broadly interpreted, however, so that the applicant will not be required to show six months' apprenticeship under a licensed operator at first. We might postpone the real enforcement of that section of the law for a year."

* * *

Colonel John S. Mosby, chief of the famous band known in Civil War days as "Mosby's Men," has been posed in a leading part in a war drama. As the guerilla leader personally directed the more important work of the play, the result should be worth seeing.

* * *

Colonel Brookfield, British consul at Savannah, Ga., was one of the first to witness Kinemacolor's coronation pictures in the Southern city. The colonel has a son who is a lieutenant on H. M. S. Neptune, whom he has not seen in several years. Imagine the feelings of the consul, in watching the picture of the Neptune in the naval pageant, when he saw his son advance to the rail and salute.

* * *

Paul D. Rainey, the famous arctic and torrid hunter, now in the wilds of the Dark Continent on a two years' trip, has with him a complete moving picture outfit and a skilled operator. According to Gerrit S. Miller, the curator of wild animals of the National Museum, Mr. Rainey has a pack of selected bear hounds, the best in Mississippi and Alabama, and a pack of small, wiry terriers. The bear hounds were put on the trail of a group of lions and soon ran them down, Mr. Rainey and his party following on horses. When a lion stood at bay the hounds were called off and the little terriers were sent in to worry the beast. Moving pictures, at close range, too close for the comfort of any timid person, were taken of the lion before a bullet was sent to a vital spot.

* * *

Lieutenant F. M. Kennedy has been experimenting with the motion camera in an aeroplane. In one of the Washington papers the lieutenant gives an interesting account of his trip. Should the development of the pictures demonstrate that the flying-motion camera is a good mapmaker it will mean that an army in active service is not up to date unless it is equipped with a complete moving picture plant—developing apparatus and all. The lieutenant said:

"Taking pictures in the air? Well, it isn't so difficult as the onlooker might suppose, though, of course, my work was experimental and the results cannot be determined until the films are developed.

"Lieutenant Arnold and I started from College Park in the afternoon with the idea of carrying out a mimic scouting trip. I had the motion picture machine—a small contrivance as easy to operate as an ordinary camera.

"When we had reached 1,500 feet and the earth looked rather small, I began to reel off the films, pointing the camera directly toward earth, so as to cover the road. I held the camera in this position during the major portion of the flight, shifting it only a little to the right and left to get the topography in general.

"The only difficulty encountered—and it is one easily remedied—was in definitely deciding just how much territory we were covering. There was no finder on the camera, and it was, therefore, impossible to sight it as one would if taking an ordinary photograph.

The light struck slantingly, and, as the camera was shaded, should have brought the hills and hollows below us into splendid relief. This is the first extended trip I have made with a moving picture machine on an airship. If the pictures I took prove to be a success, undoubtedly the scheme will be followed up and come into general use."

* * *

A new kind of moving picture fire has been recorded in New York City. Alfred Consolo, the proprietor of La Felice Theater, in East 114th street, has recently been pestered by the Black Hand, so the story goes. In the early morning of Thursday, this week, his place was gutted by fire, with a loss of $1,000. Policemen who discovered the fire, broke in and found what indicated to them that rags soaked in kerosene had been placed on the second of the three floors of the building. Consolo is supposed to have been making good money; he has been filling his house. The police are investigating.

* * * *

One of the attractions at the Georgia-Carolina Fair this fall will be two reels bearing the title "The Romance of the Reaper." The pictures are designed to show the progress made in the agricultural world in four thousand years, which is quite a long time. The chief interest, however, will center in the portrayal of up-to-date farming implements.

* * * *

The San Francisco Call has been waging war on those theaters in its city which it claims are not obeying the local regulations as to safety precautions and equipment. The Call describes the booth in one theater as having a wooden floor, walls of lath and plaster, and the windows for the projector larger than allowed by law and devoid of iron shutters.

* * * *

C. O. Muss, of Galveston, Tex., was recently summoned to court charged with violating a city ordinance in exhibiting pictures of Beattie, now under sentence of death in Virginia for murder, as well as of scenes connected with the case. Beulah Binford did not appear in the pictures.

* * * *

Up in Montreal, the internal management committee of the Board of Education has appointed a sub-committee to investigate the charge that recently there have been displayed pictures representing British troops in cowardly straits in comparison with United States soldiers in great feats of heroism. The Canadians are not to be blamed for being peevish. When it comes to courage in the raw article any one nation or race will come pretty near being as brave as any other—white, black, red or brown. As any film now turned out of a studio is liable to travel to the ends of the earth and be exhibited while on its way, it will be the safer plan for manufacturers to avoid unnecessary jolts to racial or national pride.

* * * *

Among recent incorporations are, at Albany, the Special Film Company, Ltd., New York City, capital $10,000; Film Exchange of New York City, capital $1,000. In St. Louis the Rainbow Amusement Company has been chartered with a capital of $3,000, of which 50 per cent is paid in. The American Song Manufacturing Company, of Newark, capital $100,000, and the Film Company of America, capital $1,000,000, have been incorporated at Trenton, N. J. The Eagle Film Company, of New York City, has filed a certificate of dissolution.

* * * *

Earl E. Cotanch and Clyde Heffernon have bought for $8,500 the theater now under construction in Greenwich avenue.

* * * *

John Gimbleman, a moving picture operator who came to New York City recently, has applied to the Supreme Court for a writ compelling the Commissioner of Water, Gas and Electricity to issue him a license to operate a moving picture machine. The license was denied under a new law which requires applicants to serve an apprenticeship of six months in this state before obtaining a license. Gimbleman held that the law is unconstitutional because it deprives him of earning a livelihood.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Nicholson argued that the law does not require more than is required in other professions and said that it is a necessary safeguard. Justice Goff at first denied the application but then decided to permit Gimbleman to make another application for the writ.

* * * *

The ministers of Granite City, Mo., saying they are tired of preaching to empty pews on Sunday nights and claiming that the picture shows have emptied the churches, have held a meeting to institute a campaign against Sunday theaters. Fifty-eight delegates, representing eight churches, adopted resolutions and appointed a committee to wait on the mayor.

The clergymen are to be congratulated on their frankness. But is it not possible—just possible—that the fault is partly with the ministers? The writer has heard some ministers on a Sunday night who could secure and hold an audience—with picture shows in the neighborhood at that. It was not necessary to go out on the street with a lariat and jerk the people into church, either. However, there are ministers—and ministers.

on the

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., September 20.—Soft music and a slow curtain, please, for Beulah! What Arkansas is doing to the paramour of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., is a shame to relate. No sooner did the people of this state learn that the protest of the club women and others interested in keeping Beulah Binford off the stage was sufficient to have the vaudeville agency cancel her engagement in Philadelphia, and that the "woman" in that celebrated case had transferred her endeavors to the motion picture camera, than old Arkansas arose with the true Jeff Davis spirit of making things hum and came down on the motion pictures containing Beulah with all the weight of a thousand tons of brick.

First it was Little Rock, then Hot Springs got in line, followed by Fort Smith and Pine Bluff; and, believe "muh," we sure went some. I was much interested when my better half told me what she had writen at the conclusion of last week's letter, but there must have been other minds running along the same line of thought, for that copy had not reached the office of the Moving Picture News when the city council in Little Rock resolved that it would be a far greater calamity to permit the motion pictures containing Beulah Binford to be shown than to have the state go for Taft in the next national campaign. Some of the most prominent club women in the Capital City got very busy and secured the ear of one of the city fathers over there, and when the council met he had a fine set of resolutions prepared, citing that the reels with Beulah as a stellar attraction might be all O. K., for the effete East, but here in the "wild and wooly West" it would be something awful, and, therefore, be it resolved etc., etc., that said reels be prohibited, "canned," discarded, abhorred, fired on the junk pile or any place else, just so they didn't flicker on the curtain of any of Little Rock's theatres. And the resolution went through with all the enthusiasm that is manifested at a "Holy Roller" revival when a new sinner gets converted.

But that wasn't all. Bless your heart, no. Mayor Waters, of this peaceful community, also opined that Little Rock should have nothing on the "valley of vapors," so he issued a statement to the newspaper reporters that while Beulah would receive all protection, care and attention should she come to this city and take a course of baths and get it boiled out of her system, Beulah, in the moving pictures, was a far different proposition, and, therefore, he decided, it wouldn't be right to display the reels of said "loidy" in this city; that he would instruct the chief of police to notify the local managers who may, perchance, have placed an order for these pictures, to cancel same, for they would be a dead loss so far as Hot Springs was concerned; that he would not permit them to be shown.

(Great applause from the W. C. T. U., Y. M. C. A., Ministerial Association and kindred societies.)

"Hot Springs has had enough to stand for in the past," said His Honor to me, "and I do not believe in motion pictures of this kind. I like to visit the picture shows, and I like the pictures of a good and clean nature, but I do not believe in encouraging women of that kind to advertise themselves. I doubt if she's a good actress, and I want to feel when I enter a theater that I am going to see men and women who are capable of expressing the finest sentiment of human nature, and not be compelled to gaze at a woman who became notorious in one of the worst murder cases the country has read about in years. There will be no Beulah Binford moving pictures in this town if I can prevent them, and I think I can."

And there you are! Pine Bluff and Fort Smith also took like action, I understand, and this glorious commonwealth has gone on record as being among the first states of the Union to object to the desecration of moving pictures.

Now that we are on the subject, I'd like to read some editorial sentiment along this line of thought from Mr. Saunders. I have written a few editorials for the New Era here on the subject, and I wonder if he thinks as I do about this matter. Perhaps my wish will be gratified when I receive the next copy of the Moving Picture News.

Hot Springs is also to have a new motion picture theater. It is to be a palatial one in every respect, seating 600 persons, and the price of admission will be five cents. It will be the only moving picture house in the city to charge that amount for admission, as all the others that use pictures only charge a dime; one vaudeville house using pictures charges ten and twenty cents, while the Princess, which closes the show with pictures, charges ten, twenty and thirty cents.

George Walker, the well-known picture post-card man, who came to this city a few years ago with only a few dollars, but a wealth of good sense, business ability and an over supply of ginger, is going to build a new theater. Mr. Walker, I am reliably informed, paid $3,000 for the lease. The house will be built on Central avenue, adjoining the new big Kress Five and Ten Cent Store now being built. It is right in the very core of the business district. "Uncle Sammy's" pawnshop will go out of commission and the main entrance, with beautiful lobby, will be at that place, the theater proper being in the rear and occupying the large room that was used by Hot Springs Plumbing Company. There is no denying the fact that Mr. Walker has secured a most desirable location, but it will cost thousands of dollars to fit the theater out as it should be done, and the expense will be rather heavy, which, at five cents admission, does not appeal to me very strongly. If he maintained the price at ten cents it would look better, but he's got the nerve to try it and, I hear, the money to push it through, so we shall see what we shall see in the near future. The house will be open in time for the big winter season. Here's wishing you luck, George. This is one time when the other managers unite in saying: "Let George do it."

The Great Colvins, a hypnotist, was at the Airdome the first five nights of the week, and while he succeeded in hypnotizing his subjects, he failed to cast his spell over the people generally, especially where the box-office was concerned, and it wasn't long before he was letting out a yell for help. The Loyal Order of Moose came to his rescue, I am told, and made it possible for him to go to his next stand. His entertainment was very good.

Eddie Gavrel, proprietor of the Lyceum, is looking around the city for a decorator to touch up his lobby so that it will have art exhibits appear cheap in comparison. Eddie is wise to the fact that one can make an excellent "flash" at very little expense. He visited a local decorator this week and explained in detail exactly what he wanted and asked the authority on art and decorations if he could do the job.

"Yes, Mr. Gavrel," responded the man, "I certainly can make you a most beautiful lobby. You have excellent ideas, too. I congratulate you on your artistic temperament."

Eddie felt justly proud.

"How much will work like that cost?" he asked.

"Not much. I'll make you a very reasonable price. I'll do the job for $400."

It took six physicians and a delegation of Red Cross nurses to bring Eddie back to life. "The blow almost killed father."

Manager Morrison, of the Scenic Theater, has now a true conception of the "brotherhood of man." In fact, he is thinking seriously of writing a little scenario and submit it to some of the producers, entitled: "Running an Independent Reel on a Trust License, or Double-Crossing a Friendly Competitor." Some one—he does not know who, but wishes he did—sent a clipping from a local paper to the headquarters of the General Film Company in St. Louis, stating that Morrison would run the Imp pictures of Hot Springs, over which there has been such a rumpus in this city, the article stating that he would run the pictures even at the risk of getting "in bad" with the Trust.

Some one in the General Film Company's office received the clipping, and around the words "in bad," with red ink they drew a circle and from that circle a straight line to the bottom of the article, writing at that point, also in red ink, "very bad." That was all. Morrison has heard nothing further concerning the pictures. He thinks that some one connected with one of the local houses sent the Trust people the clipping, but who the "buttinsky" was is as much a mystery as the identity of the "Man in the Iron Mask."

All of my time this week was taken up rehearsing with a home talent minstrel show, which was staged at Whittington Park. "The College Boy's Minstrels" packed the big summer theater, playing to over $300 gross, and, what is better still, the show went through without a single hitch. We had more fun than a basket of monkeys, and at the conclusion of the show the management gave a dance, which lasted until after 1 o'clock. Whittington Park has closed for the season, and we sure closed it in a blaze of glory. That minstrel show, Mr. Editor, with your kind indulgence, took up all of my time at night, and, therefore, I am some shy on a review of pictures, but will make amends in next week's letter.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

"The Altered Message" of the Solax Company, which appeared on the day of release at the Empress, drew the same big crowds that was noted by the others of the Fort Myer series.

* * * *

A talk with William Airey, of the Alhambra, revealed the fact that his venture with a moving picture circus through the South proved a big financial success. Using the Fall of Troy with a display of fireworks and a few vaudeville sketches, he was able to catch big audiences. Mr. Airey is making preparations to put two companies on the road next season.

* * * *

The Washington Film Exchange is supplying five reels of the week's best Independent output for the Moore Sunday Concerts at the Gaiety and Academy theaters. This office is in receipt of handsome pictures of individual members of the Bison and Italia stock companies. These will be framed and find prominent places with other actors of the Independent manufacturers that adorn the walls of the Washington Film Exchange.

* * * *

Some members of the Yankee Film Company were recent guests in the city.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT

London Office of the News,
8 Sherwood St., London, W.

"Flying A's" "Poisoned Flume" made a good impression here. Western subjects only too frequently bear a strong family resemblance to one another. "Flying A's" generally are free from this sameness but the "Flume" was more particularly novel and the well-pictured revolver duel between the outlaw perched on the conduit and the cowboy below struck us as great. Mr. Scott, who manages "Flying A" here, tells me the sales have been good.

* * * *

If there are any Independent manufacturers who are in a position to market real good English stuff—subjects which have sold well in this and the Continental markets—I am in a position to place them in communication with a firm here which wishes to dispose of its negatives to America after

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23rd

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN NET

A well acted realistic production of the rural type. Book it NOW.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th

THE CONSPIRATORS

A thrilling and sensational detective story of the Sherlock Holmes type. SECURE A BOOKING AT ONCE.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

supplying the home demand. Any letters sent to me at the above address will be forwarded to the right quarter.

* * * *

That the possibilities of production in this country are realized by the Continental firms is proved by the fact that a well-known house which has previously done all its staging in its native country is said to be busily preparing works in London, where it will stage on a large scale. In fact, as I have before pointed out in these notes, we are not improbably in for a boom in English subjects very soon, and it will be all for the good of the trade if it does come. You can't say now that our people lack enterprise; within my own knowledge, one of our producers had a crowd right down in Cornwall recently. This is adopting the very procedure which all who have the interest of the English subject at heart have united to urge upon the home producer.

* * * *

As to acting, we are improving very rapidly and Hepworth's, for one, possess a young lady who need not fear comparison with many of the much boomed ladies from America, and Cricks' comedians are inimitable in their own peculiar line. Where the home producer is lacking appears to be in seizing the opportunity presented by the chief works in English literature and drama. Itala, Eclair, Ambrosio and the others are great on stagings of this sort, and do not hesitate to have recourse to the literature or mythology of other countries for subjects. Why is it all the splendid material in our own great works untouched?

* * * *

For real novelty of plot, I believe the British producer to more than hold his own. Analyze the subjects of many of the American and Continental makers and you will be surprised to find how little body there is in the story; the acting and staging are good enough to make the most hackneyed idea interesting. The British films have the ideas but frequently lack the necessary skill in presentment. But you can't say of them as was once said in my hearing of deservedly popular Continental producers, that they had two plots, one in which the grandchild reconciled the secretly married couple to the old man, and another in which hubby leaves his rightful wife for another and is induced to return to his lawful partner also by the agency of the young son or daughter. There was a spice of truth in this criticism, too, though it was rather broadly stated.

B. A.

"BARBARA FRIETCHIE" FROM THE CHAMPION

A film entitled "Barbara Frietchie" was run off for our especial benefit the other day; and we can truthfully say that it is a rattling good one. The patriotism of the old lady is well depicted in the picture, and is constituted to incite patriotism and loyalty to the Stars and Stripes in all who see it. The subject is good; and it is reminiscent of the days when loyalty to flag and country was as second nature—the days when men, and women too, would die for their flag rather than see it dishonored.

"DAVID COPPERFIELD"

The Thanhouser Company is to be congratulated on the splendid success they have made of their production of "David Copperfield." The production lacks little of perfection. Although the picture was taken on American shores, the English atmosphere has been most successfully acquired and maintained. As in all Thanhouser productions, it is artistically put on. It is well cast, the characters maintaining a splendid individuality throughout. The child actress known as "The Thanhouser Kid" is to be heartily commended for her work in this production: for a child of her years she is a marvel—her conception of the part she plays is remarkable. Also another tiny tot figured in the picture as Little Em'ly, whose work was almost equally good, though not as extensive.

The staging of a production like "David Copperfield" is an exceedingly difficult matter; the multitude of unique and fantastical characters introduced by Dickens into his stories, and the peculiar circumstances and atmosphere with which he surrounds them, necessitate close attention to detail on the part of the directors, and skilful dramatic work on the part of the actors, all of which is admirably handled by the Thanhouser Company.

The "David Copperfield" film will be released in three reels in consecutive order: "Early Life of David Copperfield," October 17; "Little Em'ly and David," October 24; "The Loves of David Copperfield," October 31. Each reel is a complete story in itself as a portion of the whole.

DIXIELAND FILM EXCHANGE

Harry K. Lucas, Mgr.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 13, 1911.

Editor, Moving Picture News,
30 West Thirteenth Street,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

Through your valuable columns, will you kindly warn the trade against purchasing any films from R. W. Sherrill, who formerly operated a moving picture theater at Franklin, N. C., and a pair of crooks who up until a few weeks ago were connected with the Orpheum Theater of this city, going under the names of George S. Scottie and —— Joice.

R. W. Sherrill has embezzled the following reels: "Days of the Early West," "Three Men," "Souls Courageous" and "The Erring Son's Awakening," while Scottie and Joice disappeared from this city with two reels, namely, "Sweet Memories" and "Return to the Fold."

We are very anxious to apprehend these parties, and are offering a reward of $25 for any information concerning the whereabouts of each one.

Trusting that you will co-operate with us in bringing these individuals to justice, we are, with best wishes,

Yours very truly,
THE DIXIELAND FILM EXCHANGE,
Harry K. Lucas, Gen. Mgr.

CINEMATOGRAPHIC INDUSTRY ABROAD

American Consulate Reports

SPAIN

(From Consul General Henry H. Morgan, Barcelona)

The cinematograph theaters in Barcelona have become very popular, and new ones are constantly coming into existence in all parts of the city. These theaters are crowded at almost any time of the day and especially on Sundays, when thousands of people can be seen waiting outside until they can obtain entrance. The price of admission tends to make these theaters popular, being in most cases 2 to 5 cents in the smaller ones and 5 to 10 cents in larger ones. In addition, a number of "cines" have three or four variety numbers on the program. It is calculated that the total number of "cines" at present is between 55 and 60.

Consequently the market for films in Barcelona is unusually good. Most of the "cines" change their program partly or entirely every day, and therefore the number of films used is considerable. Upon an average, six sessions are given daily, one session lasting one hour and a half on week days and one hour on Sundays and holidays. The number of films shown per session is about eight. Dramas and melodramas are the most popular, and it is safe to say that 20 out of 30 films shown are of this nature, the balance consisting principally of comical and historical events and occasionally views of foreign countries or nature studies.

The Supply of Films.

American films are fairly well represented here, among the most popular being the Vitagraph, Edison, Biograph and others. Italian films are mostly in use, followed, in order, by French and American. A film factory has lately been established in the city, but the number of films turned out does not seem to be very large. It is complained that certain American makes are too long and complicated, and for this reason do not find general favor among the public. Owing to the average intelligence of the class of people who frequent the cheaper theaters, of which the number is great, it is necessary that the plots of the dramatic and comical films be very simple, as otherwise they are not understood. The average length of the films used here is 600 to 750 feet.

All films are imported into Barcelona through the French frontier and first shown in this city, after which they are sent to other important cities, as Madrid, Valencia, Bilbao, etc., from where they are again sent to the smaller towns and villages. The duty is 3 pesetas ($0.54) per kilo (2.2 pounds). This amount is refunded on re-exportation, after sufficient proof has been furnished to the customs officers as to the identity of the film. A certificate of the chief of police or other local authority in the city where the factory is located is accepted. It rarely happens, however, that films are re-exported, for the reason that they are generally worn-out and useless after their long course of circulation in the country.

CELLULOID MANUFACTURE IN JAPAN

(From Consul George N. West, Kobe. See also Daily Consular and Trade Reports for Jan. 10, March 29, and May 3, 1911.)

With reference to the development of the plastic industry in Japan, the following table, furnished by the manager of the Nippon Celluloid Jinzo-Kenshi, Kabushiki Kaisha, Aboshi, Harima, Japan, gives the number of persons employed by that company and the aggregate daily wage paid to each class:

Employees.	Number.	Aggregate wage.
Japanese chemists and engineers	12	$10.46
Foreign chemists and engineers	6	32.37
Clerks, cashiers and boys	19	6.97
Workmen	114	29.38
Factory boys	21	1.70
Workwomen	2	.30
Coolies	20	4.98
Total	194	86.16

It is stated that the number of workmen as well as workwomen is to be increased. The company is able to turn out 1 ton a day at present, and will shortly be able to produce 1½ tons. In a year's time it expects to produce 3 tons daily. The manager states that nearly all varieties of celluloid are manufactured except the very transparent article.

From the Sakai Celluloid Co., located at Sakai, it is learned that the average daily wage of laborers is about 1 yen ($0.498) and that the capacity of the factory is about 3,000 pounds per day. All varieties of celluloid will be manufactured. Information as to the number employed was not furnished.

The following item in reference to the operation of the Japan Celluloid Co. at Aboshi appeared in the Japan Chronicle for May 31, 1911:

We learn from the Japanese papers that the Japan Celluloid Co., established at Aboshi, near Himeji, which made experimental trials of its machinery last month, opened the regular business at the beginning of this month, and has been turning out goods for both the export and home markets with satisfactory results. The company is not only able to produce goods of a quality capable of driving out imported goods from the Japenese market, but is also able to turn out goods at lower prices than the German article, as the principal raw materials are obtainable in Japan. But operations have only just been opened, the working expenses are heavy, and the industry is not yet at the stage to pay a good return on the capital invested.

CLEAVELAND SLIDE COMPANY

The advertising slide service of the Cleaveland Slide Company, of Washington C. H., Ohio, has made that company one of the foremost in the country to-day. They are now serving thousands of customers regularly. Their service is prompt and right up to the minute in every respect and has the endorsement of some of the largest slide users in the country.

Greater pains are taken in the small details of the YANKEE productions than in the main details of other films

MONDAY

OCTOBER 2

SHE NEVER KNEW

An exceptionally pretty photo-play of a lost gift which brought happiness to a young and neglected wife.

Code Word, She

BEAUTIFULLY TONED AND TINTED

FRIDAY

OCTOBER 6

THE GOOSE GIRL

A rural drama portraying a country boy's loyalty amid trying difficulties.

Code Word, Goose

TONED AND TINTED THROUGHOUT

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 EAST 32d ST. N. Y. CITY

COPY OF LETTER RECEIVED FROM MOORE'S AMUSEMENT COMPANY PLAZA THEATRE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

SEPTEMBER 19th, 1911.

YANKEE FILM CO., N. Y. C.
DEAR SIRS:—

A word of praise for your excellent film, "THE STAR REPORTER." This picture pleased them from "soup to nuts." Make a few more like this one and we'll try and buy the building next door to accommodate the crowds; giving you plain facts, this was the greatest of its kind I have ever seen, and is sure to please many other exhibitors who may not get them to let you know it.

Hoping to get more of them and wishing you continued success,

Very truly yours,
TOM MOORE.

A POPULAR INDEPENDENT EXHIBITOR OF LYNN, MASS.

It was our good fortune this week to make the acquaintance of Col. Willard G. Stanton, who is manager of the Central Square Theater of Lynn, Mass. While waiting for the theater to open for the day, Colonel Stanton ushered me into his spacious private office and spoke enthusiastically but modestly of the success he had attained in the motion picture field, and of his admiration for the Independent pictures, which were being received with such marked approval by his large audiences. "Why," said the Colonel, "it is a regular occurrence now for the patrons to applaud the pictures and it leaves no doubt in my mind that the class of subjects which the Independent forces are giving us is proving a winner for them and makes me more than satisfied with the results I am getting." The W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc., of Boston, is furnishing the Central Square with its service. The following article appeared in a recent booklet of the business enterprises of the City of Lynn:

Lynn's most modern and recently erected house of amusement, the Central Square Theater, was opened to the public on December 19th last. Springing into immediate popularity, its history since that date can be summed up in a few words: Unbounded success, limited only by the fact that the auditorium, spacious as it is, is often inadequate to hold the many seeking admission. To describe this beautiful recreation resort would be only to tell what all the amusement seekers of our city well know. Artistic in decorations, complete in every modern equipment both front and back of stage, and particularly comfortable in its 1,500 seating privileges, the Central Square is decidedly a model theater of its class and metropolitan in every feature.

COL. WILLARD G. STANTON

"Likewise, also, critical and discriminate patrons of the theater in our city are well aware of the character of the entertainments daily provided here—first-class in all respects, the very best obtainable, regardless of expense. Vaudeville as seen in leading Boston and New York houses, moving pictures of foremost American and foreign production, these are the attractions that daily test the Central Square's seating capacity. Above all, a wholesome show and the greatest show in this city or Boston for the money—ten cents only, with seat. Courteous ushers are in attendance and particular attention given to the comfort of ladies and children. Five stirring vaudeville acts are given at every performance and all the latest moving pictures. The program is changed every Sunday, Monday and Thursday.

"The great and continued success of the Central Square Theater is due largely to Col. Willard G. Stanton, the manager, a theatrical man of wide and varied experience and one whose name is synonymous with progressive effort. Colonel Stanton is a native of Schenectady, N. Y., and has been connected with the show business since he was a boy. He has been with such people as Thomas E. Shea and Jerry McAuliffe, the Boston Grand Opera Company and various other attractions of note. Colonel Stanton married a Lynn girl and has a host of friends in our city, hence aside from his ability as a theater manager, he seems to have settled down in the right spot. At all events he is making good for the lovers of the good show."

SPECIAL NOTICE

NON-BREAKABLE

Lantern Slides

ANNOUNCEMENT
ADVERTISING
LECTURE
MICROSCOPIC
NATURAL HISTORY

We make slides of all kinds

SLIDES

Artistic and beautifully colored

Don't be faked by would-be Original Inventors who claim, and are trying to manufacture non-breakable slides.

SEND FOR CATALOG.

MICA NON-BREAKABLE SLIDE CO.
2737 N. Croskey St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

HOW HOPKINS RAISED THE RENT"

Solax Release September 27

Tom Hopkins, broke, hungry and out of work, is told by his landlady that he must pay his room rent or get out. He salves her along and leaves the house to see what the cold world has to offer. He meets a fat lady with many bundles, and politely stepping aside to allow her plenty of room, he bumps into a rubbish barrel, tearing a big hole in his trousers. Hungry, no job, and now his clothes are to the bad, he walks on down the street until attracted by the food in a restaurant window. After much pondering, he decides to take a chance—go in and eat, and then—

Tom orders a good meal, thinking he "might as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb." He eats his fill and when the waitress punches his check, to kill time he closely examines it. His fingers happen to locate a small nail protruding from the edge of his chair. He looks at it, then at the tear in his trousers, which has been covered by his coat, Ah! Ha! an idea, "Nail in chair—Tear in Trousers"—Why not? Tom suddenly rises, discovers tear. The proprietor is called, who generously takes Tom's check and tears it up. Tom is still indignant and proprietor slips him five, Tom accepting under protest. Proprietor offers Tom a cigar, but he takes several and after lighting one and warning the proprietor against such "carelessness," he starts for home.

Landlady, with frozen face, meets him at front door, but is all smiles when Tom nonchalantly hands her the five. He passes up to his room, in good standing now, to repair the rent that raised the rent, and enjoy another perfecto.

AN ITALIAN'S GRATITUDE

Solax Release September 29

Toney, his wife, and two beautiful children are of the better class of Italian street musicians. Daily they play before the house of Dr. Wilson, whose little daughter, Mabel, becomes very friendly with the Italian children.

Toney's little boy is seriously injured while climbing to a window for pennies. Dr. Wilson saves the child's life, but it is left a cripple.

Later while the musicians are playing near the doctor's house, little Mabel is run down by a heavy truck. Toney, grief stricken, followed by his family, carries the child home. Later she dies. Toney and his wife decide they are to blame for the death of the doctor's child, and argue that as the doctor saved their child and they killed his, they owe him a child. They offer their eldest child, a beautiful girl of Mabel's age, to the doctor. He is greatly touched by Toney's generosity, and craving a child's love, the doctor does not take the girl, but accepts the crippled boy.

After that Toney and his family play before the doctor's home and the children blow kisses to each other.

THE FIVE ROSE SISTERS

Thanhouser Release October 3

Grease paint, the spotlight and applause lose their fascination for the Five Rose Sisters, a dancing team full of vivacity, ability and pluck. They decide to leave the stage for a home of their own as soon as they are blessed with this good fortune. This blessing opportunely comes to them in the shape of a legacy from a dead uncle.

The legacy consists of a house and farm on the outskirts of a small village. The girls are both anxious and happy to exchange for the more salubrious and cheerful existence of the country their worrisome, wearing and purposeless life in the city. So they move to the country and forget about one-night stands, quick lunches and quick changes.

The people of the village in which these winsome quintette make their home are very hospitable and genial and make welcome and comfortable the sisters from the tall and graceful Rose to the lithe and buoyant "Rosebud." They become prominent members of the local church and are harmonious additions to the church choir.

The young pastor of the church takes a kindly interest in one of the sisters, who is an accomplished organist. His attentions to one of the "Roses" arouses the jealousy of the deacon's daughter. The green-eyed monster so took possession of her that she made capital out of the first opportunity. By one of those peculiar coincidences, it is she who learns of the past occupation of the sisters. She exposes the dancers at a choir meeting and naturally the simple village people are horrified. They ostracize the sisters from their society because of their former stage connections. The girls, however, are self-satisfied creatures and ignore the prudishness and snobbery of the village folk. They remain content and happy in their lonely farmhouse.

However, the little Rose who played the organ at church, misses the pleasure of this diversion. So one day, unable to withstand the call of the pleading anthem, she goes to the church, slips in while no one is about, and steals to the organ loft where she satisfies her unusual craving until she is overcome by the appeal and thrill of her hymns. For a long time she sat alone in the organ loft and wept bitterly.

Suddenly she is startled into quiet by the cautious movements of a stealthy person on tip-toe proceeding to the vestry room. She quietly hides near the organ loft and observes the deacon in the act of taking possession of the church funds.

The girl rushes back to her home at top speed and arranges with her sisters for the capture of the thief. When the dishonest deacon, with the money concealed under his coat, drives by the girls' farm on his way out of town, he is stopped by these plucky and determined young women. They force him to return to the village and not only confess to the crime, but "pony up."

The minister and the villagers welcome back into the fold all of the Five Roses, and decide that former dancers are respectable members of society in spite of having earned an honest livelihood with their toes. And by way of emphasis to their welcome the young minister marries the organist member of the Rose family. The blasé would point to this picture as a moral lesson to church-going hypocrites.

THE EAST AND THE WEST

Thanhouser Release October 6

The spirit of democracy prevalent at some of our large American colleges makes possible the association of students of different nationalities and religions. Although there is still a degree of snobbishness traceable in the social life of some colleges, the college which the hero of "The East and the West" attended is one of the most democratic.

It was therefore natural that our hero should chum with a Japanese student who worshipped Buddha. Both boys found each other's company congenial and interchanged considerable information during their close association as roommates.

The strong friendship formed at college the boys continued after graduation. The Jap spent a part of his time before sailing back to the "Flowery Kingdom" at the home of his friend. Before sailing he invites his chum to be his guest on the trip East. Of course, the American accepted the invitation, and his father, who is a theatrical producer, was happy to have his son go and polish his education by traveling through foreign lands.

When the Westerner arrives in the sunny East, he is much interested and impressed by the Eastern customs, and the character of the people. He is introduced to a relative of his host—a pretty and vivacious Japanese girl. She attracts his disinterested admiration by her graceful dancing and petite and chic appearance. He does nothing that would convey the impression to the girl that he is in love with her, because he remembers "the girl he left behind." The impressionable Japanese damsel is carried away, however, by the force of the American's manners and loses her heart to him. Poor, suffering girl, her love is not returned.

The American is much impressed by the girl's skill as a dancer, so when he decides to go back to God's country, and not conceited enough to imagine that the girl would fall in love with him, he tells her that if she would like to try to win glory on the American stage he would tell his father to give her a chance. He sails back to America and his sweetheart. In the course of time he makes good his promise to the girl of the East.

She comes to America and when she makes her debut on the stage here as a dancer she wins considerable applause and is momentarily happy. But when she hears of the engagement of her idol to an American girl, her hopes are shattered and no longer desirous of fame or glory, she decides to sail East. Her plans are expedited by the arrival of a letter from her father commanding her to return and marry the chum of the American—who was secretly in love with her. Obedient to her father's commands, and happy to fill the vacuum created by an unrequited love, she sails home. And as the moralist would say, she will be much happier by marrying a man of her own kind than marrying a man whose environment and training would create an abyss between them in later years. After all, a person is happier in the atmosphere in which they are brought up.

THE ROSE'S STORY

Imp Release October 2

Gerald Kinney is a roue and travels with a fast set, having plenty of money to indulge his tastes and going the pace that kills. He is somewhat satiated with the life he is leading, and his better nature asserts itself at times. He leaves his club, where the wine is flowing and the tables are strewn with poker chips, and motors out into the country.

In a pretty wooded dell, by the side of a quaint old well, he meets Myrtle Edgar, a simple country maiden, pretty, pure and demure. It is a revelation to him. The girl is a new type—unlike any woman he has ever seen. She shyly gives him a drink of the cool water. Endeavoring to take liberties with her, he is repulsed, kindly but firmly, and that is a new experience for the debonair clubman. It is a welcome innovation and he sees in her only the pure and holy. Roses grow in profusion in the pretty spot and she plucks one and fastens it on the lapel of his coat.

The rose acts as a talisman. Whenever he is tempted to do wrong, he regards the flower. His friends rail at him and wish to learn his secret but he guards it jealously; gradually dropping his old acquaintances and leading a more quiet life. The memory of the sweet country girl is always before him.

At a swell society function he suddenly thinks of her and is distrait. He leaves his handsomely gowned partner and walks out into the night, the memory of Myrtle haunting him. He seeks her out and makes an honest declaration of his love, but she intuitively divines there is a disparity in their station. He tells her of his past life and she puts him on probation, after admitting her love.

They are married, and after a few years of wedded life a child comes to gladden their hearts. One night the wife is conning a book and finds between the leaves a pressed rose. She questions him and he tells her it is the rose she gave him at the old well, the flower that made a man of him and brought him a true and trusting wife, making his life brighter.

THROUGH THE AIR

Imp Release October 5

Flo Garret accompanies her father, Ned Bullard, and others on a prospecting trip into the gold country and assists in the cooking and keeping the camp tidy. Flo is an athletic young woman who can ride and shoot, and Ned loves her. His affections are not returned and he is furious at times.

Near the camp, Jack Baldwin, the aviator, has his airship housed, and is making frequent flights while experimenting with his dirigible. He meets Flo and they are mutually attracted.

While prospecting, Flo's father discovers gold in abundance, and he and companions stake out a claim. Bullard and the partner conceive the idea of putting the old man out of the way and filing on the claim. Ned returns to the camp and attempts to force his attention on the girl and she rides away.

The old prospector returns and he is shot by Ned, in a struggle, who steals the papers. Flo is a witness to the act, and, after making her father comfortable, she mounts her horse and rides to frustrate the intention of the scoundrels. She drops from her horse exhausted before the quarters of the young aviator and tells him the story.

In the meantime Ned has ridden to the railroad station, but finds the train just departing. He secures a high powered motor car and, offering the driver a big bonus, is whirled away in the direction of the office of the recorder.

Jack Baldwin takes in the situation and lends his aid. Armed with a duplicate description of the mine, he mans his airship, soars away, and the race for the office of the recorder is on. It is a highly interesting speed contest. Ned has the advantage of several miles start, but Jack passes him and arrives at the office of the official first and files on the claim in the name of Flo.

The daring young aviator wins the girl and the thanks of the old prospector as well, while the villains leave the country with Flo and her father in peaceable possession of the mining claim.

THE DERELICT

Rex Release September 28

More than six or eight times has life been compared to the sea; both have their storms, their ebb and tide; both have their reefs and shoals; and both have their flotsam. Yet every derelict floating rudderless and aimless, on the uncharted sea of life is human evidence of the dereliction of his fellowmen.

Frank Blake, a young fisherman, walking by the sea that alike means death and the means of living to him, comes across a few bodies washed ashore from a wrecked vessel out upon the waters. One among them, a girl, is still living, and at once he carries her to his cottage, where he and his mother resuscitate her. The girl is the girl of his dreams, the incarnation of his ideal, the consummation of vague visions born in fairy wreathes of smoke in the lull of twilight hours. And as Time, the greatest of all aviators, flies by, he learns to love her as a man loves but once in his life. Day by day she regains more of her health and strength. He proposes, when—

A villager finds a chest, washed ashore from the wreck, and brings it at once to the Blake home. With much excitement the villagers open it and discover in it the log of the ill-fated ship. The secret is out—the girl is found to be a leper, who was being transported to an isolated island when the wreck occurred.

And—well, if through the ages, love were not strong enough to withstand despair, disease, and even death, we'd not be here to-day discussing a great picture. The father demands that the girl leave at once, but the lover tells of his determination to go with her. In spite of the girl's protestations and her plea to stay with his father, he leaves with her and they both put out in a boat, headed for a little island. That night, as he is sleeping in the rude temporary camp he had constructed, she weighs in her mind the man's sacrifice for her, and determines to pursue the only course at her disposal to alter his. She goes back to the remorseless sea that had before yielded her up, to be its own bride forever.

BARBARA FRIETCHIE

Champion Release October 2

One of the brightest examples of true patriotism was exhibited by a woman in a most remarkable manner during the Civil War. The heroine was Barbara Frietchie. It occurred in the town of Frederick, Md., where every household was divided in its sympathies.

George Mason, whose mother was a Frietchie, was an ardent Unionist, but his brother William was strong for secession. Virginia Iredale loved George, but her seniments were opposed to his. This gave William a footing with her which he strove to improve by every means in his power.

It was about the time of General Lee's prospective invasion of the North. In accordance with that idea, General Stonewall Jackson had turned the faces of his men northward. Everywhere in Maryland he was acclaimed with joy, though not so vociferously as further south. Jackson met with no hostile demonstrations, though thousands were so inclined. In the big town of Frederick, there was not one protest against the Conferedate invasion—but stay! there was one, a dear old lady of eighty years, whose great big loyal heart led her to do an act of heroism that was sublime!

Jackson at the head of his hosts, entering Frederick that balmy September day, beholds the starry flag floating from a modest brick dwelling. Others have seen it, too. A score of muskets belch forth as one shot and the Stars and Stripes hangs by a cord from the shattered flagpole. In a flash the window is raised, framing therein an aged but sweet face. A pair of feeble hands grasp the broken pole and once more the Stars and Stripes defiantly flutter. Then are uttered those well-remembered words: "Shoot if you must, this old gray head, but spare your country's flag." The butts of a hundred muskets leap to the shoulders of the gray coats, but the next instant the stentorian tones of brave General Jackson ring out: "Attention! Who touches a hair of yon gray head dies the death of a dog!" Then with a salute, he and his men marched on. Barbara Frietchie belonged to history.

This glorious act decided Virginia Iredale as to her course in love and politics. Virginia thought she loved her Southland more than the Union, but when she saw the old flag waving in Aunt Barbara's hand, she knew at once where her real sympathies were, and as a result of this decision her fair head found a resting place on the broad and manly bosom of George Mason.

AS THINGS USED TO BE

Champion Release October 4

Tom Hanson is a true type of Western gambler, riotously drunk half his waking moments. Harry Martin is a better product of the West. Harry loves Tom's sister and for that reason tries to reform him. In return for this, Tom learns to hate him, and to such an extent that he attempts to poison his sister's mind against him. In this he partly succeeds by cleverly throwing suspicion on him as a thief.

In spite of this, it falls to Harry's lot to have it in his power to save Tom from death at the hands of Indians, and he does this in a noble and courageous manner. When Tom learns that Harry was his gallant rescuer, remorse takes possession of him and he confesses the dastardly trick he played on Harry, and the latter is thus restored to the heart of his sweetheart and her parents. He magnanimously forgives the wayward Tom, and a most affecting scene transpires.

The gambler decides to change his life for the better for he has gradually seen the goodness of men in Harry. With this change, the old folks are made happy, and it is needless to say that Harry and his sweetheart find true bliss once more.

The parts herein "As Things Used to Be" are strongly dramatic, and as such are accurately and tellingly portrayed, each separate incident being treated accurately in its portrayal. The climax is effectively brought out and cannot fail to make a lasting impression on those who witness its depiction.

SHE NEVER KNEW

Yankee Film Co. Release October 22

Having been infatuated with a famous dancer, Jack Gordon had no thoughts of his home, and neglected his wife.

The wife, ignorant of the infatuation and believing the "oft-told tale of business," pitied her husband and sought to make things more pleasant for him.

On the occasion of her birthday she had prepared a splendid little dinner for her husband and was chagrined to learn that he would not be home "on account of business," but instead of business he went to keep an appointment at the home of the dancer, where there was to be quite a gathering of people.

He intended to surprise her by presenting her with a beautiful jeweled bracelet, but when he sought through his pockets he found that he had lost it. The dancer became enraged at being humiliated in the presence of her friends and insultingly dismissed him from her presence. He leaves in a rage, vowing never again to see her.

Although disappointed by her husband being absent at the occasion of her birthday, the wife is made happy at the presence of her father. The old man finds a box on the floor which the husband had dropped before leaving, and when the wife opens this and finds a beautiful bracelet she becomes happy at the thought that her husband has not forgotten her birthday and joyously shows it to her father, who deftly removes a card which shows that the present was meant for some one else. He acquaints his son-in-law with this fact and makes him promise to sever all connections with the dancer and become a devoted husband, which the young man gladly does.

THE GOOSE GIRL

Yankee Film Co. Release October 6

Remorse, flattery and prudence play important parts in this picture.

Flattered by the attentions of a wealthy summer guest, the little country girl, who was lovingly known as the "Goose Girl," being in constant attendance upon a flock of geese, forgets the loyal devotion of her sweetheart, who is a hard-working plumber, and when an opportunity presents itself she comes to the great metropolis and marries the man who coaxed and flattered her into coming.

Her marital bliss proves of short duration, as her husband soon tires of her and within two years she is in want with a young baby to take care of. In this plight, her former sweetheart, the young plumber, accidentally finds her.

The young plumber is called upon to do some repairs in an office building and meets the man who had deserted the little country girl and left her in want while he lived in prosperity.

Finding the safe open the plumber extracts a large sum of money and gives it to the deserted wife. He is later accused of the crime, and shows the authorities as well as the broker where the money is. The broker recognizes his wife and child and realizing their need and his own cowardly conduct decides not to press the charge against the plumber.

Remorse, that frightful enemy of mankind, then sets in its gruesome tentacles and another victim of self-destruction is added to its never ending list.

After her husband's death the former country girl and her baby return to the farm, where the loyalty and self-sacrificing conduct of the young plumber earns its reward.

A MATRIMONIAL IDYL

Powers Release, Tuesday, September 26

A satirical domestic comedy depicting the perils of love-at-first-sight. A young lady is reading in a hammock when a handsome stranger passes by, both innocent of the awful fate that awaits them. A flirtation takes place that leads to serious results, for after the courtship we see them before the altar agreeing to take each other for better or for worse, or worse as it happened. The wife couldn't cook and the husband had no patience, both of which proved to be non-conducive of wedded bliss. A baby arrives to add his mite to the noisy household. Many are their trials and tribulations, all of which bring out the ludicrous side of married life with the result of much merriment to the onlooker. A novel feature of the picture is the introduction of sub-titles in rhyme which serve to brighten up that usually uninteresting though necessary part of most pictures.

A BRANDED INDIAN

Powers Release September 30

A half-breed gambler is sent on an errand from the ranch. Riding on horseback along the road, he meets an Indian and suggests a game of cards. They gamble until the half-breed loses all. He then bets the horse, which he does not own, and loses that. He proves a bad loser and determines to get even. Returning to the ranch, the half-breed tells the cowboys that the Indian held him up and took away the horse. The cowboys take the trail and capture the Indian, intending to mete out to him the fate of all horse thieves.

Bringing the redskin back to the ranch, a fire is built to heat the branding irons preparatory to a lynching. The innocent Indian is made to suffer the humiliation and agony of being branded as a thief, and the men are about to hang him when the ranchman and his daughter put a stop to it and set the red man free. The sympathetic daughter treats the wound and binds it up, for which the unfortunate man is grateful.

The Indian vows to hate the white race and become an outlaw and pay back the score. From ambush, later, he shoots one of the cowboys who tried to hang him, and the horse gallops back with the rider hanging limp in the saddle. The cowboys give pursuit. Meantime the half-breed gambler takes advantage of his opportunity to force his attentions on the ranchman's daughter. The chase drives the hunted Indian to the spot in time to take in the situation. Forgetful of his own safety he interferes with the half-breed and they engage in a duel which leaves the half-breed a dead man. Though mortally wounded, the Indian picks up the fainting maiden and carries her back to the ranch.

When the cowboys arrive the Indian's life is ebbing away. They want to shoot him, but an explanation causes them to desist. Instead of shooting him down like a dog, they fire a volley in the air. A salute upon the death of a hero.

THE MASK OF THE RED DEATH

Ambrosio Release September 23

The City of Naples is in the grasp of the plague, and the terrified people are mowed down by the awful disease. The king with his court flees to a distant castle, where death is mockingly defied, behind locked doors. Death, a shadowy spectre, carrying his scythe, stalks into the castle, presenting a weird and awe-inspiring sight, and casts the plague upon all except a poor woman and her two little children whose pleadings moved the king to take them along, and who, alone, prayed to be spared. This is an exceptional subject, with wonderful photography.

On the same reel is "The Hornet," a short comedy.

GETTING EVEN

Nestor Release September 30

Betty Thorne had declared that if she and Bob Wiley only continued tormenting her father long enough, eventually he would consent to their marriage. But so infuriated did Major Thorne become at their persistence, that one day he actually took his cane to the young man. Tom, however, sprang through the door and the Major's blow fell upon the head of poor Parson Goodman, who entered at that moment. Excusing himself as best he could, the irate father summoned the gardener, instructing him to eject Tom from the premises.

But having heard these instructions from his hiding place, the lover decided to let himself out through the kitchen. Here, the sight of Policeman O'Grady's coat and hat lying upon a chair, where the officer had flung them as he sat down to a cup of tea with Maggie, quickly changed Tom's mind. Snatching them up, he hurried into the next room; there, with the aid of a little soot from the fireplace, the incorrigible young scamp walked boldly into the next room and accused the Major of assault and battery. Then, before he could get a good look at the officer, Betty came forward and hustled her confused father off, telling him that she would arrange matters with the policeman.

As the Major re-entered the room, however, the truth dawned upon him, for he beheld his daughter's face covered with soot, and, glancing at the officer, saw that his big mustache was now merely a black smudge. Again the cane was raised. This time Betty succeeded in staying his arm until Tom had safely deposited his borrowed clothes upon the kitchen chair and O'Grady had them on ready to depart when Major Thorne and the gardener grabbed him from the back, and without much ado threw the astonished officer through the window.

Battered, bruised and angry, the Irishman picked himself up and limped back into the house, and had not Betty and Tom been busy urging Parson Goodman to hasten with their marriage ceremony, they might have heard O'Grady's club descending upon the Major and his assistant, as he marched them triumphantly off to the station house On the same reel:

MUTT AND JEFF AS REPORTERS

Why should fate persecute lanky Mutt and his diminutive friend, Jeff? The echo, unfeeling as well as proverbial, answers, why?

Now, here comes one of those lucky mortals—a newspaper reporter. His work—work? His is not work; all he does is dress well, eat better, smoke the most fragrant Havanas and hold delightful tete-a-tete confabs with all sorts of people in order to find out just what skeletons they have hidden in their homes. And for this easy, nosey pastime, reporters actually get good money.

Mutt and Jeff's specialty is "doing" the "easy thing." So they make the rounds of the big "Dailies" looking for the reporter's cinch. Two of the "Star's" star reporters are missing, and Mutt and Jeff arrive at the psychological moment, which means they connect.

Jeff is assigned to do the society and theatrical stunt, while Mutt, who is brave and game, is to mingle with low-browed chaps and unearth the foul doings of the denizens of the underworld. The former meets with unqualified success, making a decided hit with dames of high degree and dramatic and operatic stars of great renown. When he turns in his report—a dandy scoop—the "Star" engages the little fellow at an enormous salary; and Jeff, conscious of his immense worth, automobiles away with one of the swellest members of the gentle sex.

In the meantime, Mutt has not been idle. He gets on the scent. Ah! a suspiciously dark cellar crowded with a suspicious looking bunch of dark, scowling men. Criminals to be sure! Mutt breaks in upon them, and they—cab drivers holding a meeting—fall upon the "thin guy" and pummel the daylight out of him. Black and blue, beaten almost beyond recognition, but proud for having uncovered a band of criminals, Mutt manages to make his report, which earns the disapproval of the "Star" and he gets "fired" with neatness, despatch and footwork.

There, out in the bustling street, poor Mutt sees with envious eyes the fast disappearing auto bearing away the smiling Jeff and his bee-you-tee-full lady friend.

THE CONSPIRATORS

Great Northern Release September 30

A sensational drama of the Sherlock Holmes type in which the resources of the famous detective outwit a nefarious gang and encompass their downfall.

Mr. Wilson, an attorney-at-law, receives a communication from a client, a millionaire, Benjamin Carter, who is a confirmed invalid, requesting him to call as quickly as possible to arrange for the sale of his stocks and bonds. When the letter arrives Mr. Wilson's wife is at his office. Bidding her good-by, the husband accompanies her to the street. Wilson's secretary, who is a member of a gang of nefarious scoundrels, during his absence reads the letter from Carter and hurriedly prepares a message to his associates apprising them that there is an opportunity for a good haul. His first message does not suit him and he crumples this up and throws it on the floor. This ultimately proves to be his undoing. The secretary leaves the office and joins his confederates and soon their plans are matured.

As Mr. Wilson is hailing a cab preparatory to calling on his client, the gang overpower him and confine him in a dungeon at old Mother S.'s. Armed with his employer's bag, the clerk then proceeds to call on the client. At the solicitor's office, however, a trusted servant has picked up the incriminating note which says that Wilson must be robbed. He informs Mrs. Wilson and then Sherlock Holmes is called in.

He speedily determines on a course of action, and going to the client, takes that gentleman's place and is disguised to represent the infirm old man. When the clerk calls, Sherlock Holmes overpowers him and makes him a prisoner. Then he disguises himself as the clerk, and goes to the place where Wilson is detained and liberates him.

The other members of the gang rush in, but are covered by the detective's pistols. Suddenly one of them pulls a cord by the window and Sherlock Holmes disappears into space below. But the police arrive and overpower the ruffians. They are forced to disclose Holmes' whereabouts and eventually the prisoners are led away for safe keeping, and Wilson is happily restored to his family.

GUARANTEED ACCURATE PARTS for all MOTION PICTURE MACHINES at very reasonable prices. SPECIAL parts and machines as also experimental parts made to order. All repair work on MOVING PICTURE MACHINES promptly attended to at remarkably low figures. CHAS. E. DRESSLER, 388 Second Ave., Betw. 22nd & 23rd Sts.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Powers and Motiograph Machines, and will Exchange for Either, or Any Other Make You Desire.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST.
State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely
J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

When Writing Advertisers Please Mention Moving Picture News

Here Is Something Entirely New

You have never seen anything like it before, and why? Because it is the only Collection of its kind ever published, and it is going to fill a long felt want. It is a Collection that will appeal to thousands of pianists who play in moving picture theatres.

HAVILAND'S
MOVING PICTURE PIANIST'S ALBUM

It contains the music that every pianist needs in a moving picture house. It is "Classified," so that at a moment's notice you can find the particular style or class of music you need for a particular picture.
Sixty pages of music, covering everything needed in a picture house—full sheet music size—arranged simply, yet brilliantly. Nothing in this Collection more difficult than third grade. Anyone can play these arrangements.
The Price is 50 Cents Postpaid.
F. B. HAVILAND PUBLISHING CO.
125 West 37th Street, New York

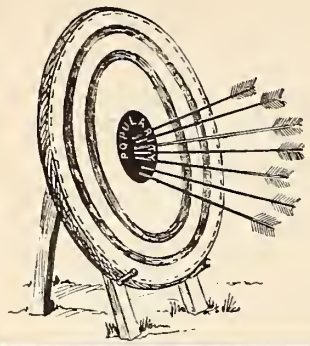
Telephone: 1664 Spring
Kitab Engraving Company
Makers of MOVING PICTURE NEWS HALF TONE CUTS
401 Lafayette Street, NEW YORK

MOVING PICTURE NEWS
$2.00 per Year. 52 Issues

BARGAINS—BARGAINS
Motion Picture Machines $35 up, Lubin Cineograph fully equipped $65.
Edison Model B, Powers No. 6 and Standard latest styles a specialty.
Model B Gas Outfit $25.
Get Sup. 33 Bargain List of M. P. Machines, Stereopticons, etc.
Motion Picture Machines wanted.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

IMPS

Hit the Bull's-eye Twice Every Week!



Think! How many film manufacturers in this wide world have brought out two really good films every week for the past fifty weeks? You can count them all on the thumb of one hand. And that thumb represents the "Imp." What's the use of gambling with uncertain brands of film when you can get a sure thing at no greater cost? Why not get two Imps every week? If you can't get them by fighting for them, why not try paying a little more?

"THE ROSE'S STORY"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

Here's a real Fall pippin! Completely out of the ordinary, away from the routine. Read the synopsis elsewhere in this issue and imagine what a production such a story has been given by Imp folks! Released Monday, Oct. 2nd.

"THROUGH THE AIR"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A real, genuine, blown-in-the-bottle airship races with a chugging automobile in this love story. It will make your patrons sit bolt upright. They'll talk about this film and send their friends to your house! Get it! Released Thursday, Oct. 5th.

Has your exchange booked you for the

CHARLESTON HURRICANE AND FLOOD SCOOP?

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America. 102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres. Important matter is being sent out to our mailing list. Are you on that list?

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

Notice!

—I herewith announce the installation of a Free Employment Bureau in the Laemmle Film Service offices. No charge will be made for the employment of managers, operators, pianists, singers, ticket-takers, etc. The very highest references are required and the benefit of the entire Laemmle organization is now at your command, either in getting help or work. Write or call, tell what you want, and let us do the rest, with our compliments.

Notice!

—If you desire to sell, let, purchase or lease a theater or site in any part of the United States or Canada, get in touch with any of the Laemmle Film Service offices at once. We shall be glad to be of assistance and will make no charge for services.

Notice!

—If you are not satisfied with Independent films, it is because you are not geting the right sort of service. Why not hook up with the biggest and best film renter in the world? It doesn't cost you any more and it brings you the kind of program you ought to have. This very day is the best day to take your step toward prosperity.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
New number 204 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa.

The biggest and best film renter in the world.

EXHIBITORS

Big Money Proposition for you. Send your address for our mailing list.

ORTHO FILM CO., Inc.
40 E. 12th St. New York

STAG FILMS

WANTED—Stag Films, also Religious Films. State names of subjects and condition, etc., lowest price. Address

OREGON FILM EXCHANGE
526½ Wash. St. Portland, Ore.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-Saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.

HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

ADVERTISING SLIDES

We claim to produce the CLASSIEST Advertising Slides ever shown. Send for SAMPLES.

Cleaveland Slide Co., 127 Court Street, WASHINGTON C. H., OHIO

Ortho

COMMERCIAL DEPT.

Will take Feature, Industrial, Educational and Advertising Motion Pictures for all interested. Work guaranteed and prices moderate.

RENOVATING DEPT.

To Film Exchanges and Exhibitors

The ORTHO HOCHSTETTER PROCESS for Redeveloping, Cleaning and Softening of Both Flammable and Inflammable Films is the Best in Existence. It does not cost you anything to be convinced. Send Sample of Old Film and we will show you the result obtained by our process. No Charge for Sample Reel.

DEVELOPING AND PRINTING DEPT.

If you have not the space and facilities to do this work, send exposures at once to the ORTHO FILM CO. We do this work at a Reasonable Price and Guarantee Results.

N. B.—SEND YOUR ADDRESS FOR OUR MAILING LIST. WE HAVE SOME GOOD PROPOSITIONS TO MAKE TO YOU

ORTHO FILM COMPANY, Inc.

40 EAST 12th STREET NEW YORK

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK - - - - - - - -	LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK - - - - - - - -	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP - - - - - - - -	LIRE 5,750,000

EXCHANGE MEN WRITE TO US FOR PARTICULARS OF OUR FIRST RELEASE

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Sept. 6—Tweedledum and the Adventuress (Com.-Dr.)
Sept. 6—Italian Artillery
Sept. 13—Cain's Retribution (Dr.)
Sept. 13—Tiny Tom Wins a Lottery Prize (Com.)
Sept. 20—Tweedledum's Riding Boots (Com.)
Sept. 20—Tiny Tom as a Detective
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death
Sept. 27—Alice's Dream
Sept. 23—The Hornet (Com.)
Sept. 27—Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)

AMERICAN

Aug. 10—The Ranch Girl (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 14—The Poisoned Flume (W. Dr.) 1000
Aug. 17—The Brand of Fear (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 21—The Blotted Brand (Dr.)
Aug. 24—Anna Harris in the Swimming Marathon
Aug. 24—Aunty and the Cowboys (Com.)
Aug. 28—The Western Doctor's Peril (Dr.)
Aug. 31—The Diamond Smugglers (Dr.)
Sept. 4—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 7—Three Million Dollars (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 11—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (W. Com.-Dr.)
Sept. 14—The Mother of the Ranch (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 18—The Gun Man
Sept. 21—The Claim Jumper

CHAMPION

Aug. 16—How the Girls Got Even (Com.)
Aug. 21—When North and South Met 950
Aug. 23—The Confessional 950
Aug. 28—A Daughter of Dixie 950
Aug. 30—How Tony Became a Hero 950
Sept. 4—Grant and Lincoln 950
Sept. 6—When the Law Came 950
Sept. 11—Charley's Butte (Dr.)
Sept. 13—The Red Devils (Dr.) 950
Sept. 18—Shenandoah 950
Sept. 20—The Stolen Horse 950
Sept. 25—The Black Horse Troop of Culver. 950
Sept. 27—The Cook of the Ranch 950
Oct. 2—Barhara Frietchie 950
Oct. 4—As Things Used to Be 950

ECLAIR

July 17—Teddy's Three Duels
July 24—The Pretty Lady of Narbonne
July 31—The Parable of the Prodigal Son
Aug. 7—The Sorrowful Mother (Dr.)
Aug. 7—Too Much Swedish Drill (Com.)
Aug. 14—The Connecting Link (Dr.)
Aug. 21—The Edelweiss
Aug. 21—How They Work in Cinema (Com.)
Aug. 28—A Marriage in the Stars (Com.) 755
Sept. 4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.) 886
Sept. 11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris 630
Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.) 335
Sept. 18—Magic Music 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies 370

GREAT NORTHERN

July 1—The King's Favorite
July 8—As a Man Soweth (Dr.)
July 15—A Soldier's Life (Com.) 452
July 15—At Sea Under Naval Colors 455
July 22—A Kind-Hearted Brother (Dr.)
July 29—The Engagement Ring (Dr.)
July 29—A Happy Home
Aug. 5—The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 12—The Mother's Mark (Dr.)
Aug. 12—Teddy Trained hy His Mother (Com.)
Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.) 950
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.)
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.)
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson
Sept. 16—The Conspirators (Dr.)
Sept. 23—Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)

IMP

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

July 31—The Bi-Centennial Celebration at Mohile, Ala. (Sc.) 500
July 31—The Skating Bug (Com.) 500
Aug. 3—The Call of the Song (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 7—The Old Peddler (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 10—Dorothy's Family (Com.) 1000
Aug. 14—A Boy's Best Friend (Dr.)
Aug. 17—Behind the Times (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Bill Tries to Make Bread
Aug. 21—Battle of the Wills (Dr.) 500
Aug. 21—Love in a Tepee (Dr.) 500
Aug. 24—As a Boy Dreams (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 28—His Royal Highness (Com.)
Aug. 28—Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.)
Aug. 31—The Toss of a Coin (Com.)
Sept. 4—The Haunted House (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 7—Duty (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood
Sept. 18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream
Sept. 21—By Registered Mail
Sept. 25—The Co-Ed. Professor (Com.) 750
Sept. 25—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.) 250
Sept. 28—'Tween Two Loves (Dr.) 1000

ITALA

July 13—The Inventor's Wife (Dr.)
July 15—Toto Enthusiast For New Fashion (Com.)
July 15—A Revolver Returned to Its Owner
July 20—The Charitahle Young Lady (Dr.).
July 22—Foolshead's Heels (Com.)
July 27—The Fatal Sonata (Dr.)
July 29—Toto's Butterfly (Com.)
July 29—Toto Without Water (Com.)
Aug. 3—The Evening Bell
Aug. 5—Foolshead's Last Roguery
Aug. 12—Sport Restores Youth
Aug. 17—Toto's Little Cart
Aug. 17—In the Valley of Viege
Aug. 19—Foolshead—Manikin
Aug. 19—The Blunt Sword
Aug. 24—Modern School of Italian Cavalry
Aug. 26—Foolshead—Chauffeur
Aug. 26—For a Straw
Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes
Sept. 7—The Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dr.)
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.)
Sept. 9—Toto Has a Purse
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Com.)
Sept. 16—Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.)

LUX.

By Prieur.

July 28—Jim Crow: A Tale of the Turf (Dr.) 500
Aug. 4—Bill Does His Own Washing (Com.) 439
Aug. 4—An Elopement hy Aeroplane (Com.) 465
Aug. 11—Bill Wishes to Make Butter (Com.) 458
Aug. 11—The Cripple (Dr.) 462
Aug. 11—Bill Wishes to Make Butter (Com.) 458
Aug. 11—The Cripple (Dr.) 462
Aug. 18—A Child's Courageous Act
Aug. 25—Bill Follows the Doctor's Orders
Aug. 25—What a Pennyworth Did
Sept. 1—Bill as a Game-Keeper (Com.) 504
Sept. 1—The Invisible Wrestler (Com.) 340
Sept. 8—Bill Buys a Lobster (Com.) 350
Sept. 8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.) 642
Sept. 15—Bill as a Billposter (Com.) 573
Sept. 15—His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.) 357
Sept. 22—Bill as an Express Messenger (Com.) 344
Sept. 22—The Stolen Diamond (Dr.) 629

NESTOR FILM CO.

Aug. 19—Mutt and Jeff in the Banking Business
Aug. 23—Alias Yellowstone Joe (Dr.)
Aug. 26—Mutt and Jeff and the Country Judge (Com.)
Aug. 30—The Parson and the Bully (Dr.)
Sept. 2—Mutt and Jeff and the German Band (Com.)
Sept. 6—The Flower of the Tribe (W. Dr.).
Sept. 9—Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Com.)
Sept. 13—At Perry's Ranch (Dr.)
Sept. 16—Mutt and Jeff and the Newshoys (Com.)
Sept. 20—Across the Divide (Dr.)
Sept. 23—Mutt and Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Com.)
Sept. 23—Obliging a Friend (Com.)
Sept. 27—The Young Doctor (Dr.)
Sept. 30—Mutt and Jeff as Reporters (Com.)
Sept. 30—Getting Even (Com.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Aug. 1—A True-hearted Miner
Aug. 4—Darkfeather, the Squaw
Aug. 8—Grey Cloud's Devotion
Aug. 11—The New Cowhoy
Aug. 15—A Sioux Spy
Aug. 18—An Indian Love Affair
Aug. 22—A Cowhoy's Loyalty
Aug. 25—Pioneer Days
Aug. 29—An Indian Legend
Sept. 1—The Sheriff's Love
Sept. 5—Little Dove's Romance
Sept. 8—A Western Tramp
Sept. 12—The Lost Letter
Sept. 15—Lone Star's Return
Sept. 19—The Sheriff's Brother
Sept. 22—The Missionary's Gratitude
Sept. 26—Lucky Boh
Sept. 29—White Fawn's Peril

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

July 25—The Thrilling Powers Fire 500
July 29—The Picnic (Com.)
July 29—A Foot Romance
Aug. 1—Speculation (Dr.)
Aug. 5—Last of the Mohicans (Dr.)
Aug. 8—Cheyenne Days (Scenic)
Aug. 8—A Harmless Flirtation (Com.)
Aug. 12—Lone Eagle's Trust (Com.)
Aug. 15—Bahes in the Woods (Dr.)
Aug. 19—The Squaw's Devotion (Dr.)
Aug. 22—Measuring a Wife (Com.)
Aug. 22—Falls of Bohemia (Scenic)
Aug. 26—The Indian's Love (Dr.)
Aug. 29—The White Chief
Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw
Sept. 5—Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.) 960
Sept. 9—The Twin Squaws (Dr.) 975
Sept. 12—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.) 950
Sept. 16—The Horse Thief (Dr.) 950
Sept. 19—Lost in a Hotel (Dr.)
Sept. 19—An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.)
Sept. 23—Red Man's Honor (Dr.)
Sept. 26—The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.) 300
Sept. 26—Imaginative Willie (Com.) 670
Sept. 30—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.) 970

RELIANCE

Aug. 30—A Straight Path
Sept. 2—Clouds and Sunshine
Sept. 6—Temptation
Sept. 9—His Dream
Sept. 13—The Cohhler
Sept. 16—Pals (Dr.)
Sept. 20—The Stolen Play
Sept. 23—The Way of a Maid
Sept. 27—For His Sake (Dr.)

REX

Aug. 10—A White Red Man (Dr.)
Aug. 3—The Artist Financier (Dr.)
Aug. 10—The White Red Man (Dr.)
Aug. 17—The Colonel's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 24—Castles in the Air (Com.) 1000
Aug. 31—The Torn Scarf
Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic)
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.)
Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.)

SOLAX COMPANY

Aug. 30—The Patched Shoe (Com.)
Sept. 1—The Hold-Up (Military)
Sept. 6—The Inheritance (Com.)
Sept. 8—The Best Policy (Mil. Dr.)
Sept. 13—Her Uncle's Will (Com.)
Sept. 15—The Altered Message (Mil. Dr.)
Sept. 20—Oh! You Stenographer (Com.)
Sept. 22—Nellie's Soldier (Dr.)
Sept. 27—How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Com.)
Sept. 29—An Italian's Gratitude (Dr.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

July 11—When a Man Fears
July 14—Won By Wireless
July 18—That's Happiness
July 21—Two Little Girls
July 25—The Smuggler (Dr.)
July 28—A Doll's House (Dr.)
Aug. 1—The Pied Piper of Hamelin
Aug. 4—The Judge's Story
Aug. 8—Back to Nature (Dr.)
Aug. 11—Cupid the Conqueror (Dr.)
Aug. 15—Nobody Loves a Fat Woman
Aug. 18—The Train Dispatcher (Dr.)
Aug. 22—The Cross
Aug. 25—The Romance of Lonely Island
Aug. 29—The Moth
Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet, Part I.
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet, Part 2
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.)
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.)
Sept. 19—The Lie (Dr.)
Sept. 22—The Honeymooners (Dr.)
Sept. 26—Lochinvar (Dr.)
Sept. 29—Love's Sacrifice (Dr.)

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

July 21—Outwitting Father (Com.)
July 24—The Stepdaughter (Dr.)
July 28—Deposited After Banking Hours (Dr.)
July 31—The Sea Vultures (Dr.)
Aug. 4—Truth Shall Prevail (Dr.)
Aug. 7—Kathleen Mavourneen (Dr.)
Aug. 11—Grey Wolf's Squaw (Dr.)
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.)
Aug. 14—A Good Natured Man (Com.)
Aug. 14—A Children's Paradise (Scenic)
Aug. 18—Her Father's Secretary (Dr.)
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.)
Aug. 25—Retaliation (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Power of Devotion (Dr.)
Sept. 1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.)
Sept. 4—Inshavogue (Dr.)
Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.)
Sept. 8—Faded Roses (Dr.)
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstrings
Sept. 15—Woman
Sept. 18—The Star Reporter
Sept. 22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
Aug. 14—The Blind Princess and the Poet (Dr.)
Aug. 17—The Sorrowful Example (Dr.)
Aug. 21—The Diving Girl (Com.)	502
Aug. 21—$500 Reward (Com.)	496
Aug. 24—The Rose of Kentucky (Dr.)	997
Aug. 28—Swords and Hearts (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 31—The Baron (Com.)	587
Aug. 31—The Villain Foiled (Com)	411
Sept. 4—The Stuff Heroes Are Made Of (Dr.)	998
Sept. 7—The Old Confectioner's Mistake (Dr.)	998
Sept. 11—The Village Hero (Com.)	675
Sept. 11—The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)	321
Sept. 14—The Squaw's Love (Dr.)	998
Sept. 18—Dan, the Dandy (Com.)	998
Sept. 21—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.)	463
Sept. 21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.	534
Sept. 25—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.)	999
Sept. 28—Her Awakening (Dr.)	997

EDISON

Sept. 8—At Jones' Ferry (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 9—That Winsome Winnie Smile (Com.)	500
Sept. 9—No Cooking Allowed (Com.)	500
Sept. 12—Under the Tropical Sun (Dr.)	735
Sept. 13—The Escaped Lunatic (Com.)	500
Sept. 12—Off the Coast of Maine	265
Sept. 13—For the Queen (Com.)	500
Sept. 15—The Lighthouse by the Sea (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7—The Sheriff (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 19—The Sailor's Love Letter (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 20—An Unknown Language (Com.)	985
Sept. 22—The Battle of Trafalgar (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 23—The Big Dam (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 26—Mary's Masquerade (Com.)	1000
Sept. 27—A Cure for Crime (Com.)	1000
Sept. 29—The Death of Nathan Hale (Edu.)	1000
Sept. 30—The Maiden of the Pie-Faced Indians (Com.)	500
Sept. 30—Turning the Tables (Com.)	500
Oct. 3—Eugene Wrayburn (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 4—The Summer Girl (Com.)	1000
Oct. 6—Foul Play—Part I (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6—Foul Play—Part II (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6—Foul Play—Part III (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 7—Leaves of a Romance (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 10—How Mrs. Murray Saved the American Army (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 11—Mae's Suitors (Com.)	1000
Oct. 13—At the Threshold of Life (Edu.)	1000
Oct. 14—Her Wedding Ring (Dr.)	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Sept. 5—The Diamond Gang (Dr.)	980
Sept. 7—The Dark Romance of a Tobacco Can (Com.)	700
Sept. 7—Never Believe in Signs (Com.)	300
Sept. 8—The Wrong Glove (Com.)	990
Sept. 9—Broncho Bill's Last Spree (W. Com.)	980
Sept. 12—Two Men and a Girl (Dr.)	980
Sept. 14—The Puncher's Law (W. Dr.)	980
Sept. 16—The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.)	980
Sept. 19—Saved from the Torrents (Dr.)	980
Sept. 21—All on Account of the Reporter (Com.)
Sept. 21—Everybody's Troubles (Com.)	980
Sept. 22—Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.)	980
Sept. 23—An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.)	980
Sept. 26—Lost Years (Dr.)	980
Sept. 28—The Power of Good (W. Dr.)	980
Sept. 29—When He Died (Com.)	980
Sept. 30—The Strike at the "Little Johnny" Mine (W. Dr.)	980

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Aug. 1—An Aeroplane Disaster	320
Aug. 5—A Passing Fancy	800
Aug. 5—Flowers and Plants in Winter	190
Aug. 8—A General Strike	825
Aug. 8—A Raging Sea	175
Aug. 12—The Academy Girl	585
Aug. 12—Jimmie's Luck	405
Aug. 15—The Inventor	1000
Aug. 19—The Son of the Shunammite (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 22—The Soul of a Violin (Dr.)	930
Aug. 26—The Sunday Huntinfi Party (Com.)	665
Aug. 26—The Island of Ischia, Italy	332
Aug. 29—Jimmie to the Rescue (Com.)	1000
Sept. 2—Giving the High Sign to Woman Haters (Com.)
Sept. 2—African Sharp Shooters (Sc.)	210
Sept. 5—A Society Mother (Dr.)	1030
Sept. 9—Mated by Chess (Dr.)	660
Sept. 9—Farming—Old and New Methods	378
Sept. 12—How to Catch a Bachelor (Com.)	836
Sept. 12—From Bordeaux to Paulliac, France	164
Sept. 16—The Cinematograph Fiend (Com.)	574
Sept. 16—A Mountain Torrent in Austria (Scenic)	415
Sept. 19—Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)	710
Sept. 19—Crossing the Alps in a Motor	285
Sept. 23—A Heart Breaker by Trade (Com.)	710
Sept. 23—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers	290
Sept. 26—A Friend of the Family (Com.)	850
Sept. 26—The City of Bordeaux, France (Trav.)	175
Sept. 30—Hearts May be Broken (Dr.)	1015
Oct. 3—Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Dr.)	675
Oct. 3—Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Trav.	325
Oct. 7—The Upward Way (Dr.)	726
Oct. 7—Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal	269

KALEM CO.

Aug. 11—The Romance of a Dixie Belle (Dr.)
Aug. 14—The Wasp (Dr.)
Aug. 16—Special Messenger (Dr.)
Aug. 18—The Promoter (Dr.)
Aug. 21—Simple Ike Decides to Marry (Com.)
Aug. 23—Don Ramon's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 25—The Little Cripple (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Branded Shoulder (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 30—Building the New Line (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 1—On the War Path (Dr.)	955
Sept. 4—Rory O'More (Dr.)
Sept. 4—Rory O'More (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 6—When Two Hearts Are Won (Com.)	1000
Sept. 8—When the Sun Went Out (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 11—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 13—The Express Envelope (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 15—The Alpine Lease (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 18—The Ranger's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 20—Losing to Win (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 22—The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 25—Arizona Bill (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 27—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 29—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Aug. 28—The Secret (Com.)	600
Aug. 28—Fountain of Youth (Com.)	400
Aug. 31—Romance of Pond Cove (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 2—The Easterner's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Sept. 4—A Gay Time in Washington (Com.)
Sept. 7—The Story of Rosie's Rose (Dr.)
Sept. 7—A Question of Modesty (Dr.)	600
Sept. 7—Pardon Me (Com.)	400
Sept. 9—The Ranch's New Barber (Com.)
Sept. 9—Bill's Ward (Dr.)	400
Sept. 11—Divided Interests (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 13—His Girlie (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 14—Al. Martin's Game (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 16—Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.)
Sept. 16—His Scheme That Failed (Com.)
Sept. 18—The Senorita's Conquest (Dr.)
Sept. 20—The Life Saver (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 21—The Human Torpedo (Com.)	1000
Sept. 23—Her Inspiration (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 25—The Matchmaker (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 27—A Cowboy's Love (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 28—A Counterfeit Roll (Com.)	1000
Sept. 30—A Nearsighted Chaperon (Com.)	1000

G. MELIES.

July 27—At the Gringo Mine (Dr.)
Aug. 3—Red Cloud's Secret (Dr.)
Aug. 10—His Lesson (Dr.)
Aug. 17—The Local Bully (Com.)
Aug. 17—Two Foolies and Their Follies (Com.)
Aug. 24—A Spanish Love Song (Dr.)
Aug. 31—The Call of the Wilderness (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 21—$200.00 (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 28—The Mission Waif (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Aug. 24—Cheyenne's Bride (Indian Film) (American Dr.)
Aug. 25—Nick Winter Turns a Trick (Com.)
Aug. 25—Eastern Europe (Scenic)
Aug. 25—Across the Mountain Passes of New Zealand (Scenic Colored Film)
Aug. 26—A Boy of the Revolution (Amer. Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Ranch in Flames	900
Aug. 30—For the Sake of the Tribe	950
Aug. 31—The Medicine Woman	1000
Sept. 1—The Carrot Caterpillar	625
Sept. 1—A Wedding Procession in Bavaria	375
Sept. 2—A Daughter of the South (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 4—The Hermit (Dr.)
Sept. 5—Pathe's Weekly No. 36
Sept. 6—Honoring a Hero (Dr.)
Sept. 7—The Redman's Dog (Dr.)
Sept. 8—Culture of the Dahlia (Edu.)
Sept. 8—Arabian Types and Customs (Sc.)
Sept. 9—A Tragedy at Sea (Dr.)
Sept. 11—Eva Is Tired of Life (Com.)
Sept. 11—Little Moritz and the Butterfly (Com.)
Sept. 11—From Lourdes to Gavarnie (Sc.)
Sept. 12—Pathe's Weekly No. 37
Sept. 13—Prisoner of the Mohicans (Dr.)
Sept. 14—College Sweethearts (Com.)
Sept. 14—Art Industries in Kabylie (Sc.)
Sept. 15—Madame Tallien (Dr.)
Sept. 15—Everyday Life in Malacca (Sc.)
Sept. 16—A Western Memory (Dr.)
Sept. 18—The Fright	770
Sept. 18—Fire Brigade in Moscow	230
Sept. 20—An Up-to-date Squaw (Com.)	754
Sept. 20—African Birds and Their Enemies	250
Sept. 21—Starlight's Necklace	951
Sept. 22—Electric Boots (Com.)	425
Sept. 22—Old Delhi and Its Ruins	285
Sept. 22—Surfing	285
Sept. 23—Gypsy Maids	900
Sept. 25—The Disappointed Old Maids (Com.)
Sept. 25—Whiffles' Hard Luck Stories (Com.)
Sept. 26—Pathe's Weekly No. 39
Sept. 27—Driven from the Tribe (Dr.)
Sept. 28—Gypsy Honor (Dr.
Sept. 29—The Bell Ringer of the Abbey
Sept. 29—Across the Polar Seas (Scenic)
Sept. 30—A Convict's Heart (Dr.)

SELIG

Aug. 28—Among the Japanese
Aug. 29—A New York Cowboy	1000
Aug. 31—Thro' Fire and Smoke	1000
Sept. 4—How Algy Captured a Wild Man (Com.)	1000
Sept. 5—The Totem Mark (Hist. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7—A Tennessee Love Story (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 8—The Heart of John Barlow	1000
Sept. 11—Kit Carson's Wooing	1000
Sept. 12—Dad's Girls	1000
Sept. 14—The Wheels of Justice	1000
Sept. 15—The Voyager	670
Sept. 15—A Sight Seeing Trip Through Boston	330
Sept. 18—Lost in the Arctic	820
Sept. 18—Noted Men	180
Sept. 19—McKee Rankin's "49"	1000
Sept. 22—Shipwrecked	1000
Sept. 21—A Cup of Cold Water	1000
Sept. 25—Two Orphans	1075
Sept. 26—Two Orphans—Part II	986
Sept. 28—Two Orphans—Part III	1090

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

May 31—The Sleuth	404
June 7—The Young Interne	750
June 7—Heligoland, an Isle of the North Sea	250
June 14—Sir John Falstaff	1000
June 21—Avenged	1000
June 28—The Taming of the Shrew (Com.)	1000
July 5—Ancient and Modern London	530
July 5—Boys Will Be Boys (Com.)	470
July 12—The Free Lance (Dr.)	640
July 12—Temples of India	365
July 19—The Tie That Binds (Dr.)	760
July 19—A Round-Up In Chili	240
July 26—An Amateur Skater	440
July 26—Satan on a Rampage	660
Aug. 2—The Struggle for Life	650
Aug. 2—On the Coast of Bengal	326
Aug. 9—The Heiress	705
Aug. 9—Lyons, the Second City of France	295
Aug. 16—For the Honor of the Name (Dr.)	790
Aug. 16—Moss-Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight	245
Aug. 23—Condemned for Treason (Dr.)	845
Aug. 23—Wool Industry of Hungary	135
Aug. 30—A King for an Hour (Com.)	572
Aug. 30—Sights of Berlin	423
Sept. 6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)	675
Sept. 6—Lake Thun in Switzerland (Scenic)	325
Sept. 13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)	665
Sept. 13—Norwich and Vicinity, England (Travel)	330
Sept. 20—In Ancient Days (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 27—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.)	458
Sept. 27—Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)	542
Oct. 4—A Jealous Wife (Com.)	338
Oct. 4—The Grand Chartreuse (Trav.)	292
Oct. 4—Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Com.)	348

VITAGRAPH

Aug. 4—The $100.00 Bill (Dr.)
Aug. 5—The Death of King Edward III (Historical)
Aug. 7—Intrepid Davy (Com.)
Aug. 8—The Long Skirt (Dr.)
Aug. 9—Billy the Kid (Dr.)
Aug. 11—The Bell of Justice (Dr.)
Aug. 12—Birds of a Feather (Com.)
July 25—Treasure Trove (Dr.)
Aug. 15—Captain Barnacle's Baby (Dr.)
Aug. 16—Man to Man (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Vitagraph Monthly (Scenic)
Aug. 19—A Second Honeymoon (Com.)
Aug. 21—Wages of War (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 22—How Betty Won the School	1000
Aug. 23—The Sheriff's Friend (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 25—My Old Dutch	1000
Aug. 26—A Handsomer Man (Com.)	1000
Aug. 28—The General's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Aug 29—The Wrong Patient (Com.)	551
Aug. 29—Queer Folks (Com.)	448
Aug. 30—The Three Brothers (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 1—The Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 2—The Prince and the Pumps (Com.)	1000
Sept. 4—Jealousy (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 4—A Friendly Marriage (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 6—The Willow Tree (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 8—Cherry Blossoms (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 9—Jimmie's Job (Com.)	1000
Sept. 12—Her Crowning Glory (Com.)	1000
Sept. 13—Beyond the Law	1000
Sept. 15—Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.)	1000
Sept. 16—By Woman's Wit (Com.)	1000
Sept. 18—One Flag at Last (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 19—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.)	1000
Sept. 20—Beyond the Law (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 22—Forgotten (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.)
Sept. 23—The Tired, Absent-Minded Man (Com.)	1000
Sept. 25—By the Camp Fire's Flicker	1000
Sept. 26—His Sister's Children	1000
Sept. 27—A Western Heroine	1000
Sept. 29—The Ninety and Nine	1000
Sept. 30—Her Hero	1000

Barbara Frietchie

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR MONDAY, OCTOBER 2nd, 1911

You all know the beautiful story of Barbara's patriotism—how the world famous aged heroine of Civil War renown defied Gen. Stonewall Jackson by flaunting the Stars and Stripes from her window, and thereby braving death.

WRITE US FOR THE LITHOGRAPH HERALDS

Variety of SUBJECTS is the spice in CHAMPION'S program. Oct. 2nd, 1911 a date for all exhibitors.

As Things Used To Be

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4th, 1911

A film which features an attack on settlers by prowling Indians as its basic means in the reformation of a gambler by his sister's cowboy sweetheart.

DON'T PUT THESE OFF! PUT EACH ONE ON

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro' Motion Picture Distributing And Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,
12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

MOVING PICTURE PARADISE

Here. held captive, are the imaginations of master minds—Here are the life reproductions of historians. the stories that will still enthrall during years to come, the tales of Knight and Lady. of blunt business men. and of the quaint characters of travel and adventure. They amuse. delight, interest and instruct. We offer you in this our

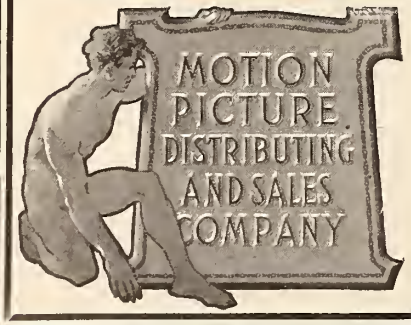
WEEKLY PROGRAM

MONDAY	IMP, ECLAIR, YANKEE, AMERICAN, CHAMPION.
TUESDAY	THANHOUSER, BISON, POWERS.
WEDNESDAY	CHAMPION, SOLAX, RELIANCE, AMBROSIO, NESTOR.
THURSDAY	REX, AMERICAN, ITALA, IMP.
FRIDAY	YANKEE, SOLAX, LUX, THANHOUSER, BISON.
SATURDAY	POWERS, ITALA, GT. NORTHERN, NESTOR, RELIANCE.

the privilege to roam the fields of history, biography, religion, travel and fiction in whatever direction individual bent suggests, satisfying the taste of the most exacting.

The Moving Picture Manufacturers have, through the aid of the Sales Company and the co-operation with one another, established a sale that is greater in its proportions, more far reaching in its economical benefits, more remarkable in its scope, in value and in importance than has ever been attempted since Moving Picture Films have been made and sold.

The utmost care is used by our various manufacturers in selecting scenarios and plots. Thousands are carefully examined by the film producers in their efforts to cull only the best.



Write us now if you wish to exhibit in your theatre a program that will please and interest and be appreciated by both old and young, and we will refer you to the nearest buying exchange in your vicinity.

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

111 EAST 14th STREET NEW YORK CITY

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

FACTORY AND STUDIO 25th AND MONTGOMERY

ST. LOUIS, MO.

WRITE FOR DESCRIPTIVE LITERATURE

MR. MANAGER

Now when you are busy with alterations and fixing up your place in grand shape for the fall season

DON'T FORGET

to put in those

DEAGAN BELLS

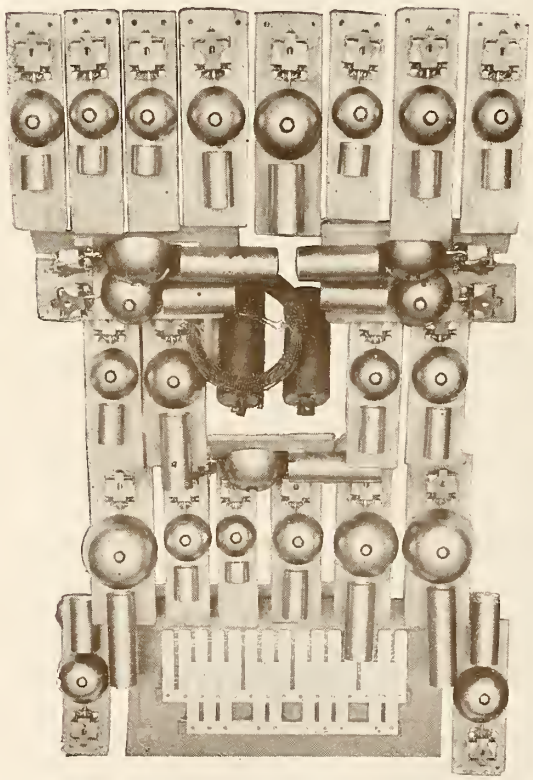
They are a real attraction and will increase your patronage at once.

SEE HERE WHAT ONE EXHIBITOR SAYS:

The Electric Saucer Bells arrived all O. K. on Friday and we had them installed in our Theatre and started them on Sunday following, and it is our pleasure to inform you that they have given the utmost satisfaction. Our audience was wild with enthusiasm. The installing of the bells increased our patronage at once. They are classy and add quality to any theatre.

JACOBI & FLETCHER,
IDLE HOUR THEATRE,
SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

Deagan's Musical Electrical Bells are made of finest bell metal, as per our own formula, and are fitted with our Patent resonators which add fully 100 per cent to the tone of the Bells as well as making the sound sweet, clear and silvery.



The Bells are played from a keyboard, same as a piano, and anyone can play them with a few minutes' practise. They are correctly tuned to your piano, and can be played as a solo instrument, with or without piano accompaniment, as an accompaniment to songs, during intermission, etc.

The keyboard can be placed in any desired location and the bells be mounted in any part of the house, on the ceiling, side walls, under seats, corners, odd places, etc., producing the most startling effects to endless surprise and delight of the audience.

Any person can install a set of these Bells in a few hours; no experience is necessary, as complete instructions are included with each set.
We can supply you a complete outfit of these marvellous Bells for $40.00 and up

Don't miss this opportunity. Write to-day for terms and catalogues.

J. C. DEAGAN, 3810 N. Clark St., Chicago

OCT 11 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 39

September 30
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
OCT 12 1911
PERIODICAL

PRICE
TEN CENTS

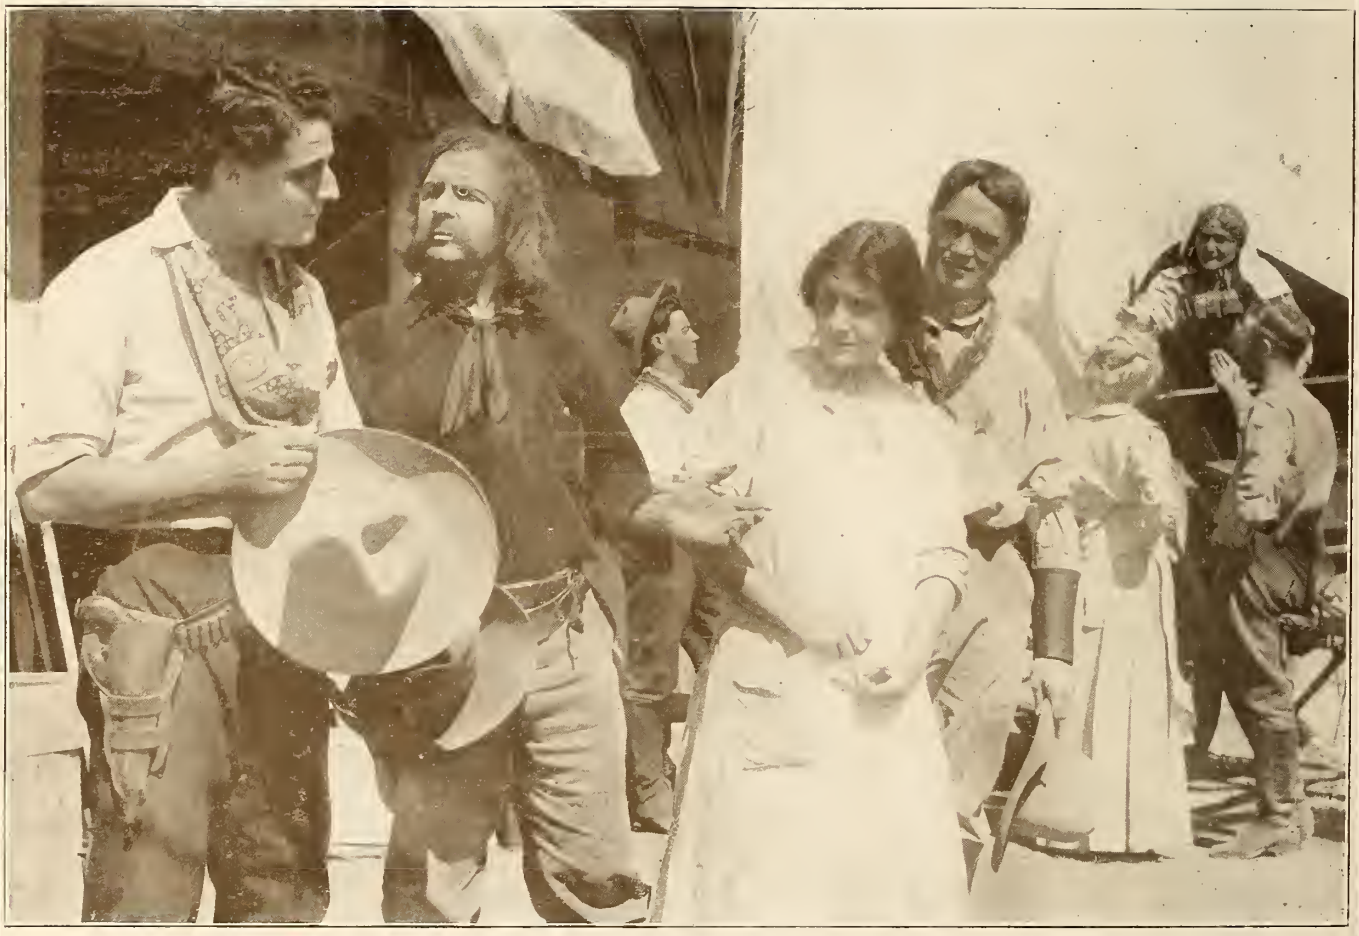
Scene from
"LOST ILLUSIONS"
REX Release of October 5th

YOU WILL GASP WITH ADMIRATION WHEN YOU SEE



"The Land Thieves"

A FEATURE OF FEATURES. Produced in El Cajon Valley, Southern California. WILL BE RELEASED OCTOBER 9TH. This film is the superlative of Western production. The American Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago asserts advisedly that it is unquestionably the greatest Western feature ever made by a moving picture manufacturer. It is perfect from every standpoint. Photography, production, scenery, and talent. Your audience will gasp with admiration at the astounding worth of this story as it is unfolded. You will gasp with admiration at the intense interest which it calls forth from the audience in question. Undoubtedly the most effective Western Drama ever made by the Flying A organization in the West. A feature of features. RELEASE DATE, MONDAY, OCTOBER 9TH.

NOTE:—There are two Flying A Cowboy features released each week. Some of these features are better than others, but they are all good. The release days are MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS. Your Exchange will give you both, each week, if you ask for them. Our regular releases are described in the Film Synopsis Department of this publication.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY PRODUCERS OF FLYING A COWBOY PICTURES, BANK FLOOR—ASHLAND BLOCK,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

Solax

WEDNESDAY
COMEDY

"A BREEZY MORNING"
COMEDY

RELEASED OCTOBER 4th

Here is an Especially Good Comedy Full of Bright, Laughable Humor.

"HE WAS A MILLIONAIRE"
COMEDY

RELEASED OCTOBER 11th

An Especially Good Comedy of a Man Who Thought He Was a Millionaire.

FRIDAY
MILITARY AND DRAMA

"His Sister's Sweetheart"
MILITARY

RELEASED OCTOBER 6th

Big Military Picture With a Tender Love Story.

"HIS MOTHER'S HYMN"
DRAMA

RELEASED OCTOBER 13th

A Wonderfully Clever and Interesting Drama of Real Life.

OBEY THAT IMPULSE
GET THEM ALL
YOU WILL LIKE THEM

Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED

Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

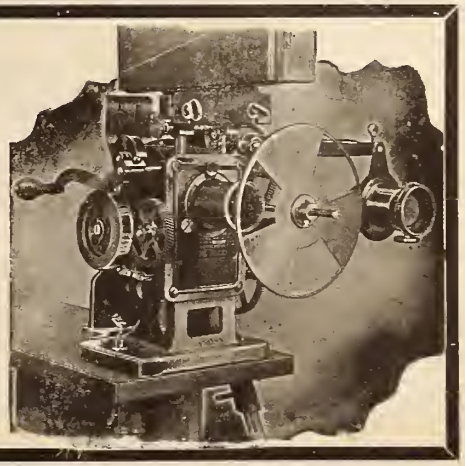
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

THE PERFECT MOTION PICTURE MACHINE

In the design of Power's No. 6 we have eliminated the objectionable features found in other machines, including our No 5. It is wonderfully simple and rugged. All parts of the mechanism are on the outside where they are accessible.

We have confidence enough in its wearing qualities to guarantee every No. 6 mechanism against natural wear and tear for one year.

SEND AT ONCE FOR PROPOSITION D.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115 Nassau Street, New York

For fourteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

KEEP POSTED—ORDER FREE SETS OF LITERATURE

MRS. GUMMIDGE SAYS: "I am a lone lorn creetur'; every think goes contrairy with me and I feel the cold more than other people." Bring out all the lone lorn "creeturs" to see David Copperfield, Mr. Exhibitor, and neither you nor the "creeturs" will feel the cold—literally or otherwise. The warm influence of David, Peggotty, Ham and Little Em'ly will spread a natural heat—no need for radiators. Get booked as follows:

The Early Life of David Copperfield	First of the Series Released Tuesday, Oct. 17
Little Em'ly and David Copperfield	Second of the Series Released Tuesday, Oct. 24
The Loves of David Copperfield	Third of the Series Released Tuesday, Oct. 31

THE HIGHER LAW

RELEASED TUESDAY, OCTOBER 10

The mute appeal of a mother's love draws to her the child from whom she has been separated.

The action involves a minister, a sailor who finds a final resting place with Neptune, and the wife and child he leaves to the mercies of a mercenary world.

The picture combines the healthy atmosphere of the church, the sea and the home.

The TEMPTER and DAN CUPID

RELEASED FRIDAY, OCTOBER 13

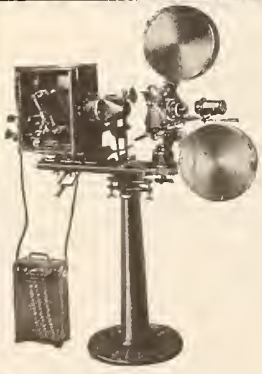
The great Tempter, the evil spirit, which haunts and plays havoc with the hearts of weaklings, fights a battle royal with Dan Cupid.

On the outcome of the struggle depends the happiness of a father, a lover and his bride.

Dan Cupid wins and the Devil is cheated out of a victim.

THANHOUSER COMPANY NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.



Another Motiograph Triumph

AND SOMETHING TO BE PROUD OF

The Electrical Department of the City of Chicago—in their exhibit at the International Municipal Congress held in Chicago, September 18th to 30th, selected the 1912 Model Motiograph as the most modern and up-to-date Motion Picture Machine now manufactured. No other machine would be considered by these experts.

Scientific construction has, in four short years, placed the Motiograph in the lead of all other makes of Motion Picture Machines.

Our watchword is Quality Not Quantity.

The care which we use in the design, construction and material of the MOTIOGRAPH is appreciated by those who, for years past, have used machines of cheap construction.

Send for particulars of the 1912 Model. Deliveries commence about October 1st, 1911.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 564 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

For sale by LIVE Agents everywhere.

(Cl.B248270

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Correspondent and Agent for advertisements in Great Britain
B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W.

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy.
844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV | September 30, 1911 | Number 39

A PERTINENT LETTER

WE have just received from an esteemed correspondent in Sydney, New South Wales, a lengthy letter from which we clipped the first two paragraphs for the benefit of our readers.

"Yesterday, for the first ime, a copy of your paper was placed in my hands for my perusal, and I am very pleased to say the contents of same gave me extreme pleasure, and I am pleased to see that you do not pull on the same lines as "The First Robber Gang" does, and it also pleased me to see that you had the force of conviction to speak out when that much-boomed man —T. A. E.—tried to shoulder something that he had no claim to, and while there was a time when I would have knocked the man down who opposed me in saying anything against this man or his methods, I have come to the conclusion that he does not for one second hesitate to take the credit for things that I know for a fact that he has not the slightest claims to, or for, and it makes my blood fairly boil with indignation when I see the way that Piratical gang at Orange take and use the brains of others in spite of lawyers' letters and the threats of injunctions, etc.

"Two wrongs do not make one right, neither is might right; and to my knowledge to-day they are using a friend of mine's invention, and they cannot make good unless they do so, and they have openly defied him to do his utmost to stop them, well knowing that he has not got the money to fight their unlimited resources and capital, and so they take this mean advantage of this poor man, and will neither buy nor pay for the use of his inventions; and yet to my certain knowledge they appropriate it to their own use and then have the cheek and the audacity to offer him for his U. S., Canadian, and English patents the munificent sum of $200 for the lot, when that would not reimburse him for the actual cost of obtaining the same. I should like to put some facts and figures before the American people that would almost cause a revolution in the United States were these things known there, that I should give, and what is more, I would back my article up with such facts and figures that they could by no logic on the face of the earth refute them, and if you will undertake to put the same into cold print I will undertake to furnish the same, and with it I will send irrefutable proof of every statement that I make, for I am one of the oldest hands at the game —M. P.—that is connected with it to-day, and not only that, I was employed by this firm as traveling representative, and was on the inside running and know and can back up what I state with proofs that would make T. A. E., Inc., howl with indignation and rage to think these facts had been made public."

We may say in reply to the above that this information has been known to us for a long, long while, and it is this knowledge that has buoyed us up to continue fighting against an adverse opinion because we believe we are in the right, and right always gain the day over might. To use the words of an old poem:

"For right the day must win,
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

and, with these sentiments constantly before us, we know that we shall win. It is the knowledge of the great injustice being done to many that has kept us buoyed up to the courage of our convictions, and in those who have not received full justice we must include our friend, W. Friese-Greene, from whom we recently had a etter stating that he has found the letter in dispute; that he has gained full and free control of his patents, and that he is coming to America shortly to exploit them, for black and white and color. We would say to our correspondent, by all means send us your facts and figures, and the Moving Picture News shall be at your full disposal for any statements exposing injustice and fraud. Your proofs will be hailed with delight by every reader of the News the wide world over.

PATENT OFFICE INVESTIGATIONS

THERE may be a little hope now that some of the patentees will get their just dues, not only in other branches of trade, but more especially the moving picture trade. It would be a consummation devotedly to be wished for, if information to hand is true as we receive it. Mr. Wickersham was asked whether in his preparation of the case against the United Shoe Machinery Trust he did not come across many irregularities in the Patent Office, and if it was not true that the patent laws were being used as a tool to create a monopoly. Our informant said that Mr. Wickersham replied he was loath to criticize the Patent Office and its methods, but he said he considered it would be a fitting subject for a Congressional investigation. He further said "There is one thing I am strongly in favor of and always have been, because it is the only way to prevent a pyramid of corporations, and that is a Federal law to prohibit any corporation owning stock in another corporation, and if a new Federal corporation law was passed this should be one of its first provisions. All we can say to this is, so mote it be, and let it come quickly.

We know of many irregularities in the Patent Office. We have helped to expose a few, and when the cousins and nephews, and the brothers-in-law, and the brothers-in-law cousins, and the nephews are placed in office, we do not wonder at some of the irregularities relating to the motion picture industry. We do not wonder at many of the interferences going in against patents. It has been a wonder to many of our readers how the information leaks out, but to us the wonder has been why the Federal authorities have not put their foot down, and not only reduced the clerks of the department to other work, but that they have not reduced them outside of the offices entirely. Is it political graft, or was it that $30,000 subscribed to one of the great parties that permits of such irregularities as exists to-day? We welcome an investigation from Congress and will do what we can to get such an investigation.

We know that the patent laws are being used as a tool to create a monopoly and that a "dog in the manger" policy is being pursued, which ought not to exist, and if an inquiry is put on foot someone may be made to suffer. If any of our readers have information they would like brought before Congress, will they do us the favor of giving it to us as quick as they can, and we will see that it is placed in the proper authorities' hands for something to be done. What we have accomplished in the past is well known to our readers, and if they will help us in this matter we will accomplish further results.

THOSE FIGHT PICTURES

FROM Trenton, New Jersey, we learn that through the intervention of Governor Wilson the Inter-Church Federation of Trenton has won out in its efforts to prevent the reproduction of the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures at the Interstate Fair this week. Other moving pictures will be substituted as an attraction in the tent provided for exhibiting the views of the fight.

Colonel Mahlon R. Margerum, secretary of the fair association, received a personal request from Governor Wilson over a long distance telephone that the fight pictures should not be produced. He explained that the cancellation of the contract would mean a loss of $1,000 to the association, even if it did not involve it in litigation for damages, but yielded to the Governor's desire.

We further learn that a great protest is being made by all lovers of fair play in England to prevent the Wells-Johnson fight taking place there. The Moving Picture News has always voiced its sentiments against such brutal exhibitions being allowed to be cinematographed, let alone the exhibition thereof. From the first fight made in San Francisco fourteen or fifteen years ago until the present, not a single bit of good has come from their exhibition, but everywhere, the world over, protests have come from individuals, from churches, from organizations that tend to uplift humanity; protests loud and long, and yet the cinematograph industry does not seem to heed the voices of the better class of the communities in which they live. It is giving the industry a black eye every time a fight comes up, and as in Trenton and London, so in other cities were the protests made and the fight films suppressed.

It may be the question of color has something to do with it, and we cannot for the life of us see what the noble art of self defense has in a black and white man fighting for a championship. If the championship must be held and fought for, let it be between men of one color and not raise such racial hatred as must come from such exhibitions. We sincerely hope that better feelings will prevail, and that in future cinematography will keep a clean sheet and not film any more fights. As we have said in a previous issue, there is nothing brutal or bestial in the fight between Jeffries and Johnson. It was more of a hugging match than anything else, but the fact remains, sentiment is dead against such exhibitions.

SCREENS-AND-SCREENS

FOR some time past we have been wondering what the cities are doing regarding daylight pictures. A great protest was made concerning the darkness necessary for the exhibition of pictures in the theater, and many devices have been shown to the exhibitors whereby they can have a lighted house and yet show a brilliant picture. We would like to ask a question of the exhibitors, why it is they show such short-sighted policy? and this also might be asked the film exchanges or the supply houses for exhibitors. Nine out of ten of the exchanges advise such and such a machine, such and such an equipment, such and such chairs, such and such decorations, and the exhibitors take this advice, and yet, as we have said nine out of ten of the exchange men pass over the screen as being something of a secondary consideration, while, in our opinion, it is the most important of all the equipments of a motion picture show, because upon the screen depends the result of the picture whether it is good or bad, of course, providing the operator knows his business and gets a good light upon the said screen. Acknowledging this to be the fact, why is any cheap old thing satisfactory to the majority of the exhibitors and why do not the exchangemen or the supply men learn the value of the various screens, their qualities and what they can do under very adverse circumstances.

Talking with one of the officials of the City of New York the other day, he told us that in a very short while, unless some better lighting takes places in some of the houses, the licenses will be withdrawn therefrom, and now that so many screens such as the Mirror, the Sunlight Metallic, and others of a like nature are upon the market, why risk the closing of the house for the sake of a few dollars whereby a perfectly clear picture may be exhibited? In our issue of May 2, 1908, we explained the principle of a screen that we had used twenty years ago, and we believe from that that several patents were taken out simply from our description, but all the patents lack one thing, that is the ability to make the screens perfect and permanent, but now that the screen manufacturers have advanced to such a stage where the best can be placed before the exhibitor, we think the exhibitor ought to rise to the occasion and cut down some of the expenses of elaborate decorations and put the money into a good serviceable screen.

MORE DIRECTORS

WHILE on the subject, and following up our editorials, we want to emphasize one or two more facts that directors do not direct and that they are chosen because they have a name in the theatrical profession and prove themselves absolutely useless in the motion picture industry. We saw some films during the past week or two that made us wonder what the directors were thinking about and where they got their education. For instance, we saw a Spanish scene supposed to be the early eighteenth century, and much to our astonishment, the bandit was dressed in a most modern shirt of some Bluett manufacture, his collar was the very latest style, and his tie the latest importation. What ridiculous nonsense and how incongruous it was to the picture, we leave a member of the audience to say. He remarked to his wife, "Well, if that fool of a director would come to me I would give him pointers," to which she replied in words more expressive than polite, that the fool would not thank you for the criticism, and the audience joined in a hearty laugh. This took place at the Fourteenth Street Theater.

Another subject was taken from Ireland, and instead of the Irishman being dressed in the typical Irish costume, he was togged out with a modern American tuxedo coat, and we do not know where his shillelah was obtained. The same mistake was made in one or two Scotch scenes which took us back to our days in Aberdeenshire, where, if such a costume had been exhibited, the wearer would immediately have been shooed into the fields as a scarecrow to frighten the birds away. A biblical scene next took our attention, and we are very much afraid the director knew no more about his Bible than he did about the costumes, or he would never have let such a foolish slip, as that of one of the main characters wearing a vest, to appear on the screen. Again some directors have the habit of receiving scenarios from writers, reading them over carefully, taking the pointers out of them, returning the scenarios to the writer, saying they cannot use them, that they have already been produced, that they are not of a suitable type for them; yet these same directors bring out the pictures from those scenarios and claim them as their own writing. They also make the claim of being the best producers and scenario writers in the world. As thieves and pirates, yes, but as originators, no. Then some directors have a habit of asking lady writers of scenarios to meet them in their offices at 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening, making the excuse that they have to come too far away from the scene of operation and cannot see them elsewhere. The same applies to some of the actresses who are also asked to meet under these conditions. Are these conditions fair, Messrs. Directors? The time is coming when we will have to publish some of the names and incidents of these quasi gentlemen or let their employers know of the conditions. We will have more to say of this anon.

A NEW COMET

W. B. GRAY, the famous music publisher, author of "Two Little Girls in Blue" and "Volunteer Organist," etc., and later theatrical professional producer of many successful plays, is now the owner of the Comet Company. Negotiations are going on with famous producers of plays for the use of their copyright for them to produce their own successes. Arrangements have been made with several well-known magazine writers. Mr. Gray's connection with the theatrical profession will enable him to obtain the services of some well-known stars. The Comet to be produced by this company, will be under the personal supervision of a famous Broadway comedian who has made millions laugh.

THE TRAVELING BUG

C. FRANCIS JENKINS, of Washington, on his way through New York to New England, called in the office of the News in the celebrated coast to coast automobile just to say "How do." He said that in the experiences Mrs. Jenkins and he had gained that they had got the travel bug, or fever, whichever way our readers like to interpret it, very seriously, so much so, that they wanted to take to other fields and pastures new, and they were making a tour now through the New England States, touching Northern New York, Northern Ohio, Southern Michigan. "Then we go South from there; just where we land I don't know! No definite plans are made or outlined for the tour. We are just traveling as the wind takes us." We never saw such a serious case of disease in our life, and when friend Jenkins came in we thought he needed a wash owing to the dust that he had accumulated.

Joking aside, he says that the dust is the only serious thing they have trouble about, except where they go up to the hubs in mire. We wish him luck.

LAST PARADE OF THE VETERANS

Notable Film Obtained at the Recent G. A. R. National Encampment at Rochester, N. Y.

One of the most important events ever preserved in film is the recent G. A. R. National Encampment held at Rochester, N. Y. The Imp Company photographed the event and secured some excellent pictures, which will be released Monday, October 29th. This film will prove all the more interesting for the reason that it has a historical as well as a scenic value. The parade, in which over 25,000 veterans participated, was the last one that will ever be given at the yearly meetings of the Union survivors of the Civil War. This was decided upon at the encampment for the reason that the old boys in blue are growing aged and infirm and the long march is too much of a tax on their strength. On account of this the pageant was made as large as possible and the veterans were cheered to the echo all along the line of march.

This parade was reviewed by President Taft and the department commanders of the G. A. R., and the Imp photographers secured their views from various points of vantage, the whole combining to make it doubly interesting to every patriotic citizen.

As the ranks of the veterans are thinning every year and the attendance at each National Encampment growing smaller, the recent meeting was a notable one in many respects. Soon the season for campfire and song will be over for them and the last big meeting will be held to linger in the memories of the men who fought for a cause they thought was right.

WATCHING FOR THE COMET

It may be of great interest to our readers or to others who are fond of looking at the Heavens to know that for the last two weeks an unusual comet has been visible. This stellar light, unknown to the many astrologers who have been watching through telescopes, is pronounced one of the purest ever seen. It is pronounced the brightest among 24 lesser lights which appear closely grouped, and through this group the unknown comet is traveling at the rate of 48 miles a second and will be visible to the naked eye on Monday, October 23rd.

Scientists further claim that it will appear every Monday and Friday thereafter.

Up to the present writing the scientists can give no explanation of this phenomena.

By mutual consent the light has been named "The Comet."

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE CINEMATOGRAPH

The Speaking Picture: Its Latest Development and Position in Relation to the Stage

By L. W. D.

THE "Cinephonograph," Mr. Edison's latest gift to cinematography, bids fair to revolutionize the picture theater. At the moment of writing, the new invention has been booked by several of the biggest theaters in London. The cinephonograph has come to stay and will carry with it inevitable and far-reaching changes in the relation between the drama —stage or screen—and the public at large.

The Probable Effect of the Cinephonograph on the Legitimate Drama

"It is difficult to predict at this time," said a well-known theatrical manager recently, "just where the cinephonograph will harm the legitimate drama and just where it will help it. It is obvious, of course, that it will divert still further patronage from our profession. But in a broader sense its effect on the drama as an art may in some ways be distinctly good. For instance, I always feel when I enter a moving picture theater as if I were descending into a tomb. The darkness, the silence, the droning pianoforte accompaniment, all seem to me to give an effect of dismalness and death. At any rate, it is a very sedentary, nerveless atmosphere for healthy people. Now I conceive that the addition of the spoken word in a perfectly synchronized talking machine will make the performance ten times more vivid and quickening. The moving figures on the screen will be transformed from shadows into substantial human beings, filling the place with the personality expressed in the human voice. I am sure that the feature of the moving picture which has made least for art has been this voiceless acting. It is all right as an occasional form, and serves splendidly for a great pantomimic like "Sumwinn"; but for the average 'play without words' of the biograph theater it has very little part with the vividness of true drama, because the silence takes the situation too far away. I cannot predict that the cinephonograph will entirely correct this demoralizing influence—to my mind, an actorless production will still be absurdly unreal, even with all the gramophones in the world. But the actorless drama has come to stay—we might as well make up our minds to that. And a device which heightens the artistic effect and brings audience and photo-players more vividly together by the persuasion of the voice may yet turn this necessity to the uses of art."

The Speaking Picture and the One-Act Sketch

I have already dealt wth the potentialities of the "cinephonograph" and its effect upon the legitimate drama. Now let us consider the outlook from the motion picture promoter's point of view. "The cinephonograph will absolutely revolutionize our business," recently remarked the general manager of one of the biggest English concerns. "What with the increased vividness offered by color photography, as regards the filming process, and Mr. Edison's invocation of sound and voice to our assistance, the possibilities of the actorless drama are now illimitable. But I think it will still be a long time before we can give the public regular plays as an evening's entertainment. I admit the thing may be scientifically possible, and an enterprising manager here and there may make the departure. But it is with the one-act sketch that the cinematograph has come to be most closely associated in the public mind, and I think it will be some time before the cinephonograph alters this obvious preference."

The present time limit for speaking picture records is about five minutes. Now, the question arises: How can the sustained representations for plays and operas be taken when changes of records would have to be made every five minutes? But have they? This question was put to one of Mr. Edison's assistants. "In the first place," he said, "there is no necessary limit to the size of the recording cylinder or disc. There is nothing except economy of space to prevent its being as large as a table-top. We are not going to; but we easily could construct a disc that would hold pieces of 15 or 30 minutes' duration as conveniently as it now registers pieces of five minutes. Still simpler than that, however, would be to have two gramophones, electrically connected, fixed in such a manner that when the disc on the first was exhausted an automatic lever would cause the second instrument to take up the burden of the tale. While the second disc was continuing, an attendant could replace the third instalment on the first machine, and so on indefinitely till the end of the piece."

Mr. Edison's method inclines toward the latter arrangement, but he has employed neither the disc nor the cylinder form of recorder, but an entirely new device constructed specially for this instrument. The cinephonograph, contrary to a prevailing impression, cannot really be described as one integral machine. The cinematograph camera and the gramophone record are separate mechanisms, connected, however, by a perfect electric synchronization into working harmony. But for this electric connection the lantern is much the same as other motion picture projectors, and the gramophone, except for the recorder, of the conventional gramophone pattern. The difference lies in the nature of the connection and in the new receiving apparatus.

MOVING PICTURES FOR TEACHING HISTORY

By John P. Brady

THANKS to the moving picture, history, the terror of the great majority of public school pupils, is likely to be turned into a joy. The driest of subjects which the very young child has to deal with will be converted into one which will be the pupil's delight. A proposition is now before the foremost educators of the country looking to the adoption of films for the teaching of history in schools in the larger cities.

If the experiment is successful it is expected the system will spread into the remoter districts until every school in the country is equipped with the necessary films for teaching history in a way that will appeal to and interest every child, no matter how dull he or she may be.

Some of the most prominent educators in the country have been interviewed on the moving picture as an educational medium. All have commended the use of the pictures in educational work.

Among those who have approved the films is Dr. J. B. McFatrich, president of the Board of Education of Chicago.

"No invention of the age can be used to greater advantage in educational work than moving pictures," said Dr. McFatrich. "They prove of absorbing interest to the children. There is no weary eye or wandering mind in a room full of children watching films of action as they flash upon the screen. There need be no admonition from the teacher. There need be no effort to gain the attention of the pupils.

"The pictures are always good. Wherever they can be used they will prove of inestimable value in the advancement of education. But, understand me, I do not refer to the sensational, undesirable kind which have been only too commonly shown at the average moving picture theater. These cannot be too strongly condemned.

"The kind of films which alone could be employed to advantage by the schools are those which will brighten the geography lessons with the various activities of the lands which are being studied by the children. There is a won-

(Continued on page 11)

DON'TS FOR SCENARIO WRITERS

By Everett McNeil

DON'T make vice or crime or depravity attractive or amusing.

DON'T
kill, except when the Dramatic Fates make it necessary; and then leave out all the blood-details.

DON'T forget that every scene and every action in that scene must be of such a nature that the camera can picture it with understandable completeness.

DON'T
ridicule any particular nationality or religion. Nobody is responsible for his nationality, and but very few had anything to do with acquiring their religion—they were born and bred into it.

DON'T give unnecessary details. The scenario editors and producers are wise to their business and can attend to all the self-evident details; but they will welcome character, costume, scenic and "business" pointers, when they really point to something worth pointing at.

DON'T
make a liquor advertisement out of your play. Keep drunks and bar-room and drinking scenes out of it. They offend many; and there is more real cause to weep than to laugh over the actions of any drunkard, no matter how silly he may be.

DON'T
imagine that smashing furniture, breaking dishes, knocking over push-carts loaded with all sorts of queer merchandise, etc., followed by a wild chase, is any longer funny. All the fun there ever was in that sort of thing was squeezed out of it long, long ago.

DON'T
make your characters do things no human being would do outside of a lunatic asylum or a home for imbeciles, unless that is where they belong. It is possible to be funny and yet to have your characters act as if they were blest with at least a modicum of brains. Silliness isn't humor.

DON'T
try to give the scenario editor the impression that you are a genius by writing as if the petty details of scenario writing were beneath your lordly notice. The scenario editor has little use for these self-imagined geniuses and their half-baked ideas. But a neatly typewritten and an orderly arranged manuscript is a delight to his eyes, a sort of open sesame to his favoring judgment.

DON'T
write scenarios that will have a depressing effect on the audiences. Always, if possible, and it usually is, end the play happily. There are enough real sorrows in the world without adding any fictitious woes to the sum total. It is always better to make your audience laugh than it is to make it weep. This does not mean that there should be no sighing and weeping in any of the scenes, but that you should always have the clouds break in the last scene and give the sun a chance to shine through on your hero and heroine.

BEN T. SHULBERG

Ben T. Shulberg, formerly with the Evening Mail and lately on the editorial staff of Film Reports, is now connected with the Rex Film Company as publicity manager.

LOST ILLUSIONS!

WE ALL HAVE

LOST ILLUSIONS!

We who write and read this—how many pet dreams and schemes we have seen shattered, how often and long we have eagerly waited for Things That Never Came, how many times we have watched for the Dawn that Never Broke. Just night—bleakness and blackness—failure and folly—pain and the death of the summer rose!

This Is Just an Allusion to

"LOST ILLUSIONS"

RELEASED THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5th

It is a graphic tale of a married woman's love for a married man (a married man not her husband), and runs the gamut of all the human emotions. In the end peace and purity prevail, and virtue (and Rex) is triumphant!

IT IS UNNATURAL FOR ONE TO BE WITHOUT "LOST ILLUSIONS"

REX MOTION PICTURE MFG. CO.

REX

the concern that's concerning everybody

573 ELEVENTH AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY

Sales Company says if there is anyone who doubts the quality of Rex he is Lost to Delusions!

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

The character of the Independent motion picture houses of Boston and surrounding territory require the services of an exchange that must meet the requirements of their large and critical clientele and the ever-increasing popularity of the Independent releases.

The W. E. Greene Film Exchange, of 228 Tremont street, is a beehive of activity and their service has received the highest praise from all of their customers. One of their largest patrons is the Automatic Vaudeville Company, operating three of the best houses in Boston and in conversation with them they expressed the utmost satisfaction with the releases that were being put out by the Independent manufacturers. The Automatic Vaudeville Company is in a position to know whereof it speaks, being consumers to the extent of $30,000 per year for film service. "You must be satisfied with the Independent service. To what do you attribute their success?" was asked.

W. E. GREENE

"In the first place, the arbitrary methods of the Trust are responsible to a large degree, making it undesirable for us to adopt their product and the very satisfactory service of the Independents as given us through the W. E. Greene Film Exchange is a big factor. We are operating the Palace under the management of Mr. L. P. Wolf, the Premier is managed by Mr. C. B. Thompson, and the Comique by Mr. Sam Levongea. Thus you can see the success of Indedendent service is assured in Boston when houses like these are satisfied with what they are getting from the W. E. Greene Film Exchange."

AS TO RAISING THEATER PRICES

(From the Newport, R. I., News)

To an outside observer it seems like suicide for the managers of New York theaters to adopt the policy of raising the prices of admission to their houses. Already the cost of tickets to these places of amusement is almost prohibitive to all but those with unusually long purses, and to put on an additional dollar would seem like deliberately driving away still more of the patronage and sending it to the lower-priced places. There might be more willingness to pay these high figures for seats if the performances witnessed were always of an order to satisfy the audience, but this is not the case in many instances and the result is a decision on the part of many that they can obtain just as much return in the form of entertainment at those theaters which charge less.

For several years it has been evident that the vaudeville and picture houses were cutting badly into the patronage of the regular theaters, because so much entertainment could be secured at these places for a comparatively small amount. This is a combination that appeals even to many who could afford to attend a place of amusement where the prices are higher if they felt that they were receiving an adequate return for their money.

It seems strange, viewing the matter thus, that the proprietors and managers of the "legitimate" theaters have not realized that the number of these vaudeville and picture houses and the excellence of the diversion which they offer in comparison with the price charged threaten the high-priced places with desertion unless they do something radical to meet this competition. It is possible that they do realize this; but if so it is singular that they should believe they can meet that competition by raising their own prices.

To one outside the profession it seems as though the opposite course would be the reasonable one and what ought to be done to win better patronage and bring in more money is to lower the prices. Few believe that making the "legitimate" theaters more exclusive will render them more profitable, but the general opinion is that it will lead to the opening of more vaudeville and picture houses and less patronage for the high-priced ones.

EVERYTHING

By "Bennie," the Office Boy of the National Waterproof Film Company

A picture show's a funny thing;
They showed last night a cowboy king
Who reined his horse to make him slow,
And spurred him well to make him go;
And when he went, why of course you must
Have taken note of that cloud of dust;
But where dust came from, none could tell,
'Twas raining so it just beat—everything.

Another picture they often run,
Depicts an invalid in the sun;
He's wrapped in blankets with greatest care,
And his daughter, likely, smoothes his hair;
And yet, poor man, so sick and old,
Must sit out there and catch more cold.
You know at once he can't get well,
It's raining on him so like—everything.

A film described as the very best,
Showed lady and escort—evening drest,
Emerging from out a carriage door
For open air supper—nothing more.
When, seated beneath the vaulted sky
They began with soup and stopped with pie.
You'll see the absurdity when I tell
That all the while it rained like—everything.

Another film quite highly rated,
Showed apple orchards irrigated.
A farmer who just beside me sat,
Jumped up and cried, "I can't stand for that,
It's only in some arid State
They will ever try to irrigate.
This 'ere show's a fake, a reg'lar sell,
Don't you see it's raining here like—everything?"

My heart was broken Tuesday night
To see Maud Muller's awful plight;
'Twas at a moving picture show;
A rainy film, made long ago,
Showed Maud was busy raking hay
And wondering what the judge would say.
Here's what he said ('twas Maud's love knell),
"You're a fool to hay when't rains like—everything."

These rainy marks which spoil the show
Seem even worse, when you but know
They're simply scratches filled with dust;
You can wash them out, but of course you must
First have them waterproofed, then it's seen
How easily water keeps them clean.
Films not washed, I'm constrained to tell,
Injure the eyes and look like—everything.

MOVING PICTURES FOR TEACHING HISTORY

(Continued from page 8)

derful field yet untouched in this direction, and when the moving picture firms see the advantages of this kind of product the moving picture will be one of the greatest aids in education."

"What about history, Dr. McFatrich? Could not the moving picture be used with effect in the teaching of this, the driest of subjects?" the president was asked.

"Why, certainly," he answered. "This is an entirely new departure. It evidently has not occurred to either educators or moving picture manufacturers, but there is a great field there.

"Nothing would impress upon the minds of the children the heroic deeds of the past better than the visualization of them. The historians have painted word pictures galore of the deeds which have made for patriotism, deeds that live ever fresh in the minds of the nations as generation succeeds generation. But beyond the great battle pictures and a few others that mean little to them, the children have been unable to get the full realization of events until they grow up and understand literature as it is written by our best historians. It is because they do not understand the language while yet young that children, or a large part of them, detest history.

"But moving pictures of Washington crossing the Delaware, or of the Pilgrim fathers landing on the rock-bound, inhospitable shores of New England, or the surrender at Yorktown would completely change the viewpoint of the child. A series representing the signing of the Declaration of Independence would make the teaching of the articles much easier.

"For object lessons in history we have nothing but buildings or streams or lakes with which to work. There is no action. And history is practically little else. The advantage of having moving characters in the lessons placed before the children is obvious. They would have something tangible upon which to work. They could much more easily grasp the meaning of things than they can at present.

"That means a great deal to the child. The driest and most uninteresting part of the histories we teach in our schools could be made a delight to the child by means of the moving picture.

"Treaties and such matters are always the most difficult part of history to teach. Political movements also fail to interest the very young student. But there is no child that cannot take an interest in a political campaign of his own times. It would not be so very difficult to make the child take as much interest in the campaigns of the past, provided the famous figures of these battles were brought before him as living or, at least, acting beings through the medium of the films.

"Lincoln's life could not fail to be even more interesting than ever were the child to be shown moving pictures got up to represent the days when the great emancipator toured the country preaching the doctrine of freedom.

"The voyages of the great explorers could be depicted and the child given a vivid idea of the deeds of the great navigators of the past. The founding of Chicago would give an impression that would last of the struggles of the pioneers who hewed out the beginning of the city which now is second on the new continent.

"La Salle and the other explorers of the great West who are now mere names to many of the children would be introduced to the pupils as they were in real life."

"What about the wars of the old world, doctor?" the president was asked. "The Crusades, for instance?"

"I am not in favor of showing battle scenes and slaughter, which were only too common, and which we try to get away from all the time," said the doctor. "We want to get away from that part of history as far as possible. But there were many great and noble deeds performed in that epoch which are most improving to the youthful mind.

"The deeds and characters made famous by Tasso's great work, 'Jerusalem Delivered,' should prove not only of the deepest interest, but of the utmost value from an educational standpoint. They should present to the children the eleventh century as they could not hope to see it or learn it from reading about it alone.

"There is no reason why, if the pictures of the famous events of the past can be made cheap enough for use in the schools, they should not be a regular part of the course in history.

"History properly illustrated would be the most entrancing subject that could be placed before the child. It would be one that would require but little teaching, for the child would be only too eager to learn the story of the event after seeing the pictures."

"Then, if the films could be used for illustrating Tasso's great work, they might be useful in the teaching of literature?" was ventured.

"Not so much so as in history," said the president. "History probably passes geography as a field in which the moving pictures would be of most value. But even in literature they could be of much service, for the characters and the costumes of the past could be vividly brought before the child.

"In fact, the moving picture seems bound to be used more or less in our scheme of education. We have only begun to see its value. It will take time, as did every other innovation in our systems, but nevertheless it seems bound to come sooner or later. There have been some marvelous changes in the last fifty years. Who can tell what the next fifty will bring forth?"

It was with an idea that they would be of great educational value and therefore of interest to the public at large that the films of Tasso's famous work, "Jerusalem Delivered," were made. The masterpiece of the Italian poet supplied the romance as well as the historical facts that made a connected story of the grandest upheaval of the Middle Ages and it was seen at once that this work reproduced on the moving picture stage would tell not only the wonderful story of the Crusades, but supply a plot that would keep the thread of interest all the way through.

But the manufacture of these pictures could not be undertaken on a small scale. They had to be made true to life or they would easily spoil the purpose for which they were being made. It was necessary to get the very atmosphere in which the scenes of the far past were enacted. No modern landscapes would do. No modern ruins could be made to appear just like the original.

Consequently, the manufacture of the pictures required an old world setting. The scenes had to be natural. In fact, many pictures would have to be taken on the very spot where the deeds of the past were enacted.

For this reason Rome, the Eternal City, was chosen. There was everything needful for the proper production of the piece. Actors, the best natural ones in the world, are there in great numbers, for the Italian people naturally take to a heroic drama. They have the fire and the vigor that make the moving picture lifelike. They have the natural art that can turn them back into beings of a thousand years ago.

The characters of Tasso's famous piece were chosen from among the best moving picture artists in Italy and their rendition of the work is superb.

One can see the whole Crusade enacted as true to life as if he had been present through all the wonderful scenes which took place in the closing days of the eleventh century.

No child could see Godfrey of Bouillon, surrounded by his knights and retainers, receive the appointment to the leadership of the hundreds of thousands going to win the Holy City from the infidel without being deeply interested. The first scene of the pictures depicts the man whom history has acclaimed as one of its most glorious characters receiving the baton of leadership. The thousands of knights and leaders of the nations assembled gladly yield up first place to the good and noble Godfrey, renowned as well for his goodness as for his deeds of arms.

In another of the pictures Sophronia, the heroic Greek maiden, is shown sacrificing herself to save her people from the wrath of the terrible Arab ruler of Jerusalem. As the pictures reel off the film they show how the girl was saved from the terrible death to which she was condemned by the Sultan by another woman, the heroine of the Arabs.

Then, as the story progresses, Armida is shown persuading Godfrey to help her to regain her kingdom at the expense of the Crusaders' great aim the capture of the Holy City.

Again, Raynold, the hero of heroes, is shown coming back in repentant mood to rejoin the Crusaders and aid them to the conquest to which they have vowed their lives.

And so the moving story goes. Every picture that burned in Tasso's brain is faithfully reproduced in the colors and movements of life. Even the most minute details are perfect and the whole gives one such an idea of the past as could not be learned in a year's study of the ancient armor and customs of those who went forth from western Europe to wrest the Holy Sepulcher from the followers of the Prophet.

With the constant cheapening of the production of moving pictures, the installation of them in schools in large towns and cities will not be such a difficult matter, says Manager Thomas H. Quill. The machines as they are now are easily operated, and when a standard film of a great event in history had been produced reproductions would not be prohibitively expensive, and they would last much longer than the books of the present day.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THE MOVING PICTURE AS A WORK OF ART

By Margaret I. MacDonald

WE love to walk through the art galleries of Europe or America and study the work of the individual artists. The wonderful manner in which the subject is portrayed in the allegorical masterpiece, the vivid reality of the soft toned landscape, the lifelike pose or expression of the portrait. In all the hand of the artist is apparent—each artist with his own individual style: the soft, graceful stroke of Rousseau, or Millet, a deep seated meaning and the glimmer of the soul of the thing in every smear of the brush—a story hidden behind dishevelled harmony, or the decisive touch of Teniers with his careful attention to detail—the picture that will bear close scrutiny because of the definiteness of outline and the smoothness of finish. In our wanderings and soliloquizings among our revered artists of the silent corridors of the cobwebby past, have we ever given a passing thought to what the effect might be should each individual picture start to life? Oh!—what a wonderful, impossible thing it would be—we scarcely dare even whisper it—it would seem so ghostly. Among the many, many varieties of moving pictures flitting before us each day in the theaters of our cities has it ever occurred to us that the plain, ordinary moving picture of much bespattered reputation might develop to just such artistic proportions as these still, silent pictures in the art galleries? Nevertheless the time is fast approaching when in our moving pictures we will outstrip the old master of the brush and palette, and our stage directors will be the painters of the scenes—it will be the master hand of the director that will individualize each masterpiece of living, moving photography.

Just the other day I was shocked to find an artist from the old soil, who had been here some two years and a half, still looking hopelessly for an engagement of some permanency—an artist who has played before the crowned heads of Europe with the most extravagant success. It seeded to me such a pity that a talented individual such as this must suffer in America for lack of appreciation and recognition, when we have so many posing as artists, who have not a spark of the artistic about them, save a desire to figure in the garb of the artist. I do not mean to say that in America we have not plenty of talented people in the theatrical profession as well, but we know that the school for pantomimic and dramatic art is not in America, and that we would do well to sandwich now and again in between the scores of self-made artists of America, one from the fountainhead of the profession—from European schools—to add a touch of the finished art of the theaters of Europe, which some of our American artists seem never to acquire.

In some of our moving pictures there is a tendency to overdo the thing. In the purely dramatic situation the melodramatic is too often found cropping up. In the situation that requires a highly dignified demonstration of emotion, we too often find an elaboration of action that not infrequently borders on the ridiculous. Not until the producers realize that they must follow art for art's sake and not for the mere commercialism of the thing, will we have the masterpiece photograph of which I have spoken.

I realize that while I speak thus I may be in a measure interfering with chances of numberless persons, old and young, who have aspired to make a living by posing for moving pictures. Nevertheless there is an advancement to be made in the art which must not be sacrificed for the feelings of scores of people who might possibly make as good a living some other way, and leave the field of dramatic art open to those who are much better fitted for the position in education as well as talent.

There is no denying the fact that in this rapid living America of ours the atmosphere is gradually improving. It may be the artist can breathe with a little more freedom than heretofore, but we know that there is vast room for a larger improvement.

During the past week I met a most charming woman who has scored successes over all the artistic world of Europe. Said she, "I played at the Folies Bergere not long ago: the orchestra leader had my music two weeks in advance, and my work, which was intended to be all life—vivacious—was actually spoiled by the orchestra who dragged the fourteen-minute pantomimic effort out to twenty minutes." Any artist will know what this would mean to a delicately refined, intelligent rendering of a dramatic morsel. This lady was no other than Mlle. Camilla Dalberg, the talented Austrian pantomime artist; and let it be known that this charming actress is so cognizant of the valuable and honored place which the future has in store for the moving picture, that she is not only willing but anxious to pose for moving pictures. I do not know whether the manufacturers are aware of this fact or not, but for those who are not aware of it, I feel called upon to say that here is a real gem awaiting them if they will but make application for her services. I must say to my readers that I have not been asked to say this, but I was so impressed with the charming personality of Mlle. Camilla Dalberg, so astounded by the fact that we have right here in America a unit of what heretofore it has been necessary to travel to Europe in order to get, so far as the moving picture manufacturer is concerned, that I could not but voice my feelings on the matter. Mlle. Camilla's husband, Charles Kraus, was the originator of the Ibsen school in Europe, and is now of the American Academy of Dramatic Art, and Empire Theater Dramatic School, and has had large experience in stage directing. Such artists as these are rapidly showing their appreciation of art as shown in moving pictures, and the fact that they are able to see in the future the moving picture as a work of art, and to feel the justification of placing their wonderful talent at the service of the industry is only one more evidence of the advance of the moving picture into the world of art of the future.

I am satisfied that our manufacturers are striving to do the very best they can to advance the dignity of the trade; and in visiting the different studios I have been very much impressed with the earnestness and sincerity of those in charge as well as with the manufacturers themselves. I want to see them progress. I want to see them meet the public demand for still better things, and to feel the responsibility of what is to be not only a great industry, but a great art.

"WATCH FOR THE COMET"

Through Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

Increase Your Business
HOW?
BY GIVING GOOD FILM SERVICE

Scratched, brittle and defective films will not give you good results. THEREFORE send your films to the ORTHO FILM CO., 40 East 12th St., New York, to be renovated.

WE MAKE THEM AS GOOD AS NEW

We have the only process on the market that positively redevelops photography, removes scratches and blemishes and softens the film at the same time.

We can refer you to any film exchange in this city. Demonstration free of charge all over the United States. Good agents wanted.

ADVERTISING WITH MOVING PICTURES
By A. L. Barrett

MOVING pictures showing the actual processes of food manufacture would create far greater popular interest and bring better financial returns than pictures of a daintily dressed girl about to taste some delicious-looking chocolates, a beefy-looking individual apparently in ecstasies over a particular brand of ale, the bologna sausages so frequently seen ornamenting the signboards alongside the railroad tracks, a soup kettle boiling frantically, or a French chef affably offering the public a smaller edition, a tempting looking cake, a loaf of apparently perfect bread or a saucer of cereals about to be absorbed by a healthy looking youngster; or even the thousands of handsomely gotten up little booklets which are often distributed, so many of which, even when they actually reach those for whom they are intended, are usually thrown away and forgotten. Motion pictures, however, can portray every phase of candy making, the gathering of the hops, to the appearance of the ale on the dinner table; the conversion of cattle into bologna or soup by means of the only cleanly and wholesome method on earth, i. e., the advertiser's; the sowing of wheat, barley, rye and other grains and the processes they undergo until their final appearance on the breakfast table in a cereal dish, or as Aunt Jemina's pancakes.

The interest of the audience would be an assured fact, for people are always willing to see anything which is connected with the production or manufacture of foods, although many will not trouble to read the advertising matter distributed. In this country, particularly, where there is a constant influx of foreigners unable to speak the English language, much less read it, moving pictures illustrating the various processes in the manufacture or canning of anything from cereals to sauces, and vegetables and cakes, to jams or fish would succeed in reaching a far larger proportion of the public than is possible by any other method of advertising, for they show the finished product only.

Mothers and housewives would naturally form the majority of these audiences, although working girls and men would frequently find it very interesting, as many of them are familiar with some phase of one of these industries. It would be a veritable school, for the children, too, would not be satisfied after they had seen the pictures showing them how their jam was manufactured, their bread made or their wheatflakes or oatmeal grown and prepared until they had thoroughly sampled it.

All firms annually expend immense sums in advertising in various ways, but the moving picture method could never cost more, probably less, and the returns would certainly be more satisfactory, and when we consider their immense popularity with all classes, it seems rather strange that they have been used so little. Those showing the milk industry, for example, have met with a cordial and interested reception, and it is safe to assume that any manufacturer able and willing to film the processes undergone by his specific product, would find the financial returns warranted the expenditure. The first one to get into the field with the moving picture method of advertising will meet with the greatest success, as those who do not have such cleanly methods in the preparation of food cannot film their industry, and when people discovered that one firm continually kept its cleanly and wholesome methods before the public and invited inspection, they would wait for others to follow suit, and missing such an exhibition on the part of the rival manufacturers, would naturally buy the product of the one who fearlessly filmed and exhibited every process connected with the one in question. It would simply be a case of the survival of the fittest.

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released during the week of October 2 by the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company:

Monday, October 2

The Love of the West	American
Barbara Frietchie	Champion
The Rose's Story	Imp
She Never Knew	Yankee
Hearts and Eyes	Eclair
For Your Hats, Ladies	Eclair

Tuesday, October 3

The Red Man's Penalty	Bison
Call of the Hills	Powers
Matrimonial Idyl	Powers
The Five Rose Sisters	Thanhouser

Wednesday, October 4

As Things Used To Be	Champion
Those Jersey Cowpunchers	Nestor
Winning Papa's Consent	Reliance
A Quiet Evening	Reliance
A Breezy Morning	Solax
Wrestling and Wrestlers	Ambrosio

Thursday, October 5

The Miner's Wife	American
Through the Air	Imp
Lost Illusions	Rex

Friday, October 6

The Goose Girl	Yankee
Range Justice	Bison
The East and the West	Thanhouser
His Sister's Sweetheart	Solax
Bill Has a Bath	Lux
Neighbors	Lux

Saturday, October 7

Branded Indian	Powers
Mutt & Jeff Spend a Quiet Day in the Country	Nestor
Meddling Parson	Nestor
The Anonymous Letter	Reliance
Foolshead, a Model Guest	Itala
The White Tulip	Great Northern

The H. A. Mackie Co., Inc., of 853 Broadway, New York City, have finished the entire equipment of projection apparatus used in the McKinley Square Theater, which is the latest addition to the modern theaters in the Bronx.

THE SCENARIO

Motion Picture Palace of Eastern Coast.

At Ocean Grove, N. J., is an all-alive, unique little moving picture theater called the Scenario, managed by Mr. Salo Ansbach. It has a seating capacity of 614 people, employs three operators, and has an orchestra of five pieces—piano, violin, 'cello, clarinet and drum. It is situated in the northeastern end of the North End Hotel Building, and is one of the best picturehouses on the Eastern coast.

This little theatre is very finely equipped with the best modern equipment that money could buy—asbestos booth, two new No. 6 Powers machines, Kleine dissolver, mirror screen and two Edison economy transformers.

The Scenario is a summer theater and will close for the season on September 23rd. It is quite a novel sight on a summer's night to see its employees flitting about in uniforms with blue coat and gold braid, yachting cap and white trousers.

Quoting from a remark of one of the associates of the Scenario, one lady in particular was so pleased with the work of the operators that she told one of them that the boys in the Scenario had Boston, Philadelphia and New York men "licked a mile" when it came to showing a pood picture. They are New York boys at that—James Girvan, Ben Turner, and last but not least, Nick Hayes.

The entire equipment of this house was installed by the H. A. Mackie Co., or to quote again from information obtained on the subject, by Mr. Wm. E. Smith "the wide-awake kid" and his genial boss, Mr. Harry A. Mackie.

PROGRAM

MONDAY.....Imp, Eclair, Yankee, American, Champion.
TUESDAY.....Thanhouser, Bison, Powers.
WEDNESDAY.Champion, Solax, Reliance, Ambrosio, Nestor.
THURSDAY...Imp, American, Itala, Rex.
FRIDAY.....Yankee, Solax, Lux, Thanhouser, Bison.
SATURDAY...Powers, Itala, Gt. Northern, Nestor, Reliance.

SPECIAL SHOWS

Whether or not to run special shows is a question. Many managers have found it extremely profitable to do so. Others have been disappointed in the results. Perhaps something was due to the character of the show and perhaps something to the environment. It is frequently impossible to determine just what all the influences are that enter into the success or failure of a plan of this sort.

The manager needs to know his patrons. If he doesn't he will fail in this direction. They will go again and again to see a show which is general and which has one or more reels that appeal to them regardless of the others. But when a special show is put on if it doesn't appeal a considerable patronage is lost.

Take the "Dante's Inferno," which is probably one of the greatest pieces of film work ever produced. That show would not go in some towns because it follows the description too literally. There are sometimes purists who fail to grasp the significance of reproducing a great work of this character and their criticisms, even to the point of complaining to the police, are so unjust and unfair as to occasion the belief that they do not know what they are talking about. "The Life of Christ" has proved popular in most places as a special show, even those who rail most against the motion picture being among its patrons. It is difficult to satisfy all tastes. Perhaps it isn't well to attempt it. Yet the manager desires, so far as possible, particularly in putting on a special show, to satisfy as many as possible and thus attract as large a patronage as he can.

Speaking from some observation on this topic, special shows seem wise if care is used in selection. If it is not, the manager better not make the attempt.

Having selected the show, the next thing is to advertise it properly. And advertising in this connection means a vigorous campaign which will bring out the people. It can be done. There is no mystery about it and nothing which the average manager cannot do if he will. But he will have to spend a little money and he can scarcely turn the matter over to subordinates with any assurance that it will be done as it should be.

All forms of advertising may profitably be used. Newspaper, circular, slides thrown on the screen, posters or any other form which may occur to him. The main proposition is to present the merits of the pictnre so vigorously and so attractively that the publie will be impressed and will want to see the show. That is the whole story and any manager can do it if he will devote himself to the task. He can't really expect it to do itself, consequently it seems to be up to him to study the conditions with which he is surrounded and carry out his advertising campaign accordingly.

Kansas City, Mo.—Globe Theater Company; capital $2,000. Louis Oppenheim and Samuel Oppenheim, proprietors.

Detroit, Mich.—The Greater Detroit Amusement Company, capital $50,000. William F. Klatt and others, proprietors.

Wilmington, Del.—The St. Paul's M. E. Church at Market and Seventh streets will be converted into a moving picture theater.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Charles Olsen and Benjamin Barten are planning to erect a new $50,000 building.

Louisville, Ky.—An addition will be made to the Majestic Theater at 548 South Fourth street, to cost $25,000.

South Bend, Ind.—A new theater will be erected at Main and State streets. Geo. Hoffman Company has the contract.

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

CITY CUSTOMERS ARE ALL SATISFIED

NOW READY TO CATER TO OUT-OF-TOWN BUSINESS

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley, Kansas

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR MONDAY, OCTOBER 9th, 1911

A sight of the troops that will make you brace up with vigor. Replete with active military maneuvers of Kansas State Militia.

Naught to be gained without Champ Films.

EACH MONDAY
MILITARY.
EACH WEDNESDAY WESTERN OR TOPICAL.
BOTH GOOD.

What the Indians Did

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 11th, 1911

Indians disguise as Cavalrymen and attack a coach carrying gold nuggets. Tom Bailey gets wind of it—disguises his cowboys as redskins and swoop upon the marauders. The precious stuff is saved and—a pretty romance culminated.

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro' Motion Picture Distributing And Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,
12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

SHAMROCK NOTES

The interest manifested by the public at large in the cinematographic industry was never better exemplified than in an experience recently encountered by the St. Louis Motion Picture Company.

One of their contemplated releases—a comedy classic—required an environment of exceeding wealth and attendant refinement, with a mansion and surrounding grounds, such as could only be the property of immensely wealthy people.

Mr. Hamilton, the manager of the production, was in a quandary as to where the necessary atmosphere could be obtained. He placed the matter before his representative in the property department, who immediately responded: "Don't give yourself any uneasiness on that point, Governor, I'll get the very spot," and he made a hasty exit.

Within a short period a telephone message announced the fact that the company would be at once transferred to a location in the West End of the city, and at the same time mentioning the name of one of the wealthiest residents. Mr. Hamilton at first was inclined to disbelieve that it was possible to obtain permission to use the mansion referred to, but was finally convinced by further assurances from the mistress of the house herself, who 'phoned him to come at once, and further assured him that he and his company would be entirely welcome, and that every assistance possible would be rendered by the lady herself and her servants.

The company were at once placed in automobiles and driven to the house, where for several hours their attention was directed to making the comedy, which will be one of the Shamrock Company's best efforts.

Not only was the entire use of the house and grounds cheerfully given, but the entire company sat down to an elaborate luncheon prepared by the self-constituted hostess. When the work was finished, and it was time to leave for the studio, the lady and her family expressed great regret and made the company promise to come again should they find any difficulty in procuring a suitable location for any of their pictures.

She further stated that she took the greatest interest in motion pictures and attended the various theaters where they are shown several times each week. Her conversation showed a great familiarity with the different manufacturers, and she expressed herself most enthusiastically about the independent producers.

It is thought that the Shamrock Company will soon be ready to release. They already have several complete reels, and it is creditably reported that they are most worthy.

IMPORTANT

The Moving Picture Operators Union Aux. of Local 35, I. A. T. S. E., have adopted the following scale of wages:

Matinee and evenings	$22.00	per week
And one hour for supper.
Evenings only	$18.00	per week
Evenings and Sat., and Sunday matinee	$19.50	per week
Double shift, 12 noon to 11 P. M.	$18.00	each man
Double shift, 1 noon to 11 P. M.	$18.00	each man
Double shift, 9 A. M. to 12 P. M.	$21.00	each man
One shift, two men, 12 noon to 11 P. M.	$25.00	each man
And one hour for supper for each man.

Relief work at rate of one day's pay, the minimum rate to be paid $3.00 per day.

Relief for supper, 75 cents per hour.

No changing of reels by operators, unless they have commutation tickets.

This schedule to go into effect on Nov. 1st, 1911.

Attest.
WILLIAM F. McVEY,
Rec. Secretary.

Mr. Manager

Get acquainted with our AERIAL PUBLICITY NOVELTIES, catering to the advertising of 5c theaters.
The illustration shows our CIRCULAR DISTRIBUTING AIRSHIP IN ACTION.

Tell us to-day, you are interested, and learn, to-morrow, of our many inexpensive, but effective, Aerial Stunts, that will arouse public interest, draw large crowds, and gather the shekels.

THE B. N. MFG. CO.
NORTHSIDE, CINCINNATI, O.

THANHOUSER PRODUCTION OF DAVID COPPERFIELD

In a Series of Three Releases

SCENES FROM DAVID COPPERFIELD

All lovers of Dickens, all students of literature, almost anyone with an appreciation for the classics, will not fail to experience a keen thrill of delight when they see exhibited on the screen in life-like portrayals, those ingenuous, unctuous and whimsical characters who live between the covers of "David Copperfield."

As if taken bodily from the book and "chucked" through the projector, so real are these characters reproduced in the Thanhouser production. The pictures will long be a monument to the art and talents of that intelligent coterie of artists up at New Rochelle. The most conservative of critics cannot help but bubble with enthusiasm after observing this production. It passes all belief that such a difficult task as the filming of the characters of this wonderful novel could have been achieved with such marvelous fidelity to the text. This may sound like exaggerated praise, but it is really a modest statement compared to the actual laudation this work deserves.

The first of the series of pictures is called "The Early Life of David Copperfield," the second "Little Em'ly and David Copperfield" and third, "The Loves of David Copperfield."

David's early career was far from being a happy one. Every opportunity to "bring out" the pathos and humor of this period of his life has been taken advantage of. All the important incidents from the time he is born on the unlucky Friday to the day he runs away from the bottling factory to seek refuge with his eccentric aunt, has been picturesquely recorded.

For dramatic situations, tense climaxes and opportunities for strong pantomimic acting, no better period could have been chosen than the one dealing with little Em'ly, David, Ham and Steerforth. The pictures tell a story that holds your interest from beginning to end. The realistic acting of the different players is astonishing. They all display a wonderful knowledge of the characters they portray and as a result they "live" their parts.

Throughout his life David Copperfield was shadowed by a "jinks" that was difficult for him to shake off. Even in his love affairs misfortune follows him. Interwoven with his domestic troubles the pictures show the forgeries of the obsequious Uriah Heep and his undoing by the loquacious Mr. Micawber.

The smoothness and finesse of the entire performance is evidence of the attention the Thanhouser directors paid to details. The reproduction of the quaint Dickensonian atmosphere made the demands on the directors exacting. They did their share of the work creditably. This production can well be featured as "An Evening with Dickens."

SCENES FROM DAVID COPPERFIELD

THEATER VS. PICTURE SHOW

A CORRESPONDENT calls our attention to the fact that while the moving picture film must not depict Beulah Binford, that the theaters are wide open for any immoral woman to blazon herself before the audiences. Our correspondent asks "Why?" and we reiterate the question, "why do not the censors and the city authorities in New York prevents this notorious character from debasing and degrading the boards of decent theaters in the city? Will they take action?" We give our correspondent's letter in full, and hope something may be done to purify the stage as well as the picture film. Will the Billboard, Telegraph and Dramatic Mirror take action. They slate the moving picture actresses.

Sept. 20, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture News.

Dear Sir: A few days ago the daily papers were publishing editorials against the appearance in moving pictures of a certain young woman who had been advertised by a murder trial in the South.

Was this done in an effort to present immoral women making money on their notoriety, or was it merely another slap at the moving picture business?

I hope the former reason is the right one, but fear the latter, as Gaby Deslys, a notorious French woman who was the means of King Manuel of Portugal losing his throne, is now being advertised to appear on the stage of one of the New York theaters and not a line has been written against it in any of the papers.

Is it any worse to have an immoral woman in the pictures than in real life? Are the morals of our women folks to be ruined quicker by a picture of a woman than by the woman herself, or is it just a case of money paid by the theatrical managers for advertising? It looks that way to me.

Why not insist upon the stage being as clean as the moving picture screen?

"A PICTURE FAN."

The above letter was unavoidably crowded out last week.

OUR COVER PHOTOGRAPH

It's "Lost Illusions"—and a Rex. Yet it is an unusual Rex—yes, we realize what we're saying, and we don't as a rule speak in superlative terms. Perhaps we should have said it is unusual, even for a Rex, but to make a short story stay that way—it's great. "Lost Illusions," which title, by the way, itself deserves some comment, is a strong, forceful drama of life—of the near-to-us life, the life you and we live and know.

Grace Sherman, a girl of the mountains, meets an artist from the East in the woods and—it happens. What to the polished blasé artist is only a flirtation, to the simple mountain girl becomes a lasting and vital love. The artist returns to the city, completely forgetting the remembering girl. A little while afterwards her father dies, and she consents to marry Bill, her mountain lover, if he sells his claim and takes her East. They arrive in New York, go to a fashionable hotel, and there—she meets the artist. She introduces him to her husband, and suggests that the artist paint her portrait. The husband gives his reluctant consent. The next day he calls for her at the studio, and finds her kissing the artist. When she arrives home, he speaks of it to her, and she frankly tells him that she loves the artist, and had come to New York only to seek and find him. The husband, crushed by the realization, later writes a check for all the money he has in the world, leaves it for her, and returns to the mountains. And—well, the artist introduces his wife and child to her—that's all—and the woman returns to the man waiting and longing for her. Released October 5th.

MORE NESTOR ENTERPRISE

Next week one of the Nestor companies will go to Pennsylvania to the mountains for the furpose of getting some exterior pictures, and later on they propose sending a company to California, also another company will be sent to Florida. Some fine work is expected as a result of same.

NEW YORK CITY REGULATIONS

Bureau of Buildings Borough of Manhattan
No. 220 Fourth Avenue
New York

Bulletin No. 32—1911

Booths Enclosing Cinematograph or Similar Apparatus

Attention is called to the provisions of Chapter 756, Laws of 1911, which goes into effect this month.

1. No cinematograph or other apparatus for projecting moving pictures, shall be set up for use or used in any building, place of public assemblage or entertainment, unless such apparatus shall be inclosed in a booth or enclosure constructed of iron framework covered or lined with asbestos board, or with some equally strong and fire-resisting material.

2. The booth shall be constructed according to plans and specifications which shall have been approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, and must comply substantially with the following requirements:

3. Such booths shall be at least seven feet in height. If one machine is to be operated in such booth the floor space shall be not less than forty-eight square feet. If more than one machine is to be operated therein, an additional twenty-four square feet shall be provided for each such additional machine. Such booths shall be constructed with the framework of iron angles not less than one and one-quarter inches by one and one-quarter inches by three-sixteenths of an inch thick, the adjacent iron members being joined firmly with angle plates of iron. The iron members of the framework shall be spaced not more than four feet apart on the sides and not more than three feet apart on the front and back and top of such booth. The asbestos board shall completely cover the sides, top and all joints, of such booth. The sheets shall be at least one-quarter of an inch in thickness and shall be securely attached to the iron framework by means of iron bolts or rivets. The floor space occupied by the booth shall also be covered with asbestos board not less than three-eighths of an inch in thickness. There shall be provided for the booth a door not less than two feet wide and six feet high, consisting of an angle iron frame covered with sheets of asbestos board one-quarter of an inch thick, and attached to the framework of the booth by hinges, in such a manner that the door shall be kept closed at all times, when not used for ingress or egress. The operating windows, one for each machine to be operated therein and one for the operator thereof, shall be no larger than reasonably necessary to secure the desired service, and shutters of asbestos board shall be provided for each window. When the windows are open, the shutters shall be so suspended and arranged that they will automatically close the window openings, upon the operating of some suitable fusible or mechanical releasing device.

4. No apparatus for projecting moving pictures shall be operated until a certificate has been obtained from the Superintendent of Buildings stating that the booth enclosing the same is in accordance with the law.

A violation of this law is a misdemeanor.

Applications for the erection of such booths, and certificates, should be made at once to the Superintendent of Buildings.

RUDOLPH P. MILLER,
Superintendent of Buildings.

KIMMEL MYSTERY SLIDES

FROM NILES, MICHIGAN, THE SOURCE

Pictures of the known and the doubtful one side by side for comparison. Official pictures admitted as evidence in St. Louis trial included. These are the genuine. Exhibitors get busy quickly and take advantage of the most widely advertised subject in the world.

One set of 10 slides, $6.00. Cash orders filled first, so better not ask C. O. D.

FEATURE SLIDE CO.
NILES, MICHIGAN

MR. RUBINSTEIN RISES TO EXPLAIN

Moving Picture News,
New York City.

My Dear Mr. Saunders:

Since my return from the South a few days ago a great deal of report has reached me regarding various opinions expressed as to the merits or demerits of the Beulah Binford production, as it affects the fair name of the industry. Both as sponsor for the film and as one who was among the first to lift his pen for the advancement of our art, it behooves me to enter into the discussion.

I have noticed a communication which was sent to all the daily papers over the signature of the Patents Company's press agent, and I take occasion to relegate him to the ranks of such wild-eyed howlers as those moss-back clergymen who shriek themselves into public print on the slightest provocation, even though on matters with which they are not familiar. Even the Board of Censorship, which if only out of gratitude to the powers that support it financially was obliged to enter some kind of protest, could not help pronouncing the picture entirely proper and, if anything, uplifting. Outside of the Board, not one of those who went into tantrums on the subject had even seen the picture they were storming against. If they had, they might have enjoyed, like others did, a production along lines which show to the amusement world that film men are not of the mercenary, dollar-grabbing variety that characterized the exploitation of the "shooting girls" of the Stokes case, or Florence Burns, Nan Patterson, etc.

I modestly submit that those who know me might have expected that I would show better sense than to be responsible for anything that would reflect discredit on my many friends in the manufacturing business. I looked carefully into the case, and the first important fact I found was that Miss Binford was a much maligned, unjustly slurred child who needed two boosts for every knock administered; that she was a mere child, an unfortunate victim of circumstances, fallen into a fate not of her own making, and the responsibility for which rests with people old enough to have known better. And I want to say right here that only one of the hundred interviews accredited to her in the two months that she was in the public eye was genuine, and that one I gave out when she was in my home; from which you can gather that the press has made more capital of her misfortunes than she could ever hope to, even if so inclined. The continual reference to her as "the Binford woman" in itself conveys the wrong impression of a seventeen-year-old girl in short skirts who is as unconscious of all the notoriety forced on her as is a babe of the world's pitfalls. Why—even here in New York the newspapers did not learn that she was in my home until three days after her arrival; yet they all printed big interviews with her that emanated only from reportorial imaginations.

The picture is in itself a rebuke to those who object to it without viewing it. It shows in a subtle way that the responsibility for our unfortunate girls rests on our own shoulders, and it constitutes a ringing demand for prevention instead of cure. It sounds the warning of the dangers of lack of parental influence and points to the phases of our social system that need correction. Have moving pictures ever before been devoted to such serious work? And would the full truth impress itself on the spectator nearly so strongly with hired actors in the film as it does with this little girl who really suffered posing in the picture? Can any more genuine note of warning be sounded, can any greater realism be afforded a production? I can at this moment sell her contract at a handsome profit to vaudeville syndicates, but Miss Binford shrinks from publicity. She feels that in posing for the picture she has done useful work, and she is satisfied to retire to quiet pursuits now. She still has her life before her, and she is in hands that are giving her a chance. Any weak man and woman can attack a girl who has been sinned against, but where are those strong Christian hearts who will have the courage to stand up for a fallen sister? The antics of some of these self-professed humanitarians with rubber spines are laughable to real men.

Needless to say, the statement issued by the Censorship Board does not affect my activities in the least, for I am not finding it difficult to tell the real story of Beulah Binford to kind ears all over the country; they feel that the Board, having pronounced the pictures entirely fit, has exceeded its authority in pronouncing judgment on the girl's personal status in the community. It is none of their concern—their business is to pass on films and nothing else.

You are invited to see the picture, and I'll stake my reputation in the trade that you will agree with me that the case of Beulah Binford is a vehicle by which moving pictures can do a greater moral service to the public than with all the fictitious, sentimental gush that mercenary motive has been responsible for in the past.

Very sincerely yours,
LEON RUBINSTEIN.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A new theater will be erected at Chicago avenue and Lake street, to cost $25,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—D. Cavanaugh will erect theater at Twenty-second and Center streets, to cost $7,000.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—M. S. Rosen and Simon King will erect a new theater in this city to cost $25,000.

Jamestown, N. Y.—J. D. Woodward, of Warren, will establish a new theater on the site of the Humphrey House.

St. Louis, Mo.—Union Theater and Airdome Co.; capital $37,000. O. T. Crawford and A. J. Fitzsimmons, proprietors.

Cincinnati, O.—Meis & Cohen will erect a moving picture theater at Vine & Calhoun streets, to cost $25,000.

Great Falls, Mont.—The Alcazar Theater here was damaged by fire to the amount of $1,800.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Crowley Bros. will erect a moving picture theater at National avenue and Thirty-first streets, to cost $8,000.

Harper, Kan.—The Airdome Theater was damaged by fire to the amount of $500.

EXHIBITORS, ATTENTION!
SPECIAL FEATURE FILM PRODUCTION

THE JAMES BOYS IN MISSOURI

(3 REELS)

HIGH CLASS SHOWY ADVERTISING MATTER

LITHOGRAPHED 6-3-1 and 1-2 SHEETS BANNERS AND FOLDERS

RENTAL OR PERCENTAGE BASIS. BOOKING IN ROTATION

AN EXPENSIVE PRODUCTION — A BIG MONEY GETTER

WRITE WIRE PHONE

Room 1013-145 West 45th St., NEW YORK CITY
Suites 204-5-6 Central Bldg., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

ATLAS MANUFACTURING CO. of Missouri
Century Bldg., ST. LOUIS, MO.

"TEMPTATIONS OF A GREAT CITY" SHOW EXCELLENT RESULTS

The special feature film in three reels entitled "Temptations of a Great City," for which Joseph Hopp, president of the Standard Film Exchange of Chicago, has the exclusive state rights to Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, are showing excellent results. Mr. Hopp is personally working on the above states excepting Michigan, which state is being looked after by Mr. Victor Salling of Grayling, Michigan. The theaters that have thus far run the film all report that they have broken their records with same.

Mr. Sprague Green, manager of the Lyric Theater, Ft. Wayne, Ind., which theater has a seating capacity of more than 1,200, wired as follows after first night's run of these films:

"'Temptations of a Great City' is a knock-out. Turned away fully 3,000 people to-night."

The Boston, the down-town Chicago Independent house, on Sunday, Sept. 4th, ran this film and reported they broke records on the house on attendance for that day.

The Fox Theater at Aurora, Ill., with a seating capacity of about 1,000, writes that they could not take care of the crowds the first night they ran the show and as a result of this showing all over the country, Mr. Frank Thielan has booked this solid on his entire circuit of houses, which alone will take one set of films four weeks to cover. They are having a like run everywhere it is shown.

A beautiful large double photo frame showing photos from each scene of the picture makes a very attractive showing in front of a theater and works as a magnet in getting the people to come inside. No matter how many people will want to run these films at one time, they can all be accommodated, as additional prints will be added as fast as the bookings are received.

JOSEPH HOPP

Mr. Hopp is a very busy man with his Standard Film Exchange and allied interests, nevertheless it has taken about all his time the last few days in looking after the requests for bookings on the "Temptations of a Great City."

Mr. Joseph Hopp last week completed his entree in the film exchange business as a proprietor. Just four years ago last week Mr. Hopp organized the Standard Film Exchange, and taking quarters in two small rooms in the Unity Building on Dearborn street with a floor space of about 300 square feet, constantly and steadily has the Standard Film Exchange grown under his direction until to-day the Exchange occupies at 172 West Washington street an entire floor with more than 4,200 square feet of space. Each division of the business is departmentized, and they need all the space used. Only recently they have had to cut down the size of the lobby in order to get more working floor space. Last February Mr. Hopp bought out all the stockholders' interests with him in the stockholders' corporation, and as a result he is to-day the largest individual owner in the United States.

Kankakee, Ill.—A new opera house will be erected at Schuyler avenue.

Louisville, Ky.—The Broadway Theatre was damaged by fire to the amount of $1,000 by fire.

New York, N. Y.—Metropolitan Theatre Co., capital $300,000, M. W. Livingston, H. A. Harris and F. W. Pinner.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Former Alderman Henry Klein will erect a moving picture theatre on Vliet street, near Twenty-seventh street, to cost $8,000.

THE SIMPLEX MACHINE

We are hearing very good results of this machine, and anxious to know what our friend, Mr. Rich G. Hollaman, had to say about his trip on its behalf, we sought him out and after the first greetings, we said, "We are glad to see you back to little old New York, Mr. Hollaman. How did you enjoy the trip to Europe?" to which re replied, "Well, I must say I was much surprised to see how the fame of the Simplex had preceded me to London. It seems that several gentlemen from the different London interests who have been to America during the past six months had heard of our new machine, and some of them had seen and examined the model. They all took back to England very flattering reports of its excellence. In this regard I was specially impressed in making a call at the office of the Kinematograph

RICH. G. HOLLAMAN

Weekly to have the editor show me a letter just arrived from Australia in which the writer asked for information of a new machine just out in America called the Simplex." "This is exceedingly interesting from your standpoint and must be gratifying to all interested in the Simplex, but what we specially want to know is what did you do to introduce the machine in England." "Well, I have found a great desire for a perfect projector among all interested and before I left New York was assured of the formation of a company with ample capital to introduce the Simplex in Europe, and this was culminated to my complete satisfaction before I returned here.

"How are the sales of the machine progressing here?" "Since I offered machines to the market about July 15th, I may say that in the seventy days ensuing, we have sold sixty-two machines, and one interesting incident which may be new to the readers of the News is the fact that the Monopol Film Company use nothing but the Simplex machines to project their 'Dante's Inferno' production throughout the country. Many machines have been sold and are now operating in New York, and I am much pleased with the reception of the machine in Canada, and for your information, I hand you a letter from the Public Examiner of Machines, wherein he said he gave them his most hearty endorsement and the most prominent expert in the Examining Board said, if the Simplex had been on the market three years ago, thousands of dollars would have been saved to exhibitors, as the troublesome booth regulations would have been unnecessary. We are prepared to license the Simplex machine to be used without a fireproof booth, the machine itself being absolutely fireproof." "Well, Mr. Hollaman, in face of such a letter as that, it seems as though the Simplex is going to make headway, and if the exhibitors in New York State could only induce the license board to take the same stand, what a scoop this would be for the Simplex."

ASSOCIATED M. P. SCHOOLS

The Moving Picture News was the first trade journal to announce the founding of the Associated Motion Picture Schools, in Chicago, last January. At that time there were many persons, in and out of the motion picture business, who scoffed at the idea of teaching the art of scenario writing by mail. The manufacturers, however, were not among these scoffers. They seemed to realize that here was the beginning of an attempt to standardize the form of the scenario, to teach the amateur and semi-professional writer the secrets of technique; to point out the subjects impossible of production and to train the writer to search for new and stronger themes, plots and situations. Mr. E. F. McIntyre, the originator of the scenario school idea and the founder of the Chicago institution, was immediately given the encouragement of the larger manufacturers, who wrote him complimenting him upon his idea and offering every possible assistance to himself and his students.

Nine months have elapsed and the success of the Chicago scenario school has silenced the scoffers. Scenario instruction by mail has proven to be possible and many graduates are selling scenarios to all of the producing companies. The schools have no stronger supporters than those who have taken the course. They are not among those who complain that the manufacturers appropriate their ideas without pay. They know that the manufacturers are as anxious to purchase original plays as they, the writers, are to sell them. Their scenarios command best prices because they are technically correct and because each student has learned not to submit a play that is not strong of plot, logical as to situation and with an unmistakable moral.

E. F. McINTYRE
Director Associated Motion Picture Schools.

If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, then Mr. McIntyre should feel flattered, for his idea has been imitated from coast to coast. None of the imitators seem to last, however, and Mr. McIntyre tells us the probable reason why:

"It is an easy matter," said he to a News representative, "for anyone to copy and imitate our course, literature and form of advertising. But it is not so easy to sit at a desk and patiently analyze the work of a beginner, take it apart, tell him what is wrong and what is right, put the work together again in correct form and teach the student to go and do likewise—all the time helping and encouraging the slow ones or retarding the ones who would rush through, content with a skimming of the surface. The preparation of the course is the smallest part of the work. It is in the criticisms that we impart our real and solid information and it is by our critical letters, sent with each corrected exercise, that we teach the student the real heart of the art. To be able to do this work requires a thorough technical knowledge and long experience as a writer of scenarios and as a teacher.

"It is no wonder that so many of our imitators have failed. Of course we keep in touch with all of these as fast as they spring up. Not one has succeeded because not one knew what to do with a student after enrolling him."

The schools have students in the United States, Mexico, Panama, Canada, the Philippines, Great Britain and France.

TO BUY OFF PROMOTERS

Offer Made in London to Pay Not to See Johnson Fight

London, Sept. 20.—The feeling against the Johnson-Wells contest has gathered such force that it probably will be either abandoned or stopped by the government.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has written to the Home Office urging that action be taken to suppress the contest, and this has served as a focus for adverse opinion. Nine bishops and many leading religious men, the lord mayors of Manchester, Liverpool and other big cities and leading sportsmen, like Lord Lonsdale, Lord Kinnaird and Lord Harris, have joined in condemning the match, while the Daily Telegraph, the Daily Chronicle, and other influential papers have followed the Times in urging the Government not to permit the contest.

The Rev. F. B. Meyer, who was one of the original opponents of the match, has offered to raise a public fund to reimburse the promoters in the amount of their loss if they will undertake to abandon the contest.

At the Kinemacolor (Scala) Theater, London, England, where crowded houses are still attracted twice daily by the realistic reproductions in animation and the actual tints of nature of the Coronation, the Investure, and a wide variety of recent events, each permanently preserving the color effects of the moment, Mr. Charles Urban has in reserve, for presentation as soon as may be desirable, two new series of quite absorbing interest—indeed, their inclusion in the present program is debarred only by the unabated demand for the scenes of the national events of last June and July. The one is a pictorial record of a tour in a special Canadian-Pacific car from Toronto to Montreal, revealing wild natural beauty as it has never been limned in art; the other is a most artistic filming of the modern aspects of the oldest civilization in the world—Egypt—to which added interest is lent by the recent appointment of Lord Kitchener as Consul-General. A noteworthy feature of this series is a life-motion panorama of a trip up the Nile. Meantime, the present bill includes a new playlet by W. W. Jacobs, entitled "The Boatswain's Mate."

Colin Campbell Joins Selig Staff.—Mr. Colin Campbell, a well-known dramatic director, has taken up his new duties as a member of the Selig producing staff. For the present he will make his headquarters at the Selig Chicago plant.

Kathlyn Williams Parts with Pet.—Last week, at the Chicago Lincoln Park Zoo, a tearful parting took place between Miss Kathlyn Williams, the beautiful Selig leading woman, and her pet monkey, "Doc." Miss Williams presented "Doc" to Clyde Vry to add to the Park Zoo. A special cage was prepared for "Doc" in the park, and the newspapers of Chicago all took pictures of Miss Williams and her little pet as they parted.

W. N. Selig's Bulldog Stolen.—Consternation reigned supreme around the Selig plant the other day. Mr. W. N. Selig's $2,000 prize-winning bulldog, "Boris Nestor," had been stolen. That afternoon when the head animal keeper went to feed "Duke," the big Selig lion, he found "Boris" curled up in a corner of "Duke's" cage, sleeping contentedly. How he got there is still a mystery that is puzzling the entire Selig staff.

Ossian, Ind.—A new opera house is to be erected here. A. S. Elzey is at the head of the movement.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Golden Gate Theatre Co., capital $9,000, G. F. Hannaum, Mrs. J. W. Ruebelt and others.

New York, N. Y.—Traymore Amusement Co., capital $10,000, Chas. Freedman, F. J. Dunne and Richard Cahill.

Beloit, Wis.—The Majestic Theatre in State street has been sold to O. A. Wright of Harvard.

Racine, Wis.—Work has been started for the new Bate Theatre, to be erected at Main and State streets.

Reading, Pa.—Ben Zerr will erect a new moving picture theatre at Schulykill avenue.

Green Bay, Wis.—Gen Theatre Co., capital $3,000, Ludolph Hansen, H. T. Nelson and A. Nelson.

Lindsay, Cal.—Captain A. J. Hutchinson will establish a new theatre here to cost about $10,000.

Raleigh, N. C.—F. K. Ellington and associates are having plans prepared for an opera house to cost about $50,000.

Watertown, N. Dak.—Francis & Peters will build an addition to the Freemont Vaudeville Theatre.

Goshen, Ind.—Olson & Barton are planning to erect a new $50,000 five-cent theatre at Indianapolis.

New York, N. Y.—Metropolitan Theater Company, capital $300,000.

CHICAGO LETTER

A large fire panic occurred Sunday evening in the Lyceum Theater, West Madison and Sacramento avenue, when the film caught fire, causing a cloud of smoke which issued from the projection booth over the heads of the audience. There were over three hundred people in the theater at the time, mostly women and children, whose screams added to the confusion of the scene. The people fought their way to the exits, trampling each other under foot in their terror. No one was seriously injured except for a few bruises sustained in their mad rush. Everyone escaped unharmed.

At the time of the fire an actor was performing an Indian war dance; every now and then he would let out a loud war whoop. He was the first one to see the smoke pour out from the operator's booth and gave a loud cry of warning, which was mistaken by the audience for another one of his war cries. The next moment the house filled with smoke and the rush for the exits started. In the rush many of the theater chairs were knocked over and broken. The theater was crowded to the doors, every seat being occupied. It is said that the grease on the machine caught fire first, the flames at once communicated with the celluloid films, hundreds of feet, which blazed up in an instant. The operator dodged out of harm's way just in time. It seemed a miracle that no one was seriously hurt.

There have been so many terrible accidents from the explosion of films that it might be advisable for the exhibitor to explain to the audience before the performance begins that the operator's booth is absolutely fireproof. If everyone is warned in advance of the possibility of an explosion and the danger minimized, it would hardly seem that there would ever be a panic. It is the unexpected explosion which starts some fool in the audience into a panic which does nearly all the damage.

* * * *

Mr. A. M. Kennedy, manager of the American Film Company, is now back in Chicago after a pleasant and successful trip in California.

* * * *

Mr. Seymour, of the Boston Theater, Chicago, who is a personal friend of Frank Gotch, had twenty-five photographs taken of the most interesting and critical views of the Gotch-Hackenschmidt wrestling match, from which he had slides made. He stated that he broke all records with these slides, as he took in over 4,000 paid admissions daily. Mr. Hopp, of the Standard Film Service, has made arrangements so that many independent exhibitors can use these slides.

* * * *

Mr. E. Mandelbaum, president of the Feature and Independent Film Company, which company owns the Ohio State rights for "The Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered," is breaking all records with this film.

* * * *

William M. Barlow, manager of the Inter-Ocean Film Exchange, states if business keeps up reports will show a wonderful increase over last year's results. Mr. Barlow has been manager of this exchange since its origin and it is steadily coming to the front under his management.

* * * *

A new theater has recently been built at 2311 West Lake street.

* * * *

The Gaumont reels of October 3d to 7th were on the ocean liner Olympic, which met with an accident at sea on September 20th. This necessitates the rearrangement of their schedule.

* * * *

Takito, Ouaga & Co. have issued their catalogue, which illustrates and explains fully about their unique list of premiums for the exhibitors to increase attendance of their houses.

* * * *

Mr. French, auditor of the Laemmle Film Service, Chicago, was entertained the other evening by several old school friends at one of the leading hotels of Chicago.

* * * *

Tom Quill, manager of The World's Best Film Company, states that the buyers of the state rights for the feature film, "The Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered," all report a record-breaking business. Mr. Quill also informs us that the states are selling fast and all purchasers are more than pleased with the results so far.

W. K.

M. P. OPERATORS SHOUT HURRAH!

Finds Moving Picture License Law Unreasonable

Supreme Court Justice Gavegan, of New York, held Tuesday, September 26, that the law requiring candidates for examination for licenses to operate moving picture machines to serve a six months' apprenticeship under a licensed operator first is invalid. He said that the conditions are unreasonable and unnecessary and granted a writ of mandamus directing Commissioner Thompson of the Department of Electricity to let Louis Gibelman, the applicant, take an examination.

OCTOBER 14, 1911

Just put this date in your hat and don't forget where you put it. The Moving Picture Distributing & Sales Company Employees' ball will take place on that evening, and the event should not be overlooked. A rare treat is in store for you and the dollar you spend for a ticket will be returned to you many times over in the pleasure you will get. That pillow souvenir is worth the price of your ticket as well.

OCTOBER 14, 1911

Decatur, Ill.—Plans are nearing completion for a new theater to be erected here at North Water street and East North street.

Milwaukee, Wis.—G. Bruet will erect a new picture house at Third and Chambers street, to cost $10,000. Architect Charles Lesser has plans for a new theater for the Kosciusco Theater Company, to be erected at Fifth avenue and Mitchell street.

Canonsburg, Pa.—C. F. Ferguson, who was manager of the Morgan Opera House, which was destroyed by fire August 26th, has let the contract for a new $25,000 theater.

WANTED AT ONCE

Capable, honest, reliable, sober man to take management of a film manufacturing company. General office experience and good writer. Apply in person to the Editor, MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

RETAIL

"MACKIE HAS IT"

EVERYTHING IN MOVING PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXCEPT THE FILM.

A REQUEST WILL BRING OUR NEW PRICE LIST, JUST ISSUED.

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 851-853 Broadway, Corner 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

WHOLESALE

BEULAH BINFORD

PICTURES CONDEMNED BY PRESS AND PULPIT

THIS, BEFORE THEIR EXHIBITION!—SINCE THEIR EXHIBITION, HOWEVER, the murmurs of protest have changed to shouts of enthusiastic acclaim—those who came to condemn saw and realized that instead of a mercenary trade on the lamentable notoriety of one unfortunate girl, the filming of the life story of Beulah Binford IS A POWERFUL SERMON OF THAT WHICH IS GOOD—a suggestion of a remedy rather than a sauce for the appetite of the morbid.

The REV. DR. MADISON C. PETERS, one of America's best known Divines, is quoted in the New York World of Wednesday, September 13th, as follows:

"The pictures of Beulah Binford's life story are like the Old Homestead or Way Down East in certain things, and as for Beulah Binford, instead of the case-hardened woman of the world I found a slip of a girl, who never has had a chance. The girl should have a helping hand extended to her. It is a blot upon Christian Ministry and Christian Brotherhood that for forty-five days since her story first became public she has received no offers of aid or sympathy. She has never had a mother's care and surely she should not be held responsible for mis-steps taken when she was thirteen years old. As a matter of fact her story instead of being one to damn her is a rebuke and an indictment against a Society that enables such things to be."

WRITE, WIRE, OR BETTER STILL, 'PHONE, and find out about both our state-rights and rental propositions.

Special Feature Film Co.

429 Sixth Ave., New York City

'Phone 3468 Madison Square

116 TOWNS HAVE EXHIBITED THESE PICTURES TO 684,164 PERSONS

NATIONAL GUARD ENCAMPMENT AT FORT RILEY, KANSAS. CHAMPION RELEASE OCT. 9th.

ANOTHER RECRUIT IN INDEPENDENT RANKS

On West 42d street, almost next door to the Lyric Theater, and facing on the opposite side of the street the New Amsterdam and the Liberty Theaters, situated in the very thick of the theatrical district of New York, is an all alive little moving picture theater, The Bryant. This theater, which is under the present management of Mr. Mack, has recently changed hands and has been under repairs for a few days. Anyone visiting that theater now will find it running entirely Independent films.

The Bryant has a seating capacity of about 300 people, is well ventilated and comfortably seated. It has been most excellently equipped with all modern appliances by the H. A. Mackie Co. of New York City. The Bryant is strictly a moving picture theater, no vaudeville being used. The daylight screen is inserted a la modern methods in a chatterbox to enhance the beauty of the film. The drone of electric fans entice the air currents into a cooler frame of mind, and there is every inducement, from a comfortable theater chair to the opportunity for the contemplation of good pictures, to lure the tired passerby to while away a half-hour or so in The Bryant.

MR. C. LANG COBB, JR.

Mr. Cobb has become well known in the trade as the special representative of the A. M. P. P. Co., and it is with regret that the company have to announce he has severed his connection with them, and they all wish him the best of success in the new venture which will be shortly made known to the trade through the columns of the News. We have before us as we write a copy of the letter written by the officers of the A. M. P. P. Co., which speaks in the very highest praise of Mr. Cobb's services, and is a testimonial any man might desire to obtain from his late employers. We offer the company our sympathies at losing him, while our congratulations go out to Mr. Cobb and trust that success will attend his efforts in the future.

THE ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

Visitors in O'Fallon Park need not be surprised or terrified if suddenly they come upon a painted Indian scalping a prostrate pale face or a villainous gypsy making off with some flaxen-haired child, for they will be moving-picture actors.

The St. Louis Motion Picture Company, whose films will be designated by a shamrock, has been using the park as a background for several film dramas this week and will take more pictures there and in that vicinity.

Saturday a three-angled drama was given—a man—another man's wife—failure for the villain—husband and wife reunited—happiness. The plot was intricate and fascinating. The St. Louis company is the first of its kind to operate here. Its location is permanent.

Randolph Grey is the leading man of the company and Miss Dot Farley leading woman. Ed Bunners is the deep-dyed villain.

The children in the neighborhood are having the time of their life watching the performances. The only way Manager Hamilton could suppress them was by promising to take their pictures. After the performance they were grouped on a grass plot and photographed.—St. Louis Republic.

THE REX MAKING INROADS IN EUROPE

The Rex Motion Picture Co., we understand, is making great headway in Europe; there are now established no less than seven offices in Europe attending to business for the Rex Company. It is well known that in Europe all that counts is quality. Europe has no moving picture trust, only one release day, Saturday, and the buyer looks over films of all manufacturers alike, choosing from among legion those which are suited to his taste and needs. That the business of the Rex in Europe is increasing tremendously shows us that the fight for recognition of the American film in Europe has not been without its result. And moreover, the Rex is an Independent adherent, therefore this is but another score for the Independent ranks.

FROM THE OBSERVATORY

By G. F. Blaisdell

DOWN at Coney Island, on Sunday night, there was a near "moving picture horror." Perhaps the largest hall on the island is Econoupoly's, seating a thousand and covering an area of 110 by 135. Besides the wide entrances on the Bowery there are exits on each side—the place occupying a block front. In one corner at the front of the premises is an apparatus for the manufacture of soda water. A part of this apparatus is a two-foot length of one-inch rubber hose.

The spectators are seated at round tables, four chairs in front and four behind. Every seat was occupied and a picture had just been thrown on the screen when at 9:30 the rubber hose burst and there was a steady hissing, loud and prolonged. Somebody yelled "Fire!" Women screamed. In the vicinity of the apparatus causing the disturbance there was great commotion. That brought all in the house to their feet. The screaming increased as women fought their way to the aisles and the exits. There were some men right in the front of the procession, too. Those men who shouted "Sit down!" might as well have whistled down the wind. They could not be heard. All this time the projection of the picture was uninterrupted. The operator was on his job.

When the panic-stricken had left the hall there were two or three hundred remaining. The only criticism that could be made against the management lay in the failure to turn on the house lights. Several lost articles were reported. Had there not been an unusually large number of exits there probably would have been fatalities. There was unquestionably a large foreign element in the gathering; it is to be hoped their descendants will have cooler heads.

All over a puncture in a rubber hose!

Just before witnessing the riot described in the foregoing, the writer had dropped in at the New Empire to bid goodbye for the season to the proprietor, Henry Connors. Mr. Connors is the original picture man in Coney Island, having shown the famous "May Irwin Kiss," which made such a hit in the early days of picturedom. That's when reels were as much as forty feet in length. Mr. Connors said Sunday night: "That old projection booth has been up there fourteen or fifteen years." The proprietor of the New Empire is a close follower of the picture game, and caters to picture-lovers. He runs no old reels. His machinery is of the best to be obtained.

* * * *

And while we are in Coney Island, let's compare conditions there now with what they were ten years ago. Then the crowd was induced to enter the "music" halls by the loud, even boisterous claptrap of so-called comedians and the sight of pink-tighted females, most of whom had ruined the chances of a useful career as chambermaids in order to go on the "stage."

To-day, as before, the barker stands in front and praises his show. But there is no high hubbub inside. Just the silent animated screen. No coarse jokes by coarser people. Everything orderly and quiet, the only relic of the old days being the occasional query by the hustling salesman: "Who wants the waiter?"

One of the most notorious of the places on the island, and one of the most persistent in clinging to the old order of stage rot, short-change, strong-arm waiters, and decoying unwary and unsophisticated visitors into the gallery to pay $5 for a bottle of pale ink for the entertainment of the aforesaid "pink-tighted"—all these and worse—was compelled to close its doors long before the season was over. It just naturally fell—wasn't even pushed—by the authorities.

The moving picture has done more to make Coney Island a family resort than could have been accomplished by all the sob-faced professional Sabbatarians this side of the Mississippi River.

* * * *

Before leaving Coney for the last day of the season let us take a midnight stroll through Surf avenue down toward Norton's Point. We leave the city of light and pass into the quieter precincts; note the magnificent Seaside Hospital, stately and white, as befits an institution designed to help stay the ravages of the White Plague among the humbler people of this great city; observe the change in the character of the buildings and the many places for the entertainment and housing of summer visitors, until at last we hear the steady, monotonous toll of the bell buoy marking the channel for the deeper-draught Coney Island vessels. Then walk over and take a Norton's Point line car back to the Island proper.

And here's a suggestion: If a moving picture manufacturer is looking for a cabin in a sand lot as a basis for a "scene," let him take a ride over this line. He will find all kinds and varieties.

* * * *

Miss MacDonald's remarks, last week, on the carelessness of some of the manufacturers as to details were timely. The writer the other evening saw five reels. In three of them he noted: Essanay—In "The Two Fugitives" an alleged extract from a newspaper contained "embezzelled"; and the sentence was in English that matched the spelling noted. Vitagraph—In "The Prince and the Pumps" the fair one, well portrayed by Miss Lillian Walker, writes a note to the person who has removed from her foot a slipper. The guilty party later writes a note. Handwriting identical. Lubin—In "The Senorita's Conquest" a scene title sets forth that "Dolores Starts on Her Misson."

* * * *

As to the latter piece, it is about as bloodthirsty, deep-dyed villyun a piece of work as this writer has been compelled to sit through in some time. It is well calculated to arouse all the enthusiasm of the immature cheap-hero worshippers—and the disgust or ridicule of about everybody else. In fact, the spectators in one suburban theater signified its approval of the passing of the trailer by unmistakable guffaws.

* * * *

Which reminds the Observer of a statement made by one who is in the confidence of a member of the Board of Censorship, speaking a few weeks ago: "In the last two months the Board has been compelled to order more eliminations than it has had in any two months of its existence. The cause, I believe, lies in the anxiety of the manufacturers to increase their product. No, the eliminations were not on any one side of the fence. They were about evenly divided between the licensed and the independent."

* * * *

"Just dropped in" on Monday on our friend Leith, who helps run the Comedy, on East Fourteenth street. He proudly displayed a Shelbyville mirror screen, 13.4 by 10, which had been installed during intermission in the afternoon of the Fridey preceding, the audience watching the work. Mr. Leith was enthusiastic over the addition to the equipment of the Comedy. He said the business done on the day following the installation equalled that of the best day in the last eighteen months. The Comedy shows Independent films, and shows them fifteen hours a day. This house should be a potent factor in the popularization of Independent product.

* * * *

Greetings to the Majestic Motion Picture Company! The engagement of Owen Moore and Little Mary marks a splendid beginning. With the advent of "Shamrock" films and "Majestic" films, the Independent movement will be strengthened and fortified for the tightening struggle for an open American market. Here's success to both!

* * * *

Among recent incorporations are the Majestic Motion Picture Company, New York City, to manufacture motion pictures and conduct exhibitions; capital, $60,000; incorporators, J. D. Cochrane, E. L. Thomas and W. N. Seligsberg. Also the Manufacturers Educational Film Company, Newark, capital, $25,000; and the American Illustrated Song Company, Newark, capital, $100,000.

* * * *

The pictures exhibited in the Auditorium, Denver, during the Child Welfare Exhibit, caused a row. Which shows that authorities on "child pictures" may differ as to what is proper —and improper. The Denver Post, in a long article dealing with the controversy, said: "Among the pictures shown are some from day nurseries, lying-in hospitals and other places where babies are cared for. In one film there comes near to being a demonstration of the latest methods in obstetrics." Again, "But the two films that gave offense to parents is where children, utterly without drapery of any kind, are shown. When this was thrown on the screen there were hoots, whistles, catcalls and remarks by boys all over the gallery and balcony, and the children who might otherwise have looked upon the picture as innocent were forced to hear them."

Mrs. Theodore Van Wagenen, president of the Colorado Congress of Mothers, and Dr. Anna Louise Strong, who lectured on the pictures, defended them. Mrs. Ida Gregory, of the Juvenile Court, condemned them. Mrs. Strong compromised the matter by barring children unaccompanied by parents.

* * * *

The police committee of the San Francisco Supervisors have denied the application of picture theater owners for an amendment to the ordinances prohibiting people sitting or standing in aisles or lobby.

* * * *

A. J. Laurie, manager of a Montreal show, recently posted this notice in front of his theater: "Again the police have seized our posters, but we are showing our film dramas as usual."

* * * *

One Dr. J. W. Jervey, of Greenville, S. C., in a recent number of the Medical Record, in an article dealing with causes of eye trouble, after referring to the menace of glaring white rays from incandescent gas mantles and also of poorly printed newspapers, has this to say of moving pictures:

"I am also disposed to believe that the modern motion pictures is a serious agent in the production of ocular fatigue, with its train of corollary manifestations. If this be true the marvellous growth of popularity of this form of entertainment, with its insidious potency for harm, will prove a serious problem for the medical profession in its efforts to conserve the public health."

Edward J. Murphy, an operator of Worcester, Mass., in a recent interesting interview in the Worcester Telegram, thus expressed his views on this important question:

"Doctors say that the flicker from the pictures is injurious to the eyes. I know, from personal experience, that this is not so. I have been working in a moving picture booth seven years and my eyesight is as good to-day as it ever was. I know that there is not an operator in Worcester who is obliged to wear eyeglasses because of the nature of his work."

Probably there is truth in the statements of each. Mr. Murphy, who is said to be an unusually competent operator, undoubtedly keeps his apparatus in the best of shape. His employers may use films that are not hopelessly in disrepair. Unquestionably streaky and oily films create a strain on the eyes—and on the temper, too.

* * * *

Fred Stone recently exhibited in Detroit some pictures taken during his summer trip to the Greenland coast. They showed, among others, the stalking and shooting of two or three of the big bears killed by the party.

* * * *

This is from the Washington Star:

"Why not give us a few moving pictures of the girl who helps mother? They are worth more than the Nan Pattersons, the Evelyn Thaws and the Beulah Binfords, who appeal to nothing but morbid curiosity and a taste for tragedy or depravity. Why don't the film makers pay big prices to the real heroines to pose for human interest pictures?"

* * * *

A picture show owner in Columbus, Ohio, understands the art of making admission to his place simple for children. He is letting them in on the payment of two potatoes. One result of his innovation may be the placing of the family supply of tubers under lock and key.

* * * *

Dr. George B. Wight, State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections of New Jersey, says he is convinced that moving picture shows and similar forms of amusements are having a baneful influence upon the youth of New Jersey. For a number of years there has been a gradual decrease in the average age of boys committed to the State Home at Jamesburg. An investigation has been made, with the result that Dr. Wight is now convinced that the "Wild West" and other sensational forms of picture drama are responsible for many young boys going wrong.

"I am heartily in favor of moving pictures from an educational standpoint and other proper amusements," said Dr. Wight. "but when the morals of the youthful moving picture patrons are at stake I denounce the indecent films. One of the best agencies for education is through the illustrated moving picture film. There is no better opportunity offered a youth or grownup person than shown in respectable moving picture shows. I myself frequently take my nephew, who is hardly in his teens, to these exhibitions. You see that by my attendance I am in sympathy with the pictures.

"Boys get 'Wild West' notions and want to do heroic deeds, which hamper and prey upon their minds, and the consequence is that some rash deed is committed that would not have happened if the precaution of stopping such pictures was taken."

Dr. Wight emphatically stated that he did not want to be represented as one against the production of moving pictures, but he wanted to be known as a staunch supporter of pure and decent films.

* * * *

Now, then, where does the good doctor find the "indecent" films? This writer sees quite a number of pictures in the course of a week, but it would be difficult to find an indecent one. If the doctor had said "improper" he might be more readily understood. There may be honest differences of opinion as to what is proper; but there can be no question that moving pictures are created primarily for adults. They cannot all be on "the good, the beautiful and the true." They must, to be otherwise than inane, treat and reflect life as it is as well as to portray what it should be. It is sometimes essential to display wrong in order to point a moral.

The foregoing leads to two quite natural reflections:

There is too much laxity, too much looseness, in the use of the word "indecent."

Parents have responsibilities; they cannot shoulder all of them over on to the manufacturers of moving pictures.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 27.—Once upon a time there was a Sporty Town that nestled between certain Humps on the Countenance of Earth that was pointed to with pride whenever old "General Flimco" wanted to exhibit any of his collection, or anything pertaining to Obsolute Dominition. All the Managers there were Wise Geeks and were Willing Listeners, so that it was a Comparatively Easy matter whenever the Hook-Em Brigade stampeded into said Town and opened the box of Salve to get an Audience with said Managers, and it wasn't long before Every house was throwing out the pictures of that horrible Corporation that has been Walloping said "General" between the Atlantic and the Pacific and breaking down the stairs in their Rush to get the "General's" product on the machine, until it was seen that the Victory was Complete.

One by one the said Managers began to Realize that they were being Double-Crossed and that Repeaters were a Feature that could be looked for with even greater Regularity than the Bill Collectors, and the Wail that went Forth was long and Painful. Finally one Knight of the Curtain said "he'd be Hog-Tied and Branded" before he'd stand it any longer. His "C. Q. D." was Heard down in the Cotton Belt of Tennessee and from the land of the Boll Weevil there emerged a mild-mannered looking Individual who Soft-Footed into the Village when the others were not looking, just to see how the Old Place really looked. The Reception he got had the greeting of the Prodigal Son looking Tame in Comparison and he Succeeded in breaking the Toe Hold the "General" had maintained on the local Wise Boys for ever so long. He landed one House that had previously gone Daffy over the Trust films and is considering taking on Another One within the next few Weeks. And the Moral of this is: "It doesn't Pay to Hog the Show.

All of which is a rambling, "nutty" prelude to the statement that the Photo-play theater has decided to come back into the Independent fold and started their Sales Company pictures this week. A young man from Memphis, who represents one of the big film exchanges there, but who was too modest to call on me and let me have a chat with him, has been doing silent missionary work in the interest of the Independent cause, and the Photo-play was the first scalp he landed. I understand that another house is contemplating making the same change, provided the Photo-play pictures are all that the agent claimed they would be. That house is to get reels not over eight days old, with a guarantee that every Wednesday they will have a "Mutt and Jeff" feature. I am going to keep tabs on the exchange that is to furnish the pictures for this theater, and if they do not live up to their bargain, Mr. Editor, I'm going to let the whole world know it, for I have advocated the breaking of the Trust monopoly in this city so long that now that one of the houses has decided to give the Independents a chance to make good, I want to see them have a square deal in every sense of the word, and I think that they will get it, too. Here's hoping, anyway.

The residents of the city, or rather, that part of them who reside on Central and Ouachita avenues were considerably startled, amused and entertained by the exhibition given by two rather prepossessing "ladies" during the week, who had gone to a local livery stable and procured two saddle horses. The girls could ride—there's no doubt of that—and the "stunt" they pulled off not only made "great copy" for the local papers, but also succeeded in lining the two avenues in question with a most appreciative audience. The Hagenbeck-Wallace show came here Wednesday, and many imagined that the girls were part of that attraction and were to meet the big circus on its arrival in this city. They had the horses do a "bucking" act that was a winner. Then one of them stood up in her saddle, and how she kept her balance was a mystery, for the horse was going some, believe me. Another tossed her handkerchief on the street, turned and came back after it and picked it up as neat as any one would like to see it done.

"Who are you girls, anyway?" ventured an inquisitive man.

"We are with a moving picture company, and we are just rehearsing," yelled one of them.

An officer came along and "pinched" them for wild and reckless driving, and the show was busted up for all time. At the police station it was learned that the girls had no connection whatever with any moving picture concern, but had gone riding and partaken of too much "tea." To be positively shocking, ladies, they were "soused," and, just for deviltry, decided to have fun in their own way. Said fun cost them, by the way, $25 each. Oh, this is "some town."

The matrimonial bug I mentioned some time ago that had stung two of the local operators, again got busy the past few days. The insect, however, has not as yet goaded the boys into rushing out to the court house for a marriage license, although one can never tell what will happen in this particular season of the year. Well, they decided to look for a house, did Leo King and Henry Gilliam, of the Lyceum and Lyric, and all would no doubt have gone well had they wended their way together to that particular dwelling both had heard of. But they went there unknown to each other, and they decided on Sunday night to make the trip, too. "Pat" Gilliam, I am informed, got there first and was making a careful inspection of the house when his old pal, Leo, arrived. Neither, you understand, knew that the other one was in the house. Leo got real busy downstairs and Pat did a high dive from the second story window. When it comes to getting a flying start, there isn't any of them have anything on Pat. Leo heard the rush for the window from above and bolted out the front door. Things didn't look right to either of them, and the childhood stories of "ghosts" and possible fear of "hold-up" men prompted the speedy exit. Both related the story to mutual friends and said mutual friends met and told it all over again, and that is why some one wrote out a "synopsis" and mailed it to me, with a request to "please publish." I asked Pat and Leo about it, but they said—well, will the ladies please leave the room? You won't? Oh, very well; guess it, gentlemen, guess it, because I cannot tell you what they said.

There were some mighty good pictures here the past week and for general interest I doff the hat to the Pathe Weekly. It was a dandy reel and covered a world of ground. "The Declaration of Independence" was featured heavily at the Lyric and received the highest praise, and Edison scored a triumph in this reel. "The Baron" and the "Villain Foiled" were two excellent Biograph comedies that evoked a storm of laughter. "Spike Shannon's Last Fight," with Anderson in the title role, drew crowded houses for Eddie Gavrel at the Lyceum. Anderson may not be "the white man's hope," but he does know how to put up a good fight before the camera. When "Simple Ike Decided to Marry" for the benefit of Kalem in particular, and the picture-loving world in general he could not have had any idea how interesting his romance would be, and that picture and "Building the New Line" maintained the Kalem prestige during the week. With Selig we went "Thro' Fire and Smoke" the past week, after which we shivered a lot when "Lost in the Arctic," but we enjoyed both immensely, and Vitagraph taught us a lesson of fidelity when it depicted the journey and story of its "Three Brothers" and gave us a glimpse of human nature in "Man to Man" that was most refreshing. We couldn't eat any of its "Cherries" in "Cherry Blossoms," but we did enjoy Miss Turner and the entire story. Just a word, Miss Turner, please. That picture seemed to indicate that your lips were made up rather heavy. You may not have done so, but the picture looked that way. If you have, go a little light there, for you are an entirely too charming actress to spoil delightful feature in this respect.

The grand jury convened this week, but there were no indictments against the picture show managers, for the reason that none of them have violated the Sunday law by keeping open. The picture men have been made the "goat" of a crusade against Sunday observance that is a laugh. Other violations of the Sunday law have been permitted to go on unmolested and the picture houses have been forced to bear the brunt of all unfair and decidedly discriminating prosecution.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Coming into Fourteenth street at Capin street, Tom Moore's auto ran into, or was run into by, Horace Buckley on a bicycle, making a rapid rate down the hill. Had not Mr. Moore applied the brakes quickly the accident would have been more serious, but as it was the boy suffered slight injuries, though the wheel was smashed to pieces. Of course when an auto and a bicycle collide, the smaller is bound to get the worst of it.

* * * *

A peep into some of the Baltimore motion picture houses was indulged in last week with much pleasure. Manager Steen, of the Black Cat, and Manager Price, of the Blue Mouse and the Garden Spot of Picturedom, were most courteous and the shows at the various houses were thoroughly enjoyed. I must confess I have never seen anything quite so unique, so elaborate and thoroughly up-to-date as at the Garden, which well deserves its name. The water screen is being used with success at the Black Cat, which also provides reserved seats. This last is something of a departure in the motion picture houses, but Manager Steen declares it works splendidly. All houses were crowded, and courteously conducted.

* * * *

The Selig Company has been busy in Washington recently demonstrating the work of the Department of Agriculture in various ways. In this respect they will shortly have something to show from the Good Roads Division, especially a comparison of oiled and macadam highways for auto use. Those in charge of the Horticulture Division are preparing to have their work demonstrated in animated views, as are also others of the Agricultural Department. These films will form an excellent educational series.

* * * *

"Dante's Inferno" has completed a week's run at the Belasco Theater. Both press and public of Washington were loud in praise of the motion picture presentation of this great poetic masterpiece. It appeals strongly to the cultured, the literary, and the artistic. It should also appeal to the religious, even though it has a strange allegorical combination of Christian and pagan beliefs, of mythology and history. It all points to the universal moral law that evil will receive its punishment.

It is necessary to have some explanatory remarks during the course of these reels and this was adequately supplied by Mr. Smithfield, while the low tones of the organ added to the impressiveness of the subject. Mr. Smithfield's remarks were terse and clear, displaying a thorough familiarity not only with the film but with the divine comedy itself as well as with the life of the poet and philosopher. This film would no doubt make an excellent return engagement in the capital city during the winter when the schools and colleges are in session, for it is one of the most highly educational films that has as yet been produced.

* * * *

As soon as the new offices of the Feature Film Company are equipped for work, the orders which this firm has on hand will be executed and some educational and industrial subjects put on the market. Manager Boernstein has become quite impatient with delays and is anxious to get down to real business. "We have permits for some private workings of the Government," he said, "which will be feature work of the first order."

DER KINEMATOGRAPH, DUSSELDORF

The leading Organ for the Motion Picture Trade in Germany.

Special Supplement for Talking Machines, &c.
Published every Wednesday. Annual Subscription 11/- Post Free.
Advertisements (4 columns to page); 2s. 6d. per inch. Situations Wanted, 1½d. per line.
Reduced Price for a Series of Insertions.
Publisher—Ed. LINTZ. Chief Editor—EMIL PERLMANN.

"WATCH FOR THE COMET"

Through Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 30th

THE CONSPIRATORS

A thrilling and sensational detective story of the Sherlock Holmes type. A production brim full of action and interest.

THE WHITE TULIP

A clean, side-splitting comedy. A farce of the most laughable character. INSIST on this film from your exchange. On the same reel,

BARCELONA

A travel film of extreme beauty; must be seen to be appreciated.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.

London Office of the News, 8 Sherwood St., London, W.

Here's an item of news for you, ahead of publication on this side: Thursday and Friday, next week, September 14th and 15th, "Kinemacolor" has been commissioned to give two special command performances at Sandringham before King George. I hazarded the opinion in these notes, when King George's visit to the "Scala" had to be postponed, that the occasion was probably merely put off to a more convenient season and this news confirms my impression. "Kinemacolor" has now twice received the coveted honor of a Royal command, the earlier exhibition, also at Sandringham, being by request of Quen Alexandra. I believe King George will be shown the coronation and other pictures of ceremonies in which he has played a prominent part, as well as other triumphs of "Kinemacolor." Royalty, and celebrities generally, always evince the keenest interest in pictures in which they and their friends figure and I am told that at the earlier exhibition Quen Alexandra took the greatest pleasure in pointing out to her guests the members of the Royal family and other notabilities who were shown on the screen. There is no doubt that King George will be pleased and it only remains to congratulate Mr. Charles Urban on the further triumph of his system.

* * *

More changes. Mr. A. H. Henderson, lately known as manager of the sales department of the Clarendon Film Co. is opening on Monday at Cine House, Greek street, with the Eagle Film Agency. Clarendon films have been sold with considerable skill and the aid of a judicious amount of publicity, and Mr. Henderson should not be long before he makes thing move in his new headquarters.

* * *

There are several other removals about due and the "centre of gravity" of the trade seems gradually being shifted to the neighborhood of Wardour street, where we already have Kineto, Kinemacolor, Pathe, Chas. Urban Trading Co., Ltd., Markt & Co., and the Sacred & Educational Co., whose specialty is programmes for Sunday shows. You need not be surprised to hear of at least two other firms associated with the trade taking up their headquarters there very shortly. Wardour street by now must have a slight lead over Gerard street, which looked like becoming "Film street" at one time. Between them they have about three-fourths of the trade, which seems finally to have deserted the district of Westminster for that of Soho. Practically all the film selling agencies now have their offices within a half mile radius of which the Hippodrome in Charing Cross Road would be the centre—a state of affairs which is greatly to the advantage of buyers.

* * *

Chas. Urban Trading Co., Ltd., whose "Falstaff" was so well spoken of, have another Shakespearean production, "The Taming of the Shrew," which, if it is as good as the first—I have not yet had an opportunity to see it—should reach a good sale.

The latest mammoth picture house in the West End of London (where there will shortly be as many as there already are variety and "legit" theatres) will use the rooms of the Globe Restaurant in Cranbourn street—possibly the most notorious place of the sort in London until it was compelled to shut down. To make room for the theatre a block of shops and offices in Rupert street have also been pulled down, among them the small office where Markt & Co. laid the foundation of their big film business and where Mr. H. A. Spoor also handled the Essanay subjects for a time. This theatre, when completed, will, it is stated, be the most sumptuous in the world and will be run with West End lavishness—and presumably West End prices.

* * *

The Cosmopolitan Film Co., Ltd., have taken over another agency, that of the "Crystal" films, an example of which, shown to me, was promising in the extreme. They will make a first release of these goods on October 12th.

* * *

I believe I gave you a list of Ambrosio "specials" in my last. To these must be added yet another, "Judas," a biblical staging on the usual Ambrosio lines, which is to say that it would not be easy to stage it much better. This makes the fourth subject deserving to be described as a headliner which Ambrosio have released at weekly intervals. One company at least seems to have made good use of its summer.

* * *

As a matter of fact, I think it will be found that the standard of quality of the English films released this winter will be exceptionally high. The British producer has for the first time had the advantage of weather conditions enjoyed practically continuously by Italian and French competitors and I think the result will go to show that any previous technical inferiority in the British product may be rightfully laid to the change of our climate.

* * *

I am given to understand that, I suppose as a result of the Cecil Court fire, the London County Council will shortly require all premises which will be used for the storage of film to be certificated before occupation will be allowed. I am told, in fact, that although such a regulation is not already in force, various film firms are considering it advisable to get the approval of the Council's Surveyor of their premises to avoid trouble in the future. Nobody could with justice complain of such a regulation, but it may cause some inconvenience in adapting existing premises.

* * *

"Kinemacolor" has been warring recently with showmen who advertise "color cinematography" when they are presenting hand or stencil colored subjects, and in one instance placed under the ad of a show which announced "Colored pictures" and, the coronation in such conjunction as to lead one to think that the coronation was in colors, an ad. to the effect that "the only genuine" could be seen at the Scala. There will probably be developments, for numerous shows whose competitors have acquired "Kinemacolor" rights, have taken to lavish advertising of "Color Cinematography," putting one or two of the artificially colored films in the bill.

THERE ARE SEVERAL "STANDARD" MAKES OF PROJECTING MACHINES

THERE ARE NUMEROUS "STANDARD" MAKES OF FILMS

BUT

THERE IS BUT ONE "STANDARD" MAKE OF MOTION PICTURE SCREENS

"SUNLIGHT"

Metallic Cloth Screens and Curtains

Our special frame with patent tightening device insures an absolutely perfect picture field, permanently free from all wrinkles and similar defects. This frame is used for either a fixed screen or as a drop curtain.

We also manufacture a special barrel or roll when a roll curtain is needed.

"SUNLIGHT" SCREENS SECURE THREE IMPORTANT FEATURES FOR EVERY EXHIBITOR:

1. THE BEST KNOWN PICTURE RESULT—VIZ.: A SOFT, WELL-LIGHTED PICTURE WITH ALL THE PERSPECTIVE AND DETAIL THAT IS ON THE FILM.
2. THIS WONDERFUL IMPROVEMENT AT A SAVING OF FROM ONE-THIRD TO ONE-HALF IN COST OF PROJECTION.
3. A PLEASINGLY LIGHTED THEATRE WITHOUT PREJUDICE TO THE QUALITY OF YOUR PICTURE.

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co.

Suite 1101 Fisher Building CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

When selecting your programme at the Exchange you seek quality and variety. You obtain both by receiving TWO YANKEES every week

MONDAY FRIDAY

OCTOBER 9

HIS SECOND WIFE

An intensely dramatic tale of marital bliss.

Code Word WIFE.
Toned and tinted.

OCTOBER 13

SOCIETY HOBOES

A screamingly funny story of society men who tried a hobo's life.

Code word HOBO.
Toned and tinted.

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 EAST 32d ST. N. Y. CITY

NEWSY ITEMS FROM EL CAJON VALLEY

The town of La Mesa, San Diego County, in Southern California, is situated in the exact center of El Cajon Valley. "La Mesa" is a Spanish term descriptive of a high plateau or tableland. The name was given the town many years ago by the old Spanish settlers of Southern California, and is peculiarly descriptive of its particular situation.

Entirely surrounded by massive mountains, which hem in the valley on all sides, La Mesa has been termed one of the prettiest town sites in America. The town itself shelters possibly three thousand souls.

At the present time there is a great furore in La Mesa. At the typically Western general store groups of Spaniards, cowboys and ranchmen mingle one with the other, conversing long and enthusiastically and gesticulating wildly in the way Spaniards usually do. Their jubilant faces bespeak something untoward and gladsome. More sedately and yet just as enthusiastically as their Spanish fellow townsmen, the American ranchmen are likewise seen in segregated groups, discussing the wonderful happenings in their century-old environment. An investigation of this unwonted joy and wonderment leads one to the outskirts of the town.

Following a typical Western trail one comes upon a cleared space on the edge of the plateau in which carpenters, stonemasons, and artisans in virtually every branch of the building trades are busily at work. Discreet inquiry results in the knowledge that here the American Film Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, are building their permanent studios, and the incidental outlying buildings requisite to the proper housing of their thirty odd head of stock and the proper developing of the negatives from which are made the already world-famous "Flying A Cowboy" pictures.

By the time this article goes to press the Western studio and negative development plant of the American Company will be completed. It is asserted by moving picture people who know that this studio and plant is unquestionably the best equipped plant in the world for its purpose. The latest improvements in factory equipment have been installed, regardless of expense; the highest priced authorities have been consulted; and the best technical talent on the market obtained for the production of moving pictures depicting the "life of the West as it really is," in a manner superior to anything the world has known to date.

The erection of a costly plant and studio equipment along these lines in such an out-of-the-way spot as La Mesa, Southern California, has given rise to a goodly number of conjectures relative to the efficacy of burying one's company in such a wild and rugged country, but the reason for this action upon the part of the American Company is self-apparent.

Southern California is actually "the last West." Nowhere else on the American continent can one find the diversity of characteristic Western scenery that El Cajon Valley contains. In no other portion of the Western hemisphere can one find the magnificent range country, the untrammeled cowboy, and the actual ranch life which is here native to the land. The enormous holdings of land owned by the old Spanish residents of this part of the country has prevented the influx of the farmer. The only thing these old Spanish ranchmen know is cattle—and it is in this atmosphere, with these surroundings, in conjunction with the most modern equipment that money can buy, that the American Film Manufacturing Company are making their "Flying A Cowboy" pictures. Results are what the American Film Manufacturing Company are after. Results always speak for themselves, and the enterprise of the American Company will be more than justified in the results that will be shown the Independent exhibitor throughout the United States in their forthcoming releases.

As one of the foremost exchange men in the United States remarked the other day, after viewing a selection of our forthcoming productions, "If the exhibitors do not demand and exhibit the films that I have just seen, I am going to quit the exchange business and build a few theaters; because it undoubtedly will denote that they do not know what the public wants. I consider your films to be the peer of anything ever produced in the West and dealing with the Western Cowboy."

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.
Best advertising medium in North Europe.
Subscription 6 shillings.
Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

AN OPENING FOR NEW THEATRE.

September 11, 1911.

The Cinematograph Publishing Co.,
30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
Editor The Moving Picture News.

Dear Sir:

There is a moving picture theatre on East Sixteenth Street, near Newkirk Avenue, Flatbush, which enjoys a monopoly in the section, the next one being upwards of a half a mile away. The usual two shows are given every evening. As the first show starts at 7, or thereabouts, all the seats are not occupied until 8 o'clock or after, consequently the great proportion of the patrons remain until the second show is half over before leaving and giving those outside, who have come for the second show, an opportunity to get inside. A goodly number are always waiting outside till after 9 o'clock. Between 10 o'clock and 10:15 the "Good Night" is thrown upon the screen and the theatre well filled, sometimes almost to capacity, we are given the unmistakable order to get out, though the majority of us have had an opportunity to see only three or perhaps four pictures, and this through no fault of ours.

This high-hand, take it or leave it policy upon the part of the owner is creating a strong antagonistic sentiment in the neighborhood and the hope is frequently voiced that another theatre will soon be opened close to him to give the much-needed competition the situation requires, and added to the above hope is the remark that the new place would always get the preference.

The above described policy is very short sighted. The patrons of this theatre are refined and well-to-do and the neighborhood could support several theatres of this kind.

Perhaps there is an enterprising man somewhere looking for a good location for a paying moving picture theatre who before long will appreciate the opportunity offered in the vicinity of the Newkirk Avenue station of the Brighton Beach Elevated.

In closing I wish to add that the pictures in the "T. N. F." theatre are usually run so fast that the effect is very distasteful and hurtful to the eyes.

In the hope that a word to the wise is sufficient,

Yours very truly,
KARL B. SACKMANN.

MOVING PICTURES IN BUDGET EXHIBIT

Parks, Animals, Fishes, Firemen at Work, Fountains and Shipping Scenes to Be Shown

Moving pictures will be used in the exhibit to illustrate the work of several departments. The Park Department will show pictures of the parks and animals, the Aquarium will have views of fishes and other sea creatures, different phases of police work will be shown on the screen, and the progress of the construction of the new aqueduct will be illustrated by films.

A moving picture photographer is now at Fire Headquarter, waiting for a third alarm, so that a moving picture may be shown of how firemen fight a real fire. The Dock Department will have pictures of the traffic in West street, and one showing the steamship Olympic being made fast to her pier.

CORONATION DERBY

The Coronation Derby run at Epsom Downs, and won by Mr. J. B. Joel's colt "Sunstar" ridden by Stern, and who showed his gameness by being first past the post on three legs, will be shown at the Herald Square by the Kinemacolor Company during the coming week.

It will be the first opportunity in the history of racing that a picture will be shown where the colors of the jockeys in their bright silks can be seen. The opportunity will be presented of picking out our American representatives in the well-known colors we are all used to seeing at Gravesend, Sheepshead Bay and Belmont Park. Messrs. Keene, Belmont, Duryea and Harry Payne Whitney, all had starters in this famous race.

MAJESTIC THEATER

During the coming week the Kinemacolor Company will show new views at this popular theater. In the past week the business has increased materially, and it looks as if Kinemacolor would make an indefinite stay in the pretty theater at Park Circle. However, the engagement is limited, as on October first the theater will pass into the hands of Messrs. William Harris and Frank McKee, who intend to rechristen it the New Park Theater.

SPECIAL NOTICE

NON-BREAKABLE

Lantern Slides

ANNOUNCEMENT
ADVERTISING
LECTURE
MICROSCOPIC
NATURAL HISTORY

We make slides of all kinds

SLIDES

Artistic and beautifully colored

Don't be faked by would-be Original Inventors who claim, and are trying to manufacture non-breakable slides.

SEND FOR CATALOG.

MICA NON-BREAKABLE SLIDE CO.
2737 N. Croskey St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

A BREEZY MORNING
Solax Release October 4

Mr. Jones is expecting Mrs. Jones home from the country, so he is up early, and dressed only in his night-shirt he goes to the hall for the morning paper. A gust of wind slams his door shut, leaving him in an embarrassing position. Hearing voices in the hall and finding the door of another apartment open, he rushes in and closes the door. Two girls come upstairs and finding their door shut, one of them, who is dressed in a kimono, goes for the janitor, leaving her sister sitting on the steps.

She meets Jones' son and explains her plight to him, who suggests that she come in his apartment until he can get her door unlocked. He then goes up the fire-escape to get in her window and thus open the door. Mr. Jones, Senior, sees a figure silhouetted against the window, and thinking it is a burglar, hurriedly puts on some female lingerie and rushes into the hall.

Mrs. Jones, coming up the stairs, sees the queer looking object and faints. Jones grabs her key and rushes to his apartment, where he witnesses another fainting. He gets in bed and feigns sleep. Both ladies are revived and Jones is found sleeping peacefully, but is found guilty when his neighbor discovers a bit of her lingerie sticking out from between the mattresses.

HIS SISTER'S SWEETHEART
Solax Release October 6

Scene opens with the arrival of troops from maneuvers at Captain Bell's house at Fort Graham. Bell's sister Edith and her friend Agnes welcome them. Bell is introduced to Agnes and falls in love with her. Agnes has a brother, George, who is in love with Bell's sister, Edith. George wants an officer's commission. He warns the girls not to tell Captain Bell that he is Agnes' brother.

That evening Bell continues to make love to Agnes. George, who is on picket duty, becomes lonely and sends a note to his sweetheart, Edith, to come down to his post to have a chat. Edith goes, and George, lost in love, lays down his gun and they stroll to a quiet nook.

Meantime Captain Bell, who is enjoying a stroll around the grounds with Agnes, is astonished to find that George is not on duty at his post. He searches and finds George and has him arrested.

All ends well, however, when the Captain discovers that George is no other than his sister's sweetheart.

THE SENTINEL ASLEEP
Imp Release October 9

The story is taken from one of the incidents in the life of Napoleon Bonaparte, the famous little fighting general. It is a matter of history that Napoleon was a stickler for discipline, and any infringement of his orders met with summary punishment.

A soldier doing picket duty on an outpost is visited by his sweetheart. He is nearly exhausted from his long vigil and loss of sleep. The meeting is an affectionate one and the girl offers to bring him food and drink, and steals away.

The soldier lies down at the base of a haystack and is soon sound asleep. Napoleon has an attack of insomnia and is walking about inspecting the sentries. He approaches the post vacated by the soldier and is surprised to see his rifle lying on the ground. Napoleon is angry and is about to prod the sleeper with his sword when he takes compassion on him, shoulders the musket and paces the beat, wearing the shako of the sentinel.

The girl returns with the food and, not recognizing the great commander, fondles him, thinking it is her lover. Napoleon prevents recognition for a time but finally reveals his identity. The soldier awakes with a start, rises and is paralyzed with fear. He is granted clemency on account of the circumstances and Napoleon walks away, leaving the lovers happy.

THE LAST G. A. R. PARADE AT ROCHESTER, N. Y.
Imp Release October 9
Approximate Length, 500 Feet

The ranks of the survivors of the Civil War are thinning each year and at every National Encampment the attendance has been lessened. The last encampment, held at Rochester, N. Y., was a notable one, inasmuch as the grand parade marked the closing of that feature of the yearly gatherings of the veterans. This has been decided upon, owing to the fact that the old heroes are becoming too feeble to stand the hardships of the long march, and in the future they will meet, with camp-fire and song, and with speeches and reminiscences, while they renew old acquaintance. One by one they are passing away, to be remembered as gallant soldiers who fought for what they believed was right.

The Imp Company, with commendable enterprise, had camera men on the ground at Rochester and preserved in film the last big demonstration of the old "Boys in Blue" that will ever be held.

There were upwards of 25,000 men in line of march and the views are excellent ones. The parade was reviewed by President Taft, General Grant, as well as the Department officers of the Grand Army of the Republic. This film has a great value both in a historical and scenic way, and will prove very popular to all patriotic citizens.

THE BETTER WAY
Imp Release October 12

The reformation of an ex-convict is brought about by the efforts of a Salvation Army lassie.

Louis Perry is discharged from the penitentiary, having served his sentence. He immediately resumes relations with his evil companions, being a leader in the criminal acts.

One day he happens to meet Lillian Garvey, a Salvation Army worker. One of his companions insults her and he resents it and incurs his enmity. Lillian is the only good woman he has known for years and he learns to love her. Her influence tempts him to abandon the life he is leading and he attends the services and becomes converted.

Just at this juncture Madeline Raymond, a woman of the underworld, who was his sweetheart before he was arrested, again comes into his life.

He tries to secure honorable employment, but Fate, in the shape of vigilant officers, interferes. They know him for a criminal and warn employers against him. Lillian is loyal in her faith in him and they are married.

A small boy is injured by a motor car and Louis takes him to his home. When he arrives he finds Madeline, who has called on his wife and told her all. The revelation has no effect on the faithful wife, and she has nothing but pity for the abandoned woman. A physician is called to attend the boy and Madeline resolves to be revenged. She places her purse in a dresser drawer and then summons a policeman, announcing that Louis has robbed her. The physician sees the woman secrete the purse.

The policeman arrives and recognizes Louis as a jailbird and is about to arrest him when he notices the injured boy, which is his child. The doctor clears Louis of the charge of theft and the officer congratulates him on his reformation and praises his devoted wife.

The incident makes a vivid impression on Madeline and she is resolved to lead an honest life.

The story is a very convincing one, the scenes being laid in the humbler walks of life.

THE CALL FROM THE HILLS

Powers Release October 3

Clayton Erb is a musical genius but his talents are not taken seriously or appreciated in the mountainous country that he calls his home. His father is quite impatient with the young man and considers the hours that he spends with his violin as hopelessly wasted and that much time gone could be more profitably employed in manual labor that would bring in some proportionate financial return.

Clayton is ordered by his father one day to fell trees in the forest, which the youth does very reluctantly. His heart is not in his work and he picks up his violin. Strains of wonderful music are soon echoing in the wood and are heard by a wealthy young woman who happens to be motoring along that way. She becomes enraptured with his music and recognizes in Clayton a genius. Learning that he is too poor to pay for a musical education, the lady gives him her card and goes on after promising to assist him if he cares to call upon her in the city.

Clayton stands watching the lady until she disappears, when his father comes upon the scene and scolds him for neglecting his work. A quarrel follows and the father tells him to give up his music or his home. Turning it over in his mind, the young musician thinks of the lady's offer and decides to go, trudging down the road with his violin under his arm.

After a lapse of time Clayton has made much progress and is making his début at a select gathering in the city at the home of his benefactress. He has become an accomplished musician and is a sensation as he plays to the piano accompaniment of the generous young woman. Between the numbers it is easy to see that Clayton has fallen deeply in love with her. His love is not reciprocated, as presently appears upon the arrival of a young man who immediately becomes the object of the young lady's attentions. In the next few moments the violinist realizes that her regard for him is purely platonic and his heart sinks within him.

The two lovers repair to a palm balcony to exchange greetings. Clayton in his confusion wanders in that direction and there, unobserved, sees them in fond embrace. The discouraged musician staggers out on the lawn. He realizes that he is out of his element; his mind wanders back to happier days in his home in the forest and he hears the call—the call from the hills.

In the meantime a simple country sweetheart that he had left behind has been pining away for him. She lays between life and death on her humble bed and the doctor does all he can, but somehow medicine does no good. Death is expected at any moment by her anxious family, when sounds of a violin are heard. Faintly at first, then louder until Clayton absent-mindedly wanders in, playing as he used to do in days gone by. To his surprise he learns that he is both the cause and the cure for the sickness of his sweetheart, and her call was the Call from the Hills.

HIS SECOND WIFE

Yankee Release October 9

A young actor-playwright and his wife are living in a furnished room; the wife rebels at this condition of affairs and secretly accompanies other men to places of amusement and cafés; after a quarrel she goes away with another man. The young husband is downcast at this; his spirit is broken, but he continued to peddle his play in the hopes of getting a manager to produce it.

He takes up his quarters at a boarding house and becomes acquainted with a stenographer, who soon falls in love with him. The man finally gets a manager to read over the play but while awaiting a decision he is suddenly taken sick. Alone and helpless, he is thankful for the help of the stenographer, who proves a faithful nurse.

He receives word that his play has been accepted and recovers in time to see it produced. After the success of the play he leaves the boarding house and apparently forgets all about the stenographer. She reads of his divorce and of his wonderful success as a playwright. When he again meets the girl he begins to realize the strength of her love; he proposes and is accepted; the man, now a popular playwright, spends most of his time at the club; he neglects his wife, but at the same time he is kind and considerate to her.

The wife is beginning to realize that her husband does not have the love for her that she craves for; he is called away to witness the production of one of his new plays, and while at the hotel he receives a telegram which informs him of an addition to his family.

The first realization of what his wife has gone through comes over him. He hastens back home as quickly as possible and the sight of his wife and baby awakens the man to his sense of duty. The man's attitude toward his wife changes; the first wife sees her former husband and follows him to his home; through the window she sees him happy and contented with his second wife and baby.

SOCIETY HOBOES

Yankee Release October 13

A tramp coming upon a jolly garden party in a millionaire colony, is called a wretched beggar by one of the men who appears to be the leader of the gathering. In resenting this accusation, he asks the gentlemen present how many of them could make their own way through the country without a penny in their pockets as he has done. This leads to a discussion, and eventually the men of the party in evening dress and high hats decide upon trying a hobo's life for a little while, having been goaded into doing so by the words of the hobo and the derision of their wives

They jump into a freight car and are locked in. In total darkness and amid dusty surroundings they fall asleep and lose track of time. When the car is opened, they jump out, a disheveled quartet of what was once natty-appearing society men While they are deciding where they can possibly be, the freight pulls out, leaving them lost in what appears to them a strange land. They are held up by a trio of genuine tramps, who compel them to change clothes; they are driven away by farmers when they ask for help; frightened almost to death by several Indians from a Wild West show, chased time and again by farmers and boys until footsore and weary; unable to go another step, they lie down to rest and are arrested as common tramps.

Proving their identity in the police court, they are given their freedom. In trying to enter their own homes they are shot at by their wives and driven forth into the grounds. Eventually they enter their own homes and vow "Never Again."

THE HIGHER LAW

Thanhouser Release October 9

The great love—that intangible sympathy, that powerful magnetic force which draws a child to a mother and a mother to a child, regardless of the strongest and most irresistible human intervention, is the thesis of "The Higher Law."

So the foundation, the nucleus of the higher law is love—human sympathy. A young minister silently loves a simple girl of the fishing village where he is the spiritual guide. She, however, looks upon him merely as a friend—because a sailor has her heart. When the sailor returns from a voyage he asks his sweetheart to become his wife. She consents, and the young minister is given the ungrateful task of performing the ceremony.

Soon after the wedding the sailor goes off on a long voyage from which he never returns. The news is brought back that he was swept overboard by a huge wave and was drowned. The woman is left friendless and helpless with a child. It is impossible for her to live on without a source of revenue, so she decides she will hunt for a position. But first she determines to find a suitable home for her child—for it would be impossible for her to work and take care and properly bring up the child at the same time.

After long mental anguish and heart struggles she makes up her mind that the minister would be the only proper person to whom she could entrust her baby. She then leaves the baby and a note on the door-step of the minister's home, and later assures herself by peeping in at the minister's study that her child was welcome. She then wends her way into the uncertain world.

As she is sitting near a dock with tear-stained cheeks planning her future, she makes the acquaintance of a wealthy but crippled old woman. After a few questions, the woman asks her to take the position of traveling companion. After seven years of close association, the old woman dies abroad and bequeaths her fortune to her companion.

Now that she is rich, she returns to the country village to claim her own. The child, in the meantime, has grown and the minister, who has been more than a father to her, loves the child. He points out that the mother has forfeited her rights because of her unnatural neglect of her offspring.

The unexpected position of the minister nearly breaks her heart. The minister, wooed by a spirit of defiance, asks the mother to come with him to Sunday-school, where she may pick out her child. Of course the mother finds this an impossible task and is forced to acknowledge the justice of the minister's position.

The mother is overcome with sorrow and remorse. With heaving breast and eyes streaming with hot tears, she finds her way to some secluded spot where she is nearly overcome by her motherly suffering. But here the great power, that great, irresistible and overwhelming magnetic force, that intangible something called "parental love" draws the child from the church and leads her to comfort her suffering mother. The two are reunited—for there is no power on earth that can nullify or defy the Higher Law.

THE TEMPTER AND DAN CUPID

Thanhouser Release October 13

Several centuries ago there was a pitched battle between Satan and Dan Cupid, the prize being the hearts of two young lovers. Each claimed the right to the couple, Satan because he had tempted the man first, Cupid because he had shot them with his magic arrows.

As it "is love that makes the world go round," Cupid is naturally a very busy little sprite, and for a time the contest went against him. Satan, who always finds some mischief for idle hands to do, had everything his own way for a while, but when Cupid woke up to the seriousness of the affair, there was something doing.

Satan lured the young man away from the church, by showing him a vision of some boon companions gambling; he induced him to rob his own father to obtain funds to continue his play, and he brought forward a siren who for a time lured the boy from his sweetheart. Then he tricked him into a duel, and the indications were that the youth would lose both his life and his soul.

But Satan had not counted on the energy of Cupid. There is an old saying that "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," but this is really mild compared to the feelings of Cupid when his magic arrows are made a mockery of. And Cupid went after Satan hot footed.

They met on the duelling ground, and Cupid, arming himself with Satan's dagger, made short work of the King of Evil. Then he escorted the lovers home again, and they lived happily forever afterward, as they were under the careful watch of Cupid; for the little god did not intend to have this romance spoiled. It would have hurt his professional pride.

THE NATIONAL GUARD ENCAMPMENT AT FORT RILEY

Champion Release October 9

This country is more prepared than most people imagine as regards an army. That army is Our Militia. There is not a State in the Union where the training of troops has not been gone on with until the ensemble of the National Guardsmen is in every respect the equal of any of the world's armies.

Concerning this matter, The Champion Co. presents a most powerful object lesson in its delineation of military camp life at Pawnee Flats, on the Government reservation, Fort Riley, Kansas. At this encampment, as in fact at all militia encampments, the United States Government furnishes large bodies of regular troops to intermingle with the militia, thus affording them practical lessons in the duties of regular soldiery.

As a result of this wise policy, no wonder then that we see in our various State militia organizations a body of men of whom the country may feel justly proud. The Fort Riley maneuvers are therefore worthy of the highest consideration of every American. But apart from their patriotic aspect, there is not a man, woman or child who can fail to be interested in the doings of the camp—for, most of the work performed is truly remarkable.

Some of the evolutions of the soldiers are executed with a brilliancy that is startling to behold, while the general drilling and marching of the men must excite the admiration of every feminine breast. Every form of military work is gone through, from the opening to the breaking of camp. The erecting of the tents alone is well worth our intelligent reflection and thought.

Company B of the 1st Regiment of Kansas holds the record in conical tent erection, putting up their tent in the record-breaking time of two minutes and thirty-eight seconds. It does one good to see it.

WHAT THE INDIANS DID

Champion Release October 11

The cupidity and deceit of a treacherous Indian are met and overmatched in this play by the wit and intelligence of a young ranch foreman, the result being the rescue of the latter's employer and his wealthy Eastern friend from massacre and robbery at the hands of the redskins. The outcome is the renunciation of the hand of a beautiful Eastern girl by the ranchman in favor of the young foreman.

Redway receives a visit from Weatherby and the latter's daughter, Alice. Redway and Bailey, the foreman, both fall in love with her. Weatherby, needing money, tells his circumstances to Redway, who offers aid. Weatherby suggests in return an alliance between his old friend and Alice, which is agreed to. Alice is induced to accept Redway.

A treacherous half-breed overhears the plan to transport the money to the ranch, and leaves to incite the men of his tribe to waylay the party. On his way to the camp he steals a bundle of cavalry uniforms from an army post supply wagon. These he uses as disguises, and his party of Indians, wearing the coats and hats of U. S. cavalrymen, get close to the Redway party before being recognized.

A fierce battle ensues. Meanwhile, Bailey, the foreman, with other cowboys, meets the supply wagon and recognizes the half-breed from the driver's description. They ride to the Indian camp to arrest him. There they discover the discarded war-bonnets of the Indians and an old hat, once worn by the half-breed. Tom Bailey suspects the situation, and gathering up the war-bonnets for their disguise, the cowboys are away.

In this way, they manage to descend on the attacking Indians, and catch them between two fires. The half-breed is attacked by Tom as he is about to kill Redway. Tom is wounded, but the rescue is accomplished. At the ranch again, Redway, who owes his life to Tom, observes a little love scene between him and Alice, and decides that the girl is not for him, but for his brave young employé.

THOSE JERSEY COWPUNCHERS

Nestor Release October 4

The Billiken Moving Picture concern had decided to make a special feature of Western subjects. In order to get the proper environment, horses, cowboys and Indians, the director and his company were soon on their way to the glorious West.

Here, however, not a cowboy nor Indian was to be had—they had all gone to join the moving pictures, such was the information given them by an old ranchman. The distracted director hurriedly dispatched an order to his studio to send on their "Jersey Cowpunchers" at once.

At last they arrived—"strangers in a strange land." The next morning, greatly to the amusement of the old ranch owners, the director soon had them transformed into dare-devil cowboys, and blood-thirsty Indians.

Then followed the rehearsal of the picture with its many amusing, trying and exciting incidents. So thoroughly did the actors enter into the spirit of the story, that when the actual scenes were taken, the attack by Indians, the wild ride for aid, the firing of the shack and finally the hairbreadth rescue, the bystanders broke into hearty applause. They had been initiated into the making of a Western picture and had found it both entertaining and instructive.

MUTT AND JEFF SPEND A QUIET DAY IN THE COUNTRY

Nestor Release October 7

Something is decidedly wrong with Mutt. He has not the slightest desire for food and Jeff's most solicitous efforts are unavailing to stimulate his friend's appetite. Jeff finally decides that a fishing expedition is a consummation devoutly to be wished. Acting on his suggestion, the two colleagues get busy securing tackle, lines, bait and other necessary fishing paraphernalia. How they secure this outfit is a caution; what the outfit looks like is a scream. Suffice to say that the long and the short of it migrate to the country, select a nice, shady nook close to a babbling brook, and start their fishing operations.

Mischief is brewing. Two convicts, tired of grafting on the State, bid adieu to the large establishment in which they had roamed for years, and make for the open country. They come upon Mutt and Jeff and, as might is right, they swap the striped garments for the fishermen's garb. Escaped convicts dash away with Mutt and Jeff pursuing—at a safe distance. The prison guards? Oh, yes; they are coming!

The lynx-eyed runaways repair to a friendly barn, while Mutt and Jeff are flagged by some inviting clothes swinging to and fro from a line. The lady of the house, or rather the owner of the clothes gently swaying in the breeze, creates such a commotion as to bring on the guards. Realizing that Mutt and Jeff are not the birds they are hunting for, they send our heroes into the barn to remove the stripes.

There's something doing in that barn, and the guards, fearing the two friends are murdering one another, rush in upon them and come out with the escaped convicts and the striped garments.

Mutt, looking somewhat like his famous ancestor, Adam, arrayed in a barrel, goes on a still hunt for some apparel to cover up the primitive appearance of his companion, Jeff. A voluminous nightgown meets his gaze; he captures it and throws it into the barn, whence Jeff soon emerges enveloped in the capacious folds of the nightie.

Mutt and Jeff's day in the country has certainly been a very, very quiet one.

On the same reel, "The Meddling Parson"—The Bachelor Club had announced a poker tournament, the cleverest player to receive a gold cup, and as a result the four chums repaired to Smith's for practice, each player bent upon winning the first prize.

Here, being unable to find the poker chips, the men pooled enough money to go around, intending it to be returned as soon as the game was finished.

This, however, Smith's uncle, the parson, absolutely refused to believe. But it was not until his old friend, John Kirby, captain of police, called upon him, that the parson conceived the idea of teaching the young men a good lesson. Smilingly the captain fell in with his plan, and at once sent Officer Casey a note advising him to raid the Smith home that night, as a joke. But unfortunately for their little joke, the letter dropped from Casey's pocket and was picked up by Slippery Sam.

Hurrying to his attic, the crook quickly donned a policeman's uniform and made a flying call upon the players, commanding them to place their money in a bag.

No sooner had Sam reached his room than the boys' cheerfulness in performing this trifling service for him was plain. The bag contained only stage money, used by the party that night, because the chips were misplaced.

The parson, much to the amusement of the boys, was explaining that he had caused the raid when Officer Casey appeared, and believing that the old gentleman had made him the target for a practical joke, he seized the parson by the collar and hustled him off to the police station.

LOST ILLUSIONS

Rex Release October 5

Illusions, Hopes, Ambitions, Inspirations, Dreams! How often we weave and conceive them; how seldom they are realized or materialized; how often they are shattered. So let us dream and scheme, and if the bubble bursts and the fairies vanish into the far-away, let us still accept our lot bravely, boldly.

Grace, a girl of the mountains, meets a young artist from the East in the woods. It happens. What to the polished, blasé artist is only a flirtation becomes for the simple mountain girl a vital and lasting love. He is the man of her dreams. The artist returns to the East, completely forgetting the remembering girl.

The girl suffers. Her father dies. She is all alone in a lonely world. She consents to marry Bill, her mountain lover, if he sells his claim and takes her East. Bill accepts the compromise, and they arrive at a fashionable hotel in the city. And in the corridor of the hotel she meets—the artist! She goes to him; the latent love is reborn, surges through her being. She introduces her husband, and asks him to permit the artist to paint her portrait. Reluctantly, he consents.

The next day, when her husband calls for her at the studio, he enters just in time to see her sway toward the artist, lips ready to meet his, eyes staring into the soul of a man and sin. Brokenhearted, he returns to his room, writes out a check for all the money he possesses, and leaves the woman and the city, to return to the sneers and jeers of his mountaineer friends.

The next day the artist introduces to Grace—his wife and child; The fog lifts, the blackness and bleakness disappear, and the woman takes the narrow path back to the everlasting hills—and happiness.

THE WHITE TULIP

Great Northern Release Oct. 7

Two men, wishing to play a joke on a companion, insert an advertisement in the papers, saying that a wealthy bachelor desires to make the acquaintance of a young lady with a view to matrimony, applicants to call at a certain restaurant wearing a white tulip, where they will find the prospective bridegroom; the confederates knowing that the object of their joke frequents this place. The advertisement has a magical effect on all matrimonially inclined who read it, and forthwith each one begins to make excuses to get away from her respective employment. Salesladies, stenographers, and even domestic servants of all ages are suddenly afflicted with aches and pains in order to relinquish work and keep the appointment. Within the restaurant we see the two men with their victim. Taking two white tulips from the centerpiece, on the table, they place one in each lapel of his coat and then bid him good-by and wait outside to watch the trend of events. Soon the would-be brides arrive and the victim gets a hot time. The state of affairs becomes unbearable, and the police are summoned, and five taxi cab loads of fair damsels and one Adonis are carted off to the magistrate. Here confusion soon reigns supreme, but explanations eventually follow, and after "mere man" has been reduced to an almost irreparable wreck at the hands of the infuriated damsels, the curtain drops.

BARCELONA

A travel film of extreme beauty, showing the interesting and picturesque life in this pretty European city.

We want all old friends as well as new ones to remember we want your $2.00 per year, or $1.00 for six months subscription.

If you are not satisfied with the results in next three months your money returned.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Powers and Motiograph Machines, and will Exchange for Either, or Any Other Make You Desire.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST.
State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.

I Equip Your Theatre Completely

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

Moving Picture Theater Pianists and Musical Directors should not forget that we give a copy of the F. B. HAVILAND MOVING PICTURE PIANISTS' ALBUM free with a year's subscription to the MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

Telephone: 1664 Spring

Kitab Engraving Company

Makers of MOVING PICTURE NEWS HALF TONE CUTS

401 Lafayette Street, NEW YORK

Here Is Something Entirely New

You have never seen anything like it before, and why? Because it is the only Collection of its kind ever published, and it is going to fill a long felt want. It is a Collection that will appeal to thousands of pianists who play in moving picture theatres.

HAVILAND'S

MOVING PICTURE PIANIST'S ALBUM

It contains the music that every pianist needs in a moving picture house. It is "Classified," so that at a moment's notice you can find the particular style or class of music you need for a particular picture.

Sixty pages of music, covering everything needed in a picture house—full sheet music size—arranged simply, yet brilliantly. Nothing in this Collection more difficult than third grade. Anyone can play these arrangements.

The Price is 50 Cents Postpaid.

F. B. HAVILAND PUBLISHING CO.
125 West 37th Street, New York

JUST OFF THE PRESS—THE NEW

MADISON'S BUDGET No. 14

By far the best book of comedy material I have ever written. Contents include 20 sure-fire parodies, 11 great monologues, 10 fine acts for two males, 6 acts for male and female, a splendid minstrel first part, an original one-act comedy, also brand-new acts for quartettes and sister teams, besides an almost endless assortment of newest gags, jokes, sidewalk patter, etc., etc.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR

MADISON'S BUDGET No. 14 is sold with the guarantee of being absolutely satisfactory in every way or money instantly refunded. Send orders to

JAMES MADISON
1404 Third Avenue, New York

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

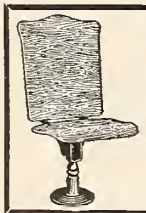
PREFERRED STOCK - - - - - - - - LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK - - - - - - - - 3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP - - - - - - - - LIRE 5,750,000

EXCHANGE MEN WRITE TO US FOR PARTICULARS OF OUR FIRST RELEASE

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK



THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-Saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.

HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES.
Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Motiograph $75. Cineograph $65. Edison One Pin, New, $130. Stereopticon $5.00 up. Supplies, etc. Edison Model B, Powers No. 6 and Standard New, are Specialties. Send for Supplement No. 33 Bargain List.
Motion Picture Machines wanted.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GUARANTEED ACCURATE PARTS for all MOTION PICTURE MACHINES at very reasonable prices. SPECIAL parts and machines as also experimental parts made to order. All repair work on MOVING PICTURE MACHINES promptly attended to at remarkably low figures. CHAS. E. DRESSLER, 388 Second Ave., Betw. 22nd & 23rd Sts.

Theatre Sales Co.

211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call.
Make Known your Wants

SCENARIA

Wanted, stories for Motion Pictures. Only high-class material. Comedies preferred. Address
ORTHO FILM CO.,
40 E. 12th St., N. Y.

ADVERTISING SLIDES

We claim to produce the CLASSIEST Advertising Slides ever shown. Send for SAMPLES.
Cleaveland Slide Co., 127 Court Street
WASHINGTON C. H., OHIO

When Writing Advertisers Please Mention Moving Picture News

BUSTED PROMISES

No office of the Laemmle Film Service will promise you anything it can't perform. If I can't get your business by means of straight truth, someone else is welcome to it. Busted promises have been your greatest bugbear in the past. None will be dished out to you if you hook up with me. Write to-day.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
New number 204 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa.

The biggest and best film renter in the world.

WANTED

MOTION PICTURE

PLAYS

You can write them. We teach beginners by mail in 10 easy lessons. No previous experience necessary. Demand increasing and better prices being paid for good work.

Our graduates are selling their plays to all companies.

Write for details

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS
799 CHICAGO OPERA HOUSE
CHICAGO, ILL.

FILMS FOR RENT

Inter-Ocean Film Exchange

28 WEST QUINCY ST., CHICAGO
STRICTLY INDEPENDENT

2,000 feet 6 times per week....$12.50
3,000 feet 6 times per week.... 15.00
2,000 feet 7 times per week.... 14.00
3,000 feet 7 times per week.... 17.00

Express charges one way
Free song slides; free lithographs
Send for large list of subjects

PERFORATING MACHINES

TO FILM MANUFACTURERS.

If you require an accurate, adjustable film perforator, built specially for negatives,

BUY THE MICROMETRIC

Manufactured by

CHRONIK BROTHERS
73 Gold Street, New York.

CASH FOR MOVING PICTURE PLOTS

Demand practically unlimited. Writers $50 or more weekly. Literary excellence unnecessary. If you can read, write, and think, you need only technical knowledge to succeed in this pleasant, fascinating profession. We must have more playwrights and we'll teach you the technical secrets. Send your name and address at once for Free Booklet.

NATIONAL AUTHORS' INSTITUTE
220 GAIETY THEATRE BLDG.,
New York, N. Y.

STAG FILMS

WANTED—Stag Films, also Religious Films. State names of subjects and condition, etc., lowest price. Address
OREGON FILM EXCHANGE
526½ Wash. St. Portland, Ore.

AUSTRALIAN NEWS

Rather more than three years ago the management of West's pictures in Australia decided to experiment with their show in West Australia, and after exhibiting for a while in His Majesty's Theater, took a lease of the Queen's Hall from the trustees of the Wesley Church. A few weeks only served to show the profitableness of the venture, and quite recently the company—for into such Mr. West had now formed his undertaking—completed their three-years' tenure of that building. During last summer the Melrose Gardens were built by the company; but still unsatisfied with their growth the management have decided upon and are already taking steps to bring about the erection of an absolutely modern picture theater in Perth, of a replica in Fremantle to take the place of the premises now being leased and of a smaller erection in the growing suburb of Subiaco, the whole set, including freehold land and buildings, to cost not less than £56,000. In considering what kind of buildings would be most suitable for local climatic conditions, those responsible have instructed their architects to pay special attention to the matter of ventilation, and the plans have been so drawn that the theaters when finished will be easily convertible at will, into either summer or winter premises. It is felt that a vitiated atmosphere invariably produces deleterious effects upon the people compelled to inhale it. It may be granted that the average person knows a great deal more about ventilation to-day than was formerly generally known, and however good a show may be, people will not continue to attend any place in which they think, rightly or wrongly, that they are being subjected to a process of slow murder. As a rule, other things being equal, the best ventilated building will attract most, and hence the desire to ensure as great comfort in this respect as possible. To this end it has been arranged that each building shall be provided with a deep double roof, and that the solid walls shall cease all around when within six feet of the under roof. The gap between the walls and the roof will be fitted with broad Louvre shutters, which in summer time will be thrown wide open and admit a steady current of air, and in winter time will be closed down so as to completely shut out the damp and cold. A special feature of the theaters will be the seating accommodation, which will practically all be on the ground floor, except that toward the back it will rise gradually in tiers, and permit those seated behind to have an uninterrupted view of the screen. Every seat will provide the occupant with a perfect sight of what is going on, and there will be none of those pillars or posts around which people so often have to crane their necks. The lighting will in every case be unusually brilliant, and be carried out by separate plants which will be installed at each building by the company. The buildings will be of brick, equipped with every modern convenience, to say nothing of winter gardens and refreshment rooms, and should prove ornaments in the three places in which they are to be erected.

AN AUSTRALIAN AUDIENCE AT WEST QUEENS HALL

The Perth building, which has already been commenced, and will be known as the Melrose Theater, has its site in Murray Street, adjoining the corner of William Street. It is stated that when finished it will be the most gorgeous and comfortable picture palace in Australasia, and be capable of accommodating with ease three thousand people. The chairs in the circle will be upholstered in red leather, and the seats at the back will also be well furnished. From the roof to the floor the distance will be fifty-two feet. The main entrance will be from Murray Street, and it is expected that the building will be completed by the end of October next.

The building at Fremantle will be called the Princess Theater, and will be situated in Market Street at the corner of Lake Street, accommodating one thousand eight hundred people. It will be erected on much the same plan as the Melrose Theater. A special feature of this place will be that with the use of the side street it will be possible to empty the place in three minutes in case of fire. Adjoining, a hall is to be erected which will be utilized for general entertainment purposes.

The Palace Theater at Subiaco will be erected in Hay Street, near the corner of Rokeby Road. Adjoining, and having communication with the theater will be an open-air gardens, and it is intended to work the two together according to the weather.

It may be stated that each of the theaters will be equipped with stages in the event of it being found necessary to provide a change for patrons in the way of variety entertainment. Special attention will also be paid to the musical portion of the programme, and in all probability Mr. Louis De Groen will visit this state with his vice-regal band.

LIGHT

The question of light in the auditorium is one which has baffled more than one manager. It isn't easy to keep the auditorium light enough for patrons to move about safely and not kill or weaken the picture on the screen. How many auditorium patrons enter where the light is so bright the picture looks as though it were seriously underexposed. Detail is destroyed and there is a noticeable absence of the delicate half-tones which are such a prominent feature of an artistic film.

What shall be done? That question has been asked many times and each expert offers his own solution. In some auditoriums they turn out all the lights when the picture is on the screen. This, of course, gives the most brilliant picture, but some cities have ordinances which forbid darkened auditoriums. In such instances, and they probably constitute by far the larger class of playhouses, something else must be devised which will overcome the difficulty and at the same time comply with the legal regulations.

One of the most unique was seen a few nights ago in a good-sized theater where the auditorium lights were arranged in clusters of three. They are all sixteen candle power electric lamps. Two in the cluster were blue and are kept burning during the time the picture is on the screen. The other is white and is burned when there is no picture. The blue light does not injure the appearance of the picture at all. The white light, burned when the audience is moving, is sufficient to light the auditorium and prevent all danger of injury through falling or otherwise.

This is, perhaps, quite the cheapest arrangement the writer remembers to have seen. The cost of installing this entire outfit is no more than the expense of providing sufficient lights of any color to make movement safe. The manager declared that it solved all the difficulties to which he had previously been heir to, and it also saved his picture when complying with the regulations.

Success in one locality is reasonably convincing assurance that the same conditions would result if tried elsewhere.

SPLASH!

We have purchased 100,000 Pink Label 5/8 x 7 Electro Carbons, and while they last they go at $2.25 per hundred, or $21.00 per thousand, cash with order. Here's your chance; stock up for the winter.

Swaab Film Service Co.

129 N. EIGHTH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feet

Sept. 6—Italian Artillery
Sept. 13—Cain's Retribution (Dr.)
Sept. 13—Tiny Tom Wins a Lottery Prize (Com.)
Sept. 20—Tweedledum's Riding Boots (Com.)
Sept. 20—Tiny Tom as a Detective
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death
Sept. 27—Alice's Dream
Sept. 23—The Hornet (Com.)
Sept. 27—Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)
Oct. 4—Wrestlers and Wrestling

AMERICAN

Aug. 21—The Blotted Brand (Dr.)
Aug. 24—Anna Harris in the Swimming Marathon
Aug. 24—Aunty and the Cowboys (Com.)
Aug. 28—The Western Doctor's Peril (Dr.)
Aug. 31—The Diamond Smugglers (Dr.)
Sept. 4—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 7—Three Million Dollars (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 11—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (W. Com.-Dr.)
Sept. 14—The Mother of the Ranch (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 18—The Gun Man
Sept. 21—The Claim Jumper
Sept. 25—The Circular Fence (Com. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 28—The Rustler Sheriff (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 2—The Love of the West (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 5—The Miner's Wife (W. Dr.) 1000

CHAMPION

Aug. 28—A Daughter of Dixie 950
Aug. 30—How Tony Became a Hero 950
Sept. 4—Grant and Lincoln 950
Sept. 6—When the Law Came 950
Sept. 11—Charley's Butte (Dr.)
Sept. 13—The Red Devils (Dr.) 950
Sept. 18—Shenandoah 950
Sept. 20—The Stolen Horse 950
Sept. 25—The Black Horse Troop of Culver. 950
Sept. 27—The Cook of the Ranch 950
Oct. 2—Barbara Frietchie 950
Oct. 4—As Things Used to Be 950
Oct. 9—The National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley 950
Oct. 11—What the Indians Did 950

ECLAIR

July 17—Teddy's Three Duels
July 24—The Pretty Lady of Narbonne
July 31—The Parable of the Prodigal Son
Aug. 7—The Sorrowful Mother (Dr.)
Aug. 7—Too Much Swedish Drill (Com.)
Aug. 14—The Connecting Link (Dr.)
Aug. 21—The Edelweiss
Aug. 21—How They Work in Cinema (Com.)
Aug. 28—A Marriage in the Stars (Com.) 755
Sept. 4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.) 886
Sept. 11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris 630
Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.) 335
Sept. 18—Magic Music 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies 370

GREAT NORTHERN

July 8—As a Man Soweth (Dr.)
July 15—A Soldier's Life (Com.) 452
July 15—At Sea Under Naval Colors 455
July 22—A Kind-Hearted Brother (Dr.)
July 29—The Engagement Ring (Dr.)
July 29—A Happy Home
Aug. 5—The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 12—The Mother's Mark (Dr.)
Aug. 12—Teddy Trained by His Mother (Com.)
Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.) 950
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.)
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.)
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson
Sept. 16—The Conspirators (Dr.)
Sept. 23—Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)
Sept. 30—The Conspirators (Dr.)

IMP

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Aug. 7—The Old Peddler (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 10—Dorothy's Family (Com.) 1000
Aug. 14—A Boy's Best Friend (Dr.)
Aug. 17—Behind the Times (Dr.)
Aug. 18—Bill Tries to Make Bread
Aug. 21—Battle of the Wills (Dr.) 500
Aug. 21—Love in a Tepee (Dr.) 500
Aug. 24—As a Boy Dreams (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 28—His Royal Highness (Com.)
Aug. 28—Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.)
Aug. 31—The Toss of a Coin (Com.)
Sept. 4—The Haunted House (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 7—Duty (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.) 1000

Feet

Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood
Sept. 18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream
Sept. 21—By Registered Mail
Sept. 25—The Co-Ed. Professor (Com.) 750
Sept. 25—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.) 250
Sept. 28—'Tween Two Loves (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 2—The Rose's Story (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 5—Through the Air (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 9—The Sentinel Asleep
Oct. 12—The Better Way

ITALA

July 15—A Revolver Returned to Its Owner
July 20—The Charitable Young Lady (Dr.)
July 22—Foolshead's Heels (Com.)
July 27—The Fatal Sonata (Dr.)
July 29—Toto's Butterfly (Com.)
July 29—Toto Without Water (Com.)
Aug. 3—The Evening Bell
Aug. 5—Foolshead's Last Roguery
Aug. 12—Sport Restores Youth
Aug. 17—Toto's Little Cart
Aug. 17—In the Valley of Viege
Aug. 19—Foolshead—Manikin
Aug. 19—The Blunt Sword
Aug. 24—Modern School of Italian Cavalry
Aug. 26—Foolshead—Chauffeur
Aug. 26—For a Straw
Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes
Sept. 7—The Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dr.)
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.)
Sept. 9—Toto Has a Purse
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Com.)
Sept. 16—Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.)
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death
Sept. 23—The Hornet

LUX.

By Prieur.

Aug. 4—Bill Does His Own Washing (Com.) 439
Aug. 4—An Elopement by Aeroplane (Com.) 465
Aug. 11—Bill Wishes to Make Butter (Com.) 458
Aug. 11—The Cripple (Dr.) 462
Aug. 11—Bill Wishes to Make Butter (Com.) 458
Aug. 11—The Cripple (Dr.) 462
Aug. 18—A Child's Courageous Act
Aug. 25—Bill Follows the Doctor's Orders
Aug. 25—What a Pennyworth Did
Sept. 1—Bill as a Game-Keeper (Com.) 504
Sept. 1—The Invisible Wrestler (Com.) 340
Sept. 8—Bill Buys a Lobster (Com.) 350
Sept. 8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.) 642
Sept. 15—Bill as a Billposter (Com.) 573
Sept. 15—His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.) 357
Sept. 22—Bill as an Express Messenger (Com.) 344
Sept. 22—The Stolen Diamond (Dr.) 629
Sept. 29—Bill and His Friend (Com.) 491
Sept. 29—The Little Goatherd (Dr.) 386

NESTOR FILM CO.

Aug. 26—Mutt and Jeff and the Country Judge (Com.)
Aug. 30—The Parson and the Bully (Dr.)
Sept. 2—Mutt and Jeff and the German Band (Com.)
Sept. 6—The Flower of the Tribe (W. Dr.)
Sept. 9—Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Com.)
Sept. 13—At Perry's Ranch (Dr.)
Sept. 16—Mutt and Jeff and the Newsboys (Com.)
Sept. 20—Across the Divide (Dr.)
Sept. 23—Mutt and Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Com.)
Sept. 23—Obliging a Friend (Com.)
Sept. 27—The Young Doctor (Dr.)
Sept. 30—Mutt and Jeff as Reporters (Com.)
Sept. 30—Getting Even (Com.)
Oct. 4—Those Jersey Cowpunchers (Dr.)
Oct. 7—Mutt and Jeff Spend a Quiet Day in the Country (Com.)
Oct. 7—The Meddling Parson (Com.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Aug. 11—The New Cowboy
Aug. 15—A Sioux Spy
Aug. 18—An Indian Love Affair
Aug. 22—A Cowboy's Loyalty
Aug. 25—Pioneer Days
Aug. 29—An Indian Legend
Sept. 1—The Sheriff's Love
Sept. 5—Little Dove's Romance
Sept. 8—A Western Tramp
Sept. 12—The Lost Letter
Sept. 15—Lone Star's Return
Sept. 19—The Sheriff's Brother
Sept. 22—The Missionary's Gratitude
Sept. 26—Lucky Bob
Sept. 29—White Fawn's Peril
Oct. 3—The Red Man's Penalty
Oct. 6—Range Justice

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Feet

Aug. 1—Speculation (Dr.)
Aug. 5—Last of the Mohicans (Dr.)
Aug. 8—Cheyenne Days (Scenic)
Aug. 8—A Harmless Flirtation (Com.)
Aug. 12—Lone Eagle's Trust (Com.)
Aug. 15—Babes in the Woods (Dr.)
Aug. 19—The Squaw's Devotion (Dr.)
Aug. 22—Measuring a Wife (Com.)
Aug. 22—Falls of Bohemia (Scenic)
Aug. 26—The Indian's Love (Dr.)
Aug. 29—The White Chief
Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw
Sept. 5—Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.) 960
Sept. 9—The Twin Squaws (Dr.) 975
Sept. 12—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.) 950
Sept. 16—The Horse Thief (Dr.) 950
Sept. 19—Lost in a Hotel (Dr.)
Sept. 19—An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.)
Sept. 23—Red Man's Honor (Dr.)
Sept. 26—The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.) 300
Sept. 26—Imaginative Willie (Com.) 670
Sept. 30—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.) 970
Oct. 3—The Call from the Hills (Com.)
Oct. 3—A Matrimonial Idyl (Dr.)
Oct. 7—The Branded Indian (Dr.)

RELIANCE

Sept. 9—His Dream
Sept. 13—The Cobbler
Sept. 16—Pals (Dr.)
Sept. 20—The Stolen Play
Sept. 23—The Way of a Maid
Sept. 27—For His Sake (Dr.)
Sept. 30—Weighed in the Scale
Oct. 4—Winning Papa's Consent
Oct. 4—A Quiet Evening

REX

Aug. 3—The Artist Financier (Dr.)
Aug. 10—The White Red Man (Dr.)
Aug. 17—The Colonel's Daugbter (Dr.)
Aug. 24—Castles in the Air (Com.) 1000
Aug. 31—The Torn Scarf
Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic)
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.)
Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.)
Sept. 28—The Derelict (Dr.)

SOLAX COMPANY

Sept. 8—The Best Policy (Mil. Dr.)
Sept. 13—Her Uncle's Will (Com.)
Sept. 15—The Altered Message (Mil. Dr.)
Sept. 20—Oh! You Stenographer (Com.)
Sept. 22—Nellie's Soldier (Dr.)
Sept. 27—How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Com.)
Sept. 29—An Italian's Gratitude (Dr.)
Oct. 4—A Breezy Morning (Com.)
Oct. 6—His Sister's Sweetheart (Military)
Oct. 11—He Was a Millionaire (Com.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

July 18—That's Happiness
July 21—Two Little Girls
July 25—The Smuggler (Dr.)
July 28—A Doll's House (Dr.)
Aug. 1—The Pied Piper of Hamelin
Aug. 4—The Judge's Story
Aug. 8—Back to Nature (Dr.)
Aug. 11—Cupid the Conqueror (Dr.)
Aug. 15—Nobody Loves a Fat Woman
Aug. 18—The Train Dispatcher (Dr.)
Aug. 22—The Cross
Aug. 25—The Romance of Lonely Island
Aug. 29—The Moth
Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet, Part I
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet, Part 2
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.)
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.)
Sept. 19—The Lie (Dr.)
Sept. 22—The Honeymooners (Dr.)
Sept. 26—Lochinvar (Dr.)
Sept. 29—Love's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Oct. 3—The Five Rose Sisters (Dr.)
Oct. 6—The East and the West (Dr.)

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Aug. 7—Kathleen Mavourneen (Dr.)
Aug. 11—Grey Wolf's Squaw (Dr.)
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.)
Aug. 14—A Good Natured Man (Com.)
Aug. 14—A Children's Paradise (Scenic)
Aug. 18—Her Father's Secretary (Dr.)
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.)
Aug. 25—Retaliation (Dr.)
Aug. 28—The Power of Devotion (Dr.)
Sept. 1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.)
Sept. 4—Inshavogue (Dr.)
Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.)
Sept. 8—Faded Roses (Dr.)
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstrings
Sept. 15—Woman
Sept. 18—The Star Reporter
Sept. 22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)
Sept. 25—For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.)
Sept. 29—Man (Dr.)
Oct. 2—She Never Knew (Dr.)
Oct. 6—The Goose Girl (Dr.)
Oct. 9—His Second Wife
Oct. 13—Society Hobos

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

		Feet
Aug. 21	The Diving Girl (Com.)	502
Aug. 21	$500 Reward (Com.)	496
Aug. 24	The Rose of Kentucky (Dr.)	997
Aug. 28	Swords and Hearts (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 31	The Baron (Com.)	587
Aug. 31	The Villain Foiled (Com)	411
Sept. 4	The Stuff Heroes Are Made Of (Dr.)	998
Sept. 7	The Old Confectioner's Mistake (Dr.)	998
Sept. 11	The Village Hero (Com.)	675
Sept. 11	The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)	321
Sept. 14	The Squaw's Love (Dr.)	998
Sept. 18	Dan, the Dandy (Com.)	998
Sept. 21	When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.)	463
Sept. 21	A Convenient Burglar (Com.	534
Sept. 25	The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.)	999
Sept. 28	Her Awakening (Dr.)	997
Oct. 2	Too Many Burglars (Com.)	499
Oct. 2	Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Com.)	497
Oct. 5	The Making of a Man (Dr.)	1000

EDISON

Sept. 8	At Jones' Ferry (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 9	That Winsome Winnie Smile (Com.)	500
Sept. 9	No Cooking Allowed (Com.)	500
Sept. 12	Under the Tropical Sun (Dr.)	735
Sept. 13	The Escaped Lunatic (Com.)	500
Sept. 12	Off the Coast of Maine	265
Sept. 13	For the Queen (Com.)	500
Sept. 15	The Lighthouse by the Sea (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7	The Sheriff (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 19	The Sailor's Love Letter (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 20	An Unknown Language (Com.)	985
Sept. 22	The Battle of Trafalgar (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 23	The Big Dam (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 26	Mary's Masquerade (Com.)	1000
Sept. 27	A Cure for Crime (Com.)	1000
Sept. 29	The Death of Nathan Hale (Edu.)	1000
Sept. 30	The Maiden of the Pie-Faced Indians (Com.)	500
Sept. 30	Turning the Tables (Com.)	500
Oct. 3	Eugene Wrayburn (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 4	The Summer Girl (Com.)	1000
Oct. 6	Foul Play—Part I (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6	Foul Play—Part II (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6	Foul Play—Part III (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 7	Leaves of a Romance (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 10	How Mrs. Murray Saved the American Army (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 11	Mae's Suitors (Com.)	1000
Oct. 13	At the Threshold of Life (Edu.)	1000
Oct. 14	Her Wedding Ring (Dr.)	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Sept. 8	The Wrong Glove (Com.)	990
Sept. 9	Broncho Bill's Last Spree (W. Com.)	980
Sept. 12	Two Men and a Girl (Dr.)	980
Sept. 14	The Puncher's Law (W. Dr.)	980
Sept. 16	The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.)	980
Sept. 19	Saved from the Torrents (Dr.)	980
Sept. 21	All on Account of the Reporter (Com.)
Sept. 21	Everybody's Troubles (Com.)	980
Sept. 22	Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.)	980
Sept. 23	An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.)	980
Sept. 26	Lost Years (Dr.)	980
Sept. 28	The Power of Good (W. Dr.)	980
Sept. 29	When He Died (Com.)	980
Sept. 30	The Strike at the "Little Johnny" Mine (W. Dr.)	980
Oct. 3	Grandma (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 5	Master Cupid, Detective (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6	The Sheriff's Decision (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 7	Townhall, To-night (W. Com.)

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Aug. 26	The Island of Ischia, Italy	332
Aug. 29	Jimmie to the Rescue (Com.)	1000
Sept. 2	Giving the High Sign to Woman Haters (Com.)
Sept. 2	African Sharp Shooters (Sc.)	210
Sept. 5	A Society Mother (Dr.)	1030
Sept. 9	Mated by Chess (Dr.)	660
Sept. 9	Farming—Old and New Methods	378
Sept. 12	How to Catch a Bachelor (Com.)	836
Sept. 12	From Bordeaux to Paulliac, France	164
Sept. 16	The Cinematograph Fiend (Com.)	574
Sept. 16	A Mountain Torrent in Austria (Scenic)	415
Sept. 19	Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)	710
Sept. 19	Crossing the Alps in a Motor	285
Sept. 23	A Heart Breaker by Trade (Com.)	710
Sept. 23	The Culture of Bulbous Flowers	290
Sept. 26	A Friend of the Family (Com.)	850
Sept. 26	The City of Bordeaux, France (Trav.)	175
Sept. 30	Hearts May be Broken (Dr.)	1015
Oct. 3	Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Dr.)	675
Oct. 3	Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Trav.	325
Oct. 7	The Upward Way (Dr.)	726
Oct. 7	Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal	269
Oct. 10	The Missing Bracelet (Dr.)	1150
Oct. 14	Rejected (Dr.)	845
Oct. 14	Pansies (Botanical)	155
Oct. 17	Done Brown (Com.)	837
Oct. 17	A Fairyland of Frost and Snow (Scenic)	163
Oct. 21	The Masked Huntsman (Dr.)	784
Oct. 21	Opening Flowers (Botanical)	216
Oct. 24	Jimmie in Love (Com.)	555
Oct. 24	The Ostrich Plume Industry, France (Ind.)	428

KALEM CO.

Aug. 18	The Promoter (Dr.)
Aug. 21	Simple Ike Decides to Marry (Com.)
Aug. 23	Don Ramon's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 25	The Little Cripple (Dr.)
Aug. 28	The Branded Shoulder (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 30	Building the New Line (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 1	On the War Path (Dr.)	955
Sept. 4	Rory O'More (Dr.)
Sept. 4	Rory O'More (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 6	When Two Hearts Are Won (Com.)	1000
Sept. 8	When the Sun Went Out (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 11	A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 13	The Express Envelope (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 15	The Alpine Lease (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 18	The Ranger's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 20	Losing to Win (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 22	The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 25	Arizona Bill (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 27	Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 29	The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	The Phoney Strike Breakers (C.)	1000
Oct. 4	The Saving Sign (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6	The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Sept. 7	A Question of Modesty (Dr.)	600
Sept. 7	Pardon Me (Com.)	400
Sept. 9	The Ranch's New Barber (Com.)
Sept. 9	Bill's Ward (Dr.)	400
Sept. 11	Divided Interests (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 13	His Girlie (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 14	Al. Martin's Game (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 16	Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.)
Sept. 16	His Scheme That Failed (Com.)
Sept. 18	The Senorita's Conquest (Dr.)
Sept. 20	The Life Saver (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 21	The Human Torpedo (Com.)	1000
Sept. 23	Her Inspiration (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 25	The Matchmaker (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 27	A Cowboy's Love (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 28	A Counterfeit Roll (Com.)	1000
Sept. 30	A Nearsighted Chaperon (Com.)	1000
Oct. 2	His Stuhhorn Way (Com.)	1000
Oct. 4	The Idle Boast (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 5	His Exoneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 7	Revenge is Sweet (Com.)
Oct. 7	From the Field to the Cradle (Ind.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Aug. 3	Red Cloud's Secret (Dr.)
Aug. 10	His Lesson (Dr.)
Aug. 17	The Local Bully (Com.)
Aug. 17	Two Foolies and Their Follies (Com.)
Aug. 24	A Spanish Love Song (Dr.)
Aug. 31	The Call of the Wilderness (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7	The Hoho Cowhoy (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 14	A Shattered Dream (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 21	$200.00 (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 28	The Mission Waif (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 5	The Stolen Grey (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Sept. 9	A Tragedy at Sea (Dr.)
Sept. 11	Eva Is Tired of Life (Com.)
Sept. 11	Little Moritz and the Butterfly (Com.)
Sept. 11	From Lourdes to Gavarnie (Sc.)
Sept. 12	Pathe's Weekly No. 37
Sept. 13	Prisoner of the Mohicans (Dr.)
Sept. 14	College Sweethearts (Com.)
Sept. 14	Art Industries in Kahylie (Sc.)
Sept. 15	Madame Tallien (Dr.)
Sept. 15	Everyday Life in Malacca (Sc.)
Sept. 16	A Western Memory (Dr.)
Sept. 18	The Fright	770
Sept. 18	Fire Brigade in Moscow	230
Sept. 20	An Up-to-date Squaw (Com.)	754
Sept. 20	African Birds and Their Enemies	250
Sept. 21	Starlight's Necklace	951
Sept. 22	Electric Boots (Com.)	425
Sept. 22	Old Delhi and Its Ruins	285
Sept. 22	Surfing	285
Sept. 23	Gypsy Maids	900
Sept. 25	The Disappointed Old Maids (Com.)
Sept. 25	Whiffles' Hard Luck Stories (Com.)
Sept. 26	Pathe's Weekly No. 39
Sept. 27	Driven from the Trihe (Dr.)
Sept. 28	Gypsy Honor (Dr.
Sept. 29	The Bell Ringer of the Abhey
Sept. 29	Across the Polar Seas (Scenic)
Sept. 30	A Convict's Heart (Dr.)
Oct. 2	Little Moritz is Too Short (Com.)
Oct. 2	Rangoon, India (Scenic)
Oct. 3	Pathe's Weekly (No. 40)
Oct. 4	Crazy Dope (Com.)
Oct. 4	Circus in Australia (Scenic)
Oct. 5	The Squaw's Mistaken Love (Dr.)
Oct. 6	Flirts (Dr. Com.)
Oct. 6	Fishing in the Ceran Islands, Oceania (Scenic)
Oct. 7	For Massa's Sake (Dr.)
Oct. 9	The Little Animal Trainer (Dr.)
Oct. 9	Bttty's Boat (Com.)
Oct. 9	Marvelous Transformations
Oct. 10	Pathe's Weekly (No. 41)
Oct. 11	One on the Masher (Com.)
Oct. 11	Scenes on the U. S. S. Connecticut
Oct. 12	Romance of the Desert (Dr.)
Oct. 13	Raffles Caught (Dr.)
Oct. 13	Guerrero Troup
Oct. 14	Marooned (Dr.)

SELIG

Sept. 5	The Totem Mark (Hist. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7	A Tennessee Love Story (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 8	The Heart of John Barlow	1000
Sept. 11	Kit Carson's Wooing	1000
Sept. 12	Dad's Girls	1000
Sept. 14	The Wheels of Justice	1000
Sept. 15	The Voyager	670
Sept. 15	A Sight Seeing Trip Through Boston	330
Sept. 18	Lost in the Arctic	820
Sept. 18	Noted Men	180
Sept. 19	McKee Rankin's "49"	1000
Sept. 22	Shipwrecked	1000
Sept. 21	A Cup of Cold Water	1000
Sept. 25	Two Orphans	1075
Sept. 26	Two Orphans—Part II	986
Sept. 28	Two Orphans—Part III	1090
Sept. 29	John Oakhurst—Gamhler (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	A Summer Adventure (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 3	The Rival Stage Lines (Com.)	1000
Oct. 5	Maud Muller (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6	The Artist's Sons (Dr.)	1000

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

June 21	Avenged	1000
June 28	The Taming of the Shrew (Com.)	1000
July 5	Ancient and Modern London	530
July 5	Boys Will Be Boys (Com.)	470
July 12	The Free Lance (Dr.)	640
July 12	Temples of India	365
July 19	The Tie That Binds (Dr.)	760
July 19	A Round-Up In Chili	240
July 26	An Amateur Skater	440
July 26	Satan on a Rampage	660
Aug. 2	The Struggle for Life	650
Aug. 2	On the Coast of Bengal	326
Aug. 9	The Heiress	705
Aug. 9	Lyons, the Second City of France	295
Aug. 16	For the Honor of the Name (Dr.)	790
Aug. 16	Moss-Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight	245
Aug. 23	Condemned for Treason (Dr.)	845
Aug. 23	Wool Industry of Hungary	135
Aug. 30	A King for an Hour (Com.)	572
Aug. 30	Sights of Berlin	423
Sept. 6	Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)	675
Sept. 6	Lake Thun in Switzerland (Scenic)	325
Sept. 13	The Hand of the Law (Dr.)	665
Sept. 13	Norwich and Vicinity, England (Travel)	330
Sept. 20	In Ancient Days (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 27	The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.)	458
Sept. 27	Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)	542
Oct. 4	A Jealous Wife (Com.)	338
Oct. 4	The Grand Chartreuse (Trav.)	292
Oct. 4	Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Com.)	348
Oct. 11	Pardoned by the Governor (Dr.)	646
Oct. 11	Making Cheddar Cheese (Ind.)	342
Oct. 18	Ordered to Move On (Dr.)	605
Oct. 18	Madeira, Portugal (Travel)	385
Oct. 25	A Woman's Slave (Dr.)	950

VITAGRAPH

Aug. 9	Billy the Kid (Dr.)
Aug. 11	The Bell of Justice (Dr.)
Aug. 12	Birds of a Feather (Com.)
July 25	Treasure Trove (Dr.)
Aug. 15	Captain Barnacle's Baby (Dr.)
Aug. 16	Man to Man (Dr.)
Aug 18	Vitagraph Monthly (Scenic)
Aug. 19	A Second Honeymoon (Com.)
Aug. 21	Wages of War (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Aug. 22	How Betty Won the School	1000
Aug. 23	The Sheriff's Friend (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 25	My Old Dutch	1000
Aug. 26	A Handsomer Man (Com.)	1000
Aug. 28	The General's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Aug 29	The Wrong Patient (Com.)	551
Aug. 29	Queer Folks (Com.)	448
Aug. 30	The Three Brothers (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 1	The Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 2	The Prince and the Pumps (Com.)	1000
Sept. 4	Jealousy (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 4	A Friendly Marriage (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 6	The Willow Tree (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 8	Cherry Blossoms (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 9	Jimmie's Job (Com.)	1000
Sept. 12	Her Crowning Glory (Com.)	1000
Sept. 13	Beyond the Law	1000
Sept. 15	Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.)	1000
Sept. 16	By Woman's Wit (Com.)	1000
Sept. 18	One Flag at Last (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 19	How Millie Became an Actress (Com.)	1000
Sept. 20	Beyond the Law (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 22	Forgotten (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 23	Over the Chafing Dish (Com.)
Sept. 23	The Tired, Absent-Minded Man (Com.)	1000
Sept. 25	By the Camp Fire's Flicker	1000
Sept. 26	His Sister's Children	1000
Sept. 27	A Western Heroine	1000
Sept. 29	The Ninety and Nine	1000
Sept. 30	Her Hero	1000
Oct. 2	Our Navy	1000
Oct. 3	The Wager (Com.)	1000
Oct. 4	The Mate of the John M. (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6	Carr's Regeneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 7	Ups and Downs (Com.)	1000

JUST STOP AND THINK

We do all the planning and scheming for you—we've solved all the big and little problems that stand between you and the BEST FILMS ON THE MARKET.

THIS OUR SECOND YEAR

finds us very carefully building on the sure foundation of complete success, keeping steady pace with the wonderful developments and improvements of the art of MOTION PICTURE PHOTOGRAPHY.

REPUTATION

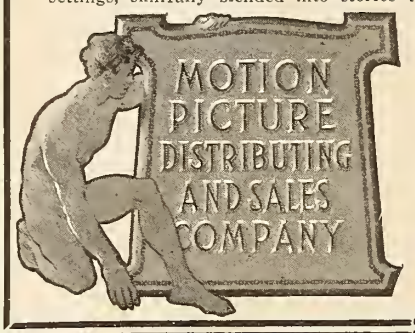
like Rome, cannot be built in a day; but unless maintained may be lost in an hour. SKILL and EXPERIENCE MORE than MONEY are the ESSENTIALS

WE ARE PROUD OF THIS

WEEKLY PROGRAM

MONDAY	IMP, ECLAIR, YANKEE, AMERICAN, CHAMPION.
TUESDAY	THANHOUSER, BISON, POWERS.
WEDNESDAY	CHAMPION, SOLAX, RELIANCE, AMBROSIO, NESTOR.
THURSDAY	REX, AMERICAN, IMP.
FRIDAY	YANKEE, SOLAX, LUX, THANHOUSER, BISON.
SATURDAY	POWERS, ITALA, GT. NORTHERN, NESTOR, RELIANCE.

Comparison on the screen with any other has proven beyond doubt that our films contain more real humor, sentiment and beautiful settings, skillfully blended into stories that hold one as only a masterprice can hold, reflecting the tastes and costumes of back ages as well as portraying the scenes and events of the day.



ESTIMATION OF POPULAR OPINION HAS BEEN THE SILENT SALESMAN OF OUR VARIOUS BRANDS THROUGHOUT THE LAND

FOLLOW THAT IMPULSE AND USE OUR PROGRAM

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

111 EAST 14th STREET NEW YORK CITY

EXHIBITORS, BEWARE! DON'T BE TAKEN IN Trinidad, Colorado,

September 18th, 1911.

Sunlight Metallic Cloth Curtain Co., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: Some time ago I purchased what I supposed to be one of your screens from a party who claimed to represent you, by the name of Warwick—paying him $20 in cash. Upon the arrival of this screen, a slight examination at the express office showed it to be a very inferior article to the sample that Warwick demonstrated to me. I consequently refused to accept the curtain and it still remains at the express office and I am out $20. In the meantime I have read some of your articles in the Moving Picture News in regard to these parties.

A party in Denver by the name of Edmund Anderson is represented to be secretary, and he has an office in 314 Y. M. C. A. Building, Denver.

My film exchange, W. H. Swanson, Denver, sent me one of your folders, giving your prices and terms. I think I will want to buy one of your screens on the 20 per cent cash and deferred payment plan, but would like to know if you sell more than one screen in a town, and any other information you can give. I am throwing a picture 12 x 16; suppose that is the size screen I would want?

Very truly,
(Signed) A. R. WILSON,
Isis Theater.

A VOICE FROM THE WEST

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," sends the News the following letter, which speaks for itself:

"I enclose you 25 cents in stamps, for which please send me your 1912 Motion Picture Catalogue and Reference Book. I have used your Hallberg Economizer for more than a year, and it is the best current-saver on the market. I have used the "Compensarc" and the "Inductor," but find that the Hallberg Economizer has saved me more than 20 per cent more than either of the other two. Wishing you success, I am,

Orpheum Theater, Yours truly,
Deer Lodge, Mont. JENS HANSEN.

Ordinary curtains. Mirror Screen.

NOTICE!

Do You Want to Produce the Best Pictures in Your City?

We guarantee that you can do this, with the aid of a "MIRROR SCREEN." It has the world beat.

With a "MIRROR SCREEN" you can produce your pictures in a lighted room, and have more perspective, depth, brilliancy, clearness, etc., than on any other curtain.

DON'T GET THE BLUES. INSTALL A "MIRROR SCREEN" MAKE YOUR BOX OFFICE LAUGH

Address all communicatons direct to

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO., SHELBYVILLE, IND.

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

FACTORY AND STUDIO 25th AND MONTGOMERY

ST. LOVIS, MO.

WRITE FOR DESCRIPTIVE LITERATURE

DON'T FAIL TO SEE KING BAGGOTT IN

"THE BETTER WAY"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

It's simply great! Abounds in unique situations, the story having as its pivotal point the love of a reformed crook for a Salvation Army lassie. Released Thursday, October 12th. See that you get "The Better Way" without fail!

"THE SENTINEL ASLEEP"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

An incident in the life of Napoleon Bonaparte. On the same reel

"THE LAST G. A. R. PARADE, ROCHESTER"

And the last parade the Grand Army will ever hold. This makes the reel doubly valuable. Frequent views of President Taft are one of the many interesting features. Released Monday, October 9th.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
Pay a little more for Imps. They're worth it!

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

Demand Two Imps Every Week

OCT 11 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 40

October 7
1911

PRICE
TEN CENTS

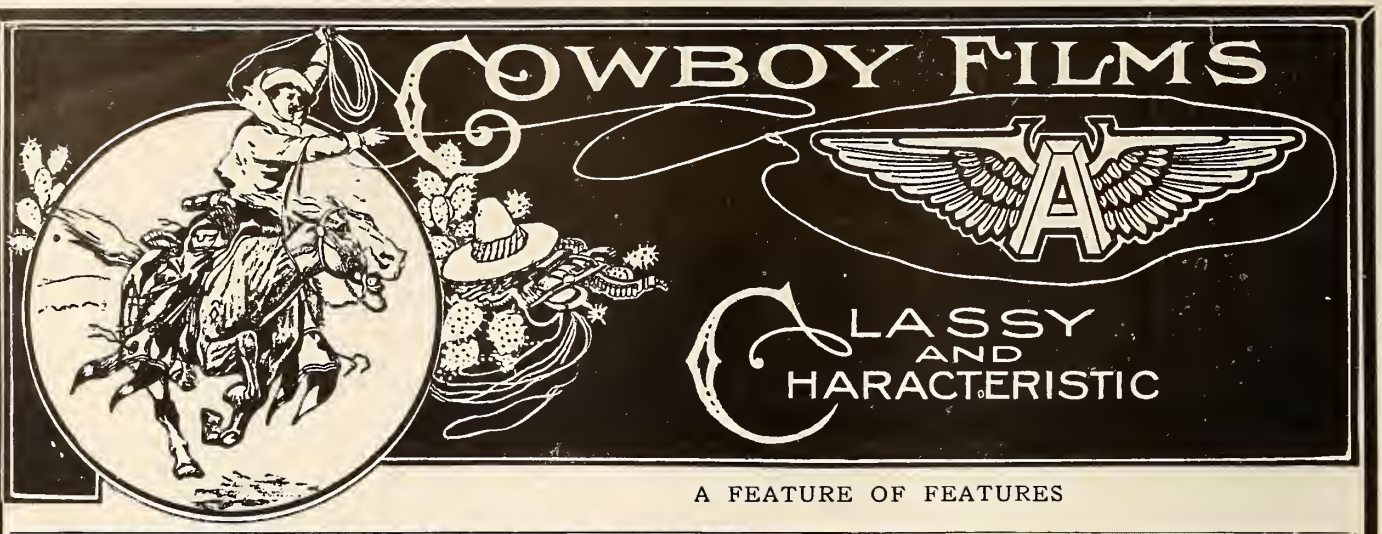
Scene from
"A GIRL and a SPY"
CHAMPION Release of October 16th



A FEATURE OF FEATURES

"The Land Thieves"

Produced in El Cajon Valley, Southern California.
Released this week, October 9th.
The greatest film the American Film Manufacturing Company ever manufactured.
GET IT. Remember it is released MONDAY, OCTOBER 9th.

NOTE.—There are two "Flying A" Cowboy features released each week. Some of these features are better than others, but they are all good. The release days are MONDAYS and THURSDAYS.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY PRODUCERS OF FLYING A COWBOY PICTURES, BANK FLOOR—ASHLAND BLOCK,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

Solax

WEDNESDAY
COMEDY

"HE WAS A MILLIONAIRE"
COMEDY

RELEASED OCTOBER 11th

An Especially Good Comedy of a Man Who Thought He Was a Millionaire.

"A CORNER IN CRIMINALS"
AND
"A LOVER'S RUSE"
SPLIT REEL COMEDY

RELEASED OCTOBER 18th

Two Good Ones On One Reel

FRIDAY
MILITARY AND DRAMA

"HIS MOTHER'S HYMN"
DRAMA

RELEASED OCTOBER 13th

A Wonderfully Clever and Interesting Drama of Real Life.

"HIS BETTER SELF"
MILITARY

RELEASED OCTOBER 20th

Big Military Picture taken at Ft. Myer, Va., by Special Permission of the U. S. Govt.

4—GOOD ONES—4
OBEY THAT IMPULSE
GET THEM ALL

Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED

Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

ALL OVER THE WORLD YOU WILL FIND

POWER'S No. 6 CAMERAGRAPH

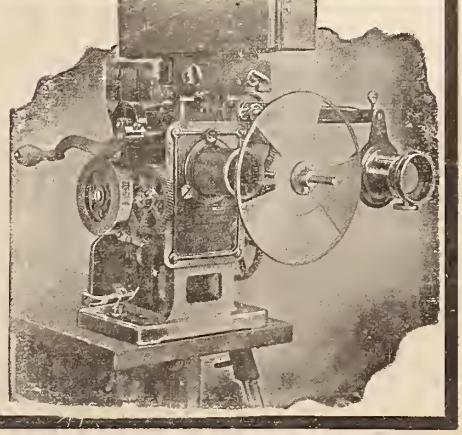
THE PERFECT MOTION PICTURE MACHINE

Our Vice-President and General Manager has just returned from a two months' trip abroad and announces the sales of the "No. 6" in every European country, in Africa, India, China and Japan. Active agents are selling "Power's" machines in all these countries as well as South America, Mexico, Canada and Australia.

The popularity of Power's No. 6 in distant lands as well as at home shows that it meets the needs of moving picture exhibitors everywhere, as no other machine does.

If you don't know about it you'd better find out.

Send at once for Proposition D and latest catalog.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115 Nassau Street, New York

Pioneer Makers of GOOD Motion Picture Machines.

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

The Early Life of DAVID COPPERFIELD

First of the Series from the Novel by Charles Dickens

RELEASED TUESDAY, OCTOBER 17

The people who most affect the early life of David Copperfield are his mother, Mr. Murdstone, Peggotty, Ham, Little Em'ly, Uncle Dan, Mr. Creakle, Steerforth and Aunt Betsey.

All exert their influence either for good or evil. The associations and environments of his younger days indelibly stamp upon David's character strongly defined traits.

David and his early associates are reproduced amidst a Dickensonian atmosphere, with remarkable fidelity to the great novel. All the most dramatic and picturesque incidents of this period of his life are shown. The critics all agree that this production is a "revelation."

THE SATYR AND THE LADY

RELEASED OCTOBER 20

An artist's model of the usual type, poses with a shoestring peddler for a painting, which the artist calls "The Satyr and the Lady." In the eyes of the peddler, the beautiful model is the embodiment of all that is virtuous and noble.

On his deathbed he writes to "The Lady," asking her to take care of his orphan daughter. The assumption of the responsibility completely regenerates the one-time careless model and also wins her a good husband.

Little Em'ly and David Copperfield
Second of the Series, Released Tuesday, October 24

The Loves of David Copperfield
Third of the Series, Released Friday, October 31

FREE

EXHIBITORS ATTENTION!

Advertising matter for the David Copperfield production furnished on application. Quantities of the David Copperfield Herald can be secured at the rate of $5.50 per thousand. This Herald makes attractive matter for distribution among the audiences.

THANHOUSER COMPANY NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.

BUILT BETTER RUNS BETTER IS BETTER

THE WILLOUGHBY AMUSEMENTS COMPANY

To Clement Mason, Esq.,
Clement-Mason Cinematograph Co., Lt.,
Sydney, Australia.

Dear Sir:—It affords me extreme pleasure to inform you of the high regard I hold for your latest importation, namely THE MOTIOGRAPH. I have operated with all the latest Cinematograph Machines and have come to the conclusion that your MOTIOGRAPH is the essence of that perfection which we operators have long desired. For perfect mechanism, simplicity of action, fire-proof qualities, portability, price, and an absolutely flickerless picture I at present fail to see how this machine can be improved upon. I sincerely trust that this true expression of my faith in THE MOTIOGRAPH may lead to its adoption throughout the Moving Picture World. Wishing you every success which you richly deserve, I am,

Yours faithfully,
FRED SMYTH, 7th June, 1911.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 564 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO

For Sale by every Live Dealer. AUSTRALIAN AGENT—Clement Mason, Sydney, Australia.

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Correspondent and Agent for advertisements in Great Britain B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W.

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy. 844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City. ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV | October 7, 1911 | Number 40

THE DAILY PRESS AND MOVING PICTURES

WHEN will the daily press wake up to the fact that moving pictures have gone far away from the blasé pictures of olden days? When will they wake up to the fact that there is a general tendency of uplift all along the industry? We give below an editorial clipped from the daily Tribune of September 29th as a specimen of what the press is doing each day. Our press clipping bureau sends us constantly scare heads from almost every city in the states, and we ask why? What did the dime novel, what did the one stand show, what did the vaudeville hold-up, do for the boys before moving pictures became such a factor in the lives of the people? Does the daily press forget, or does it ignore the fact, that the Censorship Board and the public sentiment is against all such pictures as are spoken of in the editorial of the Tribune? Does it not know, or is it dominated by the press agent of a certain inventor, that the so-called trust is the largest offender against good taste, and that the Patents Company needs a censor board all to itself, and while the Independent section is not altogether innocent, yet at the same time both companies send their films to the National Board of Censorship, and if anything is wrong, or blasé, or illogical, the Censorship Board must have the blame.

One great trouble with the Board is that it is not a legalized and authoritative corporation, having the powers of city authority; otherwise their strength would be very much greater and the advancement of the picture industry would be considerable. We quite agree with the last paragraph which refers to two of the police chiefs and their desire that there should be an inflexible prohibition of the display of any crime in real life; also, the last sentence, which speaks of the value of the cinematograph as a vehicle both of entertainment and instruction is not easily to be overestimated. We want the press to tell us the names of the pictures, and the maker of the picture, which they criticize, and hold up as being wrong and detrimental to the industry. If our readers will send us the names of these films also, we will be in a better position to answer the unjust criticism of the daily press. The article we refer to follows:

Moving Pictures, Good and Bad

The approach of cold weather, with the consequent greater patronage of indoor entertainments in place of the outdoor sports which occupy the summer season, makes timely the examination of the character and influence of the popular and cheap moving picture shows which has been made by the New Jersey state and many local authorities. It is easy to generalize on the subject, but it is more profitable to get the expert reports and opinions of those who, as a matter of official and moral duty, have practically investigated and studied it.

The statements which have been made by the principal police officers in numerous towns and cities are much to the point, and their purport is unmistakable. Generally they may be divided into two classes. Those of one class declare emphatically that the moving picture shows are frequently incitement to vice and crime. One tells of a five-year-old boy who saw a moving picture depictment of a highwayman's "hold up," and who straightway went home, got a pistol and tried the "hold up" on his mother, the pistol fortunately being unloaded. He also tells of a twelve-year-old boy who was incited by such a show to commit theft. The news of the day frequently contains similar items, and there can be no doubt of their truth. Another police chief estimates that these shows are responsible for one-fifth of the crimes committed, especially of petty larceny.

The testimony of the other class is that the shows do little or no harm; but this is accompanied by the explanation that a rigid censorship is maintained over them, that they are required to be clean and orderly and that young children are not admitted to them except under the care of their parents or other adults. There is no reason for doubting the correctness of this testimony either, but, of course, it is obvious that instead of contradicting it indirectly corroborates the former testimony, since it amounts simply to this, that if they are deprived of their bad features the shows do no harm. The logical converse is, of course, that without the elimination of those features they do harm.

Two of the police chiefs give emphatic expression to a desire which ought to be repeated everywhere and made effective, namely, that there should be an inflexible prohibition of the display of any action which in real life would be a crime. An enactment to that effect ought to be a matter of course, and it would go far toward removing the reproach which now often and not undeservedly falls upon these exhibitions. That reproach should be removed, not only that thus evil shows might be suppressed, but also that the presentation of good shows might be encouraged. For the value of the cinematograph as a vehicle both of entertainment and of instruction is not easily to be overestimated.

EDUCATIONAL FILMS

TO show our readers the progress that education is making by the use of the moving picture film, we give herewith in its entirety a letter we have received from Mr. J. L. Jones, M.E., assistant professor of mechanical engineering of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College, Still Water, Oklahoma. The letter practically speaks for itself and is a wonderful example for other universities and colleges to follow. We will say that we have knowledge of other universities that are working on somewhat similar lines, and in a little while we will be able to outline a full complete progress of the work these various colleges are doing.

One point we wish specially to point out in the letter is that of the engineering department where the society is very anxious to get into communication with manufacturers who have had films made of their shops and factories or other advertising films. We publish this information so that all the manufacturers may be able to compete, according to the product and quality of film, securing the best to satisfy the requirements of educators.

Another point we would like to call attention to, is the postscript which is very pithy and says a whole lot in a very little space. We have repeatedly protested against the death scenes brought out by certain manufacturers as being uncalled for, undesirable, and not at all elevating to the industry as a whole. What do we want to know about, or see death in any form, either on the stage or in a moving picture. Let us have light, life, vigor, love, something that will uplift and sustain and put us in a pleasant frame of mind, and not give us the dismals. We agree with Professor Jones when he says, "They are very disagreeable." However, here is the letter. It speaks a splendid progression, and we trust it will do good to the industry.

September 25, 1911.

Mr. Alfred H. Saunders,
Editor, The Moving Picture News,
New York.

Dear Sir:—You will perhaps be interested to know that this college has purchased a projecting machine, and about a half dozen reels of film, which have been used to great advantage during the past two months, and which will be in almost continuous use throughout the greater part of the year. The subjects are, of course, all educational, and include "The Man Who Learned," "The Aviation Meet at Rheims," "The Life of a Bee," "The Live Stock Parade at Ames, Iowa," several films of microscopic subjects, the "Fly Pest Film," the "Acrobatic Fly," and others of a similar nature. This college does a great deal of "extension" work, carrying two large circus tents, complete with seats, lighting, and all accessories, live stock, etc., and gives "Six Day Schools of Agriculture and Domestic Science" at various cities throughout the state. These schools are very largely attended by the farmers and townspeople and are accomplishing great things in the way of educating the farmers in scientific agriculture. At these schools, a regular schedule is followed, beginning early in the morning, and concluding with an entertainment in the evening consisting of a lecture illustrated by slides (of which the college has several hundred), and an educational moving picture. Sometimes these motion pictures are described by the lecturer as shown.

At the same time that the college was conducting these Six Day Schools they were also having Two Day Schools in other parts of the state, so that the college had two machines in operation at the same time in different cities.

Last winter, the college, in conjunction with the railroads of the state, sent a number of educational trains over practically the whole of the state, carrying live stock and engineering exhibits. These trains made about six stops per day, and at the evening stop giving an illustrated lecture and a couple of motion pictures. The illustrated lectures were usually on live stock, good roads, or kindred subjects.

At the present time the college is preparing an exhibit at the State Fair, at Oklahoma City, and there will conduct a Six Day School for the children of the state, a number being sent from each county. At this school the motion picture machine will be used every night.

In the class room work at the college, these films are used whenever possible.

In the Engineering Department the students have formed a large and progressive Engineering Society, which meets every second Wednesday. At these meetings illustrated lectures are given on engineering and allied subjects, both by students and men from outside the institution who are prominent in their field. This Engineering Society is very anxious to get into communication with manufacturers who have had films made of their shops and factories, or other advertising films, and arrange to exhibit these films, with the accompanying lectures which are usually furnished, at meetings of the society.

The college has started negotiations with one of the manufacturers to make a film of the work being done in the college, class work, laboratory work, etc. This will probably be made within a short time. This film will then be extensively shown throughout the state.

Very truly yours,

J. L. JONES.

P. S.—This little town, with about 2,500 people, has three picture theaters. In attending lately I have heard many persons speak of the large number of "Death Scenes" shown. Sometimes every picture shown in an evening will have one. One of these at infrequent intervals is bearable, but they are coming in great numbers, and are very disagreeable.

CAMERA OPERATORS

WHEN a manufacturer is out of a camera operator, or in need of one for an emergency, he immediately rings up, if near enough to the 'phone, and if not, telegraphs us to send him an operator at once. When we want men they are the hardest things to find, they all seem to have a job. When we don't want them there are always a half dozen popping in, practically every day. What we would like is to get up a register of every expert camera operator in the country, and also those who are aspiring to become camera operators. Will our readers send us these particulars? We are in a position to help them and also help those who need them. We do not ask this for publication but merely for our own private register, but if the operators prefer we will publish a list of their names, years of experience, where employed, and where now employed, so that excellence of film photography can be given where it is due. Now you camera confreres what do you think of this?

KINEMACOLOR

A SHORT time ago "Stroller," in the Kinematograph Weekly, London, took the American papers to task for the adverse criticisms they had given to Kinemacolor, and mentioned "that time was not far distant when they spoke in doubt and disparagement of the invention." We felt a little umbrage at this, owing to the fact that ever since the year 1899 we have consistently supported Charles Urban's proposition, and have looked with the keenest of delight and pleasure on the results obtained, since the first crude specimen we saw in that year.

The Moving Picture News stands for everything relating to the progress and the advancement of the industry, and this is one of those items which we fully believe is a cause for rejoicing in the ranks of the trade. It is an advancement, it is a vast improvement, it is a scientific invention that is bound to come more and more largely into the lives of the people of Nickelodia, and not only for Kinemacolor do we plead for an open mind, but also for every educational movement that is put forward. The Moving Picture News stands in the front rank of these movements, and we were pleased to read the following paragraph in Stroller's notice of the issue of September 4th.

"I have been hauled over the coals for a paragraph in my notes of August 17th referring to Kinemacolor in America, in which I said the time was not far distant when the American papers spoke in doubt and disparagment of the invention. It is pointed out to me that the Moving Picture News should not be included. I have verified this by carefully searching through the file of Mr. Alfred Saunders' excellent publication."

For the above paragraph very many thinks, Stroller. We only wish the American M. P. press would follow your attitude and give honor where honor is due, and when they make a mistake, correct it as you have done; it would tend very much to uplifting of the industry in America. Again thanks.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE CINEMATOGRAPH

The Press and the Sensational Film

By L. W. D.

THERE has been considerable discussion in the daily press anent the influence of the cinematograph on the public mind. When will it all end, and when will the incident of the weak-minded girl "who imitated what she had seen in a film, to the extent of binding and gagging herself and faking a burglary," cease to be quoted as an example of the "Evils of the Picture Theater?" It is the conviction of the writer that, on the contrary, the more young people—especially young people of the poorer classes—are taught to exercise their imaginative faculties, the better. The realities which a large number of these children have to face daily are deplorable; and if they can be taken out of these realities for an hour or so and wafted into the realm of fancy, all that I can say is that the change is a most excellent one, and the cinematograph theater is performing a valuable service. We are not told in what manner the brains of these young people, who for the nonce get out of their dull, sordid lives, are injuriously affected by the transformation. This is one of the mythical "perils"—a subject for ridicule rather than one for serious consideration.

For some months past the question of the fare provided at many of the popular cinematograph theaters, we are told in a prominent London daily, has been exercising the public mind. Educational authorities and individuals interested in the welfare of children have protested again and again that the pictures thrown on the screens at these places of entertainment have been anything but instructive. Battle, murder and sudden death and impossible knock-about humor, they say, have been too plentiful, and instead of the cinematograph becoming an entertaining and educational factor, it had developed in some instances at least, into an incentive to crime. A case of a girl who imitated what she had seen in such a film of binding and gagging herself and faking a burglary, occurred not a great while ago. With the idea of elevating the public taste and of trying to feel the public pulse and see if there were any demand for high class matter, a certain London cinematograph company presented one of Shakespeare's most popular plays by motion picture, and offered it to the trade. The result was disheartening; the film was a drug in the market, and would not sell. Whether its failure was due to the lack of judgment on the part of the buyers or to the fact that the author of the poem was not sufficiently spectacular, is not known, but very few copies of the film were purchased. Everybody has been protesting against the sensationalism of the picture theater, but now that an original and high class line has been offered there is no demand. Who is to blame? However, there is still a good market for sensation in the poorer parts of England's capital, but it is on the wane. Educational pictures are extremely popular, and the war story, the historical story, mythological and fairy tales, are strong favorites. Pictures illustrating travel and exploration the public will seemingly never tire of; one remarkable fact is the popularity of the nature study film. Biblical subjects also are always well received as are also stories from the operas, "Faust" and "Carmen" accompanied by phonograph.

RELIANCE MANAGEMENT IS NOW IN NEW HANDS

C. O. Baumann Withdraws from Big Film Company to Devote His Entire Time to Bison Interests—J. C. Graham and J. V. Ritchey Now in Control

An important deal has been consummated whereby the management and control of the Reliance Company passes into the hands of J. C. Graham, of St. Louis, and J. V. Ritchey, of Chicago. In relinquishing the reins Mr. C. O. Baumann has this to say:

"It is with mingled regret and pleasure that I withdraw from the Reliance Company—regret that I will not see the fulfillment under my personal supervision of many ambitious plans now under way, and pleasure that the men at the wheel who will henceforth guide the destinies of the company are so ably fitted to conduct the business on a plane which must mean success to themselves and gratification to exhibitors.

"I find the burdens I took up too onerous, and in relieving myself of part of them I feel that I am benefitting the varied interests I represent.

"It has been a heavy task to properly supervise the production of Bison films, the making of Reliance films, the handling of our Itala and Ambrosio imports, and the conduct of the large factory at Coney Island.

"I have determined to bend all my energies toward the production of sensational, spectacular Western dramas, and believe that with the Reliance Company off my shoulders I can give the exhibitors of America a line of Bison films which will attract the masses into their theaters, thereby giving an added impetus to the entire industry.

"I am thoroughly convinced that Messrs. Graham and Ritchey will more than keep every promise made to exhibitors. Those familiar with the moving picture trade know that the first year of a company's existence is necessarily a stormy one, and the Reliance Company has passed all the rocks and shoals and is sailing smoothly in safe waters.

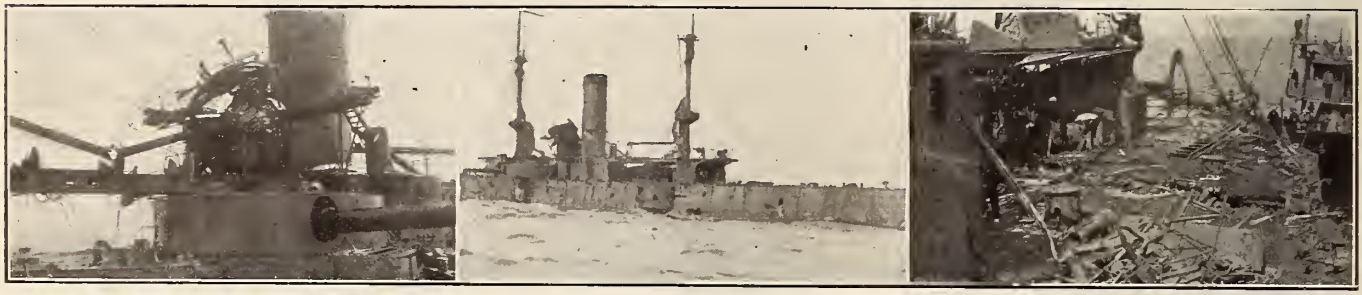
"On behalf of myself and my associates I want to extend to the film renters and exhibitors our hearty appreciation of the co-operation we have experienced. I have found more sentiment in the film business, and more loyalty in times of stress, than in any other field of endeavor I have ever been connected with. Now that Messrs. Graham and Ritchey are taking up the work with what is perhaps the best equipped studio in America and a factory in perfect condition, by devoting their efforts to the production of good plays they cannot fail to give to the trade the quality of film which has been the goal striven for.

"The change means better Reliance films and better Bison films."

Portland, Ore.—Tamassie & Willsen will erect a one-story picture show house on Mississsippi avenue and Beech street, to cost $5,500.

The Men of Our Navy Entertained by Moving Pictures

By M. I. MacDonald



THE DEMOLITION OF THE TURRET — THE TEXAS SINKING — THE DECK IN PATH OF DESTRUCTION SHOWING DEBRIS

THERE is a scene, of which I have not been the actual observer, which must be to the onlooker as unique as it is interesting: and this is an evening when the moving picture show takes place aboard a man-of-war. Evenings while the fleet is sojourning in lazy southern waters, when time hangs heavy on the hands of the constituents of our navy, it is then that the man in charge of the "entertainment bureau" of each ship hangs his sheet, places the projecting machine, and makes general preparation for the appearance of the shadow figures—for the amusement and entertainment of the ennui burdened crew.

Not long ago I took a trip to the navy yards of Brooklyn. The day was atrociously wet and dirty. The rain poured down upon my companion and I as we trudged from the car over myriad railroad tracks, through pools of water, over bridges suspended above dry-docks, through mud unspeakable, and finally up the slippery, steep ladders not intended to be traversed by the weaker sex, up onto wet, wet decks, manned by a host of jolly good fellows. We didn't really mind the rain. It was an interesting sight to view at close quarters the great grey sea hounds that compose the fleet of our nation.

It will be interesting to my readers to know how the moving pictures are negotiated for, or rather how the getting of them is financed. These good fellows think well enough of the entertainment provided by moving pictures to contribute out of their own pockets for the rent of the reels of film. Sometimes two ships "chip in" together, raising often five hundred to a thousand dollars for the rental of films, and in that case they "swap" films from time to time. Sometimes more than two ships join in the purchase, and again one ship will control her own films.

We were courteously received aboard the "Cincinnati" by the chief electrician, Mr. J. McDonald, and Mr. Robt. Clark. The latter has charge of the moving picture department, and was able to give us the necessary information concerning matters in this connection. "We show pictures twice a week, and I don't know but we will make it four times a week after this. It is about the only amusement the boys have when we are at sea, or stationed in the south. Nights when we show them you will see the decks, and even the masts lined with men looking at the pictures. We put the sheet up out there," he continued, pointing to the forward portion of the deck.

Most of my readers will remember reading in the papers a short time ago about the last cruise of the "Texas"—of the destruction of the old ship used as a target for practice purposes. Moving pictures of this scene were taken by Mr. Clark, and have been exhibited throughout the country. The accompanying illustrations are scenes from these reels, and will, no doubt, prove interesting to the careful observer.

We were much interested in the "Solace" doing duty as a hospital ship. This semi-ancient boat, painted snowy white, with a broad green band about her prow, is most thoroughly equipped. The laboratory, with its microscopes, searchlight, incubator for developing bacilli, its chemicals of all sorts, was proudly displayed to our wondering eyes by two young chemists, whose pleasure it seemed to be to go to any amount of trouble for us. The operating room also is very excellently equipped. We passed through the hospital wards, past quarantine quarters, and finally arrived at the chart room on the top deck. "Here," spoke our escort, "is where we put our moving picture machine, and out yonder we hang the sheet—we can show them fine here.

"Our greatest trouble comes when we are in the south, where it is warm—it is then that fevers are apt to attack us. At Guantanamo we had 3,000 men vaccinated as a precaution. The 'Solace' was an old Morgan liner and did duty as a hospital ship at the time of the war of 1898," continued the officer.

The moving pictures used by the American fleet are supplied by the W. J. Greene Film Exchange. I asked Mr. Clark what kind of pictures the boys liked best. "Wild West scenes" was the reply. "They like comedy too, and some drama, but cut out the love scenes—they don't like them. The other day," said he, "we were showing one where a fellow had been paying attention to one of two sisters, and tiring of the one, he tried to make love to the other, but the other sister would have none of it; she motioned with her thumb over her shoulder, 'Get out of here,' she said, and the boys applauded that. It was tought in a way, but the boys admired the pluck of the girl when she told him to 'get out of here.'"

The life of the navy man must be more or less monotonous when the fleet is not in action; and it is pleasant to know that they can be treated to a taste of what the outside world is doing, even if it is but a shadow picture.

GET A REP

AFTER THE DELUGE

The Lord said to Old Man Noah:—"I have given you the rainbow to be unto you as a sign and a token that never again will I bring a flood upon the earth"—or syllables to that effect.

NOW, as a sign and a token that Rex is keeping everlastingly at it, it is going to release a picture that will FLOOD YOUR BOX OFFICE! It is one of those pictures that will save you from sinking!

"Chasing the Rainbow"

RELEASED THURSDAY, OCT. 12th

A reel with a pot of gold at the end of it!

As the elephant said to the fly on leaving the ark, "Don't Push!" But you can afford to scramble for this picture!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

Turning out the famous brand at
573 ELEVENTH AVE.,
NEW YORK CITY

Sales Co. says Rex will always Reign, Bo!

A BITING BUSINESS

An Imp Comedy of a Real Estate Deal in Which Sharks Are Hoist by Their Own Petard

In "A Biting Business" the Imp Company has selected a comedy plot that is at once familiar—that of crooked deals in real estate. The picture has a novel and satisfactory finale, quite out of the ordinary, and a great comedy situation. An aged bookkeeper, with a large family, dreams of the time when he will be able to give his loved ones an outing, away from the congested city and its attendant discomforts. While he is pondering on the matter a sleek real estate dealer approaches him and dilates at some length on the beauties of suburban lots he is selling. The clerk is shown a beautiful plot of land and falls for the bait. He pays an installment in hand, which is his month's salary, and obligates himself to pay monthly. Hurrying home, he breaks the glad news to his wife. She does not take to it kindly as the butcher, the baker and several other tradesmen must be paid, but she is patient.

In due course of time the family take their lunch and journey out to see the lot, which is located in a dismal swamp and is worthless. The purchaser is in despair and tosses the deed into the water and they turn sorrowfully away. One of the men in the real estate deal takes possession of a swell bungalow in the vicinity of the marsh, and the mosquitoes make life miserable for him. The pests emanate from the swamp where the worthless lots were sold. He is told that in order to rid himself of the pestiferous insects the lower lands must be drained and filled. In company with the shark who sold the lots they visit the site and look the ground over, discussing the project. The bookkeeper hurriedly fishes up the deed he has destroyed and sells his lot for a fabulous price.

Honolulu, T. H.—Ye Liberty Aumsement Company will erect a motion picture and vaudeville theater at the corner of Nuuanu and Chaplain streets; capacity 1,600.

Houston, Tex.—The Elks are erecting a new theater at Fourth and Austin streets, to cost $30,000.

Savannah, Ga.—Savannah Picture Play Company; capital $8,000. A. S. Guckenheimer and Jake Schrameck.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A new moving picture theater will be erected at National avenue and Thirty-first avenue, to cost $10,000.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Princess Amusement Company, capital $60,000. T. J. Nance, H. G. Hill and W. P. Ready, proprietors.

A HUMAN SACRIFICE

A Reliance Production

Each week brings something of exceptional interest in the world of films. Every attempt made to reproduce a great subject is the herald of something better. Wednesday, the 11th, is to be release day of a Reliance film, which bespeaks weeks of preparation and hours of thought previous to the actual work of rehearsal and final taking of the picture. One can plainly see the brain-tired director, pouring over books containing the life and customs of the early Egyptians, delving among tales of mythology, conceiving designs for costumes, scenery, etc., preparatory to the launching forth upon the market of a very remarkable film.

There may be many a trifling point which may have been overlooked and which the director would no doubt gladly rectify, could he but have the chance to criticise his work on the screen, and as with the work of an artist painter, retouch the little defects which may have occurred. The attacking of so stupendous a theme, where the stage setting and costuming is of ancient design and costly; where to keep entirely away from the modern in figure, color, action and atmosphere must of necessity be carefully looked after, is most commendable, and though the work accomplished is marvellously good, it is not to be expected that so stupendous a subject could be brought to its completion without a single faulty detail. But we are not here to criticize, and we only want to say that we are proud to number the Reliance among Independent manufacturers, we are proud to draw the attention of the public to a film of such excellence coming from Independent ranks.

The story is drawn around "the Egyptian Rameses and the lovely Amebi." The Egyptians are clamoring for water and the overflow of the Nile. Public prayer is offered; the image of the Goddess Isis is carried through the streets. After conference in the Temple of Isis the high priests come forth to tell the people that Isis has demanded as a sacrifice one of Egypt's fairest virgins, whereupon there is an assemblage of virgins called, from amongst whom is chosen the beautiful Amebi. There is the scene where the terror-stricken maiden and the grief-stricken lover, Rameses, are separated, and later on the scene of the rescue, which is but partially accomplished. Then comes the scene on the banks of the River Nile, which is very realistic, and where beneath the gaze of hundreds of Egyptians the maiden is consigned to the cruel waters.

We hope that not only the Reliance, but other Independent companies will continue to advance as they are most certainly doing at a breakneck speed, and that their choice of theme and quality of work will not only equal but surpass anything that they have yet attempted.

THE SALES COMPANY'S EMPLOYEES' BALL

This Is the Pillow You Get With Your $1.00 Ticket

The Sales Company's Employees' ball is coming closer and closer. Things are getting interesting and there is a low monotone of pleasurable excitement already filling the air. Wherever you go among manufacturers, exhibitors, employees and their friends, you hear the oft repeated question, "Are you going on the 14th?" with the decisive answer, "Sure I'm going. What do you think?"

The accompanying illustration shows the artistically designed pillow which is to be given away with each ticket, the price of which is only $1.00. Just think of it! And a good time thrown in as well. The good time will be one of the inevitable things—it just can't be avoided. It will come to you whether you are looking for it or not.

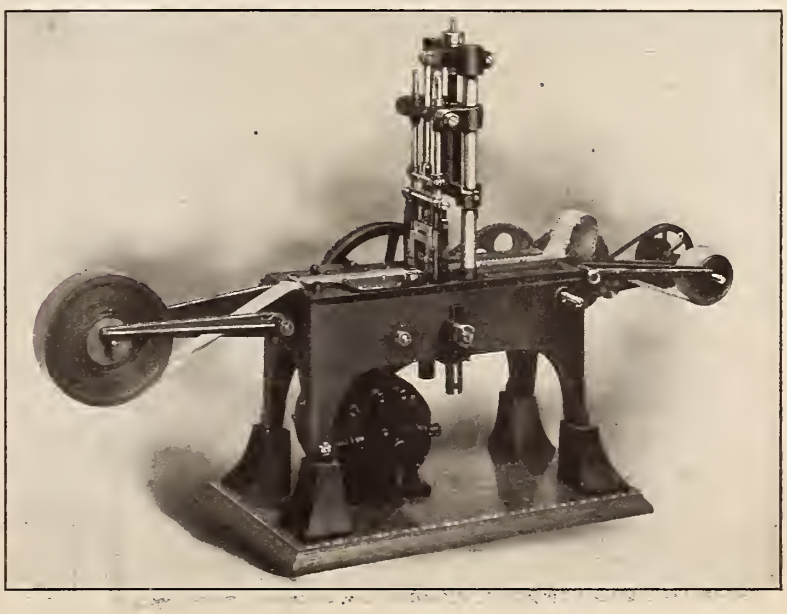
The advertising space in the programme is almost completely sold out, and those desiring to publish the excellency of their goods among the gay throng which will be assembled on October 14th at Alhambra Hall, 126th street and Seventh avenue, must be up and doing—getting together the best material they have for advertisement in this programme. It will not only be worth the money, but it helps along a jollification, a reunion, an evening's respite from the ennui of humdrum business life. We're all going, so tune up your feet and make you ready for the merry dance.

THE CHRONIK MICRO-METRIC ADJUSTABLE PERFORATOR

Messrs. Chronik Brothers, of Gold street, New York, have brought out a film perforator which is illustrated herewith. It is an instrument that is steady, certain, and may be made absolutely correct for any perforation needed. It is adjustable to various perforations, ranging from sixty to seventy perforations per foot, but the correct perforation is sixty-four per foot, and, in our opinion, should never be deviated from. We have watched the building of this machine from its inception in the brains of the Chronik Brothers. A diagram was shown us, then the model, and then the perfected machine, and several manufacturers on our recommendation are using this machine to-day, and, as far as we can gather, they are more than pleased with the results obtained in perfect steadiness of their pictures on the screen.

The inventors claim for the machine accuracy, speed, and ease of operation. It is provived with a novel and safe device in accordance with the dies and punctures by which the film is universally advanced step by step, and such a use of this method makes it the only one possible for producing steady pictures. One great point to note in this machine is that it allows the films to pass cleanly, smoothly and visibly under the eyes of the operator. This is a sine qua non for reliable work, owing to the fact that seeing the film go through the machine makes mistakes impossible.

Another point to observe is that the emulsion on the film is kept entirely free from all the metallic parts of the perforator. We understand the machine will perforate 3,000 feet of film per day every day of the week. It is equipped with the General Electric Company's continuous service totally enclosed motor and hand power. We may say in conclusion that this machine is not an experiment. It is a practical, up-to-date machine embodying safe and rigidly tested mechanical principles that have demonstrated to us their worth and reliability, and as such we can fully recommend it to every manufacturer who desires to do away with the flicker upon the screen.



New York, N. Y.—Geo. W. Lederer and Harry H. Frazee are the ones who will erect the new theater at 220-228 West 48th street, to cost $225,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Smith will erect a new moving picture theater at 719-21 Tenth street south, to cost $9,500.

CHICAGO LETTER

Takito Ogawa & Company have already issued their catalog, which explains their unique system for the exhibitor to increase his business by giving out premiums. The price of admission necessarily regulates the value of the article to be given. When the admission is 5 cents the usual custom is to give a coupon, and upon presentation of a certain number of coupons the person receives a premium. For instance, say that with each admission you give a coupon valued at 2 cents and when the person has accumulated fifty of them they would be entitled to a premium valued at $1.00, but which would only cost the exhibitor about 50 cents. This plan would cost the exhibitor one cent on each admission, while the customer would be receiving 2 cents actual value. In this connection the exhibitor could use a nice variety of splendid premiums. This system serves to induce continued patronage.

When admission to a theater is 10 cents the same schemes as used for the 5-cent shows can be used by increasing the value of the coupon or article to be given. One plan which his become very popular with the 10-cent shows is to give a salt shaker at one show and then announce that the pepper shaker to match will be given at the next performance. A cup and saucer can be also used in this connection. This plan keeps the people coming and is especially good for this reacon.

There are numerous articles listed throughout the catalogue which can be used for souvenir purposes, being useful as well as ornamental. Even the children are not overlooked in this unique system.

Takito Ogawa & Co. state that the business is large in this special line as they reach the exhibitors all over the United States.

* * *

Mr. Biglow, of the American Theatrical Agency, states they are doing a tremendous business this year as they supply singers, pianists, etc., throughout almost the entire United States, booking as far east as Seneca Falls, N. Y., west as far as Cripple Creek, Col., south as far as Miami, Fla., north as far as Calgary, Alberta, Can. Mr. Bigelow is the originator of the plan of changing the singers each week. He furnishes 57 houses in Chicago and 25 in Milwaukee, where the singers are changed each week.

W. K.

Scoop for Thanhouser — Special Austin Flood Pictures

The heartrending scenes of suffering, horror and devastation wrought by the Austin flood, the most disastrous flood since the Johnstown, was filmed by the Thanhouser Company. As soon as the news of the breaking of the Bayless Dam was flashed across the country, the Thanhouser Company despatched a staff of camera men down to the seat of the calamity. The men were back Monday with 2,000 feet; 750 feet of the most remarkable of the pictures taken were used. By Monday evening prints were exhibited in the Thanhouser studio. This is one of the most remarkable feats recorded, and is an example of the enterprise and the working facilities of the Thanhouser Company.

The pictures graphically show the havoc that has been done and the chaos created by the sweeping of twenty-five feet of water over an entire city, washing away, with battering-ram force, blocks of houses, factories and trains of railway cars, and burying beneath its current more than one hundred lives.

The pictures also show the work of rescue, the clearing of the débris, and the state constabulary protecting property. They show the conditions of the streets and houses, and the bereaved people. The heroic work of rescue presents a striking picture of self-sacrifice. Laborers and townspeople bent on finding the bodies of friends or relatives, move about the destroyed town with ceaseless and indefatigable energy.

Many charitable folks have come to the rescue and their work in alleviating the suffering is a striking example of Amercan generosity.

WHO CAN REPLY?

New Zealand, June 11, 1911.

Gentlemen:

We run 218 shows in New Zealand and supply "tramps" with film also. I buy any film my competitors don't get and they want me to take it when it has been run a week or two.

Your English contemporaries supply a list (sample enclosed). Cannot you do the same? If not, kindly give me the names of the people who do the class of business of M. Baer & Co., in 'Frisco for preference. I take all the trade journals I can get, but think yours is by far the best. There is real art in some of the pictures you publish. I never miss an opportunity of showing them to others. Best wishes. M. SLATER.

Many of our advertisers can help this correspondent. We will furnish address on application.—Ed. Moving Picture News.

PLANT FOR KINEMACOLOR SOON TO BE UNDER CONSTRUCTION IN AMERICA

The engineer from the Urban plant in England is now on his way to America with plans for the Kinemacolor plant here, which will be built after the model of the Urban plant, and will, it is said, be the finest moving picture plant in America. Stock companies also will soon be formed in view of a speedy commencement of work. A Kinemacolor theater will be opened shortly in New York City, which will be after the style of the Scala in London.

The exact location of the new Kinemacolor plant has not yet been made known. Mechanics from the Urban plant in England will handle the work of erection and general equipment.

Southampton, L. I.—Col. Robert M. Thompson is considering the erection of a new opera house here.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

THE ENTIRE OUTPUT

Our purchases of film now include every good Independent subject made.

Are you desirous of securing Legitimate Film Service?

WRITE—WRITE NOW

We handle Motiograph and Powers machines and parts

Hon. Sir. Vis

ANTI-TRUST FILM COMPANY

128 W. Lake St., CHICAGO

Branch Office
Grand Rapids, Mich.

Branch Office
Minneapolis, Minn.

SPLASH!

We have purchased 100,000 Pink Label 5/8 x 6 Electro Carbons, and while they last they go at $2.25 per hundred, or $21.00 per thousand, cash with order. Here's your chance; stock up for the winter.

Swaab Film Service Co.

129 N. EIGHTH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

MOVING PICTURES IN FAIRYLAND.

By A. L. Barrett

Those who have studied the subject are fully convinced that the majority of the legends and fairy tales which abound in Europe and Asia have originated from actual facts at some more or less remote period. Asia has furnished a large number of these stories but as it is the various nationalities of Europe, principally, which combine to produce an American, the latter is naturally more interested in the legendary lore of that continent. Throughout Europe there is an abundance of legends dating from time immemorial, the origin of which are wrapped in as much obscurity as King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table, but which for generations have been and still are related by parents to their children and in many instances are known to have some actual facts as a foundation. Frequently these legends have deteriorated into nothing but fairy tales, and are so narrated to children, but where the facts warrant it, they are given as somewhat exaggerated stories of the deeds of some national hero or heroine, whose birthplace and real habitat may have been, indeed, lost in the course of ages, but whose actuality is none the less believed in. Legends are, in fact, nothing but young fairy tales, and if it is difficult to trace the origin of the former, how impossible to trace the latter? Both, however are as popular now as they were five hundred years ago, and although we know for example that King Arthur and his Knights never performed half the valorous deeds attributed to them, yet we like to read the story, and there is ground for believing that such a king and knights really existed at some remote period, for this legend was handed down from generation to generation in exactly the same manner as countless others were before reading became an everyday accomplishment. Throughout northern Europe at least, and doubtless in other countries, it was customary for the children of the wealthy, and a great many children of the poorer classes, if they had the ability, to memorize the tales of some redoubted ancestors or heroes, and either to recite or sing these stories for the edification or amusement of the assembled company, the same as we sing or recite to-day, but with this difference, that these "pieces" were learned with a purpose in view, i. e to perpetuate the history of a race, at a time when all other means were difficult or unattainable. Of course, with the lapse of time, modifications or exaggeration caused these stories to lose their original character and the final result would naturally be, very frequently—a fairy tale. However, this did not diminish their popularity and they were dramatized for the benefit of a very appreciative public. The present day conception of this in Germany is the Märchen Pantomien Vorstellung and some of the favorites are the story of Snow Drop, Red Riding Hood and Cinderella. In Switzerland it is practically the same. In England the story of Jack the Giant Killer is always a favorite with British boys from five to fifteen years of age, who never tire of witnessing the performances of the youth who slew, with such admirable nonchalance, a string of giants that no mortal had ever been able to approach without paying for his boldness with his life. The Christmas pantomime of England is a time-honored institution, and at this season any fairy tale is likely to be staged, but Beauty and the Beast, Puss in Boots, Sinbad the Sailor and Jack and the Beanstalk are the most popular. The prime favorites, however, are Cinderella and Jack the Giant Killer. After the performance, a beautiful transformation scene is effected, representing fairyland, and a very amusing farce in which Harlequin, Columbine, the Clown, Old Pantaloon, policemen and a nursegirl with a baby carriage inhabited by a much-enduring baby, are the principal characters.

In many European countries, pantomimes are a special feature of the Christmas season and no one of the theater-going public would think of missing the Christmas performances on any account. The nearest approach to it in this country, however, is in the German theaters, where Cinderella has been given, but this is essentially a German performance, written in German and presented by Germans to Germans. It is highly appreciated by the German element in this country, but being locked in its own language, cannot naturally be of any interest to the general public. The Christmas pantomime, in fact, is an unknown quantity in the United States, but as people are the same the world over, the reason for this is somewhat hard to elucidate. It is true, there is no native American fairy lore, but American children like fairy tales as well as the children of any part of Europe—they are none the less popular because they did not happen to originate in New York or St. Louis. It has not as yet occurred to American managers that such a specialty during the Christmas holidays would pay but it undoubtedly would do so, for fairy tales give great opportunities for beautiful effects and would prove very attractive to the children, and for the grown-up people, they would at least have the charm of novelty, and besides, as they would only be given at Christmas, would have to be seen at that time or not for another year. It is quite evident as yet that the theatrical world has not awakened to its opportunities in this field and it is just here that the moving pictures could step in and have virtually absolutely no opposition. The Pied Piper of Hamelin has proved popular, why not, therefore, the story of Snow Drop, Cinderella, The Sleeping Beauty, Jack the Giant Killer and all the other fairy tales that children love, and have these films advertised for every afternoon and possibly twice a week in the evenings during the Christmas holidays. It would fill the picture playhouses with children as well as their parents, and in those localities where they are permitted to enter without an older person, no one could object to their children seeing a dramatized fairy tale. Few children would be likely to resist a program which embraced Cinderella, Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp, Jack the Giant Killer, Red Riding Hood, Dick Whittington, although the latter is essentially a true story, and as the crême de la crême of the performance, the true story and some of the travels of Santa Claus. Christmas is essentially the children's season when fairy tales are especially welcome, and any moving picture manager who could offer a program in which fairies, beautiful princesses, elves, giants, gnomes and other inhabitants of fairyland played a prominent part would have the chief patronage of any section as long as this fascinating program continued, i.e., until the Christmas holidays were over. Such a manager would also have established an enviable reputation with the parents of the community. The restricted period in which these performances would be presented would attract large numbers, and the type of plays would aid considerably in breaking down the barriers of prejudice which still exist in many minds against the moving pictures. A Christmas program of the above in kinemacolor would be the center of attraction for an immense area.

The Nestor Film Company, not content with the long string of excellent dramatic talent it has developed, is on the still hunt for more. A number of new players have just been added, among whom Miss Dorothy Davenport and Miss Eugenie Forde stand pre-eminent.

Miss Davenport, though still in her teens, is known throughout the theatrical and film world as one of its brightest stars. She belongs to the famous Davenport family, her father being the favorite actor, Harry Davenport; her aunt was the gifted actress, Fanny Davenport; and her grandfather the renowned tragedian, E. L. Davenport. Miss Davenport's work to date points unwaveringly to a most brilliant future. She is to play leads with the Nestor Eastern Company, under the masterful direction of Thomas Ricketts, who promises great things for the talented young lady and for the enterprising Nestor Company.

Miss Eugenie Forde is an actress of exceptional ability, whose long and varied theatrical experience has been one continuous success. She is a daring rider, an expert swimmer, and excels in all manner of athletics. Milton H. Fahrney, the well-known director of the Nestor Western Company, says that, in Miss Forde, he has captured a player of the highest rank, who is sure to gain immediate prominence in the film field.

GET A REP

LATEST FROM LONDON

8 Sherwood St., W.

I thought we should have a visit from Mr. Aitken, of the Western Import Company, before long, and sure enough, "R. E." turned up smiling on the Oceanic Saturday last, with the usual good things in his pockets and the information that "H. E.," his brother, had a hand in getting another producing concern. This latter, the Majestic Motion Picture Company, looks good from the information Mr. Aitken had to give us. The use of the Eclair Studio, of which we have heard a lot, should mean a lot to their subjects, as should the acquisition of "Little Mary," properly Miss Pickford, one of the most popular of moving picture actresses, and her husband, as the leading figures of the stock company; to say nothing of Cochrane, who seems to have made good everywhere he has been, Lubin and Imp particularly being said to be indebted to a considerable degree to his talents.

* * * *

There was one item in Mr. Aitkin's program which struck me as particularly sensible. He tells me the company will take two negatives of each subject and send one straight on to England, for release simultaneously with America. This not only meets the convenience of buyers here, who have to place their American orders in some cases where printing is done in the States seven weeks ahead, but it dishes the "duper" who occasionally gets films over ahead of the authorized agent. Also, of course, it means larger sales, for buyers are frequently finding room in their programs at the last moment for an extra subject.

* * * *

This week we have had a crop of "skit" subjects, with the theft of a famous picture "La Jaconde" from the Paris Louvre as the subject. Pathe, Pasquali and Nordisk have all provided their own solution of the crime. At the time of writing I have only seen the film by the second named, and it is more than a little ingenious and mirth provoking, but I would like to know what the detective in charge of the investigation thinks of the part he is made to play in the the film? Paris police officials seem to be used to figuring as targets for the humor of the comic artist and journalist and the film producer, and to regard it as part of the work they draw their money for. In Russia, Eclair, Gaumont and Lux would probably find themselves in chokee on a charge of insulting the deputy of the police.

* * * *

Always quick to see an opening for a special subject of topical interest, Gaumont's got on the track of Burgess, hero of the Channel swim, very soon after he got out of the water —or so I assume from the announcement of a special film, "How I Swam the Channel," posed by Burgess, in which that fine example of the best type of British athlete gives illustrations of his methods. The film should go, for Gaumont always does these things well, but what an ironic circumstance it is that no picture has been secured of the actual swim!

* * *

Dozens of cinematographers must, at one time or another, have accompanied one or other of the channel swimmers, suffered grievously from sickness in the interests of the expectant public—and been forced to disappoint the latter, after all. Mr. Smith, of Barker's, was, I believe, out with both Burgess and Wolffe years ago in the interests of Mr. R. W. Paul, and, like the other, probably gave it up at last with the idea that the feat would never be accomplished. Disappointments like this keep the picture man from being too well satisfied with himself.

* * * *

Look out for a film as good or better, shortly, than that which Will G. Barker took some months ago of Sir Herbert Tree in "Henry VIII." We're only at the beginning of the "leading actor" film boom.

* * * *

A good time for the producer of plot film, the summer does not appeal much to the topical producer in a business way. There are topicals to be taken in the summer (though not unseldom there is no summer to take them in, paradoxical as it may appear) but the topical man's harvest is chiefly reaped between the end of September and the beginning of May. After the Derby, at latest, topicals slack off. For one thing, there is not so much to take in the ordinary way, and for another the exhibtor hasn't got so much money to spend for special attractions. The football season provides a lot of work for such firms as Barker, B. & C., Gaumont and Warwick, for apart from films of the big matches, for which there is a huge demand (the Cup Final film is probably the biggest seller in the year) there are numberless matches to be filmed privately, many shows making a regular Saturday night feature of a picture of the afternoon's match on the local ground. And a good paying feature it is.

B. A.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Franklin Theater at Fifty-second street and Girard avenue has been purchased by Leon T. Carpenter and J. Heiser Walraven.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.
Best advertising medium in North Europe.
Subscription 6 shillings.
Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

You deprive your audience of pleasure and yourself of money if you fail to show TWO YANKS EVERY WEEK

MONDAY

OCTOBER 16th

"THE LOST KERCHIEF"

A series of comical adventures that befell a charming young lady on pleasure bent.

Code Word "Kerchief"
TONED & TINTED

FRIDAY

OCTOBER 20th

"THE MAN WHO CAME BACK"

How a rich man's son "made good" after having tasted the dregs of a tramp's life.

Code Word "Came"
TONED & TINTED

YANKEE FILM CO.
344 EAST 32d ST. N. Y. CITY

GET A REP

A Girl and a Spy

CHAMP'S RELEASE FOR MONDAY, OCTOBER 16th, 1911

are the central figures about whom are woven a story of shot and shell, having a charming thread of love pervade the sombre seriousness of gruesome war.

TWO CHAMPS PER WEEK CONSTITUTE A PROGRAM

SHOW CHAMPS CONTINUALLY AND A CONTINUAL INFLUX OF GOOD THINGS FOR YOU WILL RESULT.

Circumstantial Evidence

CHAMP'S RELEASE FOR WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18th, 1911

The ranch foreman is on trial for taking a life. One of the jurymen, a bank cashier and a rival of the accused man in a love affair, confesses to the crime after moments of suspense and anxiety.

THAT WILL CALL BACK EVERY PATRON TO SEE MORE CHAMPS IN YOUR HOUSE

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro' Motion Picture Distributing And Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,
12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released during the week of October 9th by the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales

Monday, October 9

The Land Thieves.....American
National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley.....Champion
G. A. R. Parade.....Imp
The Sentinel's Sleep.....Imp
His Second Wife.....Yankee
Better Blind.....Eclair

Tuesday, October 10

The Pioneer's Mistake.....Bison
Thou Shalt Not Steal.....Powers
Large Lakes of Europe.....Powers
The Higher Law.....Thanhouser

Wednesday, October 11

What the Indians Did.....Champion
Let Us Smooth the Way.....Nestor
The Human Sacrifice.....Reliance
He Was a Millionaire.....Solax
The Little Chimney Sweeper.....Ambrosio

Thursday, October 12

The Cowboy and the Outlaw.....American
The Better Way.....Imp
Chasing a Rainbow.....Rex

Friday, October 13

Society Hobos.....Yankee
The Indian Rustlers.....Bison
The Tempter and Dan Cupid.....Thanhouser
His Mother's Hymn.....Solax
A Dog in a Coiner's Den.....Lux
Bill, Police Cyclist.....Lux

Saturday, October 14

Running Fawn's Chief.....Powers
A Narrow Escape.....Reliance
Secret of the Underground Passage.....Great Northern Tweedledum's Monkey.....Ambrosio
Tweedledum and One of His Tricks.....Ambrosio

"SUNLIGHT"

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

The box office is the pulse of the theatre. The profit or loss of your business depends on the flow of nickels and dimes through its window.

The public will patronize a good picture in preference to a poor one at the same price.

Ten new pleased patrons per day at 5c or five new patrons at 10c will within a year pay for a

"SUNLIGHT" SCREEN

How can you afford to be without one?

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co.
1100 Fisher Building CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

A VISIT TO THE SIMPLEX WORKS

After the interview with Mr. Rich G. Hollaman in our last issue, we were invited to inspect the factory of the Precision Machine Company, manufacturing the Simplex machine. On a previous visit they were occupying just one-half the floor, and now, owing to the large orders and the requirements of the machine, they extend to the full floor, making a very elaborate complete factory. On the occasion of our visit everything was running like—we were going to say clockwork—but will say machinery.

SHOWING COMPLETE OUTFIT

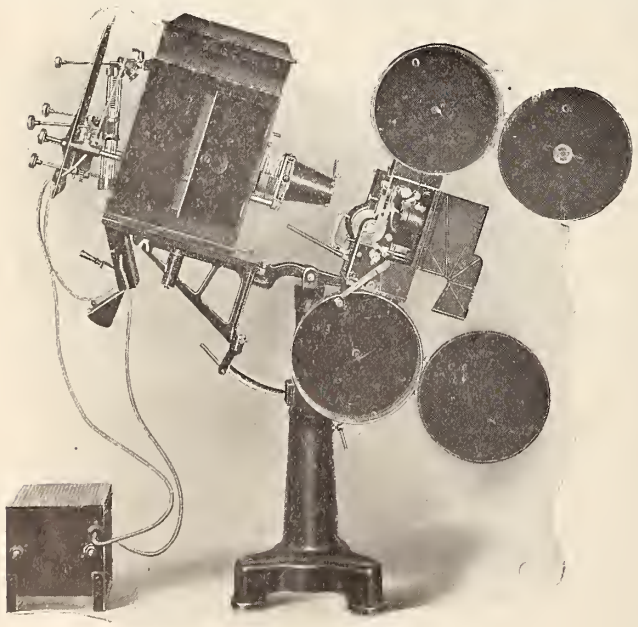
The Simplex has become known to our readers through the advertisements carried in the News, and in answer to numerous correspondents asking our opinion upon the same, we herewith illustrate the machine and cannot do better than take the words given to us by our old friend, Frank Cannock,



SHOWING THE LIMIT OF TILT

the inventor, and supplemented by the remarks of Mr. Hollaman.

Mr. Cannock stated:

"The building of the Simplex is the evolution of various projecting machines made from time to time by expert mechanical inventors, who have been practical operators since the birth of the motion picture art. With a practical knowledge of what is required by the public when a picture is thrown on the screen, thoroughly conversant with the demands of the different city departments, we offer to the operator the easiest to thread, most simple machine to operate, and at the same time guarantee absolute immunity from all fire risk by reason of the enclosure of operating mechanism and film, and the consequent freedom from dust and dirt settling on gears, etc."

SHOWING MAGAZINE THREADED AND FIREPROOF DOOR AND MAGAZINES OPEN

"I notice you have a special table for the machine."

"Yes, the table for the lamphouse is provided with a substantial swing movement which instantaneously brings the lamp into optical center either with the moving picture projection or stereopticon lenses, and the tilting arrangement, giving ample latitude, is governed by the moving of the support through the arc provided at the back of the stand."

REAR VIEW OF OUTFIT

"Have you any other claims for this stand?"

"Yes, the base, at its center, rests on a device by which the machine can be swung to right or left, and the center of gravity of this stand, together with its table support, and in conjunction with the head and lamphouse, owing to careful calculation provides a machine of perfect rigidity and freedom from all vibration."

"I notice in the machine that you have a different method to the usual way of mounting condensers that has been one of our special points."

"With the Simplex projector it is possible to get the very best conditions with the condensers, as the back mount is adjustable; when the right selection is made the convex sides should be as close together as possible in order to have a perfect foci. If the condensers are properly selected (taking advantage of our adjustable mount) the result will be a perfect white light all over the picture, entirely eliminating the objectionable blue spot which causes so much criticism of the operator."

SHOWING HEAD OF MACHINE WITH FIREPROOF COVERS REMOVED

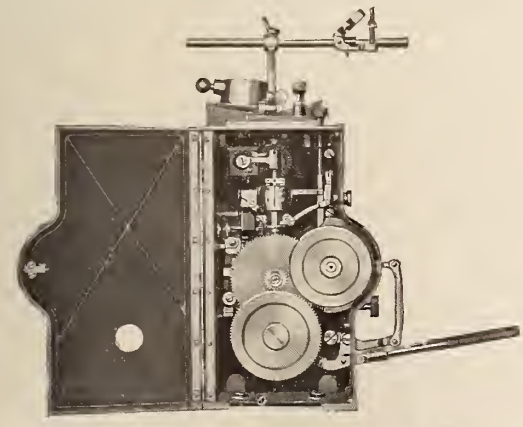
"How about the shutter arrangement?"

"I am very proud of this point; while the shutter is sent out approximately adjusted, it is not necessary for us to pay particular attention to this very important detail; there is a small knurled knob on the lamphouse side of the mechanism just below the automatic shutter. As soon as the picture is on the screen, if there is any perceptible ghost, it is only necessary to turn this knob to the right or left (with left hand) to bring the shutter into perfect alignment while the machine is in motion. This is a real boon to the inexperienced



REAR VIEW OF MECHANISM WITH DUSTPROOF DOOR OPEN

operator, also to the experienced and old-timers, for they can remember how often their show has been spoiled by not being able to control this delicate adjustment while the machine is in motion.

"Now, Mr. Saunders, I want to call your attention to another advantage to users of the Simplex—the film trap door. It often happens while running fresh films through a projecting machine, the emulsion sticks to the trap door springs in long streaks; every operator knows how difficult it is to remove the emulsion after it has caked hard. With the Simplex it is only necessary to push the knob that opens the film trap door, grip the door and lift it up to the stop, then pull forward away from the machine; there is now plenty of room to clean the trap. The door can be cleaned while being held in hand."

"Have you anything to say to the operator specially?"

"Yes; in introducing our machine to the trade, we desire to bring to the special attention of practical and experienced operators and high-class mechanics the fact that we absolutely guarantee all our statements contained herein, regarding the materials and workmanship employed in its manufacture."

"You certainly aimed at very high ideals when you constructed the Simplex. It is a beautiful machine and I think will gain the approbation of all interested in good mechanism, and I would like to bring out some special point that you claim."

FRONT VIEW OF HEAD WITH SHUTTER CASE REMOVED

"Certainly I can answer that question.

"Although we have to-day in the Simplex moving picture machine a model of the highest practicability and replete with examples of exclusive inventive genius, we realized that to obtain the unanimous endorsement of our claim that the Simplex is the peer of all motion picture machines, it was imperative that we construct it of the finest materials, with the aid of the highest grade machinery and employment of the best mechanical skill, regardless of cost.

"This policy we have carried out in our projector, thus eliminating the annoyance and costly expenses due to breakages and constant general repairs which so many owners of machines have experienced hitherto."

"I think that is about all for the present, but have you any guarantee against breakages?"

"Yes, we give a guarantee for one year to furnish any part that may be needed or that may be accidentally broken. Further than that, we agree to refund the purchase money if the machine is not satisfactory at the end of ten days. Can we do anything better or can we offer any fairer terms?"

"No, I think that covers practically the whole of the points and should commend itself to any purchaser."

Thanking Mr. Hollaman and Mr. Cannock, we wended our way back to the office, still carrying in our mind a full admiration of a beautiful machine.

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

CITY CUSTOMERS ARE ALL SATISFIED

NOW READY TO CATER TO OUT-OF-TOWN BUSINESS

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

OUR MUSIC PAGE

Conducted by C. W. Long

KENTUCKY writes: "I have been reading The Moving Picture News with much interest, especially the music department. I have been playing at the Crystal for almost two years, and during that time have made quite a collection of music; however, I am always on the lookout for something new, so I am going to ask you to please name me some music for Chinese, Oriental, Mexican and Italian scenes.

Answer:—I am glad to note that the music department has been of service to you. Now, to answer your request for music suggestions. If you haven't any of the following numbers they are all good:

Chinese:—"Fan Tan" (Anthony); "Ching-a-ling-a-loo" (Denni); "Kwang Hsu" (Lincke); "Chinese Serenade" (Puerner); "A Mandarin's Courtship," "In Pekin" (Lenaire).

Oriental:—"Salome," "Vision of Salome," "Salambo," "Omar," "The Caravan," "The Sultan" (Turkish march).

Mexican:—"Manzanello," "La Paloma," "Benita," "Mexicanos al Grito do Guerra," "Noche Cubana," "Senora" (Spanish waltz).

Italian:—"Maria, Mari," "O Sole Mio," "Santa Lucia," "Ciribiribin," "Luocchi Affatturati," "Funiculi Funicula," and you can also at many times use the Italian character songs that are issued, such as "Sweet Italian Love," etc.

A. C. M. writes: "I seem to rely so much on the music department of the News that I hardly see how I managed to get along without it, so I am again writing you for assistance.

"We are soon to have the Thanhouser film, 'Romeo and Juliet,' and as the Thanhouser people passed up a fine chance to issue special music for this picture and send out no hints as to its musical nature, I am at a loss as to what to play. Will you give me some idea as to the music you would consider appropriate for this picture?"

Answer:—I agree fully with you when you say that the Thanhouser people passed up a mighty good chance to issue special music—the picture deserves it—as it is a fine production.

The music mentioned in the suggestions are not to be taken as the only music that can be played for this picture, but as the most practical, inasmuch as you are very apt to have all of it, or music of a similar nature, so that it will be easy to substitute for the ones you do not have.

ROMEO AND JULIET (Thanhouser)

Part I

1. Allegretto until sub-title: "Capulet and Montague."
2. Heavy until combat, then—
3. Agitato until the end of struggle.
4. Gavotte until "Romeo is persuaded."
5. Allegretto until "Romeo and Juliet meet."
6. Waltz until they form for dance, then—
7. Minuet until dancers exit, then—
8. Les Sylvains until "His name is Romeo," then—
9. Valse Lento until "But soft—what light through yonder window."
10. "Melody in F" until "Romeo entreats the good Friar, etc," then—
11. "Convent Bells" until "Juliet's old nurse acts as messenger."
12. "Dream of the Flowers" until change of scene.
13. Gavotte until "Then hie you hence."
14. Valso lento until "Holy church incorporate," then—
15. Religioso until garden scene, then—
16. Sentimental or light waltz.
17. Sentimental until finish.

Part II

1. Mysterious until next scene.
2. Agitato at duel until it stops, then—
3. Plaintive until second duel, then—
4. Agitato until end of scene.
5. Religioso all through scene.
6. Pathetic until "Juliet's father not knowing."
7. Waltz until Juliet is left alone with her father.
8. Frühlingsraucher (Rustle of Spring) until "Friar opens the door for her." ?
9. Semi-sacred until Juliet appears in the garden.
10. Plaintive until "Believing Juliet to be dead."
11. Pathetic until "Paris, who loved Juliet."
12. Ase's death (Peer Gynt Suite) till "Stop thy unhallowed toil."
13. Agitato p and f, according to action, then—
14. Plaintive until "The Friar learns that his letter to Romeo."
15. Mysterious until Juliet rises.
16. Plaintive until change of scene.
17. Mysterious until Friar enters tomb.
18. Minor plaintive until end.

The season is now just opening up, and it is time for the live manager to begin to advertise. Advertising is the secret of success in any business. The producer advertises his films in every possible manner, and at the same time furnishes facilities for the manager, and helps him in every possible manner, so while he is willing to help you, why don't you in turn help yourself? Use your papers, handbills, etc., and while you are at it don't forget to give your musicians a little notice; it won't cost much and makes them feel as though their services are worth while.

Don't forget our one-cent-a-word offer for musicians' ads who are in need of employment or managers who are in need of musicians.

BERTRAM ADLER

Bertram Adler, the alert publicity man for the Thanhouser Company, would have been out of the hospital by this time had it not been for a relapse which he suffered last week. He promptly rallied, however, and his recovery is now an assured fact.

Dame Rumor has been unusually busy of late coupling the names of Charles Simone, the popular publicity manager for the Nestor Company, and Madame Simone, the great French actress who is soon to make her début here. 'Tis said that the two are related, though Mr. Simone laughingly disclaims the relationship. There is another Mme. Simone, but that's another story.

The work at the new Nestor factory is progressing very rapidly, and it looks as if this large and up-to-date structure will be completed before the cold weather sets in.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Work will soon start on the theater which is to occupy the Plankington site.

FREE DAVID COPPERFIELD LITERATURE FURNISHED BY THANHOUSER

The demands for special literature and advertising matter were so insistent after the Romeo and Juliet releases that the Thanhouser Company felt called upon to publish in anticipation of an even greater demand for advertising matter after the David Copperfield production will make its appearance, on October 17, 24 and 31, a several thousand edition of an educational Herald.

This Herald, the Thanhouser Company will furnish to exhibitors free of charge. The exhibitors will be given as many copies as they feel they shall be able to use. The Herald is rather an elaborate affair and is so gotten up that it will make a splendid programme for patrons of the show.

The fact that this programme is given away free should not create the impression that the exhibitor can be unnecessarily wasteful and distribute the programmes haphazardly. These programmes were published at considerable expense to the manufacturer, and the exhibitor should use the copies he gets as though he pays for them.

GET A REP

THANHOUSER

FIRST ON THE SPOT

EXTRA! SPECIAL!

AUSTIN PENNSYL-VANIA FLOOD

LENGTH, 750 FEET

Every Foot a Graphic Picture of the Calamity

READY FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT

Thanhouser Company
New Rochelle, N. Y.

Wire your order to
Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.
111 East 14th St., New York City

A NEW MOVING PICTURE THEATER IN NEW YORK

Arnstein & Bock, the proprietors of the St. Nicholas Theater on St. Nicholas avenue between 180th and 181st streets, are just completing their new one thousand seating capacity theater at 181st street and Wadsworth avenue. This is to be one of the finest theaters of its kind devoted exclusively to high-class vaudeville and moving pictures. The residents of that section are anxiously awaiting the opening of this new theater, as the present patrons of the St. Nicholas Theater cannot all attend in one evening the present St. Nicholas Theater. Arnstein & Bock have only been in the moving picture business about two years, and a great deal of credit is due them for the rapid progress they have made as well as in the manner in which they conduct their theater.

SHAMROCK FILMS

The St. Louis Motion Picture Company are rapidly nearing the goal where the anxiety they have been laboring under for the past several weeks will be substituted by woeful disappointment, or joyful shouting. That the first mentioned condition is an improbability, and the latter will prevail, it is said, is almost an assured fact, for the several negatives they have shown promise beyond the question of doubt that their hopes for success will be more than realized.

In the seven weeks of activity, the work done in every department of the Shamrock's roster has been little short of phenomenal. The weather, too, has smiled upon their efforts, and the very elements seem to have collaborated, so to speak, with the company, for the light has been faultlessly superb, soft and mellow, without a glare to mar its effect. As their premier efforts have been confined to rural surroundings, wooded environment and green fields, the photography in the several prints already prepared is, it is said, perfect in the harmony of its coloring.

The subjects handled thus far range all the way from tense drama to farcical comedy.

One picture, a pastoral theme, employed more than one hundred people. It was pronounced a gem by several members of the local journals at a recent private exhibition.

While the St. Louis Company are prepared even now to announce their first release, they have decided to proceed with further caution along the same careful lines that have characterized their methods from the beginning. But it is promised that the coming month will be sufficient to give them no possible cause for anxiety as to the outcome.

Stockholm, Sweden, April 10, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture News,
30 West Thirteenth Street,
New York City.

Sir:

Replying to your esteemed favor of March 7, 1911, I am sorry to say that it is impossible to obtain any statistics in Sweden concerning the import of foreign films, as this kind of goods are included under "lithographic and photographic goods," as the case is in the United States.

There are a great many Biograph theaters in Stockholm as well as in the Swedish provinces, and I am certain there would be a good market for American-made films here.

If I can be of any further service to you, command me.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,
ERNEST L. HARRIS,
Consul-General.

A GIRL AND A SPY

An illustration of this stirring feature, released by the Champion on October 16th, adorns our front cover this week. It is a vivid film portraiture showing a story of love in the dire moments of warfare, midst the clash of arms and roar of guns; a love story that is presented in a pleasing manner, with a setting that is truly commendable and justly embellishing to the theme.

WANTED AT ONCE

Capable, honest, reliable, sober man to take management of a film manufacturing company. General office experience and good writer. Apply in person to the Editor, MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

28 APPLICATIONS ALREADY

We have not yet got the right man. Out-of-city readers, write.

FROM PEEP SHOW TO KINEMACOLOR

Cinematograph comes a bit easier to the tongue and pen of an old boy just entering—thank the good fairies!—his second childhood. But what jawbreakers for a snipsnap-shorthand nation of phone talkers! If we cut them down to K. McUller and Ci Graff our listener is lost. Now, as we are actually galloping back to happy childhood and its picture raptures, why not own up and chatter about them in the dear old lingo?

Yes, at this instant the ghosts of my wayback peep show thrills are setting my spinal marrow on the quiver. "'Ere ye har, my luvly darlins! Queen Wicktoria a-takin' ov 'er Bath chair hexercise in Buck-nam Pallis fer the gud ov 'er 'ealth! King Soliman a gitt'n ready fer to carve a kid inter pork chops—all alive! all alive O! till ye can 'ear the pore mother a-screechin'! Beautiful Bridget or the Bloody Murder in the Hold Red Barn! All alive, alive O! An' only a aypenny a peep!"

After the oration, bang! went our coffers and up rushed the bloodcurdles till our eyes saw nothing but crimson visions, that lasted all through the fearsome night. A penny went further in the good old days. So did the soul-moving pictures, for when the gifted caterer had exhibited his scenes right side up, he turned them top side down and thrilled us to screaming pitch with his description of what the new ones showed if we saw them aright. "What's this, please, sir?" "Sultan Morgon, wich he's called Blue Beard in the Bible, in the hact of beardin' the Lionesses' Den, or hotherwise it's Robison Caruso a-larkin' with the hanimiles in the Ark at Kalimazoo, or hanythink helse ye like, fer ye pays yer money an' takes yer ch'ice, my pretty dears! Now run away 'ome!"

Next came the Panorama, and it is simply true that in the way of artistic and realistic scene painting I recall nothing more charming and effective. The newest of our largest winter shows appears to be following in this line, with all the thousand inventions so familiar to us, almost over-poweringly so at times. Yet we can look back at the slow unrolling of some 50,000 feet of painted canvas from left to right, with wonder at how well they managed the actually setting sun and the actually rising moon and the real twinkling stars, as the Nautch girls danced on the banks of the Ganges with its rippling wavelets and the weird noises of the jungle made a diapason to the soft strains of Hindoo love songs and the queer thuds of the tom-toms.

And what of the magic lantern? Some of us date our new born genius for art, science, and wizardry to our sixth birthday gift of a genuine Arabian Nights' Aladdin lamp—made in Brummagen. All the merry household knew was that they had now to live in dread of A lad and a din and a Guy Fawkes lantern that threatened to ship them to heaven in a fiery aeroplane.

Our wizards of the Ci Graff and K. McUller temples of magic have all but flattened our bumps of wonder, worse luck. This is the forfeit we pay for the omniscience they are stuffing into what we flatter ourselves are our brain pans, but which, in candid intervals between films, we begin to realize are getting to be more like griddles for flapjacks. Nothing is wonderful any more. Except bench shows in Law vs. Justice Courts.

What I am impatient for is a mirrored moving picture of the wide-eyed audience. This I have seen, in the magic lantern days. And an exhibitor who showed the movement of his watch, all alive O, on the screen, till we couldn't stand the loudness of its ticking. Of course, it was immensely magnified. No doubt the exhibit of Noah's animals, hippos down to fleas, enjoying their Saturday night hot bath in the Ark, is common enough, but I don't happen to have seen or heard of it hereabouts. The man of science and I went a little country walk to the most stinky, stagnant ditch I knew of, and there we bottled a cocktail of it. When he put a drop or two in his tank slide, the menagerie of mammoths, monkeys and reptiles were taking life easy, on the screen. When they heard him telling us scandalous tales about them, they got mad, bumped and floundered around each other and then they took it in their heads to shoot up to the surface, for a breath of air to cool their rage. No, not for that reason; the heat of the lamp had been cooking them and as they were done they popped up, as to heaven, but they were corpses and sank to the bottom, as the lens reversed the slide.

I used to get as many children as the double parlors would hold, not to boil them, but to lay them out in rows on the carpet, while by means of a magic penny mirror I threw my views up on the ceiling. The animals wriggled and shrieked in their glee and probably would have fluttered up and stuck flat on the plaster screen if I had allowed them to laugh themselves to death. I never tried this audience device on grown-ups, so cannot advise it.

The Horrible House-Fly films delighted me beyond telling. My favorite entertainer, strongest of beasts, swiftest of birds, nimblest of clown acrobats, sportiest of game to hunt. Let us speak of a man as we find him. We don't photograph our fathers and brothers, mothers, sweethearts, and wives, in their least angelic occupations, do we? We daren't, that's flat. Then why do you gentlemen of the show-up profession lift the veil of secrecy when you fire your terrible lightning guns at our charmingest home companions, male and female alike, whatever they may be doing? Is it fair play? I looked, because it was my duty to the impresario who condescended to accept my dime, but I did not—because I would not—behold the six-legged, thousand-eyed, hair-springed, fairy-winged darlings gorging on rotten eels and then disgorging on the tip of the baby millionairess's nose, or in her eyes, ears, or mouth. The films said this was what the super-angel sprites were doing. I challenge the filmy accuser to the proof. Those flying marvels, seen aright, (I always make sure of seeing aright at shows I pay to see, especially if hats are the show), were just having an angel romp with the infant howler, as they love to do with his hairless parent. See the thing—his shiny roof—as the flies do and tell me honestly—could you, now could you—resist the temptation to a toboggan race from his crown to his nose tip? Hit one of your own size.

When the melodrama is over, the slapstick farce finished, the views and scenes of human life are ended, how nice it would be—perhaps it is, or has been—to have it known that a short glimpse into the realm of unfamiliar Nature will follow. A fixed time-table program and outside poster would be a valued kindness to more than one jaded brain. We are brain-muddled with the business worries of the day. We rush out for a—something—or a lunch, which don't lift the worry out, but mostly jams it farther down. It has its resurrection sooner or later.

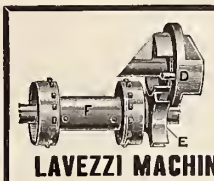
But let me chance to pass one of these Temples of High Wizardry, and my eye catches a line that tells me I can—just at that nick of time—see ten thousand true wonders of the bee, sailing off to market, sneaking home with stolen flour and sugar, emptying its swag bag in the kitchen, mixing the dough for its honey cake—why, I am transported into another and a better world, the realm of real faery, and my worry is lifted, dissolved, becomes a cloud in the sky, no longer black, but silvered and gilded by sunshine.

OLIVER LEIGH.

Richmond, Va.—Baltimore & Fowlkes will open a moving picture theater at 1229 Hull street, to be known as the Pastime Photoplay Theater.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Vaudeville Theater Company will erect a new theater at 5951 Easton avenue, to cost $35,000.

New York, N. Y.—Plans have been made for the construction of the new Atlantic Theater in the Bowery at Canal and Elizabeth streets, to cost $235,000.



100 POINTERS ON HOW TO REPAIR A MACHINE HEAD, 50c

Together with prices of Operators' Tools, Improved Stars, Cams, etc.
Fits the pocket. Cloth cover.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS, 2940 Herndon St., CHICAGO

GET A REP

GET A REP

From the Motion Picture
Distributing and Sales Company

THE MOVING PICTURE THEATER IN AUSTRALASIA—THE GREATER J. D. WILLIAMS AMUSEMENT CO., LTD.

By Margaret I. MacDonald

I WAS somewhat disappointed to find that after all, Mr. J. D. Williams was not a Canadian. I had hoped to claim national kinship with him. However, my disappointment was somewhat appeased when he told me that he had spent many years in the Canadian west—in Winnipeg and Vancouver. In fact, Mr.

MR. J. D. WILLIAMS

Williams had an extensive circuit of theaters in the west before he was lured away in the interests of the photoplay, as he calls the moving picture, to the practically untraversed field of Australasia.

It was in Sydney that Mr. Williams made his first venture. The Colonial No. 1, on George street, Sydney, was soon found to be incompetent to handle the crowds of picture lovers who frequented it, and ere long like mushrooms sprung out of the ground, appear on the opposite side of the street, Colonial No. 2, and the Lyric. From the beginning at Sydney branched out other enterprises of the same kind, under the supervision, and management of the same firm, and there are still more to follow. Mr. Williams, who passed through New York on his way to Europe, has with him as one of his party an architect who will inspect and draw plans from the leading theaters in America and Europe, with a view to perfecting one concise and idealistic plan upon which will be built, in Australasia, some of the finest moving picture theaters in the world. The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Ltd., which has behind it a capital of some £200,000, is doing great things in the moving-picture world, and nothing more interesting can be imagined than a hearing of the plans and views of this company coming first-hand from the mouth of its founder.

"The American people do not know how to cater to the public as regards moving picture theaters," said Mr. Williams. "There is not sufficient or proper accommodation for the intelligent public provided in the moving picture theaters of America. In Cleveland is the only one that I have seen here that really is up to the mark," said he. "We started out with a different idea to what they have here, and that's what has made our business such a success. We have looked after the comfort of our patrons. We provide female ushers and attendants, also pleasant retiring rooms for the ladies. In one of our theaters we have a ladies' retiring room which cost us $3,000. It is all done up in blue—the chairs, settees, etc., are upholstered in blue leather. By providing such accommodation we get the patronage of the women and children—with which our houses are packed in the afternoons. We never allow anything that is in the least suggestive to be thrown upon the screen. In fact, if our outside agent should send us anything that, after being looked over by us on its arrival in Australia, should strike us as being not the thing to place before women and children, we cut it out altogether. We must be careful else the women and children patronage would soon diminish.

THE LYRIC THEATER

COLONIAL THEATRE, LTD., No. 2

"What kind of a screen do you use?" I asked.

"An aluminum screen."

"Whose make?" I continued.

"We make them ourselves," said Mr. Williams, "and our houses are all well lighted; in fact, I am making arrangements while here for some new electric lighting."

"What kind of machines do you use?" I questioned.

"We use the Powers machines," was the answer.

"Do you have vaudeville in your theaters?"

"No, we have nothing but moving pictures. I wouldn't have vaudeville in any of my theaters, it spoils the place. And if there happens to be a poor act come on, everyone is kicking about it, but if once in a while we have a picture that is not quite up to the usual, nobody says a word. We change our pictures twice a week, and they know that they will never be shown the same pictures over again."

"Do you show Independent or Trust pictures?" I asked.

"Oh, we show both, it's a free market there, you know; we mix them up in our programs—we show the best pictures of both Independent and Trust."

"Do you show any educational films? And how do you find the people like them?" I asked.

"Oh, yes, we show a lot of educational pictures, and the people like them; a great many of the Pathè scientific subjects are shown in our theaters. We choose our own subjects, you know; we don't have to take just anything that is sent to us."

"How about your music? Do you have orchestras?" I pursued.

"Oh, yes, we have in our theaters orchestras from eight to fifteen pieces; in the Crystal Palace at Melbourne we will have twenty pieces. We study the pictures and play music that is suited to each individual film: the music means a lot in a moving picture theater."

The seating capacity of the Crystal Palace will be in the neighborhood of 2,200. Most of the other theaters of the Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Ltd., have a seating capacity of from 1,200 to 1,500 people. Some of them are equipped with two and three galleries.

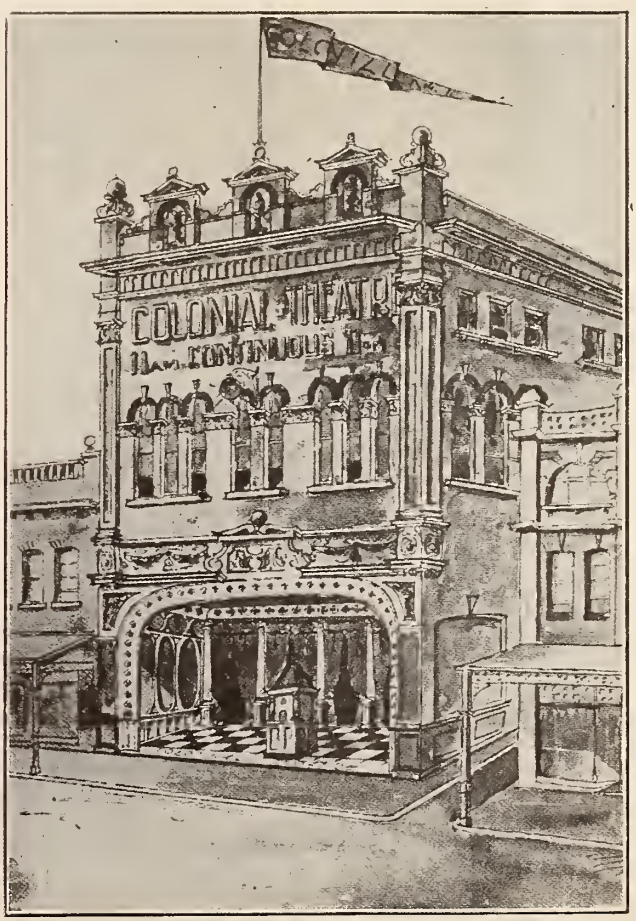
A short time ago an excellent Australian monthly, called "The Lone Hand," devoted some ten pages of its columns to the origin and work of this company. In speaking of its founder, Mr. J. D. Williams, it said: "He established a splendid and attractive entrance, with floods of light and music to attract attention in the busiest part of the city," pertaining to the Colonial in Sydney, "where it jutted like a rock into the ever-flowing human tide, and created a backwash that filled the theater twelve times a day." And again, "Splendid vestibules with marble steps, marble ticket boxes, and splendid doors, marble staircases with railings of burnished brass make an alluring bait."

"There is not a sufficient market to warrant the large manufacture of moving pictures in Australasia," said Mr. Williams. "We have one or two firms, but their goods are not up to the mark."

The gazettes of different manufacturing firms are advertised by the Williams Amusement Co.; it is surprising to see how the people watch for them, and come to see them. The same people are seen in our theaters each week.

It seems a pity that Australasia is not used more largely for scenes of moving pictures. Says "The Lone Hand" again, "In scenery alone Australasia has immense possibilities in the cinematographic line. The gorgeous splendor of the Gorse Valley, the Kanimbla Valley, and the Wolgan Rift in the Blue Mountains; the

(Continued on page 27)



THE COLONIAL THEATRE, LTD., No. 1

FROM THE OBSERVATORY

By G. F. Blaisdell

From California comes a complaint that to many must seem well founded. The superintendent of the Southern California Indian Reservation, W. H. Stanley, says that when the Indian visits the city he will spend his last cent on a moving picture show. Mr. Stanley says further that the Indian cannot understand why his race is always depicted in war paint, when, as a matter of fact, it is now engaged in the peaceful pursuit of farming.

The Indians complain of the "white man's injustice." Small wonder. It is rare in moving pictures to witness the portrayal of an Indian who seems to possess the common attributes of a human being. The ordinary thing is to see Indians represented always as burning and slaughtering; such a thing as revealed motive rarely appears.

Mr. Stanley well says: "We are trying to teach the Indian that he should be a good farmer and forget about being a warrior, and when he visits the city and sees nothing but the Indian depicted with gun or arrow in his hands instead of a hoe or rake he becomes sadly confused, and the better educated among the red men are deeply grieved."

The census for 1910 discloses more than 300,000 Indians. A prominent Indian authority expresses the conviction that never before were there so many Indians within the boundaries of what is now the United States. The race, in spite of the common belief, is not declining. The usual practice of representing the Indian as a murderer, and consequently showing the Indian of to-day the manner of man his forefathers were believed by the white men to be, is not conducive to the happiness or the reclamation of the red man. The Indian has suffered much from the cupidity of the white man. Let us now give to him the justice which for hundreds of years has been denied. If it be necessary to display the Indian as a murderer, display also the underlying motive; to do otherwise would be to ignore the historical fact.

The Indian of to-day has turned his back on the old ways. Common fairness demands that he be allowed to follow the paths of peace in peace and not subjected to the indignity of continually being held up to the wide world as being what he is not—and perhaps seldom was.

* * * *

Chicago boasts 556 moving picture houses. Over these is imposed a police censorship, which looks over seventy reels a week, which, of course, means the output of the licensed and the independent manufacturers. According to the Chicago Journal there are on an average a dozen eliminations or cut-outs each week. The basis of action of the police censors is the barring of any portrayal which, if enacted in life, would call for police interference. Within the last month there have been cut from films a tough concert hall scene, an Oriental dance, the shooting of a priest, likewise of a citizen, the poisoning, choking and stabbing of a man, a burglar at work, a hold-up, a safe robbery, a prize fight, a poisoning, a kidnapping, an abduction, a hanging and a fight with the police.

Question: Does this paternal supervision extend also to the "legitimate" stage?

If not, will someone kindly tell us why not?

* * * *

In Macon, Ga., the boy and girl followers of the "movies" are much exercised over the raising of the admission price from five to ten cents. Truly, to the juvenile mind such action creates an "intolerable condition;" it is little short of a calamity. The proprietors, however, say their general attendance is larger than ever.

* * * *

The City Council of Houston, Texas, has passed stringent laws looking to the safeguarding of moving picture patrons and has allowed but ten days in which proprietors may comply with the requirements under the penalty of closing the doors. After providing for the thorough fireproofing of projection booths, the law requires the construction of a ventilating pipe, not less than six inches in diameter, which shall be extended through the wall or ceiling of the booth to the outside of the building. The object is to provide an outlet for smoke in case of a fire in the booth. There are also rules for the automatic closing of the booth door and the projection opening, the size of the latter being limited to 12 by 12 inches.

Provision is made for the installation in the ticket office of a switch controlling the house lights. Operators must be at least 18 years of age. Picture shows abutting on one street are allowed but 1,500 feet for the installation of seats, which must be securely fastened, not more than seven in a row, and rows thirty inches apart. There shall be at least one aisle through the center of the hall, the minimum width of which shall be 4½ feet. Shows abutting on two streets are allowed seating space of 2,500 feet, or say, 50 by 50 feet. There shall be no steps or stairways at the exits or entrances. Galleries and balconies are barred, and no show shall be located above the ground floor. Each applicant for a permit must give a bond in the sum of $1,000 for compliance with these ordinances. The penalty for infraction of the law is to be not less than $10 or more than $200.

* * * *

Calvary Baptist Church, in Jersey City, employs a press representative, who is always busy. As a result of his efforts the statement has been made that the church attendance has been increased 500 per cent. The membership of the church at the time he began work is not stated, which, of course, is somewhat important. Motion pictures in the evenings of week days have formed an important part of the campaign to arouse interest in the work of the church.

* * * *

Under the leadership of the Exhibitors' League of Milwaukee, the picture show proprietors of Wisconsin have organized the Moving Picture League of Wisconsin and have elected Charles H. Phillips president. Other officers are Thomas F. Stanley and Charles W. Christianson, Racine, vice-presidents; John Clark, Sheboygan, secretary; Henry Klein, Milwaukee, treasurer; P. Germain, Milwaukee, sergeant at arms; directors, B. K. Fischer, O. Sprecher, Milwaukee; L. W. Anderson, Neenah, and E. W. Tiede, Burlington. A special meeting will be called next July to appoint eight delegates to the national convention of exhibitors in Chicago next August.

* * * *

The peace jubilee, under the management of the Gate City Guard, to be held at Atlanta October 9 to 12, will be filmed. The pictures will mark the debut on the screen of Atlanta.

* * * *

Pictures were recently made of a steamboat race off St. Louis. The contestants were the "Dubuque" and "Sidney," both of the Streckfus line. The crews of both boats were out to win.

Orchestra will please play "Steamboat Bill."

* * * *

Judge Broyles, of Atlanta, has dismissed the complaint against William Oldknow, charged with displaying the film, "The Bully and the Parson." The picture contained a glove contest, and the police contended that the "scrap" came under the law recently enacted for the purpose of debarring pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight. The judge decided it was not a prize fight, merely a representation of one.

* * * *

Picture show proprietors in Indianapolis have contributed funds to pay for fifty ice-boxes and a hundred ice pails to be given to poor families of the city during the summer by persons in charge of pure milk stations. Early in the summer it was found that ice-boxes for the preservation of milk would be of great benefit in homes in which there were small children. The boxes and pails were purchased and distributed to the families.

* * * *

New Jersey churchmen appealed to Governor Wilson to interfere with the presentation of the Jeffries-Johnson pictures at the state fair. The Governor complied.

* * * *

A jury in Atchison, Kan., trying a case against J. W. Chatburn, charged with running his picture show on Sunday, decided that Sunday theaters are a necessity and acquitted Chatburn.

* * * *

When Secretary of the Interior Fisher made his recent trip to look over the much discussed Controller Bay country a camera man was along. The pictures were made into three reels and are being shown on the Pacific Coast.

* * * *

The Department of Agriculture is co-operating in the production of films intended to show how to maintain and preserve macadam roads. The chief object is to demonstrate the saving qualities of oil, which prevents the disintegration of the roadbed.

* * * *

The audience at Proctor's 125th Street Theater, in this city, were amazed one evening recently on leaving the theater to find the sidewalk in front of the showhouse littered with burned dry goods. There had been a fire in the building, but owing to the good judgment displayed by Battalion Chief Lawlor in ordering closed the doors of the theaters and instructing his men to work quietly, the audience of two thousand knew nothing of the blaze.

Minneapolis picture men recently took steps to form a state organization. Twenty proprietors met and appointed a committee to draft constitution and by-laws. Later the constitution was adopted and officers were elected. The organization will be affiliated with the national association.

* * * *

Richard B. Oldcroftt, of the New York Board of Education, recently attempted to reduce the appropriation of $84,500 for free lectures to $66,900, which would mean the elimination of the moving picture feature of the board's program. The chairman insisted that the pictures were not a free show, but a necessary part of the board's educational plan. Oldcroftt was alone when the board passed the budget estimate.

* * * *

The Palmer Motion Picture Company, of New York City, has been incorporated, with a capital of $50,000. Incorporation papers of the Great Northern Manufacturing Company, $100,000 capital stock, of which $500 has been paid in, have been filed with the county clerk at Rochester, N. Y.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 4.—What is the difference between a five-ring circus, carrying three extra attractions, and a trained animal show? That proved to be one of the real funny questions of the week, and involved the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus, county officials, grand jury and the public generally, including the newspapers, in one of the merriest controversies that we have had sprung on us to relieve the monotony of the heated season. And, Mr. Editor, it is "some hot" here, believe me.

The Hagenbeck-Wallace combined shows played this city, but wisely pitched their tents just outside the city limits. They declined to parade, claiming that they did not have enough time to do so and get ready for the matinee, and that, of course, let them out of paying a city license for the use of the streets. Fine business! They went to the courthouse for the county license for the right to give the show. Said license is $100, with $50 for each side show. This attraction had three extra features of that kind. Did they pay the $250? Well, not so you could notice it. When the time came to produce the necessary amount the officials of the circus looked real indignant, opened up their best box of "salve," spread it all over, and in tones that contained a real sob of anguish declared:

"Why, gentlemen, we haven't a circus. Our attraction is merely a trained animal show."

"Well, if that is the case, then we will have to let you have a license for $60, for that is the amount that must be paid for an attraction of that kind."

"We are actually telling the truth and can prove it, too. See, here are the receipts for the same kind of a license granted us in Little Rock and Pine Bluff," declared the circus men, producing "the papers," and they got their license.

Prosecuting Attorney Wood learned of the transaction. Now, Judge Wood may be a good Christian gentleman, which he certainly is, but he knows a circus man when he sees one; also, likewise and notwithstanding, he knows, too, that this dear old county of Garland did not get what was coming to it, so he proceeded to increase the treasury and placed a bomb under the sheriff and county collector, instructing them to get the remaining $190 due from the circus.

A deputy sheriff tried to find the sheriff; the sheriff was hunting for the county collector; both were looking for Judge Farmer, the county judge, and in the intervening time the circus gave its show and moved on to the next town. The sheriff states that if he is instructed to follow the circus he will do so and return with the "kale," and until that return is made the query still remains unanswered; but it afforded a lot of fun for ye local editors, just the same. Furthermore, the show was great—one of the best of its kind that has ever been to Hot Springs.

My good friend Morrison—he of the nervy and pugnacious characteristics where trust domination is concerned—has also flopped to the Independent cause. Remember in my last letter I told of the Photo Play placing the toe of the hobbed-nail boot under the "Old General" and sending him sprawling into the street? Well, Morrison concluded that he would get rid of that $2 per week extra in the same manner, and he and the Photo Play are now delightfully engaged in showing the patrons of their respective houses what real "reel" pictures are like. These gentlemen are getting excellent service and their business has increased. They are featuring the "Flying A" Western films, of which no better comes out of the Trust factories, with a "Mutt and Jeff" feature every Wednesday; also the Imp, with the ever charming Little Mary, as well as Rex and the Bison product. In other words, they are making good right at the start and are well satisfied with the change.

Whittington Park has opened its Gaitor Farm and Marine Museum for the winter season, and it is one of the best and most novel attractions in the city. There arrived at this place during the week the greatest cargo of alligators, sea turtles and snakes, together with a priceless collection of stuffed animals of all kinds and many species of birds. I never saw so many live alligators at one time in all my life. There were over 500 of them and they ranged in size from the "babies" to one monster fourteen and one-half feet long—old enough to vote, isn't he—and now they are in their new pools, which are located only a short distance from the moving picture theater of the park.

Doc. Owens, manager of the park, engaged the services of four big "buck" negroes to carry the alligators inside. Of course, the jaws of the saurians were tightly lashed together with stout rope, but when they attempted to handle the big "'gaitor" he put up a battle royal. With a twist of his great tail he sent them sprawling in opposite directions, and when they attempted to catch him again, the alligator flattened the negroes up against the side of the building.

"Fo de love of Gawd!" cried one of them, "what hit me?"

It was necessary to have the negro examined by a physician, for the breath was knocked completely out of him.

George Walker has not as yet decided on the plans for his new theater, which was mentioned in this column two weeks ago, although he and his architects have been busy on the same all week. George tells me that when the doors of that picture house are thrown open Hot Springs will have one of the finest theaters of its kind, and that no expense will be spared to make it a palace in every sense of the word.

Had the pleasure this week of meeting my two old friends, Nic Hufford and Dell Chain, who were at the Princess the first three days. We had a fine "gab fest" of the good old days in Columbus, O., when these boys would "knock 'em off their seats" at the Princess, in that city, when they were on the Gus Sun time. They are still using the billing I gave them some three years ago, "The Colored Parson and the Minstrel Man." This was their first visit to Hot Springs and their act was the hit of an exceptionally strong bill.

One of the best pictures that Selig has sent to this city in many months arrived this week, "How Algy Captured a Wild Man," and it was the hit of both the Lyceum and Lyric houses. The Vitagraph monthly and the Pathe bulletin also came in for a great amount of favorable criticism, and Essanay gave us a hearty laugh in its "Dark Romance of a Tomato Can."

But, oh, those Independent films! "The Gun Man" and the "Claim Jumper" were excellent, American, and when I looked at them I recalled the unmerciful roasting I gave your initial reel over a year ago. I congratulate you, as should every lover of pictures who appreciates sincere effort on your part for the improvement, progress and high quality of your product to-day. The others have sure got to go some to equal those Western pictures. And you advertise, too, like a house afire. Keep it up, American, for your posters in this city are good for a big house any time they are put out.

Also want to pass a little bunch of violets to Nestor for the improvement that they are making. "Across the Divide" was immense and your "Mutt and Jeff" reels are looked for each Wednesday with anxious and most pleasant expectancy. Rex succeeded in giving us a treat in its masterful "Dagger and the Rose." That picture would keep Biograph itself guessing to surpass. It was the most thrilling, artistic acting that has appeared on a local curtain in months.

This town is making arrangements for its annual state fair, and as I mail this Hot Springs is getting into "its glad rags" in honor of this great exposition. Last season we had "Teddy, the Strenuous One," with us, and he came fresh from his conquest in the jungles. This year Governor Donaghey will do the honors. I wish that Brother Blaisdell were here now; also my "Chief," Mr. Saunders, but hope that both of them may find time to take a run out to these parts before the New Year comes around. Say, Brother Blaisdell, was that a promise or a threat?

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

Colorado Springs, Col.—The Colorado Amusement Company will establish a new moving picture house on Nevada avenue.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

The Oldest and Largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY AND SATISFACTION.

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of Finding Out How to Improve your Present Service and Increase your Daily Attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.
228 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
Telephone: 3790 Oxford

SPECIAL NOTICE

NON-BREAKABLE

Lantern Slides

ANNOUNCEMENT
ADVERTISING
LECTURE
MICROSCOPIC
NATURAL HISTORY

We make slides of all kinds

SLIDES

Artistic and beautifully colored

Don't be faked by would-be Original Inventors who claim, and are trying to manufacture non-breakable slides.

SEND FOR CATALOG.

MICA NON-BREAKABLE SLIDE CO.
2737 N. Croskey St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Pathé Weekly has been welcomed in the theaters in the Capital City. I understand that one or perhaps more of the Independent companies will shortly inaugurate a similar reel. If the motion picture industry keeps on it will make even the newspapers "look to their laurels." The next thing we are likely to hear is a fight between the reporter and the camera man as to who shall get the "scoop" on an important event. This will be something exciting. The Pathé Company took the procession of the Veiled Prophets recently in convention here.

* * * *

The Empress has been able to draw exceptional crowds recently in the initial presentation of "The Rose and the Dagger" and "The Crimes of Nero," the latter being retained for two days.

* * * *

Manager Moore, of the Moore Amusement Company, the Moore Sunday Concerts, the Plaza, and several other good things using motion pictures of the first quality from the Independent output, is exceptionally busy with fall arrangements. His full-page advertisement still continues to bring the financial returns and is like to be the cause of Tom Moore erecting a theater to his own fancy in the near future.

* * * *

The Washington Film Company is very much occupied these days changing from air domes to house theaters, as well as the opening of theaters which were closed during the summer months. The fact that the Independents have been issuing some "big" releases recently is causing something of a contest as to who shall have them first. This is an important "signpost of success."

* * * *

Two reels have been received from the Selig Company by the Office of Good Roads of the dust and durability tests made in the vicinity of Washington recently. Other reels will follow showing the work of this office in road building, rock testing, and the quarrying of material. This will form only one group of the various others that the Selig Company will take for the Agriculture Department, picturing the experiments and progressiveness of the National Government.

* * * *

Mr. Long, local manager of the E. M. F. automobiles, has recently returned from Detroit, where he figured in the motion pictures taken at the factory of that company. He speaks with enthusiasm of the "power of the motion picture" in various capacities of commerce and education. The reels taken in Detroit are already being used for advertising purposes by the branch houses of the Studebaker-E. M. F. plant with marked success.

Pine Grove, Pa.—A picture theater will be erected here on the Wheeler estate.

Palo Alto, Cal.—A new moving picture theater will be established here at a cost of $8,211.

Johnston, Pa.—The old First Presbyterian church on Main street will be remodeled into a theater.

Cleveland, O.—Rex Amusement Company; capital, $10,000; John Kreizl, Louis Ruzicka and Albert Kregal.

La Moni, Iowa.—The opera house to be erected here will be erected by J. H. Selden at a cost of $12,000.

Evansville, Ind.—Main Theatorium Company; capital $4,500. Isaac Hamburg and Philip Holz, proprietors.

Chicago, Ill.—A new theater will be erected at Lincoln and Fullerton avenue, at a cost of $75,000, by Nicholas Wetzel, Jr.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The moving picture theater at 349 East 114th street, was destroyed by fire; loss, $1,000; owned by Alfredo Concolo.

St. Louis, Mo.—The O. T. Crawford Theater Syndicate will erect a new theater to cost $25,000 at Delmar avenue and King's Highway.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Tern Amusement Company will erect a new moving picture theater at Third and Clarke streets, to cost $8,000.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"
IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE AIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,
PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.
28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.
Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI,
la, Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera di S Paolo) (Italy)
"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

RETAIL

"MACKIE HAS IT"

EVERYTHING IN MOVING PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXCEPT THE FILM.

SPECIAL—EDISON FILM CEMENT, 1 Lb. Bottle, $1.00

A REQUEST WILL BRING OUR NEW PRICE LIST, JUST ISSUED.

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 851-853 Broadway, Corner 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

WHOLESALE

(Continued from page 23)

splendor of the Jenolan and the Yarrangobilly cases in New South Wales; the Yarranjup in Western Australia; the elysian beauty of Hinchinbrooke Channel and Whitsunday Passage in Queensland; the uncanny wondrousness of the Hot Lake District in the North Island of New Zealand, and the cold and awful serenity of the icy lakes in the South Island, all make up a series of pictures the like of the world has never surpassed."

Mr. Williams is still at it. He is now starting, or making ready to start, an amusement park at Melbourne, something on the Coney Island order. Mr. Williams is a Virginian, born in Parkersburg, Virginia, and southerners may well be proud of him. Mr. Williams methods of doing business are good. He caters to an intellgent public and not to the riff-raff. "Vaudeville does not bring the best people to the moving picture theater, and that is another reason why I do not have it," said he.

The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Co., Ltd., also control several film exchanges in Australia and New Zealand. The officers of the company are as follows: J. D. Williams, managing director; W. J. Morgan, general manager, film department, and L. Phillips, treasurer.

Mr. Williams' trip to America and Europe is taken with a view to gaining a thorough insight into the workings of the moving picture business in these countries, and as I before said, to personally inspect the diversity of plans upon which the leading theaters of this part of the world are built. Upon Mr. Williams' return from Europe we hope to have some more interesting facts to disclose with regard to his work.

FIELD DAY SPORTS AT FORT RILEY, KAN.

In our last issue we made mention of Champion's release of Oct. 9th, entitled "The National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley, Kan. This film is the first release of a serial of Fort Riley maneuvers taken by the Champion. The photo that we gave space to last week, showing a boxing match between militiamen, is a scene from Champ's release of October 30th, entitled "Field Day Sports at Fort Riley, Kan.," and which is Serial No. 2 of the maneuvers. In order that the exhibitors keep informed of the correct order of releases, they should drop a line to the Champion Film Company at 12 East Fifteenth street, New York, requesting to be placed on the mailing list for release bulletins.

The H. A. Mackie Co., Inc., have just equipped the "P. J. Rainey-Follett with Gun and Camera in the Arctic" Company with a complete motion picture outfit which includes a Mackie special screen with knock-down frame, projecting machine, and everything necessary for a complete outfit.

They opened in New Haven on October 1st, and will tour the continent. Mackie's slogan, "Mackie Has It" is getting to be a by-word and they are in a position to supply everything the trade desires, except the film.

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7th

THE WHITE TULIP

A clean, side-splitting comedy. A farce of the most laughable character. INSIST on this film from your exchange. On the same reel,

BARCELONA

A travel film of extreme beauty; must be seen to be appreciated.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 14th

THE SECRET of the UNDERGROUND PASSAGE

A thrilling drama of the mines.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

How Moving Pictures of the American Trip of Admiral Togo, Japan's Great Sea Fighter Were Obtained

By Our "Roving Commissioner"

I WAS very much interested in the story of the vicissitudes met with by Mr. Jack Read, Jr., the energetic and persistent young American whose wit and diplomatic tactics won for him the right to enter sacred sanctums of our naval institution into which not a single camera fiend up to that time had been admitted. My readers will agree with me, I am sure, that it was a very clever piece of workmanship in the way of diplomatic foresight and manipulation; and were the pictures, as they are, most excellent from a photographic standpoint, and point of interest, he is to be highly commended for his persistence in following up with the moving picture camera the incidents of a most interesting and important event of modern history. I think it is an acknowledged fact that the visit of Admiral Togo to America, and his cordial and enthusiastic reception by the American people will go far toward establishing a feeling of warmth in the hearts of the Japanese people for America, as well as bringing the American people into closer touch and more thorough understanding with the Japanese naval department, by an association with its admiral, one of the greatest, if not the greatest, naval lights of the world to-day. And it is with pleasure that we contemplate the delight of the Japanese citizens when they are enabled to sit quietly in their theater chairs and view, with almost as vivid reality as if they had been there, the scenes depicting the hospitality with which the American public received their much loved admiral.

Mr. Read started out for Washington with the confidence of one who intends to win, though not without the nervous tremor attendant on exploitations of uncertain conclusion. Arrived in Washington, he made inquiry of Asst.-Sec'y. Hale as to whether it would be possible for him to get some moving pictures of Admiral Togo during his trip through the eastern part of the Union. He was at once discouraged, but on explaining the circumstances and presenting the advantages which the obtaining of the pictures would be, he was then told the Department of State would have no objections provided he could secure the consent of Admiral Togo. Nothing daunted, he sought permission to request a personal interview of the great admiral himself, which was granted. After laying the situation before Admiral Togo, explaining to him the great value the pictures would be in establishing not only a friendly feeling between Japan and America, but also in giving his fellow Japanese citizens an opportunity of viewing the different incidents of his trip in America, the admiral with quick intuition at once grasped the point, rewarding Mr. Read's diligence with his consent to have the moving picture camera follow in the wake of his train. The next almost insurmountable obstacle met with by the enterprising young man was the difficulty of getting inside the naval yards at Washington with his camera. Here, he was told, camera men of all classes were tabooed. However, by using the same arguments here, and the same diplomatic manner of presenting the situation, he at last secured permission to enter, and straightway glided placidly in with his camera man close at his heels, beneath the envious and astounded gaze of the scores of press photographers who were obliged to wait without and swallow their chagrin. And so Mr. Read followed up the various incidents of the trip with the same nervous energy and firmness of purpose to gain his point; Baltimore, Philadelphia, West Point, Niagara, and all the different points of interest which were visited by the admiral—Mr. Read and his camera man were never missing. A beautiful view of the whirlpool rapids at Niagara appears in one of the pictures; also another of the Horseshoe

1—ADM. TOGO AND GEN. GRANT AT GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, STANDING AT ATTENTION WHILE MARINE BAND PLAYED JAPANESE ANTHEM. 2—ADM. TOGO AND GEN. GRANT AT GOVERNOR'S ISLAND. 3—ADM. TOGO REVIEWING CADETS AT WEST POINT. 4—ADM. TOGO POSING IN FRONT OF HORSESHOE FALLS AT NIAGARA. 5—ADM. TOGO AND GEN. BARRY AND PARTY AT WEST POINT.

GET A REP

MR. JACK READ, JR.

Falls, where Admiral Togo posed alone with the falls as a background. This is to me a most impressive picture; one of the most powerful factors in the naval world apparently in silent communion with one of Nature's greatest and most useful phenomena. The review of the cadets at West Point by Admiral Togo is also very interesting; the impressive line of soldiery and the perfect march is a credit to our country, and we cannot help but feel pride swelling in our bosoms as we behold them in the picture "doing themselves proud" before one of the world's greatest military men. There is also a view in the navy yards at Brooklyn, and the groups taken on Governor's Island are very excellent and interesting. Here a very interesting group was photographed consisting of Admiral Togo, Gen. Grant, Mayor Gaynor, Admiral Leutze, and a number of the leading heads of the financial world. There is also another impressive scene where Admiral Togo and Gen. Grant posed before a background arranged with the Imperial flag of Japan, and the flag of our Union. There are many other scenes of interest in this set of pictures, including a scene in front of Gen Barry's home at West Point, the banquet given aboard the private yacht of Commandant Evans, view of the Baron Matsuki, friend of Admiral Togo, and one of the greatest financial heads of Japan, who, by the way, has shown extensive interest in the pictures of the Togo trip taken by Mr. Read, and whose support has been won by Mr. Read in his proposal to exhibit them in Japan.

These pictures will be shown in America as well as in Japan, although the object in taking them was to exhibit them in Japan for the edification of the Japanese people. This is one of the films which is deserving of a place in the proposed edifice for the preservation of the records in moving pictures, of the important events of the history of our country, the organization for the erection of which is about to be formed.

Mr. Read is entitled to the support and hearty good wishes of the public for the useful service which he has accorded it in this particular instance. It was a trying ordeal which may or may not net him what he expects, but at all events it was a worthy enterprise, and deserves the attention of those interested in the preservation of the records of history.

Chicago, Sept. 27, 1911.

Mr. Alfred H. Saunders,
30 West Thirteenth Street,
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

We enclose you herewith copy of a letter to-day received from Billo Brothers, Avoca, Iowa, which is additional evidence of the extent of the operations of the people who have been infringing upon our trade-mark, "Sunlight," in furthering the sale of curtains in the West.

We also enclose copy of our reply. We think it due to the exhibitors in general that you should give publicity to this information that we are sending you to protect them against imposition.

Kindly acknowledge receipt of this letter and state in what issue your comment upon it will appear.

Yours very truly,
"SUNLIGHT" METALLIC CLOTH CURTAIN CO.,
A. W. Wylie, Pres't.

Avoca, Iowa, Sept. 23, 1911.

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co.,
1101 Fisher Building,
Chicago.

Dear Sir:

I wish to inform you that we bought one of your curtains on Sept. 15 of one of your salesmen, Nat I. Brown. He said that the curtain would be shipped from St. Louis. He also told us that they would send us a slide and advertising matter for us to use, but up to the present time we have not heard from them.

Please let us hear from you in regard to this, and oblige,

Yours very truly,
BILLO BROTHERS. (Signed)

Chicago, Sept. 27, 1911.

Billo Brothers,
Avoça, Iowa.

Gentlemen:

We are in receipt of your letter of Sept. 23, and in response beg to inform you that Mr. Nat I. Brown is not in any way connected with our concern. We have no traveling salesmen in your territory.

Through the columns of the Moving Picture News, the Moving Picture World and Motography, we have for some time past endeavored to protect exhibitors against this impostor and his associates.

We have letters from many sources showing the imposition they are working upon exhibitors by claiming to sell our "Sunlight" screens.

Our "Sunlight" screens are never sold without our own special frame with its tightening device, and we have no traveling salesmen. Anyone offering screens claiming them to be "Sunlight" screens or claiming to represent us are frauds unless carrying unmistakable credentials. The word "Sunlight" is a registered trade-mark that we will fully protect.

Our factory is in Chicago. Our screens are shipped from this point and no screens are shipped except on the terms of our special contract, and no sales made except on this contract.

We hope that this letter will reach you in time to protect you. Have you any letters or order blanks or printed matter in which he used the word "Sunlight"?

Let us hear from you again, giving us any further detail with which you can supply us.

Yours very truly,
SUNLIGHT METALLIC CLOTH CURTAIN CO.

Pueblo, Col.—J. T. Burton, of Holly, has sold the Electric Theater at that place to Crook and Whitcomb, who will take possession.

Champaign, Ill.—H. H. Johnson, of Piqua, Ohio, is making arrangements to establish a picture theater in the Kariber Building.

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

THE EARLY LIFE OF DAVID COPPERFIELD

Thanhouser Release, October 17

Never has the story of an unfortunate early career been told as picturesquely and with as much rhetorical polish as the story of the Early Life of David Copperfield. Never has a story won the sympathies, the very hearts of its readers as the story of David's youthful hardships.

The humor and pathos which mingle freely with his early struggles intensify and hold the interest from the time he is born to the time he cuts loose from the bottling works.

The characters which influence this period of his life are his mother, Aunt Betsy, Peggotty, Mr. Murdstone, Ham, Em'ly, Uncle Dan, Steerforth and Mr. Creakle.

The pictures start with the time Aunt Betsy, an eccentric spinster, flattens her nose against the windowpane before she enters the Copperfield home, over which the stork is hovering. Aunt Betsy in anticipation of a birth had set her mind on a girl—because she abhors boys. When it is therefore announced that the stork has brought a boy she vanishes from the house "like a discontented fairy."

David's mother is a helpless young woman, impractical and unassertive. She married an elderly gentleman who dies before David is born. Eight years after David's birth she is flattered by the attentions of Edward Murdstone, who is ardent in his courtship because the widow's money is such a tantalizing incentive.

David shows his dislike for Mr. Murdstone. His mother marries, however, while he is absent on a trip with Peggotty to her brother's house at Yarmouth. Here he meets hearty fisher folk—among whom he finds little Em'ly.

With the marriage of his mother to Murdstone begins a series of hardships which finally end when his mother dies. After his mother's death Mr. Murdstone places him in a bottling factory, but David runs away and finds refuge with his Aunt Betsy.

THE SATYR AND THE LADY

Thanhouser Release, October 20

A young artist, working on a painting he called, "The Satyr and the Lady," was pleased with his woman model, but found that the lay figure Satyr did not meet with requirements. So he took a trip through New York's crowded East Side, where he knew he could find a model suited to the character of his work.

After a short trip through the congested market places of the Ghetto, the artist saw in the person of a shoe-string vendor, the very model he wanted. The peddler was glad to pose, because when told how much he would get found that "sitting still" was a much more remunerative occupation than hustling around with shoe-laces.

As he sat day after day at the feet of the beautiful woman, the peddler was impressed with her loveliness and to him she becomes the embodiment of all that is good and noble. As a matter of fact, the model is of the ordinary kind, pleasure-loving, good natured, charitable and without any particular high standards.

She is very kind to the "Satyr," although he is repulsive and ugly. When the picture is completed she gives him a rose, which he highly treasures and dreams over.

Some time after, the Satyr is on his deathbed. Realizing that his only child, a little girl, will be left without anyone to care for her, he pens a note to the "beautiful lady," telling her of his condition and asking her to take care of his daughter.

He sends his little girl with the note to the artist with a request that he forward it to the model—for the Satyr does not know where "the lady" lives. The artist comes with the note, when the apartments of the model ring with the hilarity and abandon of her friends. She reads the pitiful message and is moved. She leaves the guests, among whom the artist has remained, and goes to the shabby East Side tenement; but arrives too late. The Satyr is dead and his child is left alone in the world.

The model takes the child to her home. She finds her friends still dancing and enjoying themselves, so she puts them out with little ceremony, for all her thoughts are now for the child. After her guests have departed she tucks the little one in bed, and vows for the child's sake to lead a new and better life.

The artist, who has long admired the model, hides behind a curtain, and the new, beautiful, womanly qualities she shows, while caring for the child, completely win his heart. They are married, give up their so-called Bohemian life, and become useful, active members of society.

HE WAS A MILLIONAIRE

Solax Release, October 11

Mr. Amzi Wilson, a man of moderate circumstances, had become a harmless lunatic, and he thought he was a millionaire. He overheard his servants, Susan and Jenkins, making fun of him, and deciding to discharge them, he gave each a check for a large amount and told them to get out.

Wilson then takes a moonlight stroll, and thinking he has too much money for one man, he takes his check book along to see what he can do in the way of helping humanity. He goes to the pond in the park and fishes with bank checks for bait. He sees Pete, a gentleman of destiny, reclining on one of the park benches, and thinks him a good subject for his charity, so he gives Pete a check for a million dollars, telling him to be a good boy. Pete collapses but soon recovers, and thinking the check looks good he decides to use it. He visits a restaurant and orders a whole turkey; is about to eat when the proprietor decides it would be best to collect in advance. Pete hands him the check for a million, and of course gets thrown out. Next he tries a saloon, but fares the same fate.

In the meantime the lunatic is still distributing his imaginary wealth. His absence from home is discovered and a reward of one hundred dollars is offered for his return. The police get on the trail and soon have Pete in custody, thinking he is the lunatic. He escapes, however, in time to capture the real lunatic and get the reward.

HIS MOTHER'S HYMN

Solax Release, October 13

Paul Wellard is leaving home for the city. He goes to say good-bye to his mother and finds her at the organ singing her favorite hymn. For a while he prospers very well in the city, but finally gets in bad company, gambles, steals and loses his position.

Unable to secure another position he becomes desperate and seeing the opportunity he enters a house and is filling his pockets with valuable jewelry when he hears someone coming. He hides behind some drapery and sees a sweet faced old lady seat herself at the organ and play his mother's favorite hymn, "Lead Kindly Light." His heart is touched, and he gives up the stolen articles, and tells the old lady of his downfall and of his mother. She forgives him, tells him to start new again, and shows him a photo of her own wandering boy. The old lady gives Paul money and helps him secure a position. A year later a burglar enters Paul's home. Paul, hearing the noise, gets his revolver and catches the burglar in the act of taking money from his desk. The burglar attempts to knock the revolver from Paul's hand and a struggle takes place, during which a much-worn photo falls from the burglar's pocket. Paul's wife, hearing the noise, rushes into the room, gets the revolver and points it at the thief, while Paul picks up the photo and at once recognizes the face of his friend and benefactress. He tells the thief to take a chair and sits down by his side while he tells him of his dear old mother and how she is waiting for his return. The thief breaks down and promises to give up his wickedness. The next day there is a happy reunion of mother and son.

LET US SMOOTH THE WAY

Nestor Release, October 11

David and Martha Waldon had reached the evening of life, yet, despite the fact that David had worked steadily as head draftsman for over thirty years, they were still practically penniless. This was partly due to the couple's philanthropy and to Martha's ill health.

Had not the Columbia Construction Co. changed hands, all might have gone well, for they generally overlooked any error that his failing sight had caused. Not so the new manager, however, and as a consequence David was soon in search of new employment.

From place to place he went, receiving always the same reply, "too old." David's none too robust health unfitted him for steady manual labor, and his eyes for the work he could do. So within a year's time, not only the little they had saved, but every piece of furniture that could be spared had gone, while Martha, without proper medical aid or nourishment, lay hovering between life and death.

Almost desperate, David snatched up their only clock and hurried toward the pawnshop, but ere he could reach the door, two romping children ran against him—he fell, and the old timepiece lay scattered at his feet.

Officer Dolan was so moved by the old man's despair, that he straightway decided Martha must have the best of care. Alas—it was too late—her tired, patient spirit had passed to the Great Unknown—while David, whose benevolence had brought him to poverty, was hustled, with business-like promptness, off to the poor farm.

ROMANCE AND UPPERCUTS

Nestor Release, October 14

Alfred Kelcey and Clara Brooks had been betrothed since childhood, and now the long nourished hopes of the old-time friends and neighbors, the Kelceys and the Brookses, were about to materialize.

Jack, a dashing, flirtatious, caddish cousin of Alfred's, tires of the swift city life and goes to his country relations for an indefinite stay. Here is where the course of true love begins to zig-zag.

Jack's city ways, his dashing demeanor and his elaborate sartorial equipment are more than the sweet, guileless country maid can stand. Soon she finds herself thinking more of Jack and less of Alfred, and when the latter is unexpectedly called away Jack loses no time to win her. Things progress rapidly until Clara half-heartedly consents to elope before Alfred's

Her little sister, Dorothy, is a good observer, soon concludes that something is wrong and that Alfred's presence is urgently needed. She forthwith writes to him. He promptly answers the call and, after some romantic and "uppercuttic" incidents, the proposed elopement is quashed; Jack gets "his" in the proximity of a romantic rivulet, and Clara is gently escorted back home.

Later, forgiveness is asked for and gladly granted. With Jack summarily removed out of love's pathway, Alfred and his bride Clara face a future full of happiness.

MUTT AND JEFF AND THE BLACK HAND

Only two years in the land of the almighty dollar, and Mariangelo Pinozzi and his good wife, Francesca, are the happy owners of a busy fruit stand, which unfortunately comes under the notice of the Black Hand Society.

Unless Mariangelo contributes the large sum of money thrice asked by the dreaded bomb throwers, he and Francesca will journey forth to that undiscovered country whence no traveler ever returns. As time is nearly up, poor Pinozzi grows frantic with fear.

Mutt and Jeff approach. They have a whole dime to spend; they also have a well-developed case of "appetitis." The bananas look very inviting; moreover, they are very filling. With a "lead us to them" rush the hungry twain swoop upon the gesticulating Sicilian. As the bananas do the disappearing act, Mariangelo gets an inspiration.

Will Mutt and Jeff take charge of the fruit stand for one week, or two, or longer,—eat all the fruit they want and take all the receipts? Will they, huh? So, while Mr. and Mrs. Pinozzi scamper to safety, Mutt and Jeff take possession of the business.

The Black Hand cannot be trifled with; Mariangelo has not "come across" and the kidnappers get to work. Mutt and Jeff are soon captured and taken before the presiding bunch of crooks, who fail to find any resemblance between Mutt and Jeff and the Pinozzi couple. Peeved over this measly trick, they force "the long and the short of it" to join the "ranks." This is done with the aid of numerous stilettos acting as accelerators.

The police have been over active of late; why not blow up headquarters? Lots are drawn and the fatal slip of paper goes to Mutt. Luckily for him the chief of police has heard of this black hand meeting and sends out a number of his best men to corral the entire outfit.

After a nice mix-up, Mutt, Jeff and the black handers are taken to headquarters. Jeff is recognized as an old-time friend of the chief, who treats him to a good cigar, while poor Mutt goes to a dark dungeon because the tell-tale slip of paper is found on him. Alas! poor Mutt!

THE AWAKENING OF JOHN CLARK

Powers Release, October 21

John Clark is a ranch hand and Blue Feather an Indian maid. They have learned to love each other and decide to marry. Following the Indian custom, Clark goes to the camp to make a bargain for the hand of the girl. He offers a bag of gold to the chief, her father, who is satisfied with the amount and the pair are allowed to wed. They go to live in a log cabin and get along nicely until one day two Eastern women, a mother and her daughter, visit the ranch. Clark becomes interested and beats the other cowboys to the task of escorting the ladies about the ranch. The younger woman encourages the advances of Clark and before long there is a love affair on foot. Clark becomes infatuated and regrets his marriage to the Indian girl. Finally he comes home and tells her he is tired of her and advises her to go back to her people.

Blue Feather, heartbroken, does as she is told, whereat the Indians want to revenge the insult but the girl induces them to desist. Shortly afterward Clark is taken sick with typhoid fever and needs nursing badly. The two Eastern ladies come to the cabin, but when they learn that Clark is suffering from a contagious disease they do not care to enter. Blue Feather at the camp hears of Clark's illness and considers it her duty to go to him. She nurses him back to health and strength. While Clark is recovering the Eastern women visit him, but he realizes now that they are not true friends and bids them go. Blue Feather has proved her worth and brought about the awakening of John Clark.

THE LOST KERCHIEF

Yankee Release, October 16

Ned's persistency in attempting to return a lost handkerchief to a charming young lady in spite of attempts to ignore him, gets him into all sorts of trouble. He follows her from place to place and she continues to evade him, until she becomes tired of his persistency and has him driven away from a ferry boat, bodily thrown from a car, refused admission to the different amusement places at a summer resort, and finally has him arrested for annoying her.

He tries to explain to the judge and Mabel that he had merely tried to return her handkerchief. When asked to show the handkerchief he cannot find it, having placed it in the sweat band of his hat during the excitement, and forgotten all about it.

After being fined $50 he is freed and goes home a wiser man.

Upon reaching his home he finds his sister in conversation with the very young woman who had caused him all the trouble. Satisfactory explanations follow and the result is a happy ending to a day of mishaps.

THE MAN WHO CAME BACK

Yankee Release, October 20

A big, strong young American, the son of wealthy parents, instead of devoting his time to business and becoming a respected citizen, finds that a life of idleness and sport is more to his liking. Warnings and threats make no impression until the father, losing all patience, finally disowns him and drives him from the house.

He soon discovers that the dollar is his best friend, as persistent efforts to borrow money from his fellow members at an exclusive club results in a polite request for his resignation.

He falls lower and lower until finally he becomes a tramp. He becomes keenly aware of his condition when time and again he is driven from doorsteps or chased by dogs whose irate owners have no sympathy for tramps. Shunned by men, women and children in every walk of life, he becomes immune to all sense of feeling and sinks to the lowest levels.

A little girl's kindness in offering part of her food opens his eyes and when the little girl's sister reproves him for the life he is leading and tells him to become a man, new courage enters into his shrunken and stupefied existence and he promises to make another effort.

He comes to his father and pleads for another chance to make good. The yearnings of the boy's voice and his poor condition touches the father's heart and a reconciliation follows. With the picture of the young girl always before him the young man makes great strides in his business career and when he presents himself at the home of the young girl whose kind words gave him courage to start life anew, she does not recognize his identity. She admires his manly spirit in confessing that he is the former tramp and as their acquaintance lengthens she finds many other admirable traits in her handsome companion.

From admiration to love is but a short step, which both take with evident pleasure.

UNCLE PETE'S RUSE

Imp Release, October 16

How an aged colored man outwitted a squad of soldiers and saved his master makes a very entertaining story of the Civil War.

Captain Warren, of the Confederate Service, evades the pickets of the Union lines and almost takes his life in his hands to visit his young wife. He is greeted affectionately by her and the servants and is enjoying his stay when the house is surrounded by a number of Union soldiers, who have an intimation that he is in the house. He is thoroughly frightened and his wife is terrified.

Uncle Pete, an aged servitor, possessor of an abnormal amount of acumen, takes matters in his own hands, being the only cool and collected person on the premises. He takes in the situation and matches his wits against the vigilance of the soldiers.

Captain Warren is hustled upstairs by Uncle Pete and hastily placed in bed. The old negro procures paint and in a jiffy his master is made to resemble a man in the throes of an attack of smallpox. This done, the servant ushers in the soldiers with mock gravity after coaching Captain Warren. They rush to his bedside to be informed that he is near death's door with the malignant disease. They retreat rather precipitously to stand guard over the premises. This is a precaution which the negro had not reckoned on, but he is equal to the emergency and later announces that the captain is dead and solicits their aid at the funeral obsequies. Owing to the fact that no other help is near they consent.

Captain Warren, bearing all the appearance of a corpse, is placed in a hastily prepared casket. The lid is fastened down and the soldiers go to dig the grave. Uncle Pete becomes active and his master is taken out and some weights substituted. Solemnly the soldiers bear the supposed remains to the grave and the wife is disconsolate, believing that her husband is really dead, the scheme being so genuinely realistic.

The soldiers depart and she is overjoyed to find her husband alive and well. The Union soldiers have an inkling that they have been tricked and return and unearth the box to find its contents.

In the meantime Captain Warren has made good his escape and the colored man enjoys himself at the expense of the soldiers who were so cleverly tricked.

THE AGGRESSOR

Imp Release, October 19

A story of the mining country where the man who draws first has the law on his side.

Hank Denby, a miner, has a loving little wife but he is a brute and abuses her. She bears it patiently until one day when forbearance ceases to be a virtue. He goes out to his work after an unusually violent scene in which the wife is in tears as a consequence. She is all alone on the mountain but resolves to desert her husband to go anywhere to rid herself of the obnoxious presence of the husband.

She packs a few of her belongings, writes a note to Denby and is about to go out into the world when Phillip Baldwin, a prospector much older than she, comes into the cabin in search of food and drink. He is welcomed by the woman as he is kind. He looks about the cabin and notes her preparation for flight in surprise. On being questioned the girl-wife tells him of the ill treatment she has been subjected to and her decision to leave it all. He mildly tries to dissuade her to no avail. She is determined to leave and asks to be allowed to travel in his company. The big, rough fellow sees no impropriety in that and the woman is guiltless of any wrongdoing.

They leave the cabin, arrive at the tent of Baldwin and, in attempting to secure water for her, he falls over a cliff. She runs around the eminence and finds him.

In the meantime, the husband has returned home, read the note, takes the trail and follows the pair with the insane idea that some man has stolen the affections of his wife. He comes upon them just as his wife is trying to extricate Baldwin from his perilous position. He is about to kill him when the wife interferes. Denby takes Baldwin on his back and carries him unconscious to his cabin, where he nurses him back to health.

On being convalescent Baldwin leaves, but is followed by Denby to a rocky peak. Slapping Baldwin's face, he challenges him to a revolver duel. Baldwin is loath to fight, but is provoked, and back to back they start to walk apart. At the signal they turn and fire. Denby falls dead. His wife comes out and falls prostrate across his body.

Baldwin gazes on the woman for a time and then, not understanding, walks away—down the slope—leaving Mrs. Denby alone with her dead husband whom she had not loved in life.

A GIRL AND A SPY

Champion Release, October 16

Startling and unexpected situations are features of this story. Battle scenes and struggles there are that are far and away removed from that usually seen in war pictures. There is one great scene where the heavy and juvenile man are in a deadly struggle. The girl, the cause of it all, though innocently indeed, is an eye witness to it.

The old general, the girl's father, is in the foreground where he had just been carried, wounded, by his men. In the background a battle is raging with powder and ball, while the hand-to-hand conflict between those two bitter rivals is taking place, with the girl and the general looking on. But now for the story.

The hero is a spy, forced to be such by his superior officer. In Confederate garb, he meets and falls in love with a fair daughter of the South. In a certain battle or skirmish, he refuses to fire on his own people, and she, not knowing that he is a Federal, thinks him a coward and thus despises him.

From the moment he fell in love with the maiden, he had decided not to perform his despicable task, but to get back to his own side as soon as possible—that is,—to do only the duties which fall to a soldier's lot. His rival for the girl's hand has tried in various ways to be revenged for being ousted from his position as cavalier to the young lady, but without success. Then comes the great culminating scene to which reference has just been had.

The love incidents of the story have a prettiness about them that brings their own special appeal. On the whole no war story could be better devised to arouse human interest and enthusiasm than this one, the outcome of which we will not describe, owing to the surpassing beauty of conclusion.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

Champion Release, October 18

Two young men, friendly rivals for the hand of a sweet-faced Western girl, start forth to make, each, his respective fortune. In five years, one becomes a bank cashier, the other a ranch foreman. We see the cashier mingling in the swell clubs of the upper ten, living beyond his means to keep up to the style of his associates. Again we see him "caught short" in his accounts.

The foreman and the ranch owner start cityward to make a deposit of gold nuggets in the bank. The ranch owner meets the cashier who invites him to his swell club. The cashier fleeces the ranchman at cards out of a pile of greenbacks. The next night, the ranchman is ready for another fleecing, but is pursuaded not to go by his foreman. He gives the latter his roll and sends him home. He attends the club, but has nothing to lose. The cashier is disappointed, but shows by his manner he would run a big risk to get the ranch owner's wad.

In the meantime the foreman had started for home. If the money in his possession were only his, it would mean the possibility of his getting the woman he loves. The night is rainy so he dons his raincoat and cap.

At the club the cashier decides to leave after the ranch owner's departure and he too dons a raincoat and cap; later these men pass the same lonely spot. We see them, but can't tell which is the other. Shortly after the ranch owner falls a victim to the bullet of one of them, and the spectator is in ignorance as to who really committed the deed. But the foreman is arrested as the perpetrator of the crime. Then comes the court procedure, which is carried out in all its interesting formula to the minutest detail.

The cashier is one of the jurymen and out of the twelve men all except him stand for conviction. He finally confesses his crime. The foreman's name is freed from stigma, and this he shares with his sweet-faced Western girl.

A DOG IN A COINER'S DEN

Lux Release, October 13

Louis the newsboy has a pet dog and they are much attached to one another. Whilst strolling through the town they pick up a pocketbook, and discover that it belongs to a well-known gentleman. Louis returns the pocketbook to its owner, who presents him with the fabulous sum of 50 cents. Possessed of so much wealth, Louis orders a drink, but, much to his surprise, the waiter bends and twists his fifty cents into various shapes and forms, and finally refuses to serve him. Louis is naturally downhearted over the wreck of his hopes and his newly acquired fortune. However, luck will turn, says Louis to his dog Tray, and on they go again, thinking no more of the incident. Some days later Louis reads in the paper that the police are considerably perplexed by the circulation of counterfeit coins, the source of which they are unable to trace. This awakens dormant thoughts, and Louis sets off to the mansion of the gentleman with the worthless title, determined to investigate. Some time after Louis has hidden himself in the grounds of the mansion, the nobleman emerges from the house and drives off. Louis follows in his wake and traces him to a disused house on the bleak moor. Undaunted, Louis enters the house, and there falls into the hands of the coiner, for such the nobleman proves to be, and his gang, who bind Louis to a table and placing a keg of gunpowder by his side, light the fuse and depart. Fortunately they do not see Louis's old friend, dog Tray, who is getting anxious and endeavoring to get into the house also. Nearer and nearer creeps old dog Tray in his search for his friends, until at last he reaches his side, manages to bite the ropes that bind his master, and together they rush forth into the open air just as the powder explodes, and destroys all trace of the coiner's work. The witness, however, still lives and is soon at the police station where he gives the necessary information and receives a big reward for his services.

BILL, POLICE CYCLIST

A very amusing comedy, showing Bill filling the position of a police cyclist. In his capacity of a police cyclist he is a prominent figure in a wild and thrilling chase after a hooligan. The details of the chase are too "Billesque" to be described, but they culminate in a finale which is, in every way, worthy of the talented little comedian.

CHASING THE RAINBOW

Rex Release, October 12

We have all some time or other chased elusive will-o'-the-wisp, we have all pursued some phantom fantasy, we have all sought figurative pots of gold at the end of some imaginary rainbow; here is a tale of a tot who really sought an actual pot of real gold at the end of a sure-enough rainbow, and found—but wait!

A shabby room, a hovel, a morgue of hope, a mausoleum of joy, in which dwell only care and woe—and an invalid and her little daughter. There is no more medicine; no money to buy more. But the brave spirit of the child knows no daunt, and she determines to beg the druggist for more medicine. She braves the storm outside, wends her way to the drug store. But druggists are prosaic; there is little poetry or philanthropy in pharmarcy; the child's pitiful pleadings are in vain. Disheartened, she leaves the store and walks outside. Suddenly she sees in the sky a wonderful thing, a marvelous blending of radiant colors. She asks a passerby what it is, and he tells her it is a rainbow and that at the end of it is a large pot of gold. A pot of gold! Gold with which to buy medicine, lots of it, enough to cure her sick mother all at once! And the child sets out to find the gold that the golden colors lead to.

She comes to a place of many brilliant lights—here must be the entrance to the fairyland where she will find the gold. She mounts a flight of stairs, and timidly enters—paradise! For an angel's voice is singing, and heavenly music is playing, and other angels in wonderful gowns are sitting at tables, and bright stars are gleaming—or are they diamonds?—and a wonderful, celestial glare is over all. But a rough hand reaches suddenly out to seize her, and a gruff voice, a voice very unlike an angel's, tells her to leave the enchanted land; but a strong man's voice gives a command, and a beautiful angel's soft arms entwine about her little form, and a sweet voice questions and surprised ears listen to the child's strange, sad story. The actress on the roof garden learns the situation and—yes, actresses have hearts, big throbbing, tender hearts. A collection is made—the child gets her pot of gold. It means life for the sick mother, happiness for both—and happiness for those who gave as well.

JUST OFF THE PRESS—THE NEW
MADISON'S BUDGET No. 14
By far the best book of comedy material I have ever written. Contents include 20 sure-fire parodies, 11 great monologues, 10 fine acts for two males, 6 acts for male and female, a splendid minstrel first part, an original one-act comedy, also brand-new acts for quartettes and sister teams, besides an almost endless assortment of newest gags, jokes, sidewalk patter, etc., etc.
PRICE, ONE DOLLAR
MADISON'S BUDGET No. 14 is sold with the guarantee of being absolutely satisfactory in every way or money instantly refunded. Send orders to
JAMES MADISON
1404 Third Avenue, New York

HAVILAND'S MOVING PICTURE PIANISTS' ALBUM and the MOVING PICTURE NEWS for one year, 52 issues. $2.00

The MOVING PICTURE NEWS will be sent you for the balance of the year for 25 cents. This offer is for you to become better acquainted with us and to secure you as a regular subscriber next year.

FREE
CHRISTMAS DINNERS
FOR
300,000 POOR PEOPLE
Will be supplied by
The Salvation Army
Throughout the United States
Will you help by sending a donation, no matter how small
TO COMMANDER
MISS BOOTH

118 W. 14th Street, New York City
Western States, Commissioner Estill, 669 S. State St., Chicago

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD
YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Powers and Motiograph Machines, and will Exchange for Either, or Any Other Make You Desire.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST.
State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely
J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

Moving Picture Theater Pianists and Musical Directors should not forget that we give a copy of the F. B. HAVILAND MOVING PICTURE PIANISTS' ALBUM free with a year's subscription to the MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

Telephone: 1664 Spring
Kitab Engraving Company
Makers of MOVING PICTURE NEWS HALF TONE CUTS
401 Lafayette Street, NEW YORK

Here Is Something Entirely New
You have never seen anything like it before, and why? Because it is the only Collection of its kind ever published, and it is going to fill a long felt want. It is a Collection that will appeal to thousands of pianists who play in moving picture theatres.
HAVILAND'S
MOVING PICTURE PIANIST'S ALBUM
It contains the music that every pianist needs in a moving picture house. It is "Classified," so that at a moment's notice you can find the particular style or class of music you need for a particular picture.
Sixty pages of music, covering everything needed in a picture house—full sheet music size—arranged simply, yet brilliantly. Nothing in this Collection more difficult than third grade. Anyone can play these arrangements.
The Price is 50 Cents Postpaid.
F. B. HAVILAND PUBLISHING CO.
125 West 37th Street, New York

PERFORATING MACHINES
TO FILM MANUFACTURERS.
If you require an accurate, adjustable film perforator, built specially for negatives,
BUY THE MICROMETRIC
Manufactured by
CHRONIK BROTHERS
73 Gold Street, New York.

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK - - - - - - - -	LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK - - - - - - - -	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP - - - - - - - -	LIRE 5,750,000

EXCHANGE MEN WRITE TO US FOR PARTICULARS OF OUR FIRST RELEASE

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK

MACHINES

The extraordinary sale of moving picture machines through my various offices in the past month indicates an unexpectedly big boom in Independent business. And not a shipment was delayed. I keep all the good makes of machines ready to ship on a moment's notice. Remember that when you're in a rush. Meanwhile don't forget that my new Free Employment Bureau is willing to serve you at any time. Laemmle service is real service.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
New number 204 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa.

The biggest and best film renter in the world.

MOTION PICTURE MACHINE BARGAINS
Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Lubin Cineograph $65. Powers Cameragraph No. 5 for $110. Many others. Model B Gas Outfit $25. Edison Model B, Powers No. 6 and Standard are specialties. Send for Supplement No. 33 Bargain List. Motion Picture Machines Wanted.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GUARANTEED ACCURATE PARTS for all MOTION PICTURE MACHINES at very reasonable prices. SPECIAL parts and machines as also experimental parts made to order. All repair work on MOVING PICTURE MACHINES promptly attended to at remarkably low figures. CHAS. E. DRESSLER, 388 Second Ave., Betw. 22nd & 23rd Sts.

CASH FOR MOVING PICTURE PLOTS

Demand practically unlimited. Writers can earn $50 or more weekly. Literary excellence unnecessary. If you can read, write, and think, you need only technical knowledge to succeed in this pleasant, fascinating profession. We must have more playwrights and we'll teach you the technical secrets. Send your name and address at once for Free Booklet.

NATIONAL AUTHORS' INSTITUTE
220 GAIETY THEATRE BLDG.,
New York, N. Y.

WANTED
MOTION PICTURE
PLAYS

You can write them. We teach beginners by mail in 10 easy lessons. No previous experience necessary. Demand increasing and better prices being paid for good work.

Our graduates are selling their plays to all companies.

Write for details

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS
799 CHICAGO OPERA HOUSE
CHICAGO, ILL.

THE AMERICAN THEATRICAL AGENCY

140 N. DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

SUPPLIES

Singers, Pianists, Trap-drummers, Orchestras, Etc., anywhere in the United States on letter or wire. Our Specialty, MOVING PICTURE THEATRE TALENT. ASK SAXE AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISES, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Theatre Sales Co.

211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call.
Make Known your Wants

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR
Sanitary, Space-Saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.
HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

Give This Souvenir and Pack Your House

Genuine Japanese Imported after dinner Cup and Saucer. Cup 2¾ x 1½ in., saucer 4½ in. Thin transparent china, typical Japanese decoration in Tokyo red. If you can't afford to give the cup and saucer with one admission, give the cup at one show and the saucer at the next; this keeps them coming. It's the biggest attendance increaser ever offered.

One Gross Cups and Saucers, 288 pieces, $8.40. Deposit must accompany C. O. D. orders. Sample mailed for 15c.

Illustrated catalog of Souvenirs and attendance increasing plans, free.

TAKITO, OGAWA & CO., 156 W. Lake St. P., CHICAGO, ILL.

Advertisers want results. When writing to them it is our due that you mention The Moving Picture News

25c FOR BALANCE OF YEAR 25c

WE WANT 10,000 NEW SUBSCRIBERS

We want every manufacturer, exchange man, manager, operator and every one interested in the motion picture industry to become a regular subscriber to THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS. In order to accomplish this we will make the following unprecedented offer.

Write your name and address on a slip, enclose the same to us with 25c in stamps and we will send you the NEWS for the balance of the year.

Remember, this offer is not for any other period, but is a special inducement for you to become better acquainted with the best, most reliable and only absolutely Independent motion picture publication.

The Art of Scenario Writing

By Wm. Lord Wright

Endorsed by the best scenario editors in the trade

$1.00 each

A year's subscription to MOVING PICTURE NEWS including this valuable book for $2.00 :: :: ::

Only a few on hand
First come, first served

We give a copy of HAVILAND'S MOVING PICTURE PIANIST'S ALBUM free with a year's subscription to MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

$2.00 PER YEAR

MOVING PICTURE NEWS,
30 West 13th Street, New York City

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.) Feet

Sept. 13—Cain's Retribution (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—Tiny Tom Wins a Lottery Prize (Com.) .....
Sept. 20—Tweedledum's Riding Boots (Com.)
Sept. 20—Tiny Tom as a Detective.....
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death.....
Sept. 27—Alice's Dream .....
Sept. 23—The Hornet (Com.).....
Sept. 27—Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)
Oct. 4—Wrestlers and Wrestling.....
Oct. 11—The Little Chimney Sweeper.....

AMERICAN

Aug. 24—Aunty and the Cowboys (Com.)....
Aug. 28—The Western Doctor's Peril (Dr.)..
Aug. 31—The Diamond Smugglers (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 7—Three Million Dollars (W. Dr.)...1000
Sept. 11—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (W. Com.-Dr.) .....
Sept. 14—The Mother of the Ranch (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 18—The Gun Man .....
Sept. 21—The Claim Jumper .....
Sept. 25—The Circular Fence (Com. Dr.)...1000
Sept. 28—The Rustler Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—The Love of the West (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—The Miner's Wife (W. Dr.).....1000
Oct. 9—The Land Thieves (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 12—The Cowboy and the Outlaw (Dr.).1000

CHAMPION

Aug. 28—A Daughter of Dixie..... 950
Aug. 30—How Tony Became a Hero..... 950
Sept. 4—Grant and Lincoln..... 950
Sept. 6—When the Law Came..... 950
Sept. 11—Charley's Butte (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—The Red Devils (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 18—Shenandoah 950
Sept. 20—The Stolen Horse..... 950
Sept. 25—The Black Horse Troop of Culver. 950
Sept. 27—The Cook of the Ranch..... 950
Oct. 2—Barbara Frietchie 950
Oct. 4—As Things Used to Be..... 950
Oct. 9—The National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley 950
Oct. 11—What the Indians Did..... 950

ECLAIR

Aug. 7—The Sorrowful Mother (Dr.).....
Aug. 7—Too Much Swedish Drill (Com.)...
Aug. 14—The Connecting Link (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—The Edelweiss .....
Aug. 21—How They Work in Cinema (Com.)
Aug. 28—A Marriage in the Stars (Com.)... 755
Sept. 4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.).. 886
Sept. 11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris 630
Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.).. 335
Sept. 18—Magic Music 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall..... 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies..... 370
Oct. 9—Better to Have Remained Blind (Dr.) 740
Oct. 9—The Motor Chair (Com.)..... 260

GREAT NORTHERN

July 15—At Sea Under Naval Colors..... 455
July 22—A Kind-Hearted Brother (Dr.)....
July 29—The Engagement Ring (Dr.).....
July 29—A Happy Home.....
Aug. 5—The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.)..
Aug. 12—The Mother's Mark (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Teddy Trained by His Mother (Com.) .....
Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.)....
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson.....
Sept. 16—The Conspirators (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)....
Sept. 30—The Conspirators (Dr.).....
Oct. 7—The White Tulip (Com.).....
Oct. 7—Barcelona (Scenic) .....

IMP

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Aug. 14—A Boy's Best Friend (Dr.).....
Aug. 17—Behind the Times (Dr.).....
Aug. 18—Bill Tries to Make Bread.....
Aug. 21—Battle of the Wills (Dr.)..... 500
Aug. 21—Love in a Tepee (Dr.)..... 500
Aug. 24—As a Boy Dreams (Dr.).....1000
Aug. 28—His Royal Highness (Com.).....
Aug. 28—Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.).....
Aug. 31—The Toss of a Coin (Com.).....
Sept. 4—The Haunted House (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—Duty (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood .....

Feet

Sept. 18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream.....
Sept. 21—By Registered Mail.....
Sept. 25—The Co-Ed. Professor (Com.)..... 750
Sept. 25—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.)..... 250
Sept. 28—'Twecn Two Loves (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—The Rose's Story (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—Through the Air (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 9—The Sentinel Asleep.....
Oct. 12—The Better Way.....
Oct. 16—Uncle Pete's Ruse.....
Oct. 19—The Aggressor .....

ITALA

July 20—The Charitable Young Lady (Dr.).
July 22—Foolshead's Heels (Com.).....
July 27—The Fatal Sonata (Dr.).....
July 29—Toto's Butterfly (Com.).....
July 29—Toto Without Water (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Evening Bell.....
Aug. 5—Foolshead's Last Roguery.....
Aug. 12—Sport Restores Youth.....
Aug. 17—Toto's Little Cart.....
Aug. 17—In the Valley of Viege.....
Aug. 19—Foolshead—Manikin .....
Aug. 19—The Blunt Sword.....
Aug. 24—Modern School of Italian Cavalry..
Aug. 26—Foolshead—Chauffeur .....
Aug. 26—For a Straw.....
Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes.....
Sept. 7—The Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dr.) .....
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.).....
Sept. 9—Toto Has a Purse.....
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Com.)
Sept. 16—Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.) .....
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death.....
Sept. 23—The Hornet .....
Oct. 7—Foolshead a Model Guest.....

LUX.

By Prieur.

Aug. 11—Bill Wishes to Make Butter (Com.) 458
Aug. 11—The Cripple (Dr.)..... 462
Aug. 11—Bill Wishes to Make Butter (Com.) 458
Aug. 11—The Cripple (Dr.)..... 462
Aug. 18—A Child's Courageous Act.....
Aug. 25—Bill Follows the Doctor's Orders..
Aug. 25—What a Pennyworth Did.....
Sept. 1—Bill as a Game-Keeper (Com.).... 504
Sept. 1—The Invisible Wrestler (Com.).... 340
Sept. 8—Bill Buys a Lobster (Com.)..... 350
Sept. 8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.).... 642
Sept. 15—Bill as a Billposter (Com.)..... 573
Sept. 15—His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.) 357
Sept. 22—Bill as an Express Messenger (Com.) 344
Sept. 22—The Stolen Diamond (Dr.)..... 629
Sept. 29—Bill and His Friend (Com.)..... 491
Sept. 29—The Little Goatherd (Dr.)..... 386
Oct. 6—Bill Has a Bath (Com.)..... 452
Oct. 6—Neighbors (Com.) 488

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

Sept. 2—Mutt and Jeff and the German Band (Com.) .....
Sept. 6—The Flower of the Trihe (W. Dr.).
Sept. 9—Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Com.) .....
Sept. 13—At Perry's Ranch (Dr.).....
Sept. 16—Mutt and Jeff and the Newsboys (Com.) .....
Sept. 20—Across the Divide (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Mutt and Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Com.) .....
Sept. 23—Ohliging a Friend (Com.).....
Sept. 27—The Young Doctor (Dr.).....
Sept. 30—Mutt and Jeff as Reporters (Com.)
Sept. 30—Getting Even (Com.).....
Oct. 4—Those Jersey Cowpunchers (Dr.)..
Oct. 7—Mutt and Jeff Spend a Quiet Day in the Country (Com.).....
Oct. 7—The Meddling Parson (Com.).....
Oct. 11—Let Us Smooth the Way (Dr.)....
Oct. 14—Mutt and Jeff and the Blackhand (Com.) .....
Oct. 14—Romance and Uppercuts (Com.)..

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Aug. 18—An Indian Love Affair.....
Aug. 22—A Cowboy's Loyalty.....
Aug. 25—Pioneer Days .....
Aug. 29—An Indian Legend.....
Sept. 1—The Sheriff's Love.....
Sept. 5—Little Dove's Romance .....
Sept. 8—A Western Tramp.....
Sept. 12—The Lost Letter.....
Sept. 15—Lone Star's Return.....
Sept. 19—The Sheriff's Brother.....
Sept. 22—The Missionary's Gratitude.....
Sept. 26—Lucky Bob .....
Sept. 29—White Fawn's Peril.....
Oct. 3—The Red Man's Penalty.....
Oct. 6—Range Justice .....
Oct. 10—The Pioneer's Mistake.....
Oct. 13—The Indian Rustlers.....

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Feet

Aug. 8—A Harmless Flirtation (Com.).....
Aug. 12—Lone Eagle's Trust (Com.).....
Aug. 15—Babes in the Woods (Dr.).....
Aug. 19—The Squaw's Devotion (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—Measuring a Wife (Com.).....
Aug. 22—Falls of Bohemia (Scenic).....
Aug. 26—The Indian's Love (Dr.).....
Aug. 29—The White Chief.....
Sept. 2—Silver Tail and His Squaw.....
Sept. 5—Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.)... 960
Sept. 9—The Twin Squaws (Dr.)..... 975
Sept. 12—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 16—The Horse Thief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 19—Lost in a Hotel (Dr.).....
Sept. 19—An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.)...
Sept. 23—Red Man's Honor (Dr.).....
Sept. 26—The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.)..... 300
Sept. 26—Imaginative Willie (Com.)..... 670
Sept. 30—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.) 970
Oct. 3—The Call from the Hills (Com.)...
Oct. 3—A Matrimonial Idyl (Dr.).....
Oct. 7—The Branded Indian (Dr.).....
Oct. 10—Large Lakes of Italy (Scenic).... 285
Oct. 10—Thou Shalt Not Steal (Com.)..... 700
Oct. 14—Running Fawn's Chief (Dr.)..... 990

RELIANCE

Sept. 20—The Stolen Play.....
Sept. 23—The Way of a Maid.....
Sept. 27—For His Sake (Dr.).....
Sept. 30—Weighed in the Scale.....
Oct. 4—Winning Papa's Consent.....
Oct. 4—A Quiet Evening.....
Oct. 7—The Anonymous Letter.....
Oct. 11—The Human Sacrifice.....
Oct. 14—A Narrow Escape.....

REX

Aug. 10—The White Red Man (Dr.).....
Aug. 17—The Colonel's Daughter (Dr.).....
Aug. 24—Castles in the Air (Com.).....1000
Aug. 31—The Torn Scarf.....
Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic)....
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.) .....
Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.)..
Sept. 28—The Derelict (Dr.).....
Oct. 5—Lost Illusions (Dr.).....

SOLAX COMPANY

Sept. 20—Oh! You Stenographer (Com.)....
Sept. 22—Nellie's Soldier (Dr.).....
Sept. 27—How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Com.) .....
Sept. 29—An Italian's Gratitude (Dr.).....
Oct. 4—A Breezy Morning (Com.).....
Oct. 6—His Sister's Sweetheart (Military)
Oct. 11—He Was a Millionaire (Com.).....
Oct. 13—His Mother's Hymn (Dr.).....
Oct. 18—A Corner in Criminals (Com.)....
Oct. 18—A Lover's Ruse (Com.).....

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug. 4—The Judge's Story .....
Aug. 8—Back to Nature (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Cupid the Conqueror (Dr.).....
Aug. 15—Nobody Loves a Fat Woman.....
Aug. 18—The Train Dispatcher (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Cross .....
Aug. 25—The Romance of Lonely Island....
Aug. 29—The Moth.....
Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet, Part I.....
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress.....
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet, Part 2.....
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.) .....
Sept. 19—The Lie (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Honeymooners (Dr.).....
Sept. 26—Lochinvar (Dr.).....
Sept. 29—Love's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Oct. 3—The Five Rose Sisters (Dr.).....
Oct. 6—The East and the West (Dr.).....
Oct. 9—The Higher Law (Dr.).....
Oct. 13—The Tempter and Dan Cupid (Dr.)
Oct. 17—The Early Life of David Copperfield
Oct. 24—Little Em'ly and David Copperfield
Oct. 31—The Loves of David Copperfield...

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Aug. 7—Kathleen Mavourneen (Dr.).....
Aug. 11—Grey Wolf's Squaw (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.).....
Aug. 14—A Good Natured Man (Com.).....
Aug. 14—A Children's Paradise (Scenic)....
Aug. 18—Her Father's Secretary (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—Retaliation (Dr.) .....
Aug. 28—The Power of Devotion (Dr.)....
Sept. 1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.)....
Sept. 4—Inshavogue (Dr.) .....
Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.).....
Sept. 8—Faded Roses (Dr.).....
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstrings .....
Sept. 15—Woman .....
Sept. 18—The Star Reporter.....
Sept. 22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)..
Sept. 25—For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.)
Sept. 29—Man (Dr.) .....
Oct. 2—She Never Knew (Dr.).....
Oct. 6—The Goose Girl (Dr.).....
Oct. 9—His Second Wife.....
Oct. 13—Society Hobos .....

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

		Feet
Aug.	28—Swords and Hearts (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	31—The Baron (Com.)	587
Aug.	31—The Villain Foiled (Com)	411
Sept.	4—The Stuff Heroes Are Made Of (Dr.)	998
Sept.	7—The Old Confectioner's Mistake (Dr.)	998
Sept.	11—The Village Hero (Com.)	675
Sept.	11—The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)	321
Sept.	14—The Squaw's Love (Dr.)	998
Sept.	18—Dan, the Dandy (Com.)	998
Sept.	21—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.)	463
Sept.	21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.	534
Sept.	25—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.)	999
Sept.	28—Her Awakening (Dr.)	997
Oct.	2—Too Many Burglars (Com.)	499
Oct.	2—Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Com.)	497
Oct.	5—The Making of a Man (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—Italian Blood (Dr.)	999
Oct.	12—Trailing the Counterfeiter (Com.)	529
Oct.	12—Josh's Suicide (Com.)	469

EDISON

Sept.	8—At Jones' Ferry (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	9—That Winsome Winnie Smile (Com.)	500
Sept.	9—No Cooking Allowed (Com.)	500
Sept.	12—Under the Tropical Sun (Dr.)	735
Sept.	13—The Escaped Lunatic (Com.)	500
Sept.	12—Off the Coast of Maine	265
Sept.	13—For the Queen (Com.)	500
Sept.	15—The Lighthouse by the Sea (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	7—The Sheriff (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	19—The Sailor's Love Letter (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	20—An Unknown Language (Com.)	985
Sept.	22—The Battle of Trafalgar (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	23—The Big Dam (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	26—Mary's Masquerade (Com.)	1000
Sept.	27—A Cure for Crime (Com.)	1000
Sept.	29—The Death of Nathan Hale (Edu.)	1000
Sept.	30—The Maiden of the Pie-Faced Indians (Com.)	500
Sept.	30—Turning the Tahles (Com.)	500
Oct.	3—Eugene Wrayburn (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Summer Girl (Com.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part I (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part II (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part III (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Leaves of a Romance (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	10—How Mrs. Murray Saved the American Army (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	11—Mae's Suitors (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—At the Threshold of Life (Edu.)	1000
Oct.	14—Her Wedding Ring (Dr.)	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Sept.	16—The Millionaire and the Squatter (W. Dr.)	980
Sept.	19—Saved from the Torrents (Dr.)	980
Sept.	21—All on Account of the Reporter (Com.)
Sept.	21—Everyhody's Troubles (Com.)	980
Sept.	22—Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.)	980
Sept.	23—An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.)	980
Sept.	26—Lost Years (Dr.)	980
Sept.	28—The Power of Good (W. Dr.)	980
Sept.	29—When He Died (Com.)	980
Sept.	30—The Strike at the "Little Johnny" Mine (W. Dr.)	980
Oct.	3—Grandma (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—Master Cupid, Detective (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The Sheriff's Decision (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Townhall, To-night (W. Com.)
Oct.	10—Reparation (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Get Rich Hall & Ford (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—The Deacon's Reward (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	14—The Stage Driver's Daughter (W. Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Aug.	26—The Island of Ischia, Italy	332
Aug.	29—Jimmie to the Rescue (Com.)	1000
Sept.	2—Giving the High Sign to Woman Haters (Com.)
Sept.	2—African Sharp Shooters (Sc.)	210
Sept.	5—A Society Mother (Dr.)	1030
Sept.	9—Mated hy Chess (Dr.)	660
Sept.	9—Farming—Old and New Methods	378
Sept.	12—How to Catch a Bachelor (Com.)	836
Sept.	12—From Bordeaux to Paulliac, France	164
Sept.	16—The Cinematograph Fiend (Com.)	574
Sept.	16—A Mountain Torrent in Austria (Scenic)	415
Sept.	19—Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)	710
Sept.	19—Crossing the Alps in a Motor	285
Sept.	23—A Heart Breaker hy Trade (Com.)	710
Sept.	23—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers	290
Sept.	26—A Friend of the Family (Com.)	850
Sept.	26—The City of Bordeaux, France (Trav.)	175
Sept.	30—Hearts May he Broken (Dr.)	1015
Oct.	3—Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Dr.)	675
Oct.	3—Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Trav.	325
Oct.	7—The Upward Way (Dr.)	726
Oct.	7—Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal	269
Oct.	10—The Missing Bracelet (Dr.)	1150
Oct.	14—Rejected (Dr.)	845
Oct.	14—Pansies (Botanical)	155
Oct.	17—Done Brown (Com.)	837
Oct.	17—A Fairyland of Frost and Snow (Scenic)	163
Oct.	21—The Masked Huntsman (Dr.)	784
Oct.	21—Opening Flowers (Botanical)	216
Oct.	24—Jimmie in Love (Com.)	555
Oct.	24—The Ostrich Plume Industry, France (Ind.)	428

KALEM CO.

Aug.	28—The Branded Shoulder (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	30—Building the New Line (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	1—On the War Path (Dr.)	955
Sept.	4—Rory O'More (Dr.)
Sept.	4—Rory O'More (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	6—When Two Hearts Are Won (Com.)	1000
Sept.	8—When the Sun Went Out (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	11—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	13—The Express Envelope (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	15—The Alpine Lease (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	18—The Ranger's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	20—Losing to Win (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	22—The Cowhoy's Bride (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	25—Arizona Bill (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	29—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—The Phoney Strike Breakers (C.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Saving Sign (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—The Mistress of Hacienda Del Cerro (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	11—For the Flag of France (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	13—The Smugglers (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Sept.	11—Divided Interests (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	13—His Girlie (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	14—Al. Martin's Game (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	16—Cement Rock Blasting (Ind.)
Sept.	16—His Scheme That Failed (Com.)
Sept.	18—The Senorita's Conquest (Dr.)
Sept.	20—The Life Saver (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	21—The Human Torpedo (Com.)	1000
Sept.	23—Her Inspiration (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	25—The Matchmaker (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—A Cowhoy's Love (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	28—A Counterfeit Roll (Com.)	1000
Sept.	30—A Nearsighted Chaperon (Com.)	1000
Oct.	2—His Stuhborn Way (Com.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Idle Boast (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—His Exoneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)
Oct.	7—From the Field to the Cradle (Ind.)	1000
Oct.	9—What Will Be, Will Be (Com.)	1000
Oct.	11—The Slavey's Affinity (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—The Gambler's Influence (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	14—A Hot Time in Atlantic City	1000

G. MELIES.

Aug.	10—His Lesson (Dr.)
Aug.	17—The Local Bully (Com.)
Aug.	17—Two Foolies and Their Follies (Com.)
Aug.	24—A Spanish Love Song (Dr.)
Aug.	31—The Call of the Wilderness (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	7—The Hoho Cowhoy (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	21—$200.00 (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	28—The Mission Waif (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—The Stolen Grey (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Tommy's Rocking Horse (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Sept.	15—Everyday Life in Malacca (Sc.)
Sept.	16—A Western Memory (Dr.)
Sept.	18—The Fright	770
Sept.	18—Fire Brigade in Moscow	230
Sept.	20—An Up-to-date Squaw (Com.)	754
Sept.	20—African Birds and Their Enemies	250
Sept.	21—Starlight's Necklace	951
Sept.	22—Electric Boots (Com.)	425
Sept.	22—Old Delhi and Its Ruins	285
Sept.	22—Surfing	285
Sept.	23—Gypsy Maids	900
Sept.	25—The Disappointed Old Maids (Com.)
Sept.	25—Whiffles' Hard Luck Stories (Com.)
Sept.	26—Pathe's Weekly No. 39
Sept.	27—Driven from the Trihe (Dr.)
Sept.	28—Gypsy Honor (Dr.
Sept.	29—The Bell Ringer of the Ahhey
Sept.	29—Across the Polar Seas (Scenic)
Sept.	30—A Convict's Heart (Dr.)
Oct.	2—Little Moritz is Too Short (Com.)
Oct.	2—Rangoon, India (Scenic)
Oct.	3—Pathe's Weekly (No. 40)
Oct.	4—Crazy Dope (Com.)
Oct.	4—Circus in Australia (Scenic)
Oct.	5—The Squaw's Mistaken Love (Dr.)
Oct.	6—Flirts (Dr. Com.)
Oct.	6—Fishing in the Ceran Islands, Oceania (Scenic)
Oct.	7—For Massa's Sake (Dr.)
Oct.	9—The Little Animal Trainer (Dr.)
Oct.	9—Bttty's Boat (Com.)
Oct.	9—Marvelous Transformations
Oct.	10—Pathe's Weekly (No. 41)
Oct.	11—One on the Masher (Com.)
Oct.	11—Scenes on the U. S. S. Connecticut
Oct.	12—Romance of the Desert (Dr.)
Oct.	13—Raffles Caught (Dr.)
Oct.	13—Guerrero Troup
Oct.	14—Marooned (Dr.)
Oct.	16—The Gambler's Dream (Dr.)
Oct.	17—Pathe's Weekly No. 42
Oct.	18—The Ranch Girl's Terrible Mistake (Dr.)
Oct.	19—The Renegade Brother (Dr.)
Oct.	20—A Trip Down the Magdapis River (Scenic)
Oct.	20—Eva Moves In (Com.)
Oct.	20—Up the Flue (Com.)
Oct.	21—A Puritan Courtship (Dr.)

SELIG

Sept.	14—The Wheels of Justice	1000
Sept.	15—The Voyager	670
Sept.	15—A Sight Seeing Trip Through Boston	330
Sept.	18—Lost in the Arctic	820
Sept.	18—Noted Men	180
Sept.	19—McKee Rankin's "49"	1000
Sept.	22—Shipwrecked	1000
Sept.	21—A Cup of Cold Water	1000
Sept.	25—Two Orphans	1075
Sept.	26—Two Orphans—Part II	986
Sept.	28—Two Orphans—Part III	1090
Sept.	29—John Oakhurst—Gamhler (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—A Summer Adventure (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	3—The Rival Stage Lines (Com.)	1000
Oct.	5—Maud Muller (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The Artist's Sons (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—An Indian Vestal (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	10—Told in Colorado (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Out-generaled (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—Making a Six-Ton Cheese (Edu.)	425
Oct.	13—Seeing Washington (Sc.)	575

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

June	21—Avenged	1000
June	28—The Taming of the Shrew (Com.)	1000
July	5—Ancient and Modern London	530
July	5—Boys Will Be Boys (Com.)	470
July	12—The Free Lance (Dr.)	640
July	12—Temples of India	365
July	19—The Tie That Binds (Dr.)	760
July	19—A Round-Up In Chili	240
July	26—An Amateur Skater	440
July	26—Satan on a Rampage	660
Aug.	2—The Struggle for Life	650
Aug.	2—On the Coast of Bengal	326
Aug.	9—The Heiress	705
Aug.	9—Lyons, the Second City of France	295
Aug.	16—For the Honor of the Name (Dr.)	790
Aug.	16—Moss-Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight	245
Aug.	23—Condemned for Treason (Dr.)	845
Aug.	23—Wool Industry of Hungary	135
Aug.	30—A King for an Hour (Com.)	572
Aug.	30—Sights of Berlin	423
Sept.	6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)	675
Sept.	6—Lake Thun in Switzerland (Scenic)	325
Sept.	13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)	665
Sept.	13—Norwich and Vicinity, England (Travel)	330
Sept.	20—In Ancient Days (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.)	458
Sept.	27—Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)	542
Oct.	4—A Jealous Wife (Com.)	338
Oct.	4—The Grand Chartreuse (Trav.)	292
Oct.	4—Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Com.)	348
Oct.	11—Pardoned hy the Governor (Dr.)	646
Oct.	11—Making Cheddar Cheese (Ind.)	342
Oct.	18—Ordered to Move On (Dr.)	605
Oct.	18—Madeira, Portugal (Travel)	385
Oct.	25—A Woman's Slave (Dr.)	950

VITAGRAPH

Aug.	18—Vitagraph Monthly (Scenic)
Aug.	19—A Second Honeymoon (Com.)
Aug.	21—Wages of War (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Aug.	22—How Betty Won the School	1000
Aug.	23—The Sheriff's Friend (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	25—My Old Dutch	1000
Aug.	26—A Handsomer Man (Com.)	1000
Aug.	28—The General's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Aug	29—The Wrong Patient (Com.)	551
Aug.	29—Queer Folks (Com.)	448
Aug.	30—The Three Brothers (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	1—The Thumh Print (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	2—The Prince and the Pumps (Com.)	1000
Sept.	4—Jealousy (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	4—A Friendly Marriage (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	6—The Willow Tree (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	8—Cherry Blossoms (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	9—Jimmie's Job (Com.)	1000
Sept.	12—Her Crowning Glory (Com.)	1000
Sept.	13—Beyond the Law	1000
Sept.	15—Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.)	1000
Sept.	16—By Woman's Wit (Com.)	1000
Sept.	18—One Flag at Last (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Sept.	19—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.)	1000
Sept.	20—Beyond the Law (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	22—Forgotten (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.)
Sept.	23—The Tired, Ahsent-Minded Man (Com.)	1000
Sept.	25—By the Camp Fire's Flicker	1000
Sept.	26—His Sister's Children	1000
Sept.	27—A Western Heroine	1000
Sept.	29—The Ninety and Nine	1000
Sept.	30—Her Hero	1000
Oct.	2—Our Navy	1000
Oct.	3—The Wager (Com.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Mate of the John M. (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Carr's Regeneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Ups and Downs (Com.)	1000
Oct.	9—Daddy's Boy and Mammy	1000
Oct.	10—The Missing Will	1000
Oct.	11—The Indian Flute	1000
Oct.	13—Answer of the Roses	1000
Oct.	14—By Way of Mrs. Browning	1000
Oct.	16—The Fighting Schoolmaster	1000

"WAR IS HELL"

—and so is a rotten program in your theater. You can add untold strength to your program by getting every "Imp" film that is released. Some of you won't get it unless you fight like blazes for it. Others won't get it unless you pay a little more. Whatever the method, go to it and get TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK. The sooner you show your determination the quicker you'll get the "Imps" you're entitled to. Roll over. Sit up. Shoot straight!

"UNCLE PETE'S RUSE"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A civil war story that will give you the intensest satisfaction with its deeds of bravery, cunning, strategy and excitement. When the Confederate captain escapes from the Federal soldiers, you'll yell just like the rest of the people in your theatre. Released Monday, October 16th.

"THE AGGRESSOR"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A corking good story of the mining country; told, staged and enacted with such fidelity to life in every little detail that even the calloused old-time picture critics will have to acknowledge its greatness. Watch that final scene! Released Thursday, October 19th.

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP OF AMERICA

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America. 102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres. Have you received our new proposition on "Imp A. B. C. Books?" Are you getting our lobby displays regularly? Is your name on our mailing list? Have you sent $5 for our oak lobby photo-frame filled with pictures?

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

SOMETHING NEW!

We have demonstrated to hundreds of Film Exchanges the advantages of having their reels renovated by the ORTHO PROCESS OF FILM CLEANING. Our Process is the only correct way. We remove scratches, blemishes, rain, and redevelop the photography. We soften the base and prevent the sprockets from becoming brittle. You can obtain a demonstration free of charge by sending us one of your reels. Do not miss this opportunity. Other particulars upon request.

ORTHO FILM COMPANY, 40 East 12th Street, NEW YORK, N. Y.

ADVERTISERS GET RESULTS

FROM THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS The Only Educational Paper in the Industry

THESE DAYS

OF EXAGGERATED ADVERTISING AND MISREPRESENTATION IT WILL BE INTERESTING TO KNOW THAT THERE IS AT LEAST ONE ORGANIZATION OF FILM MANUFACTURERS WHOSE ANNOUNCEMENTS ARE WHOLLY SINCERE AND NOT INTENDED AS "CATCH PENNY" AFFAIRS

THE TIDE OF POPULAR PATRONAGE flows our way and the pleased enthusiasm of the patrons attending theaters exhibiting Sales Company's program is the most far-reaching and most profitable of our advertisements.

This fact is also shown by the great quantity of letters we are receiving daily from all parts of the United States and Canada, inquiring for the name and address of the nearest buying exchange buying the output of the

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

To reply to all those inquiries, we print here a complete list of all exchanges in the United States and Canada buying the output.

CANADA

Applegath, L. J., & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
CANADIAN FILM EXCH., Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Co., 154 St. Catharine St., Montreal, Que.
Gt. Western Film Co., 613 Ashdown Block, Winnipeg, Man.
Canadian Amuse. Co., c /o Western Film Exch., Savoy Theatre Bldg., Vancouver, B. C.

CALIFORNIA

California Film Exch., 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Bros., 790 Turk St., San Francisco.
Miles Bros., 411 West 8th St., Los Angeles.
California Film Exch., 514 So. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles.

COLORADO

Co-Operative Ind. Film Co., Barclay Block, Denver
W. H. Swanson Film Exch., 301 Railroad Bldg., Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Washington Film Exch., 428 9th St., N. W.

GEORGIA

Consolidated Film and Supply Co., Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS

Anti-Trust Film Co., 128 W. Lake St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 208 Fifth Ave., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Exchange, 98 Jackson Bldg., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 159 E. Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA

Central Film Service. 119 North Illinois St., Indianapolis, Ind.

IOWA

Laemmle Film Service, Suite 2 and 3, 515 Mulberry St., Des Moines.

KANSAS

Wichita Film & Supply Co., 122 N. Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA

Consolidated Film & Supply Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS

Boston Film Rental Co., 665 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Green Film Exchange, 228 Tremont St., Boston.

MARYLAND

Baltimore Film Exch., 610 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore.

MINNESOTA

Laemmle Film Service, 256 Hennipen St., Minneapolis.

MICHIGAN

Michigan Film and Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.
Cadillac Film Exch., 92 Griswold St., Detroit.

MISSOURI

J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.
Western Film Exchange, 15 W. 10th St., Kansas City.

NEBRASKA

Laemmle Film Service, 1517 Farnham St., Omaha.

NEW YORK

Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
Victor Film Service, 39 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY

Empire Film Exchange, 150 E. Fourteenth St.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 E. Fourteenth St.
Peerless Film Exchange, 5 East Fourteenth St.
Metropolitan Film Exchange, 110 Fourth St.
Western Film Exchange, 145 W. 45th St.

OHIO

Buckeye Lake Shore Film Co., 422 N. High St., Columbus.
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co., 315 W. 4th St., Cincinnati.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 106 Prospect Ave., S. E., Cleveland.
Toledo Film Service, 120 Erie St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OREGON

Independent W. F. Exch., 84 Seventh St., Portland.
Laemmle Film Service Alliance, 333 Oak St., Portland.

OKLAHOMA

United Motion Picture Co., 112 Main St., Oklahoma City.

PENNSYLVANIA

Eagle Film Exchange, 23 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Exhibitors' Film Service Co., 49 So. Penn Ave., Wilkesbarre.
Philadelphia Film Exch., 934 Arch St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Projection Co., 44 No. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Swaab Film Service Co., 129 N. 8th St., Philadelphia.
Independent Film Exchange, 415 Ferry St., Pittsburg.
Pittsburg Photoplay Co., 412 Ferry St., Pittsburg.

TEXAS

Texas Film Exchange, 1315½ Elm St., Dallas.

UTAH

Co-Operative Ind. Film Co., 320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City.

WASHINGTON

Western Film Exchange, 807 Third Ave., Seattle.
Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN

Western Film Exchange, 307 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

IF THE EXCHANGE YOU ARE NOW DEALING WITH IS NOT IN THIS LIST, YOU'RE NOT GETTING ALL YOU ARE ENTITLED TO.

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

"A REMARKABLE PHENOMENON"

READ CAREFULLY, the WORDS in above DRAWING, then GAZE INTENTLY at the SMALL DOT in the CENTER of the LAST SQUARE and the TITLE of OUR

FIRST RELEASE

will be

VISIBLE

St. Louis Motion Picture Company

Write for Descriptive Literature

Factory and Studio

25th and Montgomery Streets, St. Louis, Mo.

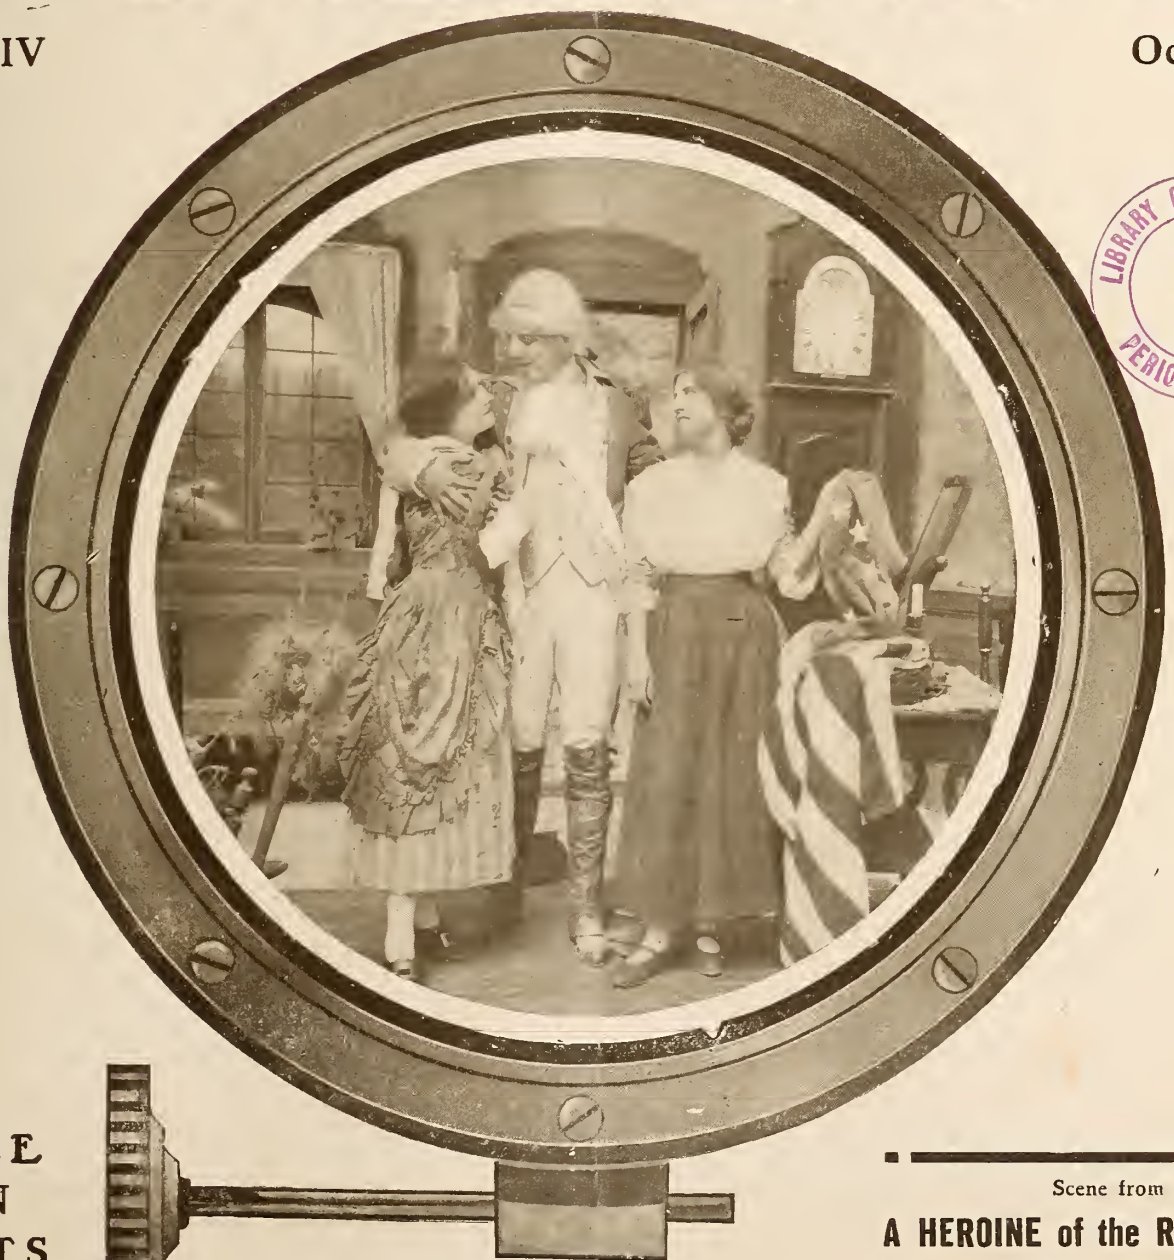
OCT 21 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No 41

October 14
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
OCT
23
1911
PERIODICAL DIV.



PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from

A HEROINE of the REVOLUTION

SOLAX Release of November 3d

MAJESTIC
INDEPENDENT FILMS

A CREDIT TO THE INDUSTRY

We have completed a half dozen quality pictures and are busily engaged every minute turning out more.

Each and every picture we manufacture will be worth while or it will not be placed upon the market.

The photographic quality of each picture produced is equal to any we have seen anywhere.

Careful attention has been given to the selection of scenarios for High Class Comedies, strong heart interest Dramas, and occasional split reels.

Your favorite, Miss Mary Pickford, and Mr. Owen Moore, will appear in our pictures.

We will release two subjects each week commencing the first week in December—perhaps sooner.

We hope for the unanimous support of all Independent exchanges, at the same time assuring incomparable quality.

The management is fully conversant with the requirements of exchanges and exhibitors.

The product of this company will be available through the courtesy of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

145 West 45th Street, New York City

TOM D. COCHRANE, GENERAL MANAGER.

ECLAIR AMERICA

HANDS ACROSS THE SEA

A Massive, Patriotic, Soul-Stirring and Awe-inspiring Spectacle Staged and Produced Expressly for the Proper Introduction of the New ECLAIR AMERICAN FILMS.

TWO GRAND REELS

Portraying a Wondrous Story of Love and Hate, of Peace and Strife in all its Historical Realism.

2,000
MEN, HORSES AND CANNON IN 30 GREAT SCENES 30

A Film on Which a New and Mighty American Enterprise Chooses to Stake its Future Reputation, Representing in the Staging and Mounting of its Many Scenes the Investment of a Small Fortune; a Film Through Which Exchanges May Acquire New Accounts and Exhibitors Heavy Receipts.

SPECIAL POSTER DISPLAY!
TWO Patriotic, Pulling Posters and One Mammoth Lobby Hanger, Lithographed in Six Colors, supplemented by a handsome 8-page, Illustrated Booklet.
SAMPLES AT ALL EXCHANGES.

IN '76

IMPORTANT CHANGE

Date of Release Has Been Postponed from Nov. 7 to Nov. 21 to allow for Enlargement of Production and to Make Certain a More Perfect Film. Exchanges and Exhibitors please arrange Bookings accordingly to avoid disappointments.

NOTE DATE OF RELEASE
TUE. NOV. 21

WRITE FOR BOOKLET OF THE STORY

ECLAIR FILM CO.,

AMERICAN FACTORIES
FORT LEE, NEW JERSEY

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

"The Best Indian Story Ever Written"

THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS

From the novel by James Fenimore Cooper, will be released Friday, November 10. A distinct feature. Watch advance notices.

Little Em'ly and David Copperfield

Second of the series from the novel by Charles Dickens

RELEASED TUESDAY, OCT. 24

For dramatic situations and tense climaxes no better part of Dickens' novel could have been chosen for motion picture presentation.

The story of simple Little Em'ly and the persons who live around her is resonant with dramatic force and surcharged with tragedy. Laughter sometimes penetrates through the tears, which only intensifies the pathos.

The Jewels of Allah

RELEASED FRIDAY, OCT. 27

The mysterious and pungent atmosphere of the Orient permeates this Arabian tale of the stealing of consecrated jewels.

The central figures are a Sheik of an Arabian mosque, a French Count who steals the treasure, and an American girl.

The Sheik follows around the world the calculating Frenchman and locates him at the home of an American millionaire to whose daughter he is about to be married and whom he invests with his "family jewels." The Count is exposed in time and the girl returns the jewels to the Sheik

DAVID COPPERFIELD HERALDS ARE READY—Send your order before the supply runs out. They are $5.50 per thousand.

THE LOVES OF DAVID COPPERFIELD—the third of the series will be released TUESDAY, OCT. 31

THANHOUSER COMPANY NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK - - - - - - - -	LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK - - - - - - - -	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP - - - - - - - -	LIRE 5,750,000

EXCHANGE MEN WRITE TO US FOR PARTICULARS OF OUR FIRST RELEASE

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK

Cl.B248531

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Correspondent and Agent for advertisements in Great Britain
B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W.

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy.
844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV October 14, 1911 Number 41

ATTENTION! EXHIBITORS!!

THE letter we publish below calls for a prominent place in our columns. We are deluged with letters asking us what we think of such and such a film? and why do the censors allow such bad photography to pass? We can only say that if the complaints were addressed to the makers direct it would save us some time and thought. In regard to the prime complaint, the poorness of plot, acting and quality, while the photography has wonderfully improved, the remedy is in the hands of exhibitors themselves. They should return the reel to their exchange and get them to delete this make from their list, especially as we understand a release by another company is coming out on this day, and will do much to relieve the situation. Regarding the censorship, the board has no authority over the photography. They only criticize the plot and subject matter, and if these are passable, the other part, to them, is of no consequence. As we have time and again advised, we suggest once more that exhibitors go to both sides, select what they want, and refuse the badly acted films; by so doing they can get a good program. But—you say—we will have to pay the piper. No, you will not. Read what Ottawa is doing, and go and do likewise. We were asked some time back to suggest this by one of the, now, most prominent of the Patents Co. when he was on the "outs"—and what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. Notice what our correspondent has to say, and go and do likewise.

Ottawa, Ill., October 3rd, 1911.

Moving Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—Have we reached the so desired Open Market? It would seem so when you see the posters displayed by one of the local theaters of Ottawa, Ill. The theater in question is known as the Orpheum, using licensed pictures of from 30 to 90 days. On Monday, October 2nd, they had posters for a Vitagraph, for a Gaumont and for Romeo and Juliet of Thanhouser. Today they have licensed posters including a Kalem, and again several posters to announce Romeo and Juliet of Thanhouser for next Thursday. As the General Film Co. is aware of the fact that the Orpheum of Ottawa is using both licensed and Independent service at the same time, it would seem that the open market is an established fact and that the exhibitor will have a right to select his program from either the licensed or Independent manufacturers or from both.

Are the licensed manufacturers so short of feature films that the licensed exhibitor has to call upon the Independent side for pictures to swell their cash receipts?

A QUESTION OF PATENTS

QUITE a number of correspondents have written to ask us for particulars of the various patents that are being used in injunction suits against exhibitors, some of whom are very nervous and full of fear regarding their future To answer all the queries would entail the whole space in this week's News. Not being fully certain ourselves, we submitted the questions to one of the best versed experts on patents relating to the moving picture industry, who sends us the following reply which will answer all of the most important points:

Framing Device

I find that the British Patent in question was granted to Nobel and another. The number is 15,195, filed July 11, 1898. It shows the beater type of feed, and is arranged to frame the picture by moving the beater movement up and down.

The Smith patent on the framer is No. 673,329, dated April 30th, 1901, filed March 15, 1900.

Shutter

The Pross shutter was antedated by the British patent, Ratteau, No. 18,014, filed July 31, 1897.

Loup

Now here is something quite interesting on the Loup patent. The French patent to Joly, U. S., No. 569,875, dated October 20, 1896, was filed June 5, 1896. The French patent was filed in France August 26, 1895, and the date of a French patent may be 5, 10 or 15 years from date of application, depending upon the wish of the patentee at the time he makes application. As I understand it, the United States patent expires at the same date that the foreign patent on the same article expires, unless the two patents should have been any interference, in the United States Patent Office and the United States patentee should have shown priority.

I have not examined the file contents regarding the Latham-Loup patent to see if Joly was cited, but as I remember it the Joly patent was in interference with Latham and Jenkins and that, at that time, the Commissioner of Patents passed upon certain features particularly referring to the Jenkins patent. The reference as I remember it, simply stated that Latham was in advance of Joly, and I believe this referred only to the filing date. If there was no interference declared that, in the belief of authority, would cause the Latham patent to expire August 26, 1910.

The Latham Loup is No. 707,934, issued August 26, 1902, filed June 1, 1896.

VAUDEVILLE

It is a great pity that managers believe it to be necessary to put on vaudeville in connection with their pictures. The tendency is to get cheap performers and they hurt the rest of the show. Someone should have nerve enough to put on pictures alone in some big center and prove that the public will patronize pictures without the addition of questionable vaudeville.

Small towns support picture houses without vaudeville, and they are filled from morning until night. The chances are all in favor of undertaking something of the kind in the cities where the test could be made upon a scale sufficiently large to prove without question that the picture is enough.

The public likes pictures. Sometimes one is almost disposed to think they don't care much what they are. It does not care much for cheap vaudeville and gets irritated when it is presented. Because a fool vaudeville act is applauded managers profess to believe that it is better liked than the pictures, a very erroneous conclusion to reach.

More pictures and better ones would solve the problem. It would be impossible to give the public too many.

THE FUTURE OF CINEMATOGRAPHY

IT was our good pleasure, the other day, to contribute a mite of our logic to the program of the Sales Co.'s ball, and in reading over the proof sheets, we thought we ought to have a larger audience than that reached by the program. Wondering if it is possible to get our readers interested and for them to add a little to the prophecy, we reproduce the article:

"We have been asked by the management of the Sales Company ball program to write our impression on what the future of cinematography will be. As most of the readers of the article know, our first inception into cinematography was in the year 1889, and from that period we have held various capacities, as camera man, darkroom man, operator of projecting machine, and lecturer, culminating in the seat in the editorial chair of the Moving Picture News.

"During this period we have watched the wonderful developments of the motion picture, and to prophesy the future, judging from the past, may not be a very hard task. In our opinion, we think we are only just on the fringe of what the industry will ultimately develop to. Current events of the day are, and will be regularly filmed. Family gatherings instead of being photographed in still pictures for the future generations, will be filmed, and in years hence will be shown how they acted to-day. The Boer War was filmed and was of great interest as showing the progress made, so will the wars of the future be visited by a special war cinematographer. We have tried to learn if one was at hand at the bombardment of Tripoli.

"In future, when the heads of nations meet in conclave, to smoke the pipe of peace, and prevent all war by peaceable arbitration methods, cinematography will play a very important part. Educational subjects of every description suitable for public and high schools, colleges, and universities will become a 'sine qua non' in every branch tending to instruct students in the various sciences and departments of learning they take up. The Modern Historic Records Association will have placed in their archives public events of to-day, which fifty years hence will become unique by example of the progress made in that period. Travel scenes of every description will become very popular. The poets, the great dramatists, and popular authors will film their stories in a far greater measure than is being done to-day. Speeches of great politicians will be recorded by phonographic, or other method, and action in the camera. We are in touch to-day with a very important phase of this industry where the voice is being phonographed, and the action of the speaker is being cinematographed, and to get a beautiful photographic synchronization they are projected on the screen, and the ear, far beyond the dreams and far beyond any mechanical device that has up to the present been devised. This will be known to the public within the next three or four weeks, and they will be able to both see and hear this wonderful advance of cinematography and phonography. The one great advance movement of all will be the photographing of the same in the colors of nature, and it may be that great psychologists will be able to cinematograph the forms that appear to us on the psychic plane bringing us nearer by the science to the great world beyond.

"Is this a dream? If it is we feel sure that there are scientists at work who will make these dreams as realistic as other inventors and scientists have of dreams in the past, and what to-day is theory will become practical to-morrow."

THE MOVING PICTURE LEAGUE OF AMERICA

Mr. C. M. Christenson, secretary of the Moving Picture League of America, in response to a request for information as to the progress of the League, says:

"I would say that branch state and local associations are forming in nearly every state in the Union. The league has, at this time, a national organizer whose itinerary will cover all districts in the United States where there are, at present, no associations, and to affiliate the associations already formed with the League.

"Naturally there have been no startling accomplishments as yet, because it is first necessary to complete our organization before we attempt reformations. Local branches have accomplished much good in their respective territories, but the curative process has been confined to local ills."

OPERATORS, ATTENTION!

THE following letter from the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, will be of interest to operators. It is our endeavor to keep them posted in all matters affecting their welfare. The News fought hard to have the citizenship clause in the old regulations changed, and we have already published the fact of this victory.

We publish the letter in full and would advise operators to watch our columns for all the latest news on this subject.

DEPARTMENT OF WATER SUPPLY, GAS AND ELECTRICITY,
City of New York.
13-21 Park Row, October 4, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture News,
30 West Thirteenth Street, City.

Dear Sir:

May I ask you to publish prominently the following memorandum as to the present status of our work in licensing moving picture operators?—

I. Citizenship is no longer required.

II. No license can be granted unless the applicant shall have served as an apprentice under a licensed operator for at least six months, and before beginning such apprenticeship the applicant must register his name and address, together with the name and license number of the operator under whom he intends to serve. He must also either bring the operator with him, or bring the operator's license certificate and a statement that he is willing to accept the applicant as his apprentice.

An apprentice is a person who serves another in order to learn a trade, art or profession.

The constitutionality of the apprenticeship feature of the law has been questioned in the courts. A decision has been handed down, but an appeal has been taken by the city from this decision, so that apprenticeship will be required for several months longer at least.

III. The above requirements do not apply to persons who have held 1910 licenses.

Persons who have not taken the 1910 examination cannot now be examined until they shall have served an apprenticeship.

IV. During the forenoon only of each business day, the Department is receiving, at Room No. 1720, Park Row Building, registrations of apprentices, and is issuing acknowledgments of these registrations which will authorize the apprentice to be and remain in the booth and to operate the machine under the immediate supervision of the oprator, who must, however, remain in the booth while the machine is actually in operation.

Respectfully,
HARRY S. THOMPSON,
Commissioner.

We have just received a copy of the "Minneapolis Morning Telegraph," which has made an investigation of the moving picture houses of Minneapolis and in which after what they claim a thorough report of the conditions, condemn the theaters as a menace to the safety of the thousands who frequent them.

The Twin Cities pride themselves on having the most beautiful, comfortable, and well equipped moving picture theaters in the country, and we understand that the exhibitors of Minneapolis are associated together to take steps to defend themselves against what they claim as a slanderous report on the industry.

MR. R. R. NEHLS

Formerly with Klein's Optical Company, of Chicago, (with whom he has been for the past four years) has severed his connection therewith and taken a position with the American Film Manufacturing Co., Chicago. We are pleased to welcome Mr. Nehls back to the Independent fold, we know his heart has been with us, but exigencies of business kept him in the Licensed ranks. We offer our congratulations to both the American and Mr. Nehls, and will watch with interest its progress.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE CINEMATOGRAPH

The Artistic Film

By L. W. D.

A FEW words to the producer of travel and scenic films will perhaps not be out of place in this series. There is unquestionably room for a good deal of improvement in the artistic arrangement of scenic and travel subjects, and a brief survey of the artistic principles which help to make up a really picturesque film, will, I feel assured, not be altogether unwelcome. A well-known American authority on art photography says: "The object of art is not to change nature, but to interpret her aright; to render a scene or an incident so that it shall give delight to the beholder; not by the novelty of unreality, but by originality and unexpectedness." This originality is not denied to cinematography any more than to painting, and where the photographer achieves it, is he not entitled to the name of artist?

The art film should not be too picturesque—nothing is so effective in art as common sense and plain dealing, although it should not be forgotten that in a work of art of any other description there should be a marked evidence of the whole energy of the artist. It is again not "subject" only that we work for in cinematography, nor artistic treatment, in the sense of pure beauty of form or tinting, but a combination of these two, or to use a borrowed art phrase, "the artistic treatment of the subject." There is a silly popular insistence that "subject" is the only thing worth attending to in a picture, and that it is artistic if it is "pleasing to the eye." Pictures can never be made up of pictorial elements without any insistence on subject and story. The camera man should bear in mind that his perception of an object or scene as beautiful depends partly on his apprehension of the unity of the whole, and partly on his attention to the arrangements of the parts. The parts of a picture should not be considered as separate things, or the artistic value will be lost. The more effective the final impression of a picture is, when it engages the attention as a complete work, and not as a variety of individual parts having a common connection, the greater will become its artistic worth. The artistic cinematographer should therefore mistrust all his own judgments when directed towards the parts of our artistic unity, and attempt to get the greater satisfaction from the general effect. It is impossible in any form of artistic practice to ignore the art—how truthfully this applies to motion photography; this is realized quite as much by the cinematographic impressionist of today as it was in the old time by the pupils of Raphael or Velasquez. The "impressionist film" is the outcome of a very careful study in balance and composition; the essential features in the making of these into the "impression" in the completed result. The sense of correct composition is to a greater or less degree a part of the artistic temperament, and should therefore be instinctively followed by the photographer artist. To those who have no instinctive knowledge of this—the most important rule of art, I would say it is not sufficient to learn the rules of principles by merely memorizing a form of words to guide them in their work, but they should be learned so that they become part of their very nature, and then they should be able to recall these principles instinctively and almost unconsciously.

Motion Picture Shows in Scotland

Consul E. Haldeman Dennison states that although there are 16 moving picture shows in Dundee, the majority are small, their admission charge being 2 to 4 cents. The best and largest organization operates 16 theatres in Scotland; this company is replacing all other kinds of machines with a Chicago motion picture mechanism. Just at present American "Wild West" scenes are very popular in Scotland and a great many American-made films are used.

Monday, October 2nd, Mr. Charles Urban, at the Kinemacolor Theater (Scala), supplemented his present program which includes the actual films of the Coronation, etc., shown at the recent command performance at Balmoral Castle, by a distinct and an attractive novelty in the form of a twelve-minute picture play, entitled "The Byeways of Byron," by J. W. Gilbart-Smith, M. A. (Christ Church, Oxford). To an accompaniment of exquisitely modulated orchestral music will be shown delicately tinted scenes illustrating the chief incidents in the poet's romantic life, his dwellings and the surroundings that inspired most of his immortal epics. Representing, as this special feature does, the highest achievement of chromatic plates, it affords an interesting comparison to the animation and natural hues of "Kinemacolor."

Among notable visitors to the Kinemacolor Theater has been his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Olin, Ia.—A new opera-house will be erected here on the site of the old one.

Duquoin, Ill.—The Majestic Theater, in this city, erected at a cost of $30,000, has been purchased by local capitalists.

THE MUSICIAN IN THE MOVING PICTURE THEATER

By M. I. MacDonald

LAST week in our columns a number of questions with regard to what selections to use for certain films of high class themes were answered very acceptably. We were glad to know that our music column was being appreciated. The fact that the musicians of the moving picture theaters think it worth while to delve into the subject, asking for suggestions wherewith to improve the atmosphere of the picture, only goes to show that there is a movement stirring which will eventually result in a vast improvement in the musical part of the moving picture show.

Too little attention has been paid to the musical portion of the program. It may be that the musician in the moving picture theater feels himself playing second fiddle; playing while the attention of an audience is taken up with looking at pictures may seem to him a thankless job. But let me tell you, musician of the moving picture, there is a chance for you to gain a fuller appreciation, and that is by allowing your own personality to become absorbed in the atmosphere of the picture. Just as the actor becomes absorbed in the part which he is striving to impersonate, or the painter becomes oblivious to all but that portion of the world which he is re-creating stroke by stroke upon the canvas, so must you become absorbed in the color which you are creating around the picture. Playing for moving pictures is an art in itself. It is a study. Instead of becoming absorbed altogether in the idea of the composer, the performer and the composer must enter hand in hand with the idea intended to be portrayed in the picture. It is a wheel within a wheel. Just as important as the accompaniment to a singer, is the proper musical accompaniment of a moving picture. Without the music the atmosphere is lacking one of its most important constituents.

To play well the proper accompaniment to moving pictures is a very difficult task. Too often we hear the nonchalant, tuneless jargon of the disinterested player—the player whose very touch tells you of his feeling of "Oh, I'm just making a little noise to fill in time." It is a great mistake to employ just anyone to play in a moving picture theater. The position, on account of the versatility of subject, requires an educated, intelligent musician, who has the temperament to know and feel every emotion, from joy to despair, which is portrayed in each individual picture. The musician of the moving picture theater, as a rule, takes neither himself nor his work seriously enough; the result is often a vast disparity between the nature of the picture and the nature of the music, and the often grotesque combination forms an incongruous whole.

As good an example as could be referred to of what music can do, as an aid to the general interest of the picture, is the musical accompaniment of the Kinemacolor's which have been showing at the Herald Square Theater. For instance, as the choir boys enter the chapel singing, in one of the Coronation pictures, the music becomes a reality because behind the scenes are concealed a number of singers, and the volume of sound comes forth accompanied by the organ. The effect is the same as if you were actually on the scene, watching the passing of the procession, and listening to the singing.

Remember, musicians who do duty at the moving picture theaters, your work is even more important and more difficult than the ordinary interpreter. It is a sort of acrobatic mental stunt that you are doing; so don't fail to put your best efforts into it. Your time of full appreciation is coming.

HOW THE NEWS IS APPRECIATED

We have received from an admiring friend a postal card which we are reproducing herewith which clearly shows how the Moving Picture News is received in the West. The look of keen enjoyment and intense interest portrayed in the express and lines of our correspondent's face shows that for absorbing interest the News is a winner. We are making rapid strides both in the size and circulation of our publication, and the numerous kind expressions and complimentary letters we have received lately only strengthen our contention that the trade appreciate a good, live, honest, and Independent trade journal.

Taking of Gigantic Selig Pirate Picture—Witnessed by Over 10,000 People.—For some time past the Selig Company's Western branch have been preparing to take another elaborate pirate picture of the same nature as a recent release, "The Buccaneers." Mr. Boggs made arrangements with the owners of the Alden Besse of Redondo, a ship of mysterious history, rather unsavory reputation and piratical semblance, to lease the boat for picture purposes. Some three hundred specially engaged actors participated in the various scenes. The subject will bear the title of "A Tragedy of the Sea," supposedly a tale of the historic Blackbeard, who is as much a grotesque and gigantic myth as he is sordid history.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Plans are under way for the improvement of the property at Nevada and Huerfano streets. A moving picture building will be erected at a cost of $20,000.

Elgin, Ill.—H. P. Rorig and Major J. B. Caughey have leased the building at 160-2 DuPage street. and will remodel it into a moving picture house at a cost of $6,000.

St. Peter, Minn.—F. E. English, who has a moving picture theater in New Ulm, will establish a new house in the Rinkel Building on Minnesota avenue.

New York, N. Y.—A new theater is to be erected at 220-228 West 48th street.

Middleburg, Pa.—The New Lyric Theater on Market street has been sold by Mr. Ramig of Mifflinburg to Geo. Motz of Middleburg.

HANDSOME LOBBY DISPLAY FOR "HANDS ACROSS THE SEA"

Two special posters, one mammoth lobby hanger, a complete set of 8 x 10 actual photos and an interesting 8-page booklet. liberally illustrated, make up the line of advertising matter prepared for the New American Eclair Company's initial production in two reels, "Hands Across the Sea in '76." The posters and lobby hanger are superbly lithographed in six colors, the latter measuring 42 x 84 inches, and is the first of its character ever made to order by a lithographer for a regular release. The photos are intended for display in frames in theater lobbies, while the booklets may be secured from the company in quantities for local distribution.

All exchanges will display an advance showing of samples and bookings for the production should be made early to avoid disappointment.

Some Good Stuff from the American Film Company

Three excellent films from the American Film Company were seen by us during the week: "The Lonely Range," "Three Daughters of the West," and "The Caves of La Jolla," in Southern California, the latter an excellent scenic picture.

The "American" is certainly putting out some good stuff in the way of Western stories. The stories are good. the photography is good, the costuming is good, and the atmosphere and scenic effects are the real thing. The exhibition of excellent horsemanship to which one is treated when looking at one of the "American's" Western scenes is a real pleasure. It makes one long for a whiff of the prairie air.

Champion Release

The Champion, too, shows some careful and excellent work in "The Copperhead," the only film of the Champion's which we had the privilege of seeing this week. "The Copperhead" shows a vast improvement in the work of this company, and is another mark of Independent progressiveness. The sentiment of the story, and the emotional passages, are well brought out. The military spirit is strong and the battle scenes good.

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released during the week of October 16th by the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company:

Monday, October 16th

Daughter of the West.....American Caves of La Jolla.....American
A Girl and a Gun.....Champion
Uncle Pete's Ruse.....Imp
The Lost Kerchief.....Yankee
A Lucky Chance—Lake Garda.....Eclair

Tuesday, October 17th

A Western Bride.....Bison
Baby's Shirt.....Powers
Mail by Aeroplane.....Powers
Vaudeville Headliner.....Powers
The Early Life of David Copperfield.....Thanhouser

Wednesday, October 18th

Circumstantial Evidence.....Champion
The Town Marshal.....Nestor
The Trapper's Daughter.....Reliance
A Corner in Criminals.....Solax
A Lover's Ruse.....Solax
Temptations of St. Anthony.....Ambrosio

Thursday, October 19th

Lonely Range.....American
The Aggressor.....Imp
Her Sister.....Rex

Friday, October 20th

The Man Who Came Back.....Yankee
A Warrior's Treachery.....Bison
The Satyr and the Lady.....Thanhouser
His Better Self.....Solax
Bill Pays His Debts.....Lux
Henpecked Bertie Goes Fishing.....Lux

Saturday, October 21st

The Awakening of Jack Clark.....Powers
Mutt and Jeff Join the Opera.....Nestor
That Blessed Baby.....Nestor
Divorce.....Reliance
His Fidelity Investigated.....Great Northern Foolshead Quarrels with His Sweetheart.....Itala

M T

Your house will never be in that condition if you

RUN REX!

THE ONE FOR THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, IS

"HER SISTER"

and take a tip, it's a tip-top, typical Rex. It's one of those pictures that bring your heart where your thorax generally is. You'll have a tear in your eye and a break in your voice—but see that the break is not enough to prevent your yelling for it!

Next Wednesday night say "Nothin' to do till tomorrow," but when Thursday dawns, be sure to because she belongs to the Rex family.

GET "HER SISTER"

REX MOTION PICTURE MFG. CO.

573 ELEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

Sales Company says it should be spelled SI-STIR!

A SOLAX MASTERPIECE

Scenes From "A Heroine of the Revolution"

A BIG REVOLUTIONARY MILITARY PICTURE TO BE RELEASED BY THE SOLAX CO. ON FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3d

SOLAX RELEASE FOR NOV. 3D

On the previous page appear illustrations from a very excellent Solax film, which is to be released on November 3d, entitled "A Heroine of the Revolution." The story runs thus: Ruth Fairfax lived with her widowed mother on the banks of the Potomac. She was in love with Will Rathburn. Will joins Washington's army and is made a captain. The regiment is encamped near her home, and one day while going to the spring she sees an American soldier approaching at high speed with a message. At the same time two British soldiers loom up in another direction. Ruth at once realizes that the American is in danger. The three meet. The American soldier is held up by the Britishers and searched, and as a result they find on him a message from General Washington to Colonel Montgomery to the effect that he must needs turn his regiment aside in order to elude 5,000 British soldiers who are lying in ambush waiting for him.

Ruth, who has been an eye-witness of the incident from behind the tree where she had hidden herself, rushes out, grabs the message, reads it and runs home, followed by a British soldier. She jumps on horseback and flies to warn Montgomery. A most exciting chase follows. Ruth finally reaches Colonel Montgomery, and arrives there just in the nick of time, and meeting her lover, the day is saved.

This picture is commendable for the strict attention to minute detail and the authenticity of its settings. It is costumed strictly according to historic precedent, and has strong dramatic situations, which have been most admirably worked out and enacted.

KINEMACOLOR COMPANY LEASE MENDELSSOHN HALL

On Saturday night, October 14th, an event of much interest in filmdom takes place. The first theater for the exhibition of the Kinemacolor motion pictures to be run and entirely controlled by the Kinemacolor Company of America is to be opened on that date. Mendelssohn Hall, at No. 113 West Fortieth street, famous for years as the home of the Mendelssohn Glee Club, has been leased by them for that purpose.

The lease was made by Mr. Philip Lewisohn, owner of the property, through Messrs. Frederick Fox & Co. Possession was given on Friday, October 6th, and the name of the building, which was erected by the late Alfred Corning Clark, has been changed to the Kinemacolor Theater, and will be conducted after the fashion of the Scala, in London.

This building has been leased by the Kinemacolor Company of America for an indefinite number of years. The Coronation pictures and other films will be shown in a more complete form than they have yet been shown in America.

GET A REP

THE FORT RILEY MANOEUVRES

In other columns of previous issues we have made announcement of the scoop attained by the Champion Film Co. in journeying to Fort Riley, Kan., and filming the military events that were pulled off there by both the National Guardsmen and U. S. regular troops of all branches of the service.

People have rather a mild idea of the dashing spirit and life such pictures must possess. They frequently view the soldier on dress parade, gaily arrayed and doing naught but carrying his gun. They do not picture him, much less see him, in action on the field of manœuvres with innumerable exercises, drills and duties. All these are embodied in this Champion feature.

The Encampment was so varied in its events that it was deemed a good thing to classify it into three parts and thus publish three releases, which were evolved as follows: Part 1. National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley, Kan. Release day, Monday, Oct. 9th. Part 2. Field Day Sports at Fort Riley, Kan. Release day, Monday, Oct. 30th. Part 3. National Guardsmen and Regulars at Fort Riley, Kan. Release day, Monday, Nov. 20th, 1911.

As each of these reels furnishes a complete entertainment in itself as an unusual novelty, the result may be surmised of the exhibitor securing these three subjects, after the release of the final reel, and running the three as an attractive feature. It does not require much "tipping" to a far-seeing photoplay theater manager to discover in this a worth-while catch.

TWO MAGNIFICENT PRODUCTIONS

MONDAY, OCTOBER 23

Mammoth Military Masterpiece

The Drummer Boy of Shiloh

Splendid Cast of 200 People

CODE, SHILOH

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27

A Magnificent Gypsy Production

A Flower of the Forest

A Realistic Representation of Life of the Nomad Tribe with a Cast of 150

THESE REELS WILL BEAR REPEATING

CODE, FOREST

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 E. 32nd STREET, NEW YORK CITY

W. E. GREENE

FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

MR. EXHIBITOR:

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write—wire—or call To-Day at

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.

Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford.

A QUESTION OF FAIRNESS

By A. L. Barrett

THEATER goers have at length become accustomed to frequently accepting a very wide variety of so-called "talent" on the strength of their fame, sometimes ill-fame, as the hero or heroine in some catastrophe, their skill as a prize-fighter, the co-respondent in a divorce scandal, sometimes worse, and a hundred other reasons which have not the remotest connection with the theatrical profession. How frequently do we hear of such characters as Nan Patterson, Florence Burns and others of that ilk being offered large sums to appear on the vaudeville stage. A case in point is Gaby Deslys, who, whatever her claims to talent might be, would assuredly never have been sufficient to have brought her to this country at an enormous expense and to be treated with the deference accorded to a princess, so far as money can do this, but for her reputation in re the King of Portugal, and she is credited, perhaps justly, with being the indirect cause of losing his throne; but having by this means gained world-wide reputation, she is, according to the standard now set by the theatrical managers, eminently fitted to appear before a respectable American audience, and is advertised as one of its brightest ornaments. This practice of engaging actresses because of some unsavory episode in their life has become such an everyday occurrence that it is now one of the chief arguments against the theaters, and justly so. Unfortunately, the weak minority which objects to the practice is powerless, for there is no board of censorship to sift into any complaints that might arise, so it is but rarely that the respectable and self-respecting minority succeed in preventing the exploitation of such a character, and it is altogether too onerous a duty for private individuals. It is only just, however, that when a notoriously objectionable character is advertised to disport herself on the vaudeville stage that a little heed be paid to the protesting minority, weak and small though it may be. Theaters are frequented by millions, a large number of whom are young unthinking people but who take for gospel whatever is shown them, whether it be good or evil, and for their amusement the managers very often foist upon them some one person who may, for the reasons above mentioned, have gained notoriety, and who sometimes may have a little talent, but so little that it is reasonably certain they would never have attained to such heights of financial bliss were it not for the publicity of some prearranged scandal created by an ever-zealous press. Meanwhile, because of the selfishness of the managers, real talent, native and foreign, is passed by, and the world is so much the poorer.

There are few persons who would proudly claim the friendship or acquaintance of a person of doubtful reputation, if a private individual, yet if that person should be fortunate enough to have such a reputation well advertised by means of the public press, a chance to sport themselves before the footlights is assured, and thousands of persons will flock to the theater where they are to be seen, the box-office receipts being of a very soothing nature. Let the moving picture industry even contemplate the faintest replica of the same thing, however, and what a furore it creates! The instant it was rumored the Beulah Binford story was to be filmed, what indignation it caused! From pulpit, public and private individuals, and from the press there was a storm of protest and the whole industry was insulted on every side. The managers quickly repudiated the idea of filming the story, many of them declaring that they would not film one of that kind. And they did not. But a few days later, it appeared that one man who had said nothing on the subject had determined to exploit Beulah Binford and her unfortunate story through the moving pictures. At this announcement the insulting allusions to "those vile moving picture plays" again commenced, and a very large majority of the public seemed to go rabid on the subject and indulged in vilifying the modern scapegeoat,—the so often innocent picture play,—and the result has been to relegate the whole industry to very near the position it has filled for so long in the minds of many recent converts.

What good can possibly result from the exploitation of the life of this very unfortunate girl it is difficult to conjecture, for the story is one that can only too easily be reproduced to excite any interest if the unfortunate victim-heroine had not been advertised by the tragic denouement. If this nasty story had originated in the brains of some scenario writer and been entitled "The Life of Mary Jane Smith," it would not have created more than a ripple of interest, and this reproduction by means of the picture play of the life-story of perhaps a much-injured, but at the same time a very unsavory character, has reduced the moving picture industry to the level of the ordinary vaudeville stage of the present day. It is much easier to take three steps backward in the prejudices of the public than it is to go one step forward, and as there always has been, and still is, a prejudice that has never been fully warranted, the slightest pretext for a slap at them is taken advantage of with vindictive energy.

There are many people, however, who claim—and they are people whose opinion is worthy of the highest respect—that this story from actual life, the unfortunate victim of environment playing her own life will impress young people in the way it is most to be desired and will have the very strongest and best moral effect on any audience, young or old. It is to be hoped they are right. There are others who claim that it will benefit the girl herself, as she derives great pecuniary benefit therefrom, which will enable her to lift herself into another sphere and lead a pure life hereafter. So far as this latter statement is concerned it might be said that there are many unfortuntes who become reformed and succeed in leading decent lives without the aid of publicity or the necessity of parading their shady past on a moving picture screen, nor do they require moving picture managers to lead them back to the right path. As a rule, this duty is taken care of by religious denominations, missions and private individuals who do not publish that they will reform one particular girl by means of advertising themselves or her, but who do actually succeed in reclaiming many hundreds who are far worse than Beulah Binford. However, we may yet hear that moving picture and theatrical managers are starring through the country in the rôle of "First Aid to the Sinner," although it seems incongruous to us in our present stage of development. But stranger things have happened, a hundred years ago, and anyone who foretold electricity, airships or phonographs would have been deemed insane, yet these are among the necessities of our modern life, and it is quite possible that the future picture-play managers will fill a unique position in the world of morals.

On the theatrical boards of the present moment there is a woman who has small claim to a moral character. She is said to have made the King of Portugal her dupe, and indirectly to have caused the downfall of his kingdom, and she certainly would not be welcomed to our homes. This woman is shown to a respectable public, welcomed as though she was a princess and interviewed as sedulously as if she represented the brains and morals of a nation. Hardly an editorial has appeared in the papers protesting against such a character being admitted into New York in the interests of the box-office receipts of certain persons. No board of censorship can restrain her appearance.

On the moving picture screen, the managers have succeeded, after the most fierce denunciations and opposition by press, pulpit and private individuals, in filming the pitiful story of a poor duped girl of thirteen, the girl herself not credited with an overplus of brains or sense. This play is said to be one of the saddest and simplest of its kind, the pathos and moral of which will appeal particularly to the audience it is primarily intended for, the young people. The play itself has won the public endorsement of a well-known divine, and the approval of many persons; but even with this there is no doubt but in some cities the play will be prohibited, at least, the management expect it and are prepared for war should such a step be taken.

The above seems to the writer to be a fair statement of the case. Now, does it not seem unfair that such trouble should have been given to the moving picture industry to film this story when it is considered that practically no opposition has been encountered in admitting Gaby Deslys, or for that matter, many others. It would be difficult to imagine such a person in moving pictures. The theater man-

Ask Your Exchange About the

COMET

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

Watch for the Day of Its Arrival Through agers do not trouble to apologize for introducing this actress, for there is no censorship board to restrain them. Without questioning the talent of Gaby Deslys, with such a reputation why should this foreigner be allowed to enter New York Harbor if, on the other hand, the comparatively innocent Beulah Binford, an American-born, should encounter such opposition in having her own pitiful life filmed with the avowed purpose of showing the morals of the case and the unfortunate position in which such a victim is placed—a position from which it is so difficult, often impossible, to escape. When we consider the relative positions of the two cases there can scarcely be any question as to the unfairness which permits an admittedly nasty character to be offered to a respectable audience and that which discriminates in regard to the other which has so many palliating circumstances. As a question of fairness, there can be but one opinion, but for the sake of the reputation of the moving picture industry it is a thousand pities that it should have been sullied by such a story, for in the minds of many people it is now reduced to the ranks of the vaudeville stage, and those who are already inimical to it now have a magnificent weapon which there is no doubt will not lose anything in the wielding. No one would have been surprised if the theaters had taken up this girl, but such action on the part of the moving pictures was certainly a serious mistake.

GET A REP

ECLAIR COMPANY ANNOUNCES CHANGE OF RELEASE DATE

"Hands Across the Sea in '76" will be issued complete in two reels Tuesday, November 21st. The original date, November 7th, was selected at a time when they believed a sufficient number of army troops could be secured for the two important battle scenes of the story, but after careful thought they decided to double the number of people used in the cast and a later date was determined on so as to allow for selecting the additional people and making a perfect production more sure.

Much interest is being shown in the New American Eclair Company's first offering in this country, especially as this will serve to demonstrate the limits to which they may be expected to go in their future efforts.

It can hardly be expected that "Hands Across the Sea" will show a profit from sales of the film, as no state rights will be sold and the revenue derived must come from the regular exchanges which, alone, will profit in consequence. However, the management believes in charging up the major portion of the producing expense to advertising and in this novel manner not only satisfy the entire trade at large, but in one stroke establish a reputation which, in the ordinary way, might take months to accomplish.

The Moving Picture League of Wisconsin

Charles H. Phillips, Milwaukee, was unanimously elected president of the Moving Picture League of Wisconsin, formed on Tuesday in the Plankinton House, Milwaukee.

"The object of this league will be to raise the standard of the moving picture, to elevate the morals of the exhibitions and of the exhibitors themselves," said Mr. Phillips. "Those men whose moral plane is not high enough to allow them to serve the masses as educators we shall compel to discontinue in the moving picture show business."

The convention, which was attended by seventy-five members from all parts of the State, adjourned until next September. Other officers elected on Tuesday are: Vice-presidents, Tom Foster, Stanley and Charles W. Christianson, Racine; secretary, John Clark, Sheboygan; treasurer, Henry Klein, Milwaukee; sergeant-at-arms, P. Germain, Milwaukee; directors, B. K. Fischer, O. Sprecher, Milwaukee; L. W. Anderson, Neenah, and E. W. Tiede, Burlington.

A special meeting will be called next July to appoint eight delegates to the national convention of exhibitors in Chicago next August.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The Consolidated Moving Picture Co. has bought the Geyer Opera House at Scottdale, Pa.

Springfield, Ill.—Leonard & Gardner will erect a one-story building at Virden, Ill., to be used as a moving picture theater.

Manhattan, N. Y.—Henrietta Crosman Co., to operate theaters. Capital, $10,000, Maurice Campbell and H. C. Campbell.

Waterloo, Ia.—Ed. Croak & B. H. Powell, of Oklahoma City, will erect a new theater at a cost of $55,000 at Oklahoma City.

Santa Ana. Cal.,—Mirror Theatre Co,. capital $25.000, A. E. Bird, T. H. Fowler and H. C. Brown.

SPLASH!

We have purchased 100,000 Pink Label 5/8 x 6 Electro Carbons, and while they last they go at $2.25 per hundred, or $21.00 per thousand, cash with order. Here's your chance; stock up for the winter.

Swaab Film Service Co.
129 N. EIGHTH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

What is the Ortho Film Company Doing?

They redevelop poor protography, clean and soften the film, also remove rain and flickers, and all other defects.

Do not bother with printing and developing. The ORTHO does it at a very low price. They also take feature, industrial and advertising pictures for anybody interested.

Write for particulars.

ORTHO FILM COMPANY
40 East 12th Street, New York

LEGITIMATE FILM SERVICE

It's a new word in Film language, but it's been ours for over three years and no competition.

Buying Legitimately twenty-four reels every week makes this possible.

There is no kind of film service we cannot supply.

We really like to read your letters and answer them immediately.

WRITE—WRITE NOW

Agents for Motiograph and Powers machines—full line of parts.

HON. SIR. VIS

ANTI-TRUST FILM COMPANY
128 WEST LAKE ST., CHICAGO
Branch Office Grand Rapids, Mich.
Branch Office Minneapolis, Minn.

PROGRESSION AND THE ORTHO FILM CO.

By Our "Roving Commissioner"

I FOUND out the other day in my wanderings that the Ortho Film Co., whose offices are at No. 40 East Twelfth street, are not at variance with Progress, but on the contrary go with it hand in hand.

It is astounding to see the rapid strides that the moving picture business is making. The moving picture manufacturers and their mechanics seem actually to be possessed. We cannot keep pace with the wonderful improvements that are daily being sprung upon the wondering world. In every office I visit I find a fixed absorption in the subject—almost to the exclusion of other subjects of interest. The work has to be accomplished in so fast and furious a manner that it is necessary for the moving picture manufacturer to pay the most rigid attention to business—there can be no side-tracking there.

F. W. HOCHSTETTER

The Ortho Film Co., of which Mr. F. W. Hochstetter is the president and manager; Mr. Abe. I. DeRoy, treasurer; Mr. W. E. Armstrong, first vice-president, and Mr. Israel DeRoy, second vice-president, Mr. R. A. Gamble, secretary, and Mr. Albert Teital, manager of the commercial department, has been producing feature films, and largely educational subjects. A unique feature of their work is the production of films for advertising purposes. For instance, the Heinz pickle factory was taken, showing all the different departments, its workings, and so forth; and so have been numbers of other large factories and places of industry. The Colorado Springs Sanatorium has also been taken, showing the treatment given patients there. There is a wonderful advantage for advertising in the moving picture. These films are sent free to exhibitors. There will be a regular circuit formed, and as I understand it the manufacturers will send their orders in to the Ortho Film Co. for pictures to be taken, and the Ortho Film Co. will in turn distribute films among the exhibitors of the circuit. Orders for pictures are also taken by them from outside parties, lecturers, schools, etc. This, of course, gives the amateur man an advantage; or, in other words, the man who does not make a business of exhibiting moving pictures, but at the same time would like to have his own individual picture, to illustrate his subject. They are also forming a circuit for the cleaning of films. Mr. Hochstetter, who, by the way, is a young and clever man, still in his twenties, has arrived at an excellent method of cleaning films, which will no doubt be gladly received by the trade. By his method of treating them, and re-developing them, old films can be renewed and be made to run for at least several months longer than they otherwise would. They are re-lubricated, and the brittleness which is often acquired by films with age or careless use can be entirely eradicated. It is good to know that this can be so successfully done. Mr. Hochstetter has also perfected another invention whereby interior pictures can be taken without the aid of artificial light. This is called the "X-ray" filter system, and is one of the most useful inventions of the present day, as regards motion picture photography. I was shown one piece of film, the negative of which was taken indoors, at six o'clock in the evening. It was a banquet scene, and it was exceptionally clear.

The Ortho Film Co. is doing an enormous business. So much so that it has been necessary to enlarge their offices. In the near future they will occupy the floor below where they are now, in addition to their present offices. This floor will be reserved for the cleaning of films, and for the commercial and advertising end of the business.

The cleaning of films is done by them at a very reasonable rate; in fact, they are offering at the present time to clean one reel free of charge as a demonstration of the work, for any one who proposes giving them work to do.

When orders are taken for private parties for the taking of pictures the film will belong to the party interested, unless a different basis is decided upon; and the picture will be not only taken, but also the developing, printing, and assembling will be attended to.

The factories of the Ortho Film Co. have been divided into three departments, the manufacturing department, the cleaning department, and the commercial department. They are already equipped with some half-dozen printing machines, and the amount of film which can be turned out by them in a day is tremendous. This fact gives them great advantages for hurry orders. All that it is necessary for the patron to do is to wire them to send their camera man on, and the job is completed in an incredibly short time, with good substantial artistic work.

The directors of this company are doing everything possible to meet the demands of their patrons, who are more than pleased with the service accorded them, letters having been shown to the writer from different exhibitors, and patrons, testifying to their satisfaction with service rendered.

We are always glad to boom the progressive enterprise, and glad to be able to tell our readers of the different moves toward perfection in the world of the moving picture film.

The following is a quotation from the Mercantile and Financial Times: "The Ortho Re-Developing Process, which is so well known, gives the following characteristics: It improves poor photography, gives softer 'base,' the removal of scratches better transparency in projection, brilliant light, plastic relief in high lights and shadows, either black or white or colored pictures."

The "Majestic" at Work

The Majestic Film Company, with Mr. Tom D. Cochrane as general manager, and Mr. Owen Moore directing the stage, are hard at it. Both Mr. Cochrane and Mr. Moore are young and enterprising men, and should make a success of the business. Both have had large experience in the moving picture profession. They will release two subjects a week, commencing the first week in December, and perhaps sooner. It is their intention to put nothing but the very best quality of work on the market. Already a half-dozen excellent pictures have been completed, and every minute they are turning out more. Very careful attention has been given to the selection of scenarios for high-class comedies, strong heart-interest dramas, and occasional split reels. A strong company is at work every day that the weather permits under the efficient direction of Mr. Moore.

The courts have denied the injunction to prevent Miss Pickford and Mr. Owen Moore, from acting for the Majestic Company and as announced they will appear in their releases.

The product of the Majestic Film Company will be available through the courtesy of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company, and it is to be hoped that the support of all the Independent exchanges will be extended to this enterprise, which promises to be productive of good things—pictures that will be a credit to the Independent ranks.

The announcement of the Majestic Film Company appears on another page of this issue.

COWBOY FILMS

A

CLASSY AND CHARACTERISTIC

WATCH FOR IT!

"The Water War"

Produced in El Cajon Valley, Southern Calif.

WILL BE RELEASED NOVEMBER 2d

Never before in the history of motion pictures has any Manufacturer produced for the public such a picture. It is a notable achievement in the progress of Picturedom. A Western Classic told with versatility, vigor, and vim. The photography is flawless. Truly a WESTERN MASTERPIECE.

RELEASE DATE, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2nd

There will be a tremendous demand for this subject. Better make sure of it in advance. DEMAND IT FROM YOUR EXCHANGE.

COMING: "THE WATER WAR." A Western Masterpiece.
"THE THREE SHELL GAME." A Western story with a Moral.
"THE MEXICAN." A drama full of life, action, and Dramatic situations.
"THE EASTERN COWBOY." A sparkling comedy pictured in the real American way.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

PRODUCERS OF FLYING A COWBOY FILMS
BANK FLOOR—ASHLAND BLOCK,
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

ANOTHER VENTURE

We learn just as we are going to press that Mr. A. M. Kennedy, formerly of the American Film Company of Chicago, has allied himself with Mr. Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh, and that they are going to produce pictures on a large scale. For the past four years Harry Davis and ourselves have discussed the question of him manufacturing pictures. At last he has decided to give it a trial. The Harry Davis combination needs no elaborate recommendation from us. The circuit is well known throughout the country as being the acme of perfection in its line, and if their films are as creditable as their houses and the high-class acts they put on, there will be a good future before them. We congratulate both Mr. Kennedy on gaining such a position and Mr. Davis on his venture.

BRASS ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

There has been a great demand for Mackie's Brass Announcement Slides. These slides are quite an innovation and they are making a special offer in their ad. this week to which we would call exhibitors' attention.

MIRROROID CURTAIN DEMONSTRATION BY THE H. A. MACKIE COMPANY

The H. A. Mackie Company will give a demonstration of the Mirroroid curtain at Mendelssohn Hall, Fortieth street, near Broadway, on Thursday, October 19, at 10 a.m., with Kinemacolor pictures. Exhibitors will find it to their advantage to witness this demonstration and are invited to attend. All the large circuit owners will have representatives there.

MR. C. LANG COBB, JR.

Mr. C. Lang Cobb, Jr., special representative of the Associated Motion Picture Patents Company, whose resignation takes effect this week, was tendered a farewell dinner by the members of the above company and was presented with a handsome signet ring as a sign of their appreciation of his work while connected with that company. Mr. Cobb has been with the A. M. P. P. Co. since its inception and carries away with him a letter signed by every officer of the company which speaks in the highest terms of his ability and trusthworthiness. His new connection will be announced in the near future.

IMPRESSIONS GATHERED FROM A VISIT TO THE FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER

By Margaret I. MacDonald

THERE were a few healthy cowpunchers standing about the door. A homeseeker's wagon had just driven up, and the boys were giving them some ideas about locations. The young girl was helped up on the seat again beside her mother, where she took charge of the reins, and the father leading the way on horseback, they wended their way across the prairie to the foothills. This was the world to which I was transported as I entered the 14th Street Theater. In front of me sat a man and woman long past their prime, growing gray together, still enjoying life together. They were intensely interested in the story being thrown upon the screen. It was a real, living thing to them. They watched the progress of the homeseekers with the most intense interest, and when, after the weary journey across country, the happy family at last found a place to "pitch their tent," and lay the first foundation of a new home, the land thieves found them out, warning them to be gone before sundown, I heard a murmur of disappointment and pity from the seat in front of me. As the story advanced and the father was shot from his horse, and the two women were left to defend themselves and the little home site, and then the conclusive rescue by the friendly cowpunchers, the old lady in front of me provided a fitting accompaniment to the different scenes, as she actually lived and suffered with the characters. It mattered not to her though the aim of the mother's pistol was on an angle of some 40 degrees from where the bullet in its grotesque wanderings apparently struck the man, who promptly fell dead as he was intended to do. The dear old lady wasn't there to criticize—to turn over in her mind the consistency or the inconsistency of anything—she was there to be entertained—to enjoy. But then there wasn't anything to criticize in this film, but that one point. It was a "ripping" good picture, from the American Film Co.

FOURTEENTH STREET THEATER, NEW YORK CITY

Next came a very splendid picture from the Eclair Co. of Paris. It was a wonderfully interpreted story. The work of the performers was done with splendid finesse, and the staging was magnificent and artistic in the extreme; the costuming and every detail had been looked into so carefully that although the story was one of the most intense heart interest, it was a pleasure to look upon. The story was one of a very happy couple, living in a home of luxury. The wife, while making her toilet, in the course of the use of cosmetics, became stone blind through the ignition of something on her dresses, the fumes of which injured her eyes so that the physicians gave up her case in despair. The husband showed every consideration for her—every kindness was shown her by him. At last comes the serpent in their Eden—the woman who pretends to be a friend of the wife, but who at the same time entices the husband away from the manly course which he has been pursuing. The scenes depicted are very touching, where the wife is continually roping in upon the lovers. Of course they always see her in time to separate before her outstretched hands—hands stretched forth to receive her husband, whom she worships, and believes true to her—have reached them.

At last comes the sad and awful climax. Secretly the wife has tried a new cure, and her eyesight is returned to her. She at once seeks her husband to tell him the glad news, but, alas! she finds that "It were better to have remained blind." The shock of the terrible blow kills her.

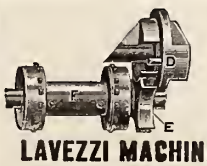
This is one of the best things that I have seen in filmdom in some time. The finished work of the performers is a pleasure to witness. But luckily for the more imaginative and sympathetic of us, this proved to be a twin reel, and directly following the foregoing came a picture that is a scream—at least so thought the old lady in front of me. She became almost hysterical with laughter, and I found myself laughing so hard at her enjoyment of the thing that the tears actually trickled down my face. "The Motor Chair" was the name of the picture. It was very similar to many others which we have seen. But somehow this kind of thing excites a laugh wherever it is shown. A motor chair had been purchased, and was being displayed by the head of the house, a gray-headed old man. Mamma, fat and fifty, or perhaps sixty, waits until the others are out of sight and then decides to try the merits of the chair herself. She thereupon sits down in the chair, leans back to enjoy its comforts, touches the spring, and away the chair goes, across the room, around the room, until in its mad career it runs straight through the wall, and out onto the street. There is the usual funny business always in attachment. The old lady throws her arms around the first man she meets and they go rolling to the ground, while the chair still pursues its course. The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker and all the other makers of any description in the town are enlisted in the chase before it is over, and at last it stops still in front of a child. The heading of this scene reads, "A child can stop it," which adds ridicule to the whole.

It was good to see the old people enjoy the pictures—it did me good. Usually we think that there isn't much left in life for the old people, and when we see them enjoying themselves as these old people certainly did, we can't help thinking that they have found the secret that some of the younger members of the human family are wearing out their very lives in mad pursuit of, and that is "happiness." After all, the real, genuine article is concealed in the answer to the following question, "Have you found your work?" These old people had found their work probably some years ago, and in their work they had found companionship, and from that emanated happiness, and the power to enjoy together even so trivial a thing as a moving picture show.

This was the extent of what I saw during my brief stay in the theater, for I was obliged to hie me to other fields of labor.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—E. Nelson, of the Gem Theater, is considering the establishment of a new theater here.

GET A REP



IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES

You can't put this movement out of order. Installed $12. Send head at once. 100 Pointers on repairing free with each order.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS, 2940 Herndon St., CHICAGO

Go To It--EXHIBITOR--Go 2 It

CHAMPION FILM BULLETINS COMPRISE TWO very fine film subjects each week. Get your note book and list' to this.

"The Copperhead"

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR MONDAY, OCTOBER 23rd

introducing a lad's determined will to enlist on the Federal side in Civil War time against his father's wishes. His disownment from home, stuggle to success, and then final reunion with father.

THE PUBLIC IS CRITICAL.

THEY KNOW A GOOD PICTURE WHEN SHOWN.

SHOW CHAMPS. GOOD FILMS. PUBLIC APPROVES.

SOMETHING NEWSY IN OUR NEXT WEEK'S FULL PAGE.

"Law or the Lady"

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25th

Bob, the new Sheriff, courageously captures a noted bandit, in whom he recognizes his sweetheart's father. Do you see his perplexing predicament?

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro' Motion Picture Distributing And Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,

12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Roma, Sept. 3, 1911.

The Moving Picture News.

Dear Sir: I beg leave to send you herewith a copy of the communication concerning the competition of Cinematography applied to hygiene.

The same communication has been sent to the industrial firms which produce films, to the scientific institutes and to everyone who takes interest in the argument.

Hoping that you will kindly dispose for the publication of this article in your well-known newspaper, I thank you in anticipation, and I remain, dear sir,

Yours faithfully,

THE PRESIDENT.

INTERNATIONAL COMPETITION OF CINEMATOGRAPHY APPLIED TO HYGIENE

As we have already advertised, the Executive Committee of the International Exhibition of Social Hygiene in Rome has proclaimed a competition of cinematography applied to hygiene between all the firms which produce films and the principal scientific institutes which are occupied in the argument.

The vulgarization of the most important elements of hygiene and the formation of the hygienic conscience of people constitute the essential aims of this competition, which remains open until the 31st October p.v., regulated by norms to be known by everyone who asks for them at the Central Committee in Rome, Via Borgognona 38. The competition will take place in the month of December and a special jury shall confer the following prizes to

I. All establishments which produce films.

(a) Diploma of grand prix in a golden medal and £5.000 to be distributed by lot between those rewarded.

(b) Diploma of first prize with a silver medal and £2,000 to be distributed by lot between those rewarded,

II. To the Scientific Institutes.

(a) Diploma of honor with golden medal (grand prix).

(b) Diploma of honor with silver medal (first prize).

(c) Diploma of honor with bronze medal (second prize).

Palm branches of honor, special diplomas, decorations, etc,. will be conferred on every one who will present himself at this very important concourse out of competition or who shall prove to have contributed in a special manner to the diffusion of hygiene by Cinematography.

Artistic Work from the Eclair

The work of the Eclair Company, of Paris, which is always good, and almost beyond the point of criticism, lives up to its usual in "A Lucky Change" and "Lake Garda" Italy. The photography of the latter is superb.

GET A REP

Kansas City, Mo.—Breyfogle Bros. will erect a moving picture theater, to cost $3,000.

St. Louis, Mo.—Vaudeville Theater Co. will erect a theater to cost $35,000.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—B. H. Powell and E. Cook will erect a theater to cost $50,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The American Amusement Co. will establish a moving picture show at 410-12 20th avenue N., to cost $18,000.

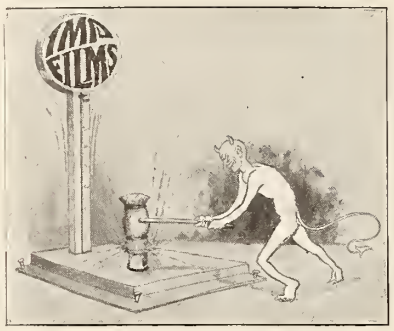
Louisville, Ky.—An addition will be erected to the Majestic Theater to cost $2,000.

Aiken, S. C.—The Aiken Theater Company will erect a new $12,000 opera house.

Kansas City, Kan.—Brefogle Bros. will erect a new $3,000 theater at 2604 East Ninth street.

Los Angeles, Cal.—G. M. Crowe will establish an $8,000 moving picture theater at 2033 East First street.

Detroit, Mich.—The Washington Theater Company will erect a new theater at Washington Boulevard and Clifford street. Company incorporated for $200,000.



EVERY "IMP" RINGS the BELL

In proportion to the number of films we have produced and the length of time we have been in business, not a single manufacturer of film in the whole wide world has such an astonishing string of successes. In Europe where the test is even more severe than in America, we are showing marvelous gains. "Imp Night" is as regular an occurrence in many of the foreign countries as it is right here at home! The releases to come are finer than anything the "Imp" has ever done. Watch for them and see how they are received by your patrons.

"A BITING BUSINESS"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A clean-cut, sharp, snappy comedy-drama. One that makes you feel good all over. Get it. Released Monday, Oct. 23rd.

"THE WAIF"

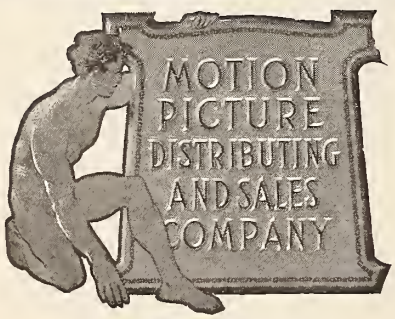
(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A splendid story, splendidly put on. The kind that packs your matinees as well as your night shows. Released Thursday, Oct. 26th.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.
Are you getting our free lobby synopsis?
Have you heard our new "Imp Book" offer?

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP OF AMERICA



PROGRAM

MONDAY.....	Imp, Eclair, Comet, American, Champion.
TUESDAY.....	Thanhouser, Bison, Powers.
WEDNESDAY.	Champion, Solax, Reliance, Ambrosio, Nestor.
THURSDAY...	Imp, American, Rex.
FRIDAY.....	Comet, Solax, Lux, Thanhouser, Bison.
SATURDAY...	Powers, Itala, Gt. Northern, Nestor, Reliance.

"FLYING A" FILMS POPULAR IN KANSAS CITY, MO.

The American Film Company has forwarded us a letter from the Time Theater, New York, of Kansas City, Mo., who is an enthusiastic Independent exhibitor. We reproduce this in full as it speaks well for the Independent product, especially the "Flying A" releases:

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 7, 1911.

The Western Film Exchange,
15 West Tenth Street,
Kansas City, Mo.

Gentlemen:

Please order for me, if you do not carry them in stock, a photo case with the photos of the leading actors and actresses of the American Film Manufacturing Company's staff.

I have been exhibiting Independent films for the past four months and find that the American is by far the most popular of all, and a new American poster is an attraction that the moving picture show patrons cannot resist and is a means of increasing my receipts quite perceptibly on every occasion the same is exhibited.
the near future.

See to it that I never miss a copy of the American films as I do not consider a program the best unless it includes an American, and my patrons are always on the alert and never miss an exhibition if they see the big "A" with eagle wings in the lobby display.

Respectfully,
TIME THEATER,
2851 S. W. Boulevard,
Kansas City, Mo.
Manager H. A. Ross.

Sacramento, Cal.—A Japanese theater will be built at M and Second streets.

Winona, Minn.—Mott & Rossner will erect a new $50,000 theater on Main street.

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 14th

THE SECRET of the UNDERGROUND PASSAGE

A thrilling Drama of the Mines.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 21st

HIS FIDELITY INVESTICATED

A real feature comedy film. A laugh producer that is bound to please any audience. Length 871 feet.

DON'T DELAY YOUR BOOKING OF THIS FILM

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

THE MOVING PICTURE CRAZE

By James W. McGee

The moving picture craze has sprcad
  Like measles through the land,
And every town and village has
  Its own peculiar brand.
The cities like the rural scenes,
  With pumpkins, corn and hay;
The country wants the city scenes,
  The Bowery and Broadway.

The vivid views of "Western life"
  The small boy greets with glee
Are only meant for Eastern states
  And Eastern eyes to see.
The Southern views of "darky life"
  The pictures claim to show
Would get a cool reception
  Where the cotton blossoms grow.

The great immortal Washington
  Can nowadays be seen
  To cross a local Dclaware
  With ice cakes painted green.
Napoleon, too, is pictured
  On the field of Waterloo;
The field looks quite familiar
  With its peaceful Flatbush hue.

The fiery steed Napoleon rides
  Would not be known to-day
As one that drew a Spring street car
  For years across Broadway.
But moving picture scenes are set
  In most peculiar ways
To fit the public's latest fad—
  The moving picture craze.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Vaudeville Theater Construction Co. will erect a new theater building at Vandeventer and Maffitt avenues.

Millville, Pa.—A new theater is to be established in this town.

GET A REP

You Are Partly to Blame if Moving Picture Shows Are Bad

(From the October Woman's Home Companion.)

Eight million people visit moving picture shows daily in this country. There are 15,000 moving picture theaters. One hundred million dollars are invested in the business. Why not make this great force a power for good?

There is more money to be made out of wholesome moving pictures than bad ones. Following is an extract from the article:

"The motion picture, developed along proper lines, combining educational and amusement features, would raise the standard of living, promote municipal and domestic sanitation and stamp out disease.

"It would give housewives an intelligent idea of food values and instruct young men and women in the conditions which confront workers in the various industries.

"It would inculcate kindness to animals and promote an interest in normal, healthful sports.

"Are the moving pictures in your town dragging the young people down, by disregarding their natural healthy taste for pleasure, or are they interesting them in broader, bigger themes?

"You don't know!

"Yet you ought to know, for the good of your children, your neighbors' children, yes, and for the good of your real estate holdings!

"Man or woman, married or single, you ought to go to the moving picture show in your town. At the little picture theater, a block or two from your home, your children, your neighbors' children, the maid who serves you at supper, the boy who delivers your meat and your bread, the young girl who clerks in the five-and-ten-cent store, are all crowded together like sardines in a huge box, watching the flickering films of real life.

"And what are they seeing?"

"Don't you think you ought to know, you who vote and pay taxes, form clubs and organize municipal movements? Don't you honestly think you ought to get acquainted with the most popular diversion in your town?"

THE ECLAIR FILM CO.

It will interest our readers to know that the tremendous success of "Zigomar" in Europe has brought about heavy demand for subsequent releases of a similar nature. Therefore the Eclair Company will produce in America a revival of "Nick Carter" exploits, the exclusive right for the use of the name in moving pictures being held by the Eclair Company. It is their intention always to produce nothing but clean and wholesome picture stories. They have already issued a number of "Nick Carter" stories in the past, as the trade well knows; howevr, the new "Nick Carter," subjects will be entirely different and greatly improved. The exclusive right to the use of the name, "Nick Carter," was granted them some time ago.

THE THANHOUSER PRODUCTION OF "THE SATYR AND THE LADY"

This Thanhouser release for Friday, October 20th, is a story of ugliness' tribute to beauty and deals with the simplicity and faith of a shoestring peddler and a beautiful artist's model. The action shows how the model's regeneration was brought about by the responsibilities of guardianship.

Although this release is not an adaptation, its story is in harmony with the well-known policy of the Thanhouser Company to present classics and high-class films.

The simplicity of this touching tale emphasizes its forcefulness. There are no confusing complications—no counterplots and no by-plots. Smoothly and naturally we are told that an artist who is working on a picture called "The Satyr and the Lady" is dissatisfied with the lay figure, Satyr, and that is satisfied with his "lady" model. In order to get a suitable model, the artist scours the congested market-places of the Ghetto. There he finds in the person of a bewhiskered shoelace peddler the very man he wants. A bargain is made and the peddler is astonished to learn that "sitting still" is a much more remunerative occupation than hustling around with shoestrings.

SCENE FROM "THE SATYR AND THE LADY"

The beautiful lady with whom the Satyr poses is very kind to him, and soon she becomes in his eyes the embodiment of all that is good and virtuous. But in reality the model is of the ordinary sort—the kind we read about in the newspapers.

Long after the picture is finished, the Satyr is on his death-bed. He is troubled by thoughts of the uncertainty of the welfare of his child after he is gone. Finally his mind reverts to "his good and noble idol." She, he decides, is the only fitting guardian.

He sends for her and although she is in the midst of a hilarious and Bohemian bunch of friends in her apartments, she goes to him. She finds him dead, but his child finds a mother.

The scenes are picturesque and full of power. The artist's studio, the Ghetto scenes, the model's apartments and the tenement dwelling of the Satyr are all depicted with a naturalness and a fidelity to life, that is a revelation.

The players, the Satyr, the Artist, and the Lady, all live their parts. The emotional scenes "come over" with compelling force. Florence La Badie's performance of the model is beyond criticism. She possesses a natural charm and the beauty of a fresh morning lily. Mr. Benham and Mr. Thompson, the artist and the Satyr respectively, both do remarkable work.

THE NESTOR FILM CO.

The Nestor Film Co. informs us that it is their intention to release three reels each week, commencing in about a month. This is made possible by the fact that the Sales Company will allow its members to release three films each week and the Nestor Company will take advantage of it. They have three separate companies, three directors and some good releases may be expected.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—B. H. Powell and Edward Croak, of this city, will erect a new theater at 111-113 Main street, to cost $60,000.

TRADE MARK WATERPROOF

Waterproof Films

Washed with soapy water, can be kept

FREE FROM OIL SPOTS, RAIN and DIRT.

Besides this, periodical washing keeps them

SOFT AND PLIABLE

as long as the sprocket holes will last.

Either old or new films can be treated by this process.

National Waterproof Film Co.

Sole Owners of Patented Waterproof Process and Machinery.

4200 W. ADAMS STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

SPECIAL NOTICE

NON-BREAKABLE

Lantern Slides

ANNOUNCEMENT
ADVERTISING
LECTURE
MICROSCOPIC
NATURAL HISTORY

We make slides of all kinds

SLIDES

Artistic and beautifully colored

Don't be faked by would-be Original Inventors who claim, and are trying to manufacture non-breakable slides.

SEND FOR CATALOG.

MICA NON-BREAKABLE SLIDE CO.

2737 N. Croskey St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE WAIF

A Heart-Interest Story of City and Country Life Filmed by The Imp Company

It is quite a far call from the squalid tenement districts of New York to the fresh, pure atmosphere of the country, with its fields of waving grain, fruit-laden orchards and fresh, invigorating air, but the Imp Company has produced a story —"The Waif"—in which the transformation is brought about with fidelity to facts, locale and general conditions—even to the minutest details.

It is a story that touches the heart—a satisfying tale told in a simple, convincing manner—with pathos, and teeming with situations that will interest. The pastoral scenes are laid on the grounds of a public institution, a fresh-air farm, where the children from the city are taken during the heated period, cared for and given a chance to breathe the fresh air, as the Creator intended. These scenes are genuine, as the photographs will show, with the kiddies enjoying themselves on the playground and at the swimming hole. There are hundreds of children actual dwellers on the grounds.

The story is a beautiful one concerning a hardened old farmer, bitter at the world in general because his only daughter has married against his wishes. The daughter is disowned despite the protest of the doting mother. How she goes to the city, is widowed and her boy finally finds a home with his grandparents is an unique as well as a pathetic story that will be enjoyed by all classes of amusement lovers. The film is for release Thursday, October 26.

Gulfport, Miss.—The Elite Theater, at Twenty-seventh avenue and Thirteenth street, is to be remodeled.

Chicago, Ill.—A new theater is to be built at Ellston and California avenues, by Gustav A. Gottschalk and C. H. Kussel.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Louis Friedman will erect a Yiddish theater at Sixth and Aldrich avenues.

Chicago, Ill.—Thomas Maremkowski will erect a two-story brick theater at 4408-10 Milwaukee avenue, to cost $12,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Silver City Amusement Company will erect a $10,000 theater at Twenty-eighth and National avenues.

C, O, BAUMANN

Mr. C. O. Baumann, who has withdrawn from the management and control of the Reliance Film Co. to give his entire time to the Bison interests, will give all his energy to the production of sensational Western dramas. As announced in our last issue, T. C. Graham, of St. Louis, and J. V. Ritchie, of Chicago, will take up the work of the Reliance Co. They are now in full control, and as Mr. Baumann has said, the change means better Reliance and better Bison films. Success to both.

Oakland, Cal.—Plans have been completed for the erection of the new Oakland Foto Play Theater to be erected on the H. C. Capwell lot on Broadway.

Turton, S. Dak.—Campbell Bros., who owned the opera-house recently destroyed by fire, will build a new opera-house.

Virginia, Minn.—The contract for the construction of the new Lyric Theater building has been awarded to L. F. Ursin, of Duluth. It will cost $50,000.

Port Richmond, S. I., N. Y.—A new theater will be erected at Richmond Terrace and Maple avenue, Staten Island.

Lexington, Ky.—James B. Haggin is making preparations to build a first-class theater here at Limestone, East Short and Main streets.

Fayetteville, Ark.—$500 damage was done to the Lyric theater by fire.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Atlas Theater Co. will erect a new moving picture theater at Twentieth street and Fond du Lac avenue, to cost $20,000.

Antioch, Cal.—H. M. Deede will erect a new theater here.

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

CITY CUSTOMERS ARE ALL SATISFIED

NOW READY TO CATER TO OUT-OF-TOWN BUSINESS

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

SCENE FROM "LAW OR THE LADY," TO BE RELEASED BY THE CHAMPION FILM CO. ON OCTOBER 25th

QUALITY BOUND TO WIN OUT

ENDORSED BY EXPERTS
A DOCUMENT IN EVIDENCE

Moving Picture Machine Operators Protective Union

Boston Local No. 162

A. F. S. E. OF UNITED STATES AND CANADA

WHEREAS, This Local having applied to The Enterprise Optical Company of Chicago Ill., for a "Mutoscope Machine" to be used for demonstrating and educational advancement of this Local, and

WHEREAS, The Enterprise Optical Company of Chicago, Ill., having kindly complied with the request of this Local, and presented for the above mentioned purposes an electrical "Mutoscope" Machine, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That in order to show our appreciation and gratitude for said gift from The Enterprise Optical Company, of Chicago, Ill., a hearty vote of thanks is hereby tendered said Company, and be it further

RESOLVED, That a copy of same be spread on the minutes of Boston Local, No. 162, and an engrossed acknowledgement be presented to aforementioned Company, also a copy hung in the Lodge Hall as a constant reminder of their unselfish interest in our behalf.

James F. Burke, President
Edward F. McDermott
John J. Maloney
Thad E. Barrows
Committee on Resolutions.

ORDER 1912 MODEL NOW
ADVANCE CATALOG READY TO MAIL

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.
564 W. RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO
For sale by reputable dealers everywhere

The above scene is from the "Law or the Lady," a Champion Film Co. release of October 25th. The full synopsis of this story will be found in our regular department of this issue.

MOVING PICTURES, AIDED BY ORCHESTRA, SWELL ATTENDANCE AT CHURCH

Dr. Reutepohler's Innovations at Salem Church Prove Gratifying Success

Moving pictures and an orchestra have solved for the Rev. Benjamin H. Reutepohler, pastor of the Salem Congregational Church, the problem of getting an attendance at his church.

When asked last night concerning the success of this new method, which he has had for several months, Dr. Reutepohler declared that where he formerly spoke only to sixty or seventy-five people, he had an audience now of from 600 to 700 people.

"The pictures," said Dr. Reutepohler, "are of an educational nature and prove to be very satisfactory to the congregation. Last week we had scenes from the work of construction of the Panama Canal and this seemed to be an unusual drawing card. I feel well repaid for our efforts in this way.

The pictures exhibited at the Salem Congregational Church recently showed the care and training of the animals at the Zoo in New York.

In addition to the pictures, a feature of the evening was music by an orchestra of twelve pieces, under the direction of Professor Jean De Chauvenet.

"A World Made to Order" was the subject for Dr. Reutepohler's sermon last night, and in it he explained his satisfaction with this world and showed how hard it would be to map out a really model world.

The pastors of Springfield (Mass.) churches are opposing the opening of picture shows on Sunday, declaring it is a wedge for an "open city."

Municipalities have to contend with several evils greater than Sunday evening picture shows.

USING FILMS AS TEACHERS

Moving Pictures Prove Useful in Philippines—Natives Shown How to Clean House and Improve

Moving picture shows have penetrated the wildest and most remote parts of the Philippine Islands, says the Portland Oregonian.

After centuries of fruitless effort on the part of the Spaniards to wean the wild men of their unholy pastimes, it has remained for Uncle Sam to adopt the only means to reach their hearts; all with the assistance of the ever-fascinating moving picture show. The wild men have been taught the difference between clean and unwholesome ways of living by means of graphic pictures thrown on the canvas.

In the words of an official recently returned from among these people: "Just to watch the many emotions pictured on the faces of the former head hunters when the pictures were first shown was worth the many hardships endured to bring the word of civilization to these children. For they are but children in the simplest sense of the word. They sat on their haunches, or rather squatted in the fashion of the Indian, and there passed across the faces of all present all the emotions of which the human being is capable. Astonishment, amazement, incredulity, quickly followed one upon the other until it settled to one of extreme pleasure and satisfaction."

Some of them afterward were heard to say it was the work of the devil. Others claimed it was magic, black art, and many other guesses were offered, but in the end all became apparently convinced the pictures came not from the devil, but were for their best interests.

Inspect the Machine

After the first show was over, in one of the small settlements of the Igorot country, it was interesting to see them minutely inspect the machine. It was hard for a while to get them near it, but after considerable persuasion they gingerly approached as if in fear it would go off. They would go over the stretched canvas and finger it as though looking for something hidden within, all the while with the greatest look of wonder and amazement on their faces.

After several exhibitions showing scenes familiar to all, there was thrown on the screen a picture showing the streets and houses in the various settlements in all their old-time filth and dirt. Immediately following this a picture would appear showing the same streets and houses after they had been cleaned up. The pictures were explained by an interpreter who accompanied the show. It was not long before the native began to sit up and take notice.

From this time on they seemed to take an interest in their home surroundings, and now many of the nipa shacks which formerly appeared about to tumble into the streets, now present an altogether different appearance. Streets have been cleaned up. In fact, the moving picture show, so far as Uncle Sam in the Philippine Islands is concerned, has come to stay. It has been adopted as part and parcel of the system of education of the natives.

How Pictures Have Helped

Dean C. Worcester, Secretary of the Interior for the Philippine Islands, gives a graphic description of the improvements which have been and are being made with the help of moving pictures, in a report just received by the Insular Bureau of the War Department. A number of photographs accompany this report, which show the natives "before and after" taking American civilization.

Because of the many peculiar dialects of the numerous tribes, especially among non-Christian tribes, the work of the health authorities has proven particularly difficult. The work of improving the sanitary conditions in the huts and in the villages of the natives was slow, until the officials hit upon the plan of using moving pictures. The novelty of the show appealed to the native at once, and he seemed to catch the idea and see how easily improvements could be made. The lessons which the pictures teach are being taken to heart by the natives. The officials are to-day pointing to clean houses and clean streets as the result of their campaign with the moving pictures.

An extremely interesting set of pictures—illustrating "before and after taking"—is of a native of the islands taken at intervals of a year apart. The first shows him as a head hunter, a savage in every respect; the last after two years' contact. The whole expression of the face in each of the pictures shows a different degree of intelligence and civilization, the progress being easily noted.

Uncle Sam Adopts Method

While, of course, the work of teaching the natives by means of moving pictures has been tried in many parts of the islands, its success among the untutored savage Igorates, the Moros and other non-Christian tribes has been so great from the start that Uncle Sam has now practically adopted this method as the most feasible means of teaching these natives in their own homes and villages the proper way to live. Even now, the officials say, the benefits are easily apparent, and it will not be many years before what were once dirty mudhole settlements will be clean, thriving communities where anyone may live without danger to health.

A BUSY SMALL BOY

A Moving Picture Comedy, by Morrill Hazard

Scene I. A parlor. Enter a mischievous boy. He chortles gleefully then places a tack on chair, point upward.

Scene II. Enlarged tack on seat of chair point upward.

Scene III. Same parlor—continuation. Boy produces a hatpin. Chortles. He hears approach of his sister's beau and hides behind sofa. Enter sister's beau, a rather starchy young man. He sits on sofa.

Scene IV. Enlarged picture showing hatpin in boy's hand about to be thrust into Beau's leg.

Scene V. Same parlor—continuation. Beau leaps frantically from sofa and clutches at his leg. Enter boy's sister, attractive young woman. Beau smothers his feelings and greets her. She sits. He sits on chair with tack on it. He leaps into air. Sister discovers tack. Beau discovers boy behind sofa. Exit boy, mocking.

Scene VI. Same parlor. Beau and sister discovered spooning on chair. Now and then Beau pauses to soothe his late wounds. Boy appears behind them in door, sneaks forward, seizes back of chair and pulls it over, spilling Beau and sister. They scramble up and discover boy mocking in doorway. Exit boy, escaping Beau. Beau proposes to adjourn to more favorable locality where boy will not find them. Sister assents. Exeunt.

Scene VII. A hammock swung between two trees. Enter boy, produces knife, cuts hammock ropes, also cuts stick from branch, then climbs tree. Enter Beau and sister. They sit in hammock and spoon. Boy tips off Beau's hat with stick each time he tries to kiss sister. Beau discovers boy in tree and threatens wildly. Hammock breaks. Boy escapes. Beau and sister decide to seek new isolation. Exeunt.

Scene VIII. Bench beneath a tree. Enter boy with a rope which he ties into double noose, one at each end. He discovers approach of Beau and sister, climbs tree.

Scene IX. Enlarged picture of boy in tree with a hornet nest hanging from branch.

Scene X. Bench beneath the tree in which boy waits—continuation. Enter Beau and sister, spooning. They sit on bench. Boy interferes with love-making by tickling cheek of Beau and sister, using long twig. Beau discovers boy in tree. Boy lassoes sister and Beau with his rope, then hurls hornet nest between them. Boy escapes. Beau and sister tied together fight hornets. They break in opposite directions, but rope brings them together each time. Beau produces knife, cuts rope. Exeunt opposite directions, fighting hornets.

Scene XI. Enlarged faces of Beau and sister swollen by hornet stings. Ridiculous spooning in that condition.

Scene XII. An undertaker's shop. Undertaker discovered. Enter the boy and orders several coffins, giving name and address. Enter Beau with bandaged face and a whip, chases boy around shop. Exeunt Beau, chasing the boy. Undertaker with memoranda of order decides to fill it.

Scene XIII. A street scene. Beau with switch and bandaged face appears chasing boy. Boy escapes, Beau pursuing.

Scene XIV. A live poultry market. Poulterer discovered. Enter the boy and orders 20 roosters, by spreading out fingers. Gives name and address. Enter Beau with switch and bandaged face. Chases the boy round and round. Boy escapes. Exit Beau pursuing. Poulterer exults over large order.

Scene XV. A street scene. Beau with switch and bandaged face chases boy. Boy escapes. Exit Beau pursuing.

Scene XVI. A dog fancier's—fancier discovered. Enter boy, bolting in. Orders large number of live dogs, by spreading fingers. Gives name and address. Enter Beau bandaged, with switch. Chases boy round and round. Exit Beau chasing boy. Dog fancier surprised but elated over his large order.

Scene XVII. A street scene. Beau with bandaged face chases boy. Boy escapes. Enter sister with bandaged face. She intercepts Beau and prevails upon him to desist by telling how she loves him. At her suggestion he discards switch and goes with her upon a certain errand.

(Continued on page 29)

NOTES OF THE WEEK

FROM THE OBSERVATORY

By G. F. Blaisdell

WELL, well! The local Censorship Board at Fort Worth, Texas, is going out of business. The Board has reported to the appointive authority that there is no more work for it to do, following the receipt of notification that the National Board now passes on all films. In the future all that will be necessary in order to show a film in Fort Worth will be to file with the Police Commissioner a certificate that the National Board has passed the film.

As a matter of fact, it is close on to two years that all films, licensed and independent, have been scrutinized by the National Board before being exhibited publicly. It may be said of the Fort Worth Board that nothing it has done so well became it as its final passing. In response to "demands" from more or less ill-informed persons in many communities, some of them anxious to attain a little cheap notoriety in their home neighborhood, local boards of censorship have been springing up all over the country.

Possession of qualities that may be essential to make a passable Sunday-school teacher will not necessarily constitute a man or a woman a competent censor of moving pictures; neither will a board of censorship probably be strengthened by the addition to its membership of a person whose horizon is bounded by the limits of a small town.

Ability intelligently to pass on motion pictures requires deep understanding of human passions and of the desires of plain people—for in the main it is plain people who follow moving pictures. When you hear a man say he has no regard for pictures does it not seem to you that he is posing? There are those—fortunately few in number—who seem to be under the impression that to confess a liking for pictures is to admit that they are not of superior mold; and, as a corollary, that to denounce them or to refer to them in a deprecatory manner is a mark of superiority.

Probably no member of the Board of Censorship will claim that the Board has not erred in judgment at times. To expect otherwise would be to expect the humanly impossible. The Board has done splendid work. The passing of the Board of Censorship of Fort Worth is the best testimony as to the efficiency of the National Board.

* * *

One of those amusing statements often made concerning the moving picture censorship comes to hand from St. Paul. The Pioneer Press of that city, in quoting James Gilosky, of the Alhambra Theater, makes him say: "St. Paul proprietors have held meetings from time to time to discuss these matters (affiliation with the National Moving Picture Exhibitors), but of late the gatherings have been rare, owing to the improved quality of the pictures sent us by manufacturers. The National Board of Censorship, of which Anthony Comstock, of New York, is a member, has done a great deal to elevate the tone of films. Rarely is a risque picture sent out."

There must be some mistake here. If Anthony Comstock has any connection with the National Board the fact has escaped the observation of this writer. No, no, Mr. Gilosky; Mr. Comstock's activities are in other directions; and the censorship of motion pictures still remains in the hands of men and women who will not always restrain the populace from doing those things which they most desire to do. For which much thanks.

* * *

Here are two specimens of benevolent activity from somewhat widely separated points, but the symptoms of publicity-notoriety itch are plainly revealed in each.

The first gem is from the Perth Amboy (N. J.) Chronicle:

"A large delegation from this city attended the convention of the W. C. T. U. held at Jamesburg yesterday. Resolutions were passed regarding moving picture shows and all places of amusement declared to be conductive to immorality. Those who went from here were: Mrs. Jane Overington, Mrs. G. D. Runyon, Mrs. John Halpin, Mrs. V. P. Christoffersen and Mrs. E. J. Williams."

"Conductive to immorality" is good.

From the Dixon (Ill.) Daily News we learn that:

"Geneva clubwomen are to wage war against the uncensored 'blood and thunder' and melodramatic motion pictures. The women declare that pictures are often shown in Geneva when forbidden in other cities. To this end at the last meeting of the Geneva Improvement Association the women voted to open, equip and manage a 'censored' motion picture theater of their own, where the public, particularly the young people, may be shown only 'wholesome' pictures."

* * *

The Rev. P. P. Womer, of the Park Congregational Church of St. Paul, will this week initiate a moving picture program for Sunday evenings. The project is the outcome of the discovery that the declining Sunday evening church attendance was due to the moving picture shows. Dr. Womer says:

"I am going to see if the church cannot be made as popular as the theater on Sunday night. Last Sunday night there were more than 1,400 people in town theaters and less than 800 in the churches. If the people want moving pictures I am willing to let them have them in my church."

Dr. Womer is a wise man and a credit to his church and community.

* * *

For the amusement of the inmates of St. Elizabeth insane asylum, in Washington, D. C., the $125,000 picture show and theater put up by the Government will be opened Dec. 1. Men who have given years of study to the question of insanity have reached the conclusion that the motion picture is a great aid toward curing disordered minds.

The inmates of St. Elizabeth's in the years gone by have amused themselves with athletic sports, but during the cold weather they were forced to remain indoors to a great extent. Only the physically able were the ones who took advantage of athletics, but one and all confined at the asylum can enjoy the pictures that are to be given.

The theater is called Hitchcock Hall, named for Ethan Allen Hitchcock, Secretary of the Interior at the time the appropriation was passed in Congress for the erection of this place. It has a seating capacity of nearly 1,000.

The stage is almost as large as any in Washington, and is modern in every respect, the curtains and all being fireproof. In addition to moving pictures a stock company of hospital employees will give plays of different kinds. Dances will be held this winter on Tuesday nights. The asylum orchestra will furnish music for all occasions.

* * *

Announcement is made of the formation of a corporation which will manufacture moving pictures for Jews, portraying Jewish subjects exclusively. A company of Jewish actors will be engaged.

There undoubtedly is a splendid field for such a company.

* * *

For his work in assisting Max Florence, a moving picture showman, to obtain photographs of the interior of the Mormon Temple at Salt Lake City, Gilbert L. Bossard, the Mormon Elder, who actually took the photographs, has been excommunicated from the church.

Bossard and Florence have been in New York for some time trying to sell their pictures for moving picture purposes on the ground that they reveal important secrets. The Mormon officials have refused to buy them, declaring that they are worthless, and that any responsible applicant can have all the pictures desired with President Smith's compliments, the building not being at all a secret one, but merely a sacred one open only to members of the church in good standing.

* * *

A number of exhibitors have got into legal difficulties recently. Samuel Glass, of New York, was fined $50 for allowing minors to enter his show. Martin J. Gallagher, of St. Louis, complained to the police that his patrons were being annoyed by persons outside his hall. A policeman sent to investigate discovered that Gallagher was operating under an expired license. As a result a fine of $10 was imposed. Samuel Spiegel, of Newark, N, J., was fined $25 for exposing fifteen reels on a shelf in his home.

* * *

As a result of the moving picture show hearing in the Falconer (N. Y.) village hall, the same village board which imposed a prohibitive $500 license fee on the amusement last spring reduced the fee to $50. Change in public sentiment in general in regard to the shows seems to have been the reason for the amendment.

* * *

Freeman Owens, the youngster who recently secured for Imp the pictures of the damage wrought by the hurricane at Charleston, S. C., has secured 600 feet of film on board the Chinese cruiser Hai Chi In spite of the fact that Admiral Ching Pih Kwong gave Owens the freedom of the ship, the sailors manifested a decided disinclination to be "took." The ship's band, however, was not averse to being photographed in action.

* * *

The Inter-Church Federation of Trenton, N. J., has adopted resolutions praising Governor Wilson for his interference with the projection of the Jeffries-Johnson pictures at the recent State Fair.

CHICAGO LETTER

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 10, 1911.

The Plaza Theater, at 308 North avenue, was broken into Sunday, October 1st, a little after midnight; the safe, which is in Mr. Miller's private office, was opened and looted of $900.00. There were six burglars in the party, who entered through one of the lower windows. The night watchman was attacked and knocked unconscious. The office in which the safe was located was just off the balcony, being separated only by an ordinary wall, which was chopped through by several of the men, while the others sat in the back row in the balcony smoking cigars. This makes the fourth robbery in four months attempted in this theater.

The Franklin Theater, located at Thirty-first street and Calumet avenue, which has recently been remodeled, was opened Thursday, October 12th. A high-class line of Independent pictures are shown.

Mr. J. H. Whiteworth, formerly proprietor of the Royal Theater, Dauphin, Manitown, Canada, which he sold last month, was in Chicago last week taking notice of what was doing.

Mr. Leroy T. Goble, publicity manager of the Geo. Kliene Optical Company, has handed in his resignation in order to take full charge of the advertising for the Hazel Pure Food Company, Chicago. Mr. Goble has been with the Kliene Optical Company for the past three years, during which time he has been very successful in all his undertakings.

Mr. D. J. Chatkin has now full charge of the advertising department at the Anti-Trust Film Company.

Mr. H. Wickes, the man you can't make laugh, offers from $25.00 to $100.00, works among the audience and is a big drawing card. Although you can't make him laugh, he had all the audience laughing the other night at the Jewel Theater.

Mr. Fleckes, manager of the Laemmle Film Service, Chicago branch, returned from New York last week, and is again busily engaged at work.

Mr. J. R. Hattslaedt has succeeded Mr. Goble and will now have full charge of the publicity at the Kliene Optical Company. Mr. Hattslaedt has had a great deal of experience in advertising during his entire business career, and his knowledge in this line speaks well for his success in the future.

W. K.

BEHIND EVERY FACT LIES A REASON

The phenomenal success of the Sales Company in establishing the first and Largest Motion Picture Film Distributing Company in the World plainly shows they possess the confidence of the exchange-men and exhibitors throughout the land and is directly attributable to the iron-clad principle of always striving to improve their quality.

Quality costs more, but it holds the trade.

The growth of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company proclaims its character. Growth is the sign manual of health.

The essence of commercial health in the moving picture industry, as in any other line, is fair dealing. Commercial growth is nourished only by intelligent management and enterprise. Years of hard work and honest dealing have given the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company its sound constitution; its giant stature has been attained by alert enterprise and intelligent direction.

THIS

THEIR WEEKLY PROGRAM OF TOP NOTCHERS ALWAYS

MONDAY	IMP, ECLAIR, COMET, AMERICAN, CHAMPION.
TUESDAY	THANHOUSER, BISON, POWERS.
WEDNESDAY	CHAMPION, SOLAX, RELIANCE, AMBROSIO, NESTOR.
THURSDAY	REX, AMERICAN, IMP.
FRIDAY	COMET, SOLAX, LUX, THANHOUSER, BISON.
SATURDAY	POWERS, ITALA, GT. NORTHERN, NESTOR, RELIANCE.

AROUSES AN EPIDEMIC OF ENTHUSIASM WHEREVER SHOWN.
If you are not getting it from your exchange now communicate with the

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

111 EAST 14th STREET NEW YORK CITY

GET A REP

From the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 12.—Even the moving picture shows the past week had to take a back seat for the big State Fair, the sixth annual exposition of its kind, which was held this week, and which, in point of crowds and exhibits, surpassed anything in the history of the State Fair Association. It was a great show in every sense of the word, and one of the big features in connection with the same was the masterful production of "Pioneer Days," during which the hot springs of this resort were discovered all over again.

Two hundred and fifty men and women took part in that pageant, which was staged in front of the grandstand at the Oaklawn racetrack, where the State Fair was held. It was the most vivid, realistic and active illustration of the history of the state that has ever been attempted. Fronting the grandstand there is an open field almost a mile long and over half a mile wide, and on this a row of little cabins, stockade and fort, several small stores and trappers' headquarters had been erected. At another portion of the field the hot waters were seen to come gushing out of the ground, and when the show opened there was a large band of Indians; some of them were being carried by their comrades to the hot springs, others were bathing in the waters. Over a hill came "De Soto" and his suite, being led by Indians who had told him of the great healing waters. It is an historical fact that De Soto first discovered the hot springs, and was the initial "maverick" to take a dip in the same. The process of "discovering" them all over again was a big hit with the great crowd present. As the show moved on a large delegation of cavalry was seen to leave the fort to quell an Indian disturbance, and while the soldiers were absent renegade "redskins" made an attack on the settlement. Men, women and children ran into the stockade. The Indians were reinforced and just as the battle appeared to be going against them the soldiers were seen returning and soon scattered the Indians. Oh, you American-Bison moving pictures! One step after another was taken to show the development of the state, and this year's fair was pronounced "the best ever."

Suppose you were engaged to marry the "sweetest girl in Dixie" and business called you away from the city for a week, and that during the time you were absent some of your good, dear, thoughtful friends had started the report that you had gone away to get married, and suppose on your return every one you knew rushed up to congratulate you and one of your friends on a local paper had written an article and placed it under a "scare head," stating that you were single no longer, and your girl, to whom you were still engaged had read that article and wondered what it was all about, and called you to account for getting married and not letting her know anything about it—well, gee! wouldn't it rile you? Eddie Gavrel thinks it would, and Eddie is about as cross a "bear" as I write this as can be found in the historic Ozarks, and they have "some bear" in those mountains, believe me. You see, Eddie went to Memphis. I missed him from the Lyceum, where his smiling features are as good to look upon as the pictures themselves, so I asked numerous ones where Eddie had gone. They looked wise, laughed in a foolish manner and said nothing. Then I went to some of Eddie's Greek friends, and they told me that Eddie had decided to lay aside the easy life of a bachelor and buckle down to the real matrimonial hustle, so, naturally, for my paper I wrote Eddie up in great shape. Being a good friend of Eddie's and Eddie a good friend of mine, why I sort of "threw myself" on the story, and now the whole world is laughing. Eddie did a song and dance in the lobby and made a rush for his "six-shooter" when I showed him the article. Eddie states that the only reason he didn't fire was because he knew I would be disappointed if I didn't get to see the State Fair, and, besides, he and "The Lady in the Baths" are very good friends and he didn't think she would look well in black. Furthermore, Eddie says that if his girl does toss him on account of that story he will file a damage suit against me.

The motion picture managers and their friends let out a howl last Sunday because they were forced to keep closed while numerous places of business were open. I walked down Central avenue and noticed that the bookstores were doing a very nice business, as were also the cigar emporiums, but what surprised me most was to see several of the clothing houses open. Saw one man buy a hat and no attempt was made to shut the place up, but the picture shows were tighter closed than the pearly gates against Old Nick himself. Judge Wood is a most competent official, but he certainly has made a farce in this Sunday-closing law crusade. The picture houses are forced to be the "goat" for his personal animosity. It isn't right and it certainly is not a square deal in any sense of the word.

Those who predicted that the scenic and photo playhouses would be glad to come back into the trust fold after trying Independent service are now given the right to take a "change of venue" or change their mind, because some of the best pictures that are coming into Hot Springs are being seen at those theaters. Among the Independent output I'll have to hand it to Thanhouser on their "Honeymooners," the week's best comedy, and "Lochinvar," the prettiest romance of the month. Those two reels made a great hit here. The comedy was immense and the staging of "Lochinvar" left nothing to be desired. Ambrosio also came across in fine shape, and their reel, "The Mask of the Red Death," was a masterpiece. "The Circular Fence," an American, would have made a good picture, but it materialized into one of the most remarkable reels that has been here in many weeks. Someone in the film exchange had "spliced" part of the "Claim Jumpers," also an American, on this reel and finished the reel with the latter picture, so that when we got the "Circular Fence" we also witnessed part of the "Claim Jumpers." It kept us circling some in the mind to get a line on what it was all about, and had I not witnessed the "Claim Jumpers" a few days before I would never have been able to make head or tail out of the fence story. Imp took us on a pleasant journey "Through the Dells of Wisconsin," and we enjoyed it immensely, and "Mutt and Jeff" and the dog-catchers was the big scream last Wednesday. I certainly want to compliment Nestor on the excellent manner in which they are staging these pictures. The make-up of both "Mutt" and "Jeff" is true to life, and they are what they were intended to be—a big feature and box-office attraction. They get the dimes in this man's town, Nestor.

Rex sent us "Picturesque Colorado," and it was much appreciated. Say, Rex, why don't you get into communication with the Business Men's League and try and get the same kind of a reel for Hot Springs. Just drop a line to George R. Belding, secretary of that organization, and I'll boost the same at this end of the woods. No telling what that progressive bunch may do, and we know full well that you could handle a reel of this nature. True, Imp gave us one-half a reel about ostriches, etc., but that wasn't a Hot Springs picture, by a long shot. Think it over, anyway, Mr. and Mrs. Rex.

The "Lady in the Baths" is in her glory this week. I procured a press badge for her and she has been stampeding out at the State Fair all week collecting notes for my "Stroller Column." She has become very proficient as a judge of live stock, and can tell the difference between a razorback hog and one of the ordinary porkers by simply feeling its spine. Also, I might add that when she sees this in print—if she does—well, I'll dine downtown that night instead of coming home to the flat.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

GET A REP

WASHINGTON, D. C.

"Foul Play," in three reels, by the Edison Company, is having a popular run at the Colonial, where it will remain the entire week. Occasionally when a dramatization of some well-known novel will be produced in two or three reels, Manager Brylawski will give it the dignity of any other dramatic performance with a billing of several days or a week. This recently proved a success with "The Two Orphans," and in the past with "A Tale of Two Cities," "The Passion Play," and others.

Another Ft. Meyer military release of the Solax Company was welcomed at the Empress. This was "His Sister's Sweetheart." "The Crimes of Nero" had a two-days' run at this theater with appropriate music presentation.

A Ragtime Quartet played quite a part recently at the Plaza. This was headed by the composer of popular songs, Egbert Van Alystyne, assisted by John McGuire, John Salb, and Leonard Chick, featuring "Navajo Rag" in a most animated manner with slides. These artists also appeared at the Moore Sunday Concerts at the Gaiety and Academy theaters, where motion pictures play a distinct part. Mr. Van Alystyne and Mr. McGuire were the guests of Tom Moore during their stay in the city.

Manager Brylawski surprised the public of Washington by the appearance on the scene of the Austin Flood. This reel arrived here on October 5, which meant some haste for the camera man.

When the Plaza was "trying out" some extra new reels received from New York recently, together with its regular three-reel show (with two first-runs), and a Ragtime Quartet, someone said it was too much show for your money. The tickets almost gave out, while the theater was taxed beyond its capacity, and the line-up on the street was disappointed when the house closed because they couldn't see the show. Nor was this a part of the full-page advertisement that Manager Moore furnishes weekly to a local paper.

A. Abrams was a recent guest in Washington, where he called upon his many friends in the motion picture business.

The presentation of Clio and Phyletes at the Virginia has called forth a goodly attendance. The music has been especially appropriate.

Westgate, Ia.—A new opera house will be erected here.

W. Duluth, Minn.—Plans are being prepared for a new theater to be erected on Central avenue, at a cost of $5,000.

Savannah, Ga.—The Montgomery Amusement Co. will enlarge the Odeon Theater.

Chicago, Ill.—Wm. Bopp will erect a new $5,000 moving picture theater at 3448 Southport avenue.

St. Louis, Mo.—The O. T. Crawford Theater Syndicate will build a new moving picture theater at Kingshighway and Delmar boulevard.

Los Angeles, Cal.—L. W. Knight will erect a new moving picture house at 1276 39th street, at a cost of $3,000.

Sibley, Ia.—Smith & Campbell have sold their moving picture theater to Porter L. Wilborn, of this city.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Peter Boosalis, 808 West Lake street, picture theater to cost $3,000.

"SUNLIGHT"

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

The box office is the pulse of the theatre. The profit or loss of your business depends on the flow of nickels and dimes through its window.

The public will patronize a good picture in preference to a poor one at the same price.

Ten new pleased patrons per day at 5c or five new patrons at 10c will within a year pay for a

"SUNLIGHT" SCREEN

How can you afford to be without one?

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co.

1100 Fisher Building CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

RETAIL

"MACKIE HAS IT"

EVERYTHING IN MOVING PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXCEPT THE FILM.

SPECIAL—BRASS ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES, 35c EACH

A REQUEST WILL BRING OUR NEW PRICE LIST, JUST ISSUED.

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 851-853 Broadway, Corner 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

WHOLESALE

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The progressive city of Los Angeles is again to the fore in that it is the home office of an organization which came to life by virtue of giving birth to a corporation last August bearing the name and title of the Consolidated Securities Company. It was capitalized at one million dollars, with stock at the par value of ten dollars a share.

The object of the company, which is not a holding, but in the strictest sense of the word an operating company, is to buy or lease the better grade only of moving picture houses stretching from San Diego, Cal., to Seattle, Wash., or wherever thought more advisable to build, equip and operate moving picture theaters at as many different points as possible.

The officials of the company believe that the day has arrived when the individual has reached the zenith of his financial possibilities in this enterprise, and that the time is most opportune for a repetition of that which has happened to so many other industries, which by virtue of consolidation have opened the eyes of the world to the tremendous sum of money made through "ideal combination"—ergo—CO-OPERATION.

It will be the plan of the company to greatly elevate the character of performance which is at present given at the vast majority of play-houses; travel scenes and films of an educational nature will predominate; in fact, all that tends towards the uplifting of ideas and the betterment of the public morals will at all times receive preference.

Through the force of combination, tremendous savings in all branches of operating will be made, and where individual play-houses have proven to be such large money-makers the earnings of such houses as are working in the combination will be increased all the way from forty to sixty per cent. While this has undoubtedly been the case in a great number of other industrial propositions who have combined themselves together, no field to-day offers such opportunities for a better exemplification of this latter fact than does a combination of the high-grade class of motion picture theaters.

The sponsors of this company are well-known men of Los Angeles and vicinity.

The president, Mr. H. W. Nixon, is a gentleman exceptionally well qualified to head such an enterprise. Forty years spent in the amusement business, catering to the wants of the entertainment-loving public, together with the fact that he is the owner of one of the best-paying motion picture houses in Los Angeles, and was for three years president of the Southern California Motion Picture Men's Association, and is a man of eminently high standing in the community, is sufficient guarantee that the corporation will be guided through a successful career.

The vice-president, Mr. Harry R. Taylor, is a gentleman of high attainments and standing in the city, and is well spoken of financially, and embodies the essence of conservatism.

Mr. Wilson G. Tanner, the treasurer, is active vice-president of the Park Bank of Los Angeles.

The secretary is Mr. S. E. Manatt, who is the manager of the Pico Heights Branch of the Park Bank, and is an old resident of Southern California, where he has been long and actively connected with banking circles.

All of the above gentlemen, together with Mr. F. H. Vesper, president of the Bank of Glendale, comprise the Board of Directors. The plan is an exceptionally good one and, properly managed, as it undoubtedly will be, should prove a great financial success to all of those who are interested.

There is trouble between the managers of some of the vaudeville theaters and the larger picture theaters, and the members of the Musicians' Union over an increase of from $2 to $3 per week which has been asked by the musicians.

In the motion picture theaters, the musicians, all of whom have spent years and years learning their instrument, are paid but $20 per week for six and one-half hours' work. This is less, they say, than is earned by day laborers.

"The price arranged for the picture theaters was a special concession on the part of the union," declared O. V. Geoffrion, acting head of the local Musicians' Union, "and was never intended to be a permanent scale. The men in the vaudeville houses, have been discontented because of the low scale paid in comparison to the very hard work done, and it was in response to their request that the increase of from $2 to $3 was asked.

"The managers say that they will not pay the increase, however slight. They say that the musicians are getting more than a just wage for their services. This means but about $25 or $30 per week to most of the theaters, and the small increase would mean much to the musicians. Every city on the coast has a better scale of wages for the musicians than has Los Angeles.

"We are simply asking for a slight and very fair increase, and we don't want to start a strike, we don't want to order a boycott or to have any trouble at all, and would like to see the managers see things the way we see them."

Sigmund Stearns and Mike Gore, owners of the Plaza Theater, were arrested by Policewoman Wells on a charge of displaying posters showing men fighting with swords and revolvers. Police Judge Rose fined each $10, but suspended the sentence on the promise of the proprietors not to violate the city ordinance again.

The merchants on Main street have petitioned the council, asserting that the automatic organs and pianos in picture theaters are ruining their trade. If the council passes this ordinance prohibiting organs or pianos many theaters would go out of business.

The first job for the new Board of Censors was selected by the Legislation Committee, when it passed to the Board the petition of the Southern California Motion Picture Men's Association that children be allowed to go to a picture theater unaccompanied. The present ordinance requires that parents or guardians accompany children under 14 years of age. The moving picture men say that since the Board of Censors have been elected, and that all pictures have to be censored by them, there would be no harm done if children were allowed to go.

Owing to the fact that the Kinemacolor has been running for the past three weeks to capacity houses at the Grand Opera House, the management has decided to show it one more week. These films have been in greater demand than "Dante's Inferno," which was shown for two weeks at the Majestic Theater or the "Passion Play," which was exhibited for two weeks at Walker's Theater. The Kinemacolor pictures for this week consist of "The Royal Horse Show at Richmond," "The Fashion Show at Kensington," "The Prince of Wales at the Carnavon" and "The Coronation of King George the Fifth." If the pictures are shown to capacity houses this week, the Kinemacolor will probably be shown for an indefinite period.

Mr. Geo. Howell, proprietor of the Lyric Theater, has returned from an extended pleasure trip through Iowa. While there Mr. Howell visited many of the big cities, returning with many new ideas of moving picture theaters.

The Independent exhibitors of this city are clamoring for more and better pictures, as there are more and more Independents coming into the field and the output this city receives is not enough to supply the demands. Manager D. S. Markowitz, of the California Film Exchange, will leave for San Francisco some time this week to consult with the Board of Directors and the general manager of the main office. Markowitz will try and secure more releases, which he is certain can be done.

The Shell Theater has installed a new Powers six machine, getting excellent results. Chief Operator Harden goes around with a happy smile on his face.

The Ideal, Spring, near Fourth, have changed their program from Independent to Trust.

The Rounder Theater, on the Hyman's circuit, has sold the lease to a Chinese restaurant.

ALEX FEINSTEIN.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT

London Office of the News,
8 Sherwood St., London, W.

As an Englishman, Mr. Saunders, you probably know the Nonconformist Conscience. It seems to be a unique possession of the British nation, doubtless in many ways a most valuable one, but undoubtedly inclined to get tiring at times. One of those times is with us. The Conscience is, so to speak, on its hind legs and braying at the top of its voice, and the object that has caused its excitement is? The Wells-Johnson fight, of course. Shame that such an orgy of brutality should disfigure the fair city of London; double shame that Wells should get £2,000 for pummelling Johnson; treble shame that Johnson should get £6,000 for pummelling Wells. Shame again that pictures of the revolting affair should pollute the fair minds of London's youth. Yes, the Rev. F. B. Meyer has denounced the fight and, almost as though it were a case of effect following cause, Mr. White, chairman of the London County Council, has written to Earls Court threatening all sorts of trouble about the renewal of the license if the fight comes off. Despite the Rev. Meyer's pulpit denunciations and despite Mr. White's epistolary powers, it is 10 to 1 that the affair will come off exactly as fixed. By the tmc this appears in type, indeed, the fight will be all over; Johnson will probably have added Wells' scalp to those of Burns and Jeffries, and the search for big white boxers will recommence to the immense ultimate benefit of Lil' Artha's bank account. I hope I am wrong but that is how most people think it will end.

* * * *

The last hope of the Anti-fight brigade is that the Home Office will ban the fight. It is practically certain that the Home Office will do no such thing. Will Barker, at least, does not seem to fear trouble in that quarter. In the earlier part of the week he was in Paris, filming Johnson's training, and brought back some facts which show that those who rely upon the black's bad condition as likely to give Wells the victory are considerably. Mr. Barker describes Johnson as hard as nails already, with scarcely any superfluous fat. As a proof of stamina Johnson punched the bag for thirty-five minutes in Mr. Barker's presence. After that Mr. Barker punched Johnson for three or four minutes in a rousing practice bout which ended with Will G. an easy winner on points.

* * * *

I have reason to believe that Mr. Aitken of the Western Import & Film Co. has made other captures in addition to that of the Majestic films, the first examples of which are being looked forward to with considerable interest. The Western Company look likely to have a strong hand before they are finished and should they do as well with their new brands as they did with "Flying A" they should not be long in occupying a prominent position in our market.

* * * *

"Flying A's" themselves, who will shortly be housed in a new office, are going ahead strongly in Mr. Scott's hands. Their subjects were always good; now their quality has improved in a marked manner while Miss Pauline Bush has been a decided acquisition on the acting side. Miss Bush is one of the most attractive moving picture heroines you have yet sent us and she and Mr. Kerrigan make as handsome a pair of lovers as any of the lady picture theater patrons could desire.

* * * *

I hear of another big thing to be handled by Tyler's immediately. They did very well indeed with "Clio and Phyletes," but this is going to be one better yet, so I hear.

* * * *

Meanwhile Mr. Hayman, of the New Agency Co., has given us another of his periodical headliners. Mr. Hayman has got into the habit recently of giving us a specialty every week and "After Fifty," which portrays the love story of a Bersaglier officer, as told by the latter to his grandchildren, when he is celebrating his golden wedding to the girl whom he first met on the battlefield when Italy and Austria were at death grips. It's a grand picture, grandly acted.

* * * *

Meetings, or a meeting, of the Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association have been held this week, again, I understand, to discuss the duping question, but no information is at the moment forthcoming for publication as to the conclusions arrived at.

American Traders in London

ARE INVITED TO CALL AT OUR

LONDON OFFICE

8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W.

for any information they may require regarding the English trade, introductions to English traders, etc. The sole English agency for the MOVING PICTURE NEWS. Subscriptions taken and advertising contracts can be made at above address.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Mr. D. J. Chatkin, formerly of the American Film Company, is now busily engaged in taking care of the advertising and correspondence department of the Anti-Trust Company. Mr. Chatkin is there with the goods and will certainly deliver it. We heartily congratulate the Anti-Trust Company in being fortunate enough to get so capable a man as Mr. Chatkin.

* * * *

The huge sign which adorned the entire front of the Standard Film Service building, was torn from its fastenings by the terrific storm that swept Chicago and vicinity September 17. The Standard Film Service is so well known that the absence of the sign makes but very little difference.

W. K.

A BUSY SMALL BOY

(Continued from page 23)

Scene XVIII. Same parlor as in opening scenes. Enter the boy with a blow pipe and quantity of putty. Boy hides behind screen. Enter his father with a newspaper and composes himself to read. Enter, unperceived by him, Beau and sister with bandaged faces. Sister urges Beau forward and disappears. Beau approaches father Beau begins to speak on subject nearest his heart. Boy unperceived, aims blow-pipe.

Scene XIX. Enlarged face of father. Putty bullet hits him in eye.

Scene XX. Parlor—continuation. Father with one hand to his eye threatens Beau. Enter sister and begs father to be reasonable. Suddenly she slaps her hand to her eye. Father again accuses Beau, who protests innocence. Suddenly Beau slaps one hand to his eye. Father discovers that culprit is behind screen.

Scene XXI. Enlarged boy with blow-pipe behind screen. He blows bullets and exults.

Scene XXII. Parlor—continuation. Father, sister and Beau facing screen, dodge bullets or slap hands to their faces as they are hit. They throw down screen and capture boy. They are about to punish boy when uproar and rings at bell interrupt.

Scene XXIII. Front of house. Stoop crowded with men carrying coffins, men carrying bunches of live poultry in either hand, men leading innumerable dogs. Door opens. Crowd of men force their way in.

Scene XXIV. Parlor, with Beau, father, sister, boy—continuation. Boy is on point of being switched soundly. Enter all the men of preceding scene with their strange objects and fill the room. During tremendous altercation with the strangers, boy escapes—but not before men identify him. Beau produces money and pays the men. They leave. Father is grateful to Beau. He joins hands of Beau and sister. They embrace. Father convulsed with laughter, and holding his sides, leaves them together.

Scene XXV. Enlarged face of sleeping boy on pillow. Angels hover round him and he is picture of innocence.

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

THE COPPERHEAD

Champion Release October 23

During the Civil War there were a great many Northerners whose sympathies were with the South. They believed that the war was an unjust aggression manœuvred by Northern politicians, and aided unthinkingly by hotheads in the South. These men possessed more than ordinary moral courage, as they were sneered at by their neighbors and derisively termed "Copperheads." This story deals with it.

Old Stewart Witman was one of these. He lived in Michigan in those troublous days. But he had a son who was ardently espousing the cause of the old flag. The boy was only sixteen, but he enlisted in its ranks. Then Witman rose in his might and such a burst of anger that little household had seldom witnessed. Despite tears and protests from wife and daughter, Witman scratched the name of his first-born from the family records, for the heart of the old Copperhead was adamant.

We now see the boy drilling the awkward squad—a truly laughable scene, but withal a heartrending exhibition of wonderful devotion. Later on we witness how these boys fight for the old flag, with that youngster leading them through the thick of strife. Thus does he serve his country honorably until the close of the war; though the heart of his parent is untouched. He has no son.

The boy carves a name for himself in civil life. The war is over. He enters college and then educates himself for the law. But dark days have come upon the old man—the father. He is about to be ejected from the old homestead, and this news comes to the ears of the boy, who is now on the fair road to prosperity.

So one day he comes back. But his parents recognize him not. He makes himself known and is clasped in his dear mother's arms. The father turns from him—though his old heart wells up with tears. The boy stretches forth his hand and suddenly all barriers are thrust aside; father and son unite in one loving embrace.

LAW OR THE LADY

Champion Release October 25

This story concerns Dan Coulee a supposed cattleman, his only daughter, Mary, and her sweetheart, Bob Weston. Bob has been elected sheriff, a position to which only a man of undoubted courage can aspire; but Bob has both courage and honor in a higher degree, as the sequel will show.

Bob is elated at his good luck and comes to tell his sweetheart. Her father is there at the time, but doesn't seem to share the enthusiasm engendered—yet he likes Bob amazingly and has no objection to Bob marrying his daughter. But if Mary was overjoyed at the good fortune of Bob, she was also harassed with fear for his safety, as Bob's first mission was to capture a noted outlaw known as "Black Robert."

This man had been terrorizing the vicinity for some time, doing his work single handed, and his deeds were much talked of. Dan Coulee could have wished that anyone else than Bob had gotten the sheriff's job; perhaps because of the desperate character of the bandit. Dan is frequently absent from home, and during one of his stay-away periods, Bob hears that Black Robert is again at large.

It so happens that Bob's posse are compelled to return, and Bob decides to follow the trail of the outlaw alone, for which undertaking his bravery and heroism are rewarded with success. His daring riding and unsurpassed courage has done for him what others have failed in—he has captured the famous Black Robert!

Is he happy in his triumph? No, he is downhearted and miserable, for his prisoner is none other than the father of his own sweetheart, Dan Coulee—the supposed cattleman. No wonder Dan hated to see his intended son-in-law become sheriff. The situation aroused a terrific mental struggle within Bob. Should he arrest or release Dan? Each thought brought him pain.

His sense of duty won out. And thus he brought the bandit to justice. It is needless to say that Mary was broken-hearted. But she saw that while her father was lacking in goodness, she had found in her sweetheart one who could rise sublimely above all self-considerations and dare to do right, in choosing "The Law or the Lady."

HER SISTER

Rex Release October 19

Since Cupid first began the gentle pastime of playing havoc with hearts, many have been the sacrifices laid at his shrine. He has given many swains swats for his sweets. He has caused people to remember, he has caused many to forget; men have forgotten manhood and honor, women have forgotten womanhood and virtue, sisters and brothers have forgotten fraternal ties. Many times sisters have loved the same man, and often one has suffered and sorrowed and made the sacrifice.

Dorothy Blake, like four or five others before her, tires of the country. She determines to go to the city—and does so. She comes to the city, with its lights and its darkness and secures work in an office. Enter Cupid. Her employer has eyes that see; he observes that she is graceful, notes she is pretty, realizes she is "different," and discovers that he loves her. And the country girl, with her sweet simplicity and simple sweetness, gives to him the greatest gift of humans, the fire and faith of a first love.

She goes home to the farm on her vacation, and tells of the ways and wonders of the city. And her younger sister opens wide eyes, and wonders, and wanders, in her turn, to the town. . . .

A change comes over the man, and the woman's intuition is quick to notice it. Many bills come to the office for flowers delivered to Dolly Pelham, a dancer at one of the theaters, and Dorothy realizes that he has become infatuated with the actress. One night she follows him to the theater tnd sees him applauding—her sister on the stage. Dazed, she goes to the dressing room, and learns of her sister's arrival in town and her success on the stage. They talk, and the little actress hears, and learns, and decides. The next week she leaves town.

Dorothy and the man who had been but a man marry. A year later they visit the old people on the farm. At the time the younger sister is home for a rest. He is presented to her, starts, stares, understands, and wonders at the strangeness of a world.

A BITING BUSINESS

Imp Release October 23

A clever story in which the tables are turned on a coterie of real estate sharks.

Felix Hardin is a hard-working old man employed as a bookkeeper in a large concern. He has a large family and is wrapped up in his wife and children. He longs to take them out of the heat of the city to enjoy the balmy air of the country. The occasion presents itself.

Clifton, a dealer in real estate, visits the office where he is working and calls his attention to a glowing advertisement, offering bungalow lots very cheap. Hardin is not a business man and is very gullible. He looks at the plat of the lots and is infatuated with the idea of owning one. The payments are easy and he is persuaded to part with the contents of his pay envelope as a first instalment. He returns home and gleefully explains the deal to his wife. She does not share in his enthusiasm as there are bills to meet and she had counted on his weekly salary to pay them. She is mollified, however, when she sees the glowing press matter and the plat of the lot.

When summer comes Hardin has a vacation and he packs his family off to the shore to feast their eyes on the lot. He finds it with some difficulty and learns that he has been the victim of a cruel swindle, the lot being situated in a mosquito infested swamp in an isolated spot. All the members of the family give vent to their feelings in tears. Hardin crumples up the deed for the lot and casts it into the bog and the family walk away downhearted.

Montgomery, a wealthy real estate dealer, has built a bungalow near the site of Hardin's lot and comes down with his wife for the summer. The mosquitoes make life miserable for them and he investigates. In order to rid himself of the pests Montgomery is informed the swamp must be drained and filled and he decides to purchase the property and stop the breeding of the insects. Clifton calls upon him and they walk out to inspect the swamp.

Hardin overhears the conversation and then steals away and fishes out the deed to his lot. He is approached by the sharks and holds out for an exorbitant sum for his purchase and gets it to his joy. A case of the biter being stung good and hard.

THE WAIF

Imp Release October 26

Alice is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Jason Meridith, who reside on a farm. The girl is a handsome young woman and is loved by Anson Russell. He is looked upon as a ne'er do well by her father, who discovers them enjoying a stolen meeting. The father upbraids the daughter and the result is a clandestine marriage.

Meridith is furious and drives Alice and her husband from his house, forbidding them to return. He wishes to obliterate all memories of his disobedient daughter and dashes her picture to the floor. Mrs. Meridith—a kind and motherly woman—loves the daughter, but is cowed by the irascible husband. She picks up the photograph of Alice and places it in the garret without the knowledge of her husband. She visits the garret often and weeps, kissing the picture and other little mementoes of the daughter that are near and dear to her.

The years pass and Alice writes that Anson is dead and she is left alone in the world, poor and with a boy to support. The mother tries to secretly send her money, but is detected in the act by the father and the letter is destroyed. He forbids her to have any communication with the daughter.

The young mother is stricken by illness and dies, leaving the son, Elmer, a waif on the streets, uncared for and neglected. He ekes out an existence by selling papers. One day he is picked up by an officer and sent to a fresh air farm, which is located near the Meridith farm. At the institution he is made welcome and the boy grows stronger. At his delight at escaping from the congested city, he wanders into the orchard of his grandfather and the old man—a child hater—injures him by throwing a stone. He is found suffering by his grandmother and carried to the garret of the farmhouse, where she attends to his hurt and leaves him. The boy's curiosity is aroused and in searching about the garret he finds the picture of his mother and recognizes the portrait with astonishment. Placing it inside his shirt, he descends the stairway and walks out into the barnyard, where he falls asleep on a bench.

His grandfather approaches and sees the little poacher and is indignant. Grabbing the boy, he shakes him violently and the picture of his daughter, the child's mother, falls to the ground. The irate old man picks it up and demands an explanation. The boy, not understanding the treatment, replies that it is the picture of his mother. The kind old grandmother is drawn to the scene and hears the declaration. She clasps the boy in her arms. The heart of the obdurate old man is melted and the couple are overjoyed to find their grandson.

A CORNER IN CRIMINALS

Solax Release October 18

Chief of Police Ketcham Swift hears that Slinky Sam, an escaped convict, is in town. He tells this to Willet Print, police reporter of the Morning Wheeze. The reporter suggests a plan to capture the convict. The scheme looks good to the chief. The next edition of the Morning Wheeze contains a big article stating that Slinky Sam has been found innocent and that a full pardon and a cash compensation will be given him when he is found. The next day all the bums in the city present themselves to the chief of police, each claiming to be Slinky Sam. The reporter loses his job, and while going down the street is "panhandled" by a bum. Being in an angry mood, he sails into the bum and hands him a good licking. The bum's shirt is torn and the reporter recognizes a tatoo mark, which is one of the identification points of Slinky Sam. He hustles the bum to the police station and the chief is so pleased that he hastens to have Willet Print restored to his place on the paper.

A LOVER'S RUSE

Mrs. Bougow has the rheumatism and she calls her daughters to dress her, but they see their lovers and leave their mother half dressed. Mrs. Bougow finds the four making love, and orders the boys to leave and not come back. Jack gets an idea of how to win the old lady's consent to her daughters marrying him and Frank. When Mrs. Bougow goes for a walk she is assailed by a tramp and Jack comes to her rescue. Soon after she is attacked by a big bear, but once more Jack saves her by killing the bear. Frank gets out of the bear skin and soon overtakes Jack and Mrs. Bougow, and all three return to her home, where she gives her blessing to the four lovers.

HIS BETTER SELF

Solax Release October 20

Ethel, the beautiful daughter of Col. Dunn, is in love with Captain Field. Her friend, Margaret Maney, is visiting her and is much interested in the colonel's son, Dick. The colonel recommends Capt. Field for an important mission, and Dick, who wished it for himself, becomes enraged to such an extent that he insults Capt. Field at the club and starts a row, for which the colonel holds Capt. Field responsible and places him under arrest. The colonel then changes his recommendation and puts in his son's name instead.

Ethel refuses to believe that her lover is guilty and manages to bring him to the house. He refuses, however, to disclose the name of the real offender. At this point Dick's better self comes to the surface and he sets Capt. Field right with the colonel.

THE DRUMMER BOY OF SHILOH

Yankee Release October 23

The year '61 is a memorable one in the history of this country. Thousands of loyal patriots gave up their lives upon the battlefield and left widows and orphans to the tender mercies of charity. Boys, little more than children, were among the many heroes who died on the battlefield. The boy of Shiloh, too young to carry a musket, but too patriotic to remain at home, entered the service as a drummer. With patriotic fervor he beat his drum and lead the brave boys into battle. Marching through the flying shot and shell at the head of his column he did not think of self, but of his beloved cause and his lonely mother at home.

In the din of battle, the groans of the wounded and dying, the little drummer boy kept at his appointed task and the beat of his drum urged the tired boys in blue to greater efforts. A stray bullet finally silenced the drum and the drummer. His last dying thought was of his mother and her teachings. Thoughts of his childhood days when at his mother's knee became vividly portrayed in his last moments.

Hardened men, who had seen death every minute of the day, and who faced death all the time, gathered about the little crumpled form and with tears streaming down their cheeks listened to the prayers of the dying drummer boy of Shiloh.

"Look down upon the battlefield,
Oh, Thou, our Heavenly Friend,
Have mercy on our sinful souls,"
The soldiers cried, "Amen."

FLOWER OF THE FOREST

Yankee Release October 27

A roving band of gypsies plying their trades of fortune telling, horse dealing and basket weaving encamp close to the estate of Captain Laverock, and, unable to resist the temptation of poaching, one of their number is caught red-handed by the captain and receives a severe beating. He leaves the grounds vowing vengeance.

The captain, upon reaching his home, is accosted by one of the gypsy maids, whose wild beauty attracts his attention. He meets the girl secretly and finally falls madly in love with her. His mad infatuation finally comes to the knowledge of his fiancee, who immediately breaks her engagement. The captain, while out hunting, is shot at by Lemuel, the gypsy whom the captain had whipped for poaching, and who is seen escaping by the gypsy maid. She finds the captain wounded and conceals him in the woods close to the camp.

Stealing some food from the camp, she is detected and is followed by the king, and several of the gypsies. The girl is brought back to camp and is placed in solitary confinement. She receives a note from the captain begging for a meeting and when the camp is asleep she steals forth, meets the captain and informs him who fired the shot. She is banished from the camp and is at a loss where to go. The captain, on being informed of her banishment, brings her to his home and makes her his wife.

THE TEMPTATIONS OF SAINT ANTHONY

Ambrosio Release October 18

Anthony is shown as a patrician, feasting and drinking, surrounded by slaves and beautiful women. His favorite proves unfaithful and Anthony is about to slay his rival when his hand is stayed by a Christian priest. Anthony is converted, relinquishing a life of luxury and giving to the poor his silken raiment and costly jewels. As a holy hermit he retires to a cave, and the Evil One tries to tempt him back to his former life. Hideous, grinning devils crawl about him and are instantly transformed into women of wondrous beauty. Anthony withstands the temptations and goes out and preaches to the multitudes. The woman tries to ensnare him again, but his eloquent appeal to heaven to save her soul moves her to reformation. Her death while clasping the cross is compellingly acted and touching.

A WARRIOR'S TREACHERY

Bison Release October 20

As the hunting party is leaving, White Swan bids Big Deer an affectionate farewell. Thunder Cloud is furiously jealous but conceals his emotion.

He lags behind, and as the canoes wind down the stream he turns back, hurries to the village, ties White Swan's hands and compels her to accompany him. When Big Deer returns home he takes the trail and locates Thunder Cloud's camp fire. A thrilling fight takes place in which White Swan helps her lover overpower Thunder Cloud, and the reunited couple float down the stream, the girl tenderly bathing the wounds of her red knight.

BILL PAYS HIS DEBTS

Lux Release October 20

Bill, the jolly little "Lux" comedian, is dead broke, and his hard-hearted creditors gather round like carrion crows. In vain he tries his wiley arts and blandishments upon them. It is quite evident that he will either have to go to America and there get married or go to work. Bill sallies forth in search of employment or a rich widow, not particularly caring which in his despair, and chances upon a stray bear. Bruin decides to go into partnership with William and they soon scare away all the creditors. The way Bruin handles the creditors causes much wholesome fun and cannot fail to appeal to young and old. From the small boy, sitting in the front row with his optics face glued upon the screen, to the fat old gent at the back of the hall, will be a sea of smiling faces. Try it.

HENPECKED BERTIE GOES FISHING

Henpecked Bertie and the henpecker sit one sultry afternoon in their garden beside the river. The Henpecker has a headache and so the Henpecked has to stay home. He makes several amusing attempts to escape but in vain, for the eagle eye of the Henpecker watches over all. Finally the Henpecked one is provided with a rod and line and told to exhaust his superfluous energy tempting little fishes to partake of a fat little worm. The Henpecker retires to the house where she can survey the piscatorical efforts of her beloved. Bertie then establishes communication with some fellow members of the Honorable Order of the Henpecked, and they row off in a boat leaving a very fair but inanimate model of Bertie dangling his line in the silvery stream. Bertie goes off to the casion and has high jinks. Later Mrs. The Henpecker comes from her watch tower and, in embracing the supposed Bertie, knocksc the said Bertie into the river. She then dives in to save him, and things look very serious. Bertie happens to be surveying the result of his prank from afar off, and he witnesses this thrilling rescue. He forgets all previous wiggins, plunges into the river, arriving just in time to save his wife. Explanations follow and now it is the Henpecked who has turned Henpecker. Verily doth the cuckoo mock married men but it is delightful to be married all the same.

LITTLE EM'LY AND DAVID COPPERFIELD

Thanhouser Release October 24

The persons who are prominent in this chapter of David's life move about in an atmospherc surcharged with tragedy. All the opportunities for the presentation of dramatic situations, strong climaxes and expressive pantomime have been taken advantage of.

The scenes "come over" with sincerity and resonant force. They infect one with sympathy and strike chords which are sure to bring tears to the most hardened. Often with these tears will mingle laughter. Indeed, tears and laughter are inseparable companions.

The picture shows David already grown to manhood at an inn at Yarmouth. Here he meets Steerforth, a chum of his boyhood days at the Salem House. David invites Steerforth to come with him to visit his friends at Yarmouth. They arrive just when the announcement is made of the engagement of little Em'ly to Ham. David is enthusiastic and congratulates the seemingly happy couple. He then introduces Steerforth, who is attracted by little Em'ly's simple beauty. At the first opportunity he makes love to her. Little Em'ly sees in the suave Steerforth her ideal and eventually he is able to induce the misguided girl to elope with him to Italy. Before leaving she sends a note to Ham, which wrings the heart of her faithful lover.

In Italy, the caddsh Steerforth tires of Em'ly and deserts her. Little Em'ly then finds herself adrift.

Later, after a long illness, broken in spirit and mind, she arrives in London where Mr. Peggotty and David find her and provide for her future.

In the meantime Steerforth sails for England. The boat in which he sails is wrecked off the coast of Yarmouth. Ham sights the wreck and in an attempted rescue is drowned. Steerforth's body is washed ashore. Whimsical fate brings the bodies of Steerforth and Ham side by side. The last scene closes with David, hat in hand and bowed head, standing between the bodies of two of his friends.

THE JEWELS OF ALLAH

Thanhouser Release October 20

A mosque in the desert, where Arabs worship, is looted by a band of the Foreign Legion, and the jewels stolen by the officer in command, a reckless French count. A sheik, unable to save the gems, vows to devote his life to recovering them and patiently tracks the count over land and sea to England.

The count meets an American girl, whose father has millions, and makes desperate love to her. The girl has a faithful suitor, a young American, but the dazzle of the title wins her, and she agrees to marry the man who has a romantic career and an established title.

Through one of his faithful allies the sheik learns of the engagement, and sets off for the summer home of the millionaire. He spies about the house, and looks into the window in time to see the count gravely investing his fiancee with his "family jewels," which are really the loot of the Arabian temple.

The sheik determines to recover by force the gems that were stolen by violence. At night, when all in the house have retired, he forces a way in. But he is just a trifle too late. For the girl, afraid to keep such valuables in her own room, steals downstairs and places them in her father's safe. Just as she swings the door shut the sheik enters and overpowers her. He binds and gags the girl, and while she sits helpless in the room he works to open the safe.

The girl frees herself of the gag, but is afraid to scream for help, as the dangerous-looking Arab, with his sharp knife, is only a few feet away. But the telephone is near her, and while the attention of the intruder is distracted she takes the receiver from the hook with her teeth (her hands being still bound) and softly calls up the man she knows she can rely upon in an emergency, her American admirer.

That young man, seated gloomily in his library, hears the call and is prompt in responding. He does not wait to get other help; he only realizes that the girl he loves is in danger, and he hastens to her side. The sheik puts up a good battle, but is speedily overpowered. Then explanations are demanded.

The man from the desert explains his mission. He convinces them that he is not a criminal, but a victim of injustice. The count does not deny his guilt, but tries to justify himself. The girl listens to him in silence, then turns the jewels over to the Arab, saying that she does not want the jewels of a thief, nor will she marry one.

The Arab, full of joy, returns to his desert. The count presumably goes back to France, while the young couple are happy ever after.

THE TOWN MARSHAL

Nestor Release October 18

Poor Major Wright was feeling thoroughly out of sorts, for of late Hiram Ciders, the town constable, seemed to be making considerable progress in his courtship of Miss Judith Mullen. But could the major have read the wealthy spinster's feelings aright, however, he would have found no cause for alarm, for so busy had the good lady been in looking after her niece, Flossie, that she had found little time for aught else.

Not that "auntie" had any objection to Dick Morgan as her niece's suitor, but she considered the girl too young to wed. Indeed, so closely did she keep watch on Flossie that Dick, coached by the girl's governess, determined to put an end to their stolen meetings by boldly proposing for his sweetheart's hand. To Dick's consternation, "auntie," wishing to frighten the young man away altogether, pretended that she believed he was proposing to her—nor did she dismiss the boy until she had given him two very uncomfortable hours.

Dick's turn for revenge came, however, when he met "auntie's" two admirers, and told each that the other had just proposed to the fair Judith. The result was a quarrel, ending in Major Wright challenging Hiram Ciders to a duel. Dick and James Hurley, who had been asked to act as seconds, had no intentions of having any blood shed, and therefore carefully extracted the real cartridges from the combatants' revolvers and replaced them with blanks; then, sending a note to Miss Judith Mullen of her admirers' intentions, mentioning the time and place, they calmly awaited the appointed hour. Not so Hiram Ciders, for Major Wright was far too good a shot to permit him to be calm. Nevertheless, owing to James Hurley's vigilance, the shivering constable was unable to slip away, as had been his intention, and was led, pale and trembling, to the "Field of Honor."

While the backs of the group were turned he made a wild dash for liberty, so that when "auntie" arrived, she found only the hardy old major. And so pleaser was that lady at her hero's gallantry that she promptly accepted him then and there, and Dick, instantly seizing the favorable moment, was at last overjoyed to receive "auntie's" consent to his marriage with her niece.

MUTT AND JEFF JOIN THE OPERA

Nestor Release October 21

Grand opera offers vast opportunities to real singers—there's heaps of money in singing. Mutt is an opportunist, also a singer (so he thinks) and decides to join the operatic field. Jeff's aspirations are laughed to scorn by Mutt, who alone and swaggeringly goes to the Opera House. Here the stage hands have considerable fun with the lanky chap, and when the Musical Director tries his voice —oh! oy, oy! Fortunately for Mutt an untrained ear is wanted to try the voices of applicants, and he gets the job.

Jeff, feeling pretty sore, sallies forth bent on getting a job for himself. On meeting an actorine friend of his, he is overjoyed to hear that her manager is looking for singers. Would Jeff apply for a posish? Would he?

Mutt tries Jeff's voice, and of course he finds it "rotten." The Musical Director, however, believes otherwise and almost goes "dippy" over Jeff's high C. The tables are turned. Mutt is promoted to do sweeping, while Jeff is engaged at a large salary as leading tenor of the Doughpolitan Opera Co. The manager gladly obliges him with a liberal advance, and Jeff, with his actress friend, goes out to celebrate the event.

Outside of the stage door they almost run into poor Mutt industriously sweeping the sidewalk. Such are the mysterious workings of Fate! On the same reel

THAT BLESSED BABY

After Baby Lovering and its doting parents have departed from the quiet Simpson boarding-house out in the country, a lonesome feeling pervades the hearts of the old spinsters, Margaret and Elizabeth Simpson.

As the baby is the cause of their lonesomeness, they decide to adopt a child and fill that aching void. Margaret stays behind to take care of the house and Elizabeth goes to the Orphan Asylum, where she soon gathers a lusty babe to her bosom.

On the train, while about to return to the farmhouse, she sees the Loverings in the train just coming in. Desirous to exchange a few words with them, she places the baby in the reluctant arms of a minister and rushes out. The minister, believing it a case of desertion, rushes to catch the woman, who, thinking the good man a kidnapper, frantically seeks to regain the child.

Chases and counterchases follow, but neither the woman nor the man seem able to connect. An element of mistaken identity creeps in and the minister finds himself in the thickest of trouble. He's mighty glad when matters straighten out at last. As for that blessed baby—it is safe and happy in the home of its two mothers, the old Simpson sisters.

FIRST MAIL BY AEROPLANE

Powers Release October 17

A topical picture showing the first letter and the first mail pouch ever carried in an airship as a regular Government carrier. A U. S. post-office was officially opened at each end of the course at Garden City, L. I., N. Y. Souvenir postcards were sent to their home addresses by the spectators. These were collected and cancelled in the regular way, after which they were taken to the aeroplane by a U. S. letter carrier. The aviator, Capt. Beck, U.S.A., strapped the pouch to the machine and started on his way. The cards were delivered and the owners will no doubt prize them as souvenirs. The flights are well taken and clearly shown.

HEADLINE ACROBATS

A comedy acrobatic act by a well-known knockabout team now playing over the large vaudeville circuits. Their amazing feats are a pleasing contrast to the regular run of pictures and furnish a vaudeville act far above the usual class of picture-house vaudeville. A $200 act for ten cents.

YARN OF A BABY'S SHIRT

A heavy-weight colored lady is sitting outside the kitchen door knitting a shirt for her pickaninny, who sits contentedly by in his high chair counting his toes. Presently another colored woman calls the mammy and she goes inside after putting the unfinished shirt on the pickaninny and the ball of yarn on her chair. The baby's half-grown brother is flying a kite but has not enough string, and is looking for some when he spies the ball of yarn, which he steals and goes away to tie it to the kite. The kite is soon in the air, but the other end of the yarn is attached to the baby's shirt. As the kite rises the shirt begins to unravel and the poor pickaninny is losing his shirt. Finally the kite gets away and carries the youngster with it. There is a great commotion in the village and a crowd is soon in pursuit of the infant aviator. At length the string breaks and the baby is caught in the arms of a farmer. The heavy-weight colored lady arrives on the scene and there metes out deserved punishment to her first-born.

HIS FIDELITY INVESTIGATED

Great Northern Release October 21

Mr. Brown, a young married gentleman, is in need of a young lady as private secretary at his office, and inserts an advertisement in one of the daily papers. He mentions this fact to his wife at the breakfast table, and after he leaves for the office she immediately decides upon a course of action to test her husband's faithfulness, believing that this is the right opportunity. She calls up an intimate friend and together they proceed to a detective agency, where they acquire the services of an attractive young lady detective to apply at Mr. Brown's office for the situation. Thoroughly enjoying her new case, this young lady detective is seen entering the office of Mr. Brown, who is not slow in deciding that she is just the young lady he wants. He is very enthusiastic about his private secretary, and does not lose much time in conveying this fact to her, much to the chagrin of the office clerk, who is also violently smitten with her. At this point Mrs. Brown, having received her cue, enters the office and upon finding the door closed peeps through the keyhole. She is rather dismayed at what she sees, but quickly decides to get even. Mr. Brown, hearing sounds in the outer office, also looks out through the keyhole, and sees his wife embracing the clerk. The door opens, and Mrs. Brown confronts her husband, while the private secretary departs, having accomplished her end to the entire satisfaction of Mrs. Brown. Mr. Brown has later a very difficult task to perform, namely, that of assuring his wife of his faithfulness, and while thus engaged the former private secretary enters unannounced, and presents her bill to Mrs. Brown for services rendered in investigating Mr. Brown's fidelity.

GUARANTEED ACCURATE PARTS for all MOTION PICTURE MACHINES at very reasonable prices. SPECIAL parts and machines as also experimental parts made to order. All repair work on MOVING PICTURE MACHINES promptly attended to at remarkably low figures. CHAS. E. DRESSLER, 388 Second Ave., Betw. 22nd & 23rd Sts.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-Saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.

HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

BARGAINS—BARGAINS

Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Cineograph $60. Motiograph $75. Powers Cameragraph No. 5 only $110.

Edison Model B, Powers No. 6 and Standard New are Specialties.

Model B Gas Outfit, $25. Stereopticons, Opaque Magic Lanterns, Etc.

Motion Picture Machines Wanted.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Detroit, Mich.—A new theater will be erected at Grand River and Trumbull avenues.

Galva, Ill.—The Columbia Theater here has been sold to the Princess Theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Work will soon start on the new theater to be erected on the Plankinton site.

St. Cloud, Minn.—The Princess Theater Circuit Co. has been organized here with a capital of $25,000.

Ogden, Utah.—The Oracle Theater Co., capital $10,000. Chas. Ziemer, H. T. Moore and H. A. Sims.

Wakefield, Mass.—A new theater is to be erected by C. W. Hodgson, of the Princess Theater, on Mechanic street.

Parsons, Kan.—John H. Kamm has sold the Gem Moving Picture Show to Niles Moore.

Waverly, Ohio.—Mr. Stillwell, of Springfield, has purchased the New Waverly Theatre from Mr. Hays.

Covington, Ky.—Plans are being completed for the building of a new vaudeville theater at Madison avenue and Seventh street.

Louisville, Ky.—The Preston Theater Co. will erect a new motion picture show at Preston and Camp streets, to cost $10,000.

New York, N. Y.—Plans have been prepared for the erection of a new theater at Forty-second street and Eighth avenue, to cost $77,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Allegheny Amusement Co. is having plans prepared for a new $25,000 theater at 3139 Frankford avenue.

New York, N. Y.—Atlantic Theater Co., capital $10,000.

Sterling, Ill.—The Elks are planning the erection of a new theater here.

Portland, Ore.—John Sullivan will erect a theater at 703 Powell street to cost $5,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Big Four Amusement Co., capital $12,000. H. M. Rosenblaum, S. Spitzer and E. Mayer.

Bloomer, Wis.—The Gem Theater Building was struck by lightning and destroyed. Loss, about $2,000.

Chicago, Ill.—Pritiken & Hemmelstien will erect a new theater at 1320-22 Northwestern avenue, to cost $15,000.

WANTED TO BUY

1000 Second-hand Moving Picture Machine Heads. Write and tell us what you have and how much.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY COMPANY

178 N. STATE STREET
CHICAGO, ILL.

CASH FOR MOVING PICTURE PLOTS

Demand practically unlimited. Writers can earn $50 or more weekly. Literary excellence unnecessary. If you can read, write, and think, you need only technical knowledge to succeed in this pleasant, fascinating profession. We must have more playwrights and we'll teach you the technical secrets. Send your name and address at once for Free Booklet.

NATIONAL AUTHORS' INSTITUTE
220 GAIETY THEATRE BLDG.,
New York, N. Y.

PERFORATING MACHINES

TO FILM MANUFACTURERS.

If you require an accurate, adjustable film perforator, built specially for negatives,

BUY THE MICROMETRIC

Manufactured by

CHRONIK BROTHERS
73 Gold Street, New York.

GREAT STUFF

The independent manufacturers are more on their mettle than ever before. They're releasing some of the greatest stuff I ever saw in my life. I can give you a program that will simply tickle your gizzardo. Hook up while the hooking's good!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
New number 204 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa.

The biggest and best film renter in the world.

(My free employment bureau is swamped with mail. Get in!)

WANTED

MOTION PICTURE

PLAYS

You can write them. We teach beginners by mail in 10 easy lessons. No previous experience necessary. Demand increasing and better prices being paid for good work.

Our graduates are selling their plays to all companies.

Write for details

ASSOCIATED MOTION PICTURE SCHOOLS
799 CHICAGO OPERA HOUSE
CHICAGO, ILL.

Theatre Sales Co.

211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341

Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call.
Make Known your Wants

When Writing Advertisers Please Mention Moving Picture News

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Powers and Motiograph Machines, and will Exchange for Either, or Any Other Make You Desire.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST.
State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Electric Fans For Either A.C. or D.C., $7.50 and Up.
Exhaust Fans for Either A.C. or D.C., $15.00 and Up.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.

I Equip Your Theatre Completely

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Catalogue No. 2.

FILMS FOR RENT

Cheapest House in America
FREE LITHOGRAPHS
FREE SONGS

DIAMOND FILM CO., 538 So. Dearborn St., CHICAGO.

25c FOR BALANCE OF YEAR 25c

WE WANT 10,000 NEW SUBSCRIBERS

We want every manufacturer, exchange man, manager, operator and every one interested in the motion picture industry to become a regular subscriber to THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS. In order to accomplish this we will make the following unprecedented offer.

Write your name and address on a slip, enclose the same to us with 25c in stamps and we will send you the NEWS for the balance of the year.

Remember, this offer is not for any other period, but is a special inducement for you to become better acquainted with the best, most reliable and only absolutely Independent motion picture publication.

The Art of Scenario Writing

By Wm. Lord Wright

Endorsed by the best scenario editors in the trade

$1.00 each

A year's subscription to MOVING PICTURE NEWS including this valuable book for $2.00 :: :: ::

Only a few on hand
First come, first served

We give a copy of HAVILAND'S MOVING PICTURE PIANIST'S ALBUM free with a year's subscription to MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

F. B.
HAVILAND'S
MOVING PICTURE
PIANIST'S ALBUM
CONTAINING AN ASSORTMENT OF MELODIES ADAPTED TO EVERY CLASS AND STYLE OF PICTURES AND DUMB ACTS
BRILLIANTLY YET SIMPLY ARRANGED for PIANO
By
EUGENE PLATZMAN
FIFTY CENTS
F. B. HAVILAND PUB. CO. NEW YORK

$2.00 PER YEAR

MOVING PICTURE NEWS,
30 West 13th Street. New York City

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

		Feet
Sept. 20	Tweedledum's Riding Boots (Com.)
Sept. 20	Tiny Tom as a Detective
Sept. 23	The Mask of the Red Death
Sept. 27	Alice's Dream
Sept. 23	The Hornet (Com.)
Sept. 27	Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)
Oct. 4	Wrestlers and Wrestling
Oct. 11	The Little Chimney Sweeper
Oct. 14	Tweedledum's Monkey
Oct. 14	One of Tweedledum's Tricks (Com.)
Oct. 18	The Conversion of St. Anthony

AMERICAN

Aug. 24	Aunty and the Cowhoys (Com.)
Aug. 28	The Western Doctor's Peril (Dr.)
Aug. 31	The Diamond Smugglers (Dr.)
Sept. 4	The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7	Three Million Dollars (W. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 11	The Stage Robbers of San Juan (W. Com.-Dr.)
Sept. 14	The Mother of the Ranch (W. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 18	The Gun Man
Sept. 21	The Claim Jumper
Sept. 25	The Circular Fence (Com. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 28	The Rustler Sheriff (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	The Love of the West (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 5	The Miner's Wife (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 9	The Land Thieves (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 12	The Cowboy and the Outlaw (Dr.)	1000

CHAMPION

Sept. 11	Charley's Butte (Dr.)
Sept. 13	The Red Devils (Dr.)	950
Sept. 18	Shenandoah	950
Sept. 20	The Stolen Horse	950
Sept. 25	The Black Horse Troop of Culver	950
Sept. 27	The Cook of the Ranch	950
Oct. 2	Barhara Frietchie	950
Oct. 4	As Things Used to Be	950
Oct. 9	The National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley	950
Oct. 11	What the Indians Did	950
Oct. 16	A Girl and a Spy (Dr.)	950
Oct. 18	Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)	950
Oct. 23	The Copperhead	950
Oct. 25	Law or the Lady	950

ECLAIR

Aug. 7	The Sorrowful Mother (Dr.)
Aug. 7	Too Much Swedish Drill (Com.)
Aug. 14	The Connecting Link (Dr.)
Aug. 21	The Edelweiss
Aug. 21	How They Work in Cinema (Com.)
Aug. 28	A Marriage in the Stars (Com.)	755
Sept. 4	All On Account of a Coat (Com.)	886
Sept. 11	How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris	630
Sept. 11	How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.)	335
Sept. 18	Magic Music	330
Sept. 18	When the Leaves Fall	665
Sept. 25	A Just General (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	Hearts and Eyes	630
Oct. 2	For Your Hats, Ladies	370
Oct. 9	Better to Have Remained Blind (Dr.)	740
Oct. 9	The Motor Chair (Com.)	260

GREAT NORTHERN

July 29	The Engagement Ring (Dr.)
July 29	A Happy Home
Aug. 5	The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.)
Aug. 12	The Mother's Mark (Dr.)
Aug. 12	Teddy Trained by His Mother (Com.)
Aug. 19	The Victory of Love (Dr.)	950
Aug. 26	A Traitor to His Country (Dr.)
Sept. 2	The Foundling (Dr.)
Sept. 9	A Dream with a Lesson
Sept. 16	The Conspirators (Dr.)
Sept. 23	Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)
Sept. 30	The Conspirators (Dr.)
Oct. 7	The White Tulip (Com.)
Oct. 7	Barcelona (Scenic)
Oct. 14	Secret of the Underground Passage (Dr.)

IMP
Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Aug. 18	Bill Tries to Make Bread
Aug. 21	Battle of the Wills (Dr.)	500
Aug. 21	Love in a Tepee (Dr.)	500
Aug. 24	As a Boy Dreams (Dr.)	1000
Aug. 28	His Royal Highness (Com.)
Aug. 28	Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.)
Aug. 31	The Toss of a Coin (Com.)
Sept. 4	The Haunted House (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7	Duty (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 11	By the House that Jack Built (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 14	The Brothers (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 18	The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood
Sept. 18	The Bicycle Bug's Dream
Sept. 21	By Registered Mail
Sept. 25	The Co-Ed. Professor (Com.)	750
Sept. 25	Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.)	250
Sept. 28	'Tween Two Loves (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	The Rose's Story (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 5	Through the Air (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 9	The Sentinel Asleep
Oct. 12	The Better Way
Oct. 16	Uncle Pete's Ruse
Oct. 19	The Aggressor
Oct. 23	The Biting Business
Oct. 26	The Waif

ITALA

July 20	The Charitable Young Lady (Dr.)
July 22	Foolshead's Heels (Com.)
July 27	The Fatal Sonata (Dr.)
July 29	Toto's Butterfly (Com.)
July 29	Toto Without Water (Com.)
Aug. 3	The Evening Bell
Aug. 5	Foolshead's Last Roguery
Aug. 12	Sport Restores Youth
Aug. 17	Toto's Little Cart
Aug. 17	In the Valley of Viege
Aug. 19	Foolshead—Manikin
Aug. 19	The Blunt Sword
Aug. 24	Modern School of Italian Cavalry
Aug. 26	Foolshead—Chauffeur
Aug. 26	For a Straw
Sept. 2	Clio and Phyletes
Sept. 7	The Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dr.)
Sept. 9	Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.)
Sept. 9	Toto Has a Purse
Sept. 16	The Horse of the Regiment (Com.)
Sept. 16	Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.)
Sept. 23	The Mask of the Red Death
Sept. 23	The Hornet
Oct. 7	Foolshead a Model Guest

LUX.
By Prieur.

Aug. 25	Bill Follows the Doctor's Orders
Aug. 25	What a Pennyworth Did
Sept. 1	Bill as a Game-Keeper (Com.)	504
Sept. 1	The Invisible Wrestler (Com.)	340
Sept. 8	Bill Buys a Lobster (Com.)	350
Sept. 8	A Romance of a Wager (Dr.)	642
Sept. 15	Bill as a Billposter (Com.)	573
Sept. 15	His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.)	357
Sept. 22	Bill as an Express Messenger (Com.)	344
Sept. 22	The Stolen Diamond (Dr.)	629
Sept. 29	Bill and His Friend (Com.)	491
Sept. 29	The Little Goatherd (Dr.)	886
Oct. 6	Bill Has a Bath (Com.)	452
Oct. 6	Neighbors (Com.)	488
Oct. 13	A Dog in a Coiner's Den (Dr.)	593
Oct. 13	Bill, Police Cyclist (Com.)	390
Oct. 20	Bill Pays His Debts (Com.)	442
Oct. 20	Henpecked Bertie Goes Fishing (Com.)	514

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

Sept. 9	Mutt and Jeff and the Escaped Lunatic (Com.)
Sept. 13	At Perry's Ranch (Dr.)
Sept. 16	Mutt and Jeff and the Newsboys (Com.)
Sept. 20	Across the Divide (Dr.)
Sept. 23	Mutt and Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Com.)
Sept. 23	Obliging a Friend (Com.)
Sept. 27	The Young Doctor (Dr.)
Sept. 30	Mutt and Jeff as Reporters (Com.)
Sept. 30	Getting Even (Com.)
Oct. 4	Those Jersey Cowpunchers (Dr.)
Oct. 7	Mutt and Jeff Spend a Quiet Day in the Country (Com.)
Oct. 7	The Meddling Parson (Com.)
Oct. 11	Let Us Smooth the Way (Dr.)
Oct. 14	Mutt and Jeff and the Blackhand (Com.)
Oct. 14	Romance and Uppercuts (Com.)
Oct. 18	The Town Marshal (Com. Dr.)
Oct. 21	Mutt and Jeff Join the Opera Co.
Oct. 21	The Blessed Baby (Com.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison")

Aug. 25	Pioneer Days
Aug. 29	An Indian Legend
Sept. 1	The Sheriff's Love
Sept. 5	Little Dove's Romance
Sept. 8	A Western Tramp
Sept. 12	The Lost Letter
Sept. 15	Lone Star's Return
Sept. 19	The Sheriff's Brother
Sept. 22	The Missionary's Gratitude
Sept. 26	Lucky Boh
Sept. 29	White Fawn's Peril
Oct. 3	The Red Man's Penalty
Oct. 6	Range Justice
Oct. 10	The Pioneer's Mistake
Oct. 13	The Indian Rustlers
Oct. 17	A Western Bride
Oct. 20	A Warrior's Treachery

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

		Feet
Aug. 22	Falls of Bohemia (Scenic)
Aug. 26	The Indian's Love (Dr.)
Aug. 29	The White Chief
Sept. 2	Silver Tail and His Squaw
Sept. 5	Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.)	960
Sept. 9	The Twin Squaws (Dr.)	975
Sept. 12	Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.)	950
Sept. 16	The Horse Thief (Dr.)	950
Sept. 19	Lost in a Hotel (Dr.)
Sept. 19	An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.)
Sept. 23	Red Man's Honor (Dr.)
Sept. 26	The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.)	300
Sept. 26	Imaginative Willie (Com.)	670
Sept. 30	The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.)	970
Oct. 3	The Call from the Hills (Com.)
Oct. 3	A Matrimonial Idyl (Dr.)
Oct. 7	The Branded Indian (Dr.)
Oct. 10	Large Lakes of Italy (Scenic)	285
Oct. 10	Thou Shalt Not Steal (Com.)	700
Oct. 14	Running Fawn's Chief (Dr.)	990
Oct. 17	Yarn of a Baby's Shirt (Com.)
Oct. 17	First Mail by Aeroplane (Topical)
Oct. 17	Headline Acrohats (Com.)
Oct. 21	The Awakening of John Clark (Dr.)

RELIANCE

Sept. 27	For His Sake (Dr.)
Sept. 30	Weighed in the Scale
Oct. 4	Winning Papa's Consent
Oct. 4	A Quiet Evening
Oct. 7	The Anonymous Letter
Oct. 11	The Human Sacrifice
Oct. 14	A Narrow Escape
Oct. 18	The Trapper's Daughter
Oct. 21	Divorce

REX

Aug. 17	The Colonel's Daughter (Dr.)
Aug. 24	Castles in the Air (Com.)	1000
Aug. 31	The Torn Scarf
Sept. 7	Picturesque Colorado (Scenic)
Sept. 14	Faith (Dr.)
Sept. 21	The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.)
Sept. 28	The Derelict (Dr.)
Oct. 5	Lost Illusions (Dr.)
Oct. 12	Chasing a Rainbow

SOLAX COMPANY

Sept. 22	Nellie's Soldier (Dr.)
Sept. 27	How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Com.)
Sept. 29	An Italian's Gratitude (Dr.)
Oct. 4	A Breezy Morning (Com.)
Oct. 6	His Sister's Sweetheart (Military)
Oct. 11	He Was a Millionaire (Com.)
Oct. 13	His Mother's Hymn (Dr.)
Oct. 18	A Corner in Criminals (Com.)
Oct. 18	A Lover's Ruse (Com.)
Oct. 20	His Better Self (Mil. Dr.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug. 8	Back to Nature (Dr.)
Aug. 11	Cupid the Conqueror (Dr.)
Aug. 15	Nobody Loves a Fat Woman
Aug. 18	The Train Dispatcher (Dr.)
Aug. 22	The Cross
Aug. 25	The Romance of Lonely Island
Aug. 29	The Moth
Sept. 1	Romeo and Juliet, Part I
Sept. 5	Count Ivan and the Waitress
Sept. 8	Romeo and Juliet, Part 2
Sept. 12	The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.)
Sept. 15	In the Chorus (Dr.)
Sept. 19	The Lie (Dr.)
Sept. 22	The Honeymooners (Dr.)
Sept. 26	Lochinvar (Dr.)
Sept. 29	Love's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Oct. 3	The Five Rose Sisters (Dr.)
Oct. 6	The East and the West (Dr.)
Oct. 9	The Higher Law (Dr.)
Oct. 13	The Tempter and Dan Cupid (Dr.)
Oct. 17	The Early Life of David Copperfield
Oct. 24	Little Em'ly and David Copperfield
Oct. 31	The Loves of David Copperfield
Oct. 20	The Satyr and the Lady (Dr.)

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Aug. 21	Colleen Bawn (Dr.)
Aug. 14	A Good Natured Man (Com.)
Aug. 14	A Children's Paradise (Scenic)
Aug. 18	Her Father's Secretary (Dr.)
Aug. 21	Colleen Bawn (Dr.)
Aug. 25	Retaliation (Dr.)
Aug. 28	The Power of Devotion (Dr.)
Sept. 1	A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.)
Sept. 4	Inshavogue (Dr.)
Sept. 8	Mesmerizing Moe (Com.)
Sept. 8	Faded Roses (Dr.)
Sept. 11	Tangled Heartstrings
Sept. 15	Woman
Sept. 18	The Star Reporter
Sept. 22	The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)
Sept. 25	For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.)
Sept. 29	Man (Dr.)
Oct. 2	She Never Knew (Dr.)
Oct. 6	The Goose Girl (Dr.)
Oct. 9	His Second Wife
Oct. 13	Society Hobos
Oct. 16	The Lost Handkerchief (Com.)
Oct. 20	The Man Who Came Back (Dr.)

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

		Feet
Aug.	31—The Villain Foiled (Com)	411
Sept.	4—The Stuff Heroes Are Made Of (Dr.)	998
Sept.	7—The Old Confectioner's Mistake (Dr.)	998
Sept.	11—The Village Hero (Com.)	675
Sept.	11—The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)	321
Sept.	14—The Squaw's Love (Dr.)	998
Sept.	18—Dan, the Dandy (Com.)	998
Sept.	21—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.)	463
Sept.	21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.	534
Sept.	25—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.)	999
Sept.	28—Her Awakening (Dr.)	997
Oct.	2—Too Many Burglars (Com.)	499
Oct.	2—Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Com.)	497
Oct.	5—The Making of a Man (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—Italian Blood (Dr.)	999
Oct.	12—Trailing the Counterfeiter (Com.)	529
Oct.	12—Josh's Suicide (Com.)	469
Oct.	16—The Unveiling (Dr.)	998
Oct.	19—The Adventures of Billy (Dr.)	999

EDISON

Sept.	30—The Maiden of the Pie-Faced Indians (Com.)	500
Sept.	30—Turning the Tables (Com.)	500
Oct.	3—Eugene Wrayburn (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Summer Girl (Com.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part I (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part II (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part III (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Leaves of a Romance (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	10—How Mrs. Murray Saved the American Army (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	11—Mae's Suitors (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—At the Threshold of Life (Edu.)	1000
Oct.	14—Her Wedding Ring (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	17—An Old Sweetheart of Mine (Dr.)	945
Oct.	18—Mike's Hero (Com.)	650
Oct.	18—Launching of the Battleship Rivadavia	350
Oct.	20—A Conspiracy Against the King (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	21—Three of a Kind (Com.)	1000
Oct.	24—A Day at West Point Military Academy, N. Y.	1000
Oct.	25—The Fairies' Banquet (Com.)	400
Oct.	25—How the Telephone Came to Town (Com.)	600
Oct.	28—An Island Comedy (Com.)	1000
Oct.	28—The Kid from the Klondyke (Com.)	1000
Oct.	31—The Reform Candidate (Dr.)	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Sept.	22—Live, Love and Believe (Mil. Dr.)	980
Sept.	23—An Indian's Sacrifice (W. Dr.)	980
Sept.	26—Lost Years (Dr.)	980
Sept.	28—The Power of Good (W. Dr.)	980
Sept.	29—When He Died (Com.)	980
Sept.	30—The Strike at the "Little Johnny" Mine (W. Dr.)	980
Oct.	3—Grandma (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—Master Cupid, Detective (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The Sheriff's Decision (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Townhall, To-night (W. Com.)
Oct.	10—Reparation (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Get Rich Hall & Ford (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—The Deacon's Reward (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	14—The Stage Driver's Daughter (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	17—A False Suspicion (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—Their Tiny Babies (Com.)
Oct.	19—'Tis Better to Have Loved and Lost (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—Dr. Bill's Patient (Com.)	1000
Oct.	21—A Western Redemption (W. Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Aug.	26—The Island of Ischia, Italy	332
Aug.	29—Jimmie to the Rescue (Com.)	1000
Sept.	2—Giving the High Sign to Woman Haters (Com.)
Sept.	2—African Sharp Shooters (Sc.)	210
Sept.	5—A Society Mother (Dr.)	1030
Sept.	9—Mated by Chess (Dr.)	660
Sept.	9—Farming—Old and New Methods	378
Sept.	12—How to Catch a Bachelor (Com.)	836
Sept.	12—From Bordeaux to Paulliac, France	164
Sept.	16—The Cinematograph Fiend (Com.)	574
Sept.	16—A Mountain Torrent in Austria (Scenic)	415
Sept.	19—Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)	710
Sept.	19—Crossing the Alps in a Motor	285
Sept.	23—A Heart Breaker by Trade (Com.)	710
Sept.	23—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers	290
Sept.	26—A Friend of the Family (Com.)	850
Sept.	26—The City of Bordeaux, France (Trav.)	175
Sept.	30—Hearts May be Broken (Dr.)	1015
Oct.	3—Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Dr.)	675
Oct.	3—Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Trav.	325
Oct.	7—The Upward Way (Dr.)	726
Oct.	7—Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal	269
Oct.	10—The Missing Bracelet (Dr.)	1150
Oct.	14—Rejected (Dr.)	845
Oct.	14—Pansies (Botanical)	155
Oct.	17—Done Brown (Com.)	837
Oct.	17—A Fairyland of Frost and Snow (Scenic)	163
Oct.	21—The Masked Huntsman (Dr.)	784
Oct.	21—Opening Flowers (Botanical)	216
Oct.	24—Jimmie in Love (Com.)	555
Oct.	24—The Ostrich Plume Industry, France (Ind.)	428

KALEM CO.

Sept.	4—Rory O'More (Dr.)
Sept.	4—Rory O'More (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	6—When Two Hearts Are Won (Com.)	1000
Sept.	8—When the Sun Went Out (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	11—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	13—The Express Envelope (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	15—The Alpine Lease (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	18—The Ranger's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	20—Losing to Win (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	22—The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	25—Arizona Bill (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	29—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—The Phoney Strike Breakers (C.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Saving Sign (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—The Mistress of Hacienda Del Cerro (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	11—For the Flag of France (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	13—The Smugglers (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	16—The Colleen Bawn (3 reels)	3000
Oct.	18—Daniel Boone's Bravery (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	20—The Mesquite's Gratitude (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Sept.	20—The Life Saver (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	21—The Human Torpedo (Com.)	1000
Sept.	23—Her Inspiration (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	25—The Matchmaker (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—A Cowboy's Love (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	28—A Counterfeit Roll (Com.)	1000
Sept.	30—A Nearsighted Chaperon (Com.)	1000
Oct.	2—His Stubborn Way (Com.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Idle Boast (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—His Exoneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)
Oct.	7—From the Field to the Cradle (Ind.)	1000
Oct.	9—What Will Be, Will Be (Com.)	1000
Oct.	11—The Slavey's Affinity (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—The Gambler's Influence (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	14—A Hot Time in Atlantic City	1000
Oct.	16—The Maniac (Com.)	1000
Oct.	18—The Cure of John Douglas (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—Git a Hoss (Com.)	1000
Oct.	21—Tobacco Industry (Edu.)
Oct.	21—Her Exclusive Hat (Com.)
Oct.	21—Willie's Conscience (Com.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Aug.	17—The Local Bully (Com.)
Aug.	17—Two Foolies and Their Follies (Com.)
Aug.	24—A Spanish Love Song (Dr.)
Aug.	31—The Call of the Wilderness (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	21—$200.00 (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	28—The Mission Waif (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—The Stolen Grey (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Tommy's Rocking Horse (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—The Cross of Pearls (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Sept.	28—Gypsy Honor (Dr.
Sept.	29—The Bell Ringer of the Abbey
Sept.	29—Across the Polar Seas (Scenic)
Sept.	30—A Convict's Heart (Dr.)
Oct.	2—Little Moritz is Too Short (Com.)
Oct.	2—Rangoon, India (Scenic)
Oct.	3—Pathe's Weekly (No. 40)
Oct.	4—Crazy Dope (Com.)
Oct.	4—Circus in Australia (Scenic)
Oct.	5—The Squaw's Mistaken Love (Dr.)
Oct.	6—Flirts (Dr. Com.)
Oct.	6—Fishing in the Ceran Islands, Oceania (Scenic)
Oct.	7—For Massa's Sake (Dr.)
Oct.	9—The Little Animal Trainer (Dr.)
Oct.	9—Bttty's Boat (Com.)
Oct.	9—Marvelous Transformations
Oct.	10—Pathe's Weekly (No. 41)
Oct.	11—One on the Masher (Com.)
Oct.	11—Scenes on the U. S. S. Connecticut
Oct.	12—Romance of the Desert (Dr.)
Oct.	13—Raffles Caught (Dr.)
Oct.	13—Guerrero Troup
Oct.	14—Marooned (Dr.)
Oct.	16—The Gambler's Dream (Dr.)
Oct.	17—Pathe's Weekly No. 42
Oct.	18—The Ranch Girl's Terrible Mistake (Dr.)
Oct.	19—The Renegade Brother (Dr.)
Oct.	20—A Trip Down the Magdapis River (Scenic)
Oct.	20—Eva Moves In (Com.)
Oct.	20—Up the Flue (Com.)
Oct.	21—A Puritan Courtship (Dr.)
Oct.	23—The Traitor (Dr.)
Oct.	23—Nomadic Tribes in El Kantara Gorges (Algeria) (Sc.)
Oct.	24—Pathe's Weekly No. 43
Oct.	25—Revolution in a Bachelor's Club (Com.)
Oct.	26—In Frontier Days (Dr.)
Oct.	26—The Island of St. Kilda, Scotland (Sc.)
Oct.	27—Mother is Strong on Hypnotism (Com.)
Oct.	27—Funeral in Annam (Sc.)
Oct.	27—Logging and Milling in Sweden (Sc.)
Oct.	28—Saved by the Flag (Dr.)

SELIG

Sept.	25—Two Orphans	1075
Sept.	26—Two Orphans—Part II	986
Sept.	28—Two Orphans—Part III	1090
Sept.	29—John Oakhurst—Gambler (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—A Summer Adventure (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	3—The Rival Stage Lines (Com.)	1000
Oct.	5—Maud Muller (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The Artist's Sons (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—An Indian Vestal (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	10—Told in Colorado (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Out-generaled (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—Making a Six-Ton Cheese (Edu.)	425
Oct.	13—Seeing Washington (Sc.)	575
Oct.	16—Making a Man of Him (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	17—On Separate Paths (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—The Run on the Bank (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—His Better Self (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	23—Coals of Fire (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	24—Why the Sheriff is a Bachelor (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	26—Lost in the Jungle	1070
Oct.	27—A Painter's Idyl	1000

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

June	21—Avenged	1000
June	28—The Taming of the Shrew (Com.)	1000
July	5—Ancient and Modern London	530
July	5—Boys Will Be Boys (Com.)	470
July	12—The Free Lance (Dr.)	640
July	12—Temples of India	365
July	19—The Tie That Binds (Dr.)	760
July	19—A Round-Up In Chili	240
July	26—An Amateur Skater	440
July	26—Satan on a Rampage	660
Aug.	2—The Struggle for Life	650
Aug.	2—On the Coast of Bengal	326
Aug.	9—The Heiress	705
Aug.	9—Lyons, the Second City of France	295
Aug.	16—For the Honor of the Name (Dr.)	790
Aug.	16—Moss-Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight	245
Aug.	23—Condemned for Treason (Dr.)	845
Aug.	23—Wool Industry of Hungary	135
Aug.	30—A King for an Hour (Com.)	572
Aug.	30—Sights of Berlin	423
Sept.	6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)	675
Sept.	6—Lake Thun in Switzerland (Scenic)	325
Sept.	13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)	665
Sept.	13—Norwich and Vicinity, England (Travel)	330
Sept.	20—In Ancient Days (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.)	458
Sept.	27—Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)	542
Oct.	4—A Jealous Wife (Com.)	338
Oct.	4—The Grand Chartreuse (Trav.)	292
Oct.	4—Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Com.)	348
Oct.	11—Pardoned by the Governor (Dr.)	646
Oct.	11—Making Cheddar Cheese (Ind.)	342
Oct.	18—Ordered to Move On (Dr.)	605
Oct.	18—Madeira, Portugal (Travel)	385
Oct.	25—A Woman's Slave (Dr.)	950

VITAGRAPH

Aug.	23—The Sheriff's Friend (Dr.)	1000
Aug.	25—My Old Dutch	1000
Aug.	26—A Handsomer Man (Com.)	1000
Aug.	28—The General's Daughter (Dr.)	1000
Aug	29—The Wrong Patient (Com.)	551
Aug.	29—Queer Folks (Com.)	448
Aug.	30—The Three Brothers (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	1—The Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	2—The Prince and the Pumps (Com.)	1000
Sept.	4—Jealousy (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	4—A Friendly Marriage (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	6—The Willow Tree (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	8—Cherry Blossoms (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	9—Jimmie's Job (Com.)	1000
Sept.	12—Her Crowning Glory (Com.)	1000
Sept.	13—Beyond the Law	1000
Sept.	15—Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.)	1000
Sept.	16—By Woman's Wit (Com.)	1000
Sept.	18—One Flag at Last (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Sept.	19—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.)	1000
Sept.	20—Beyond the Law (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	22—Forgotten (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.)
Sept.	23—The Tired, Absent-Minded Man (Com.)	1000
Sept.	25—By the Camp Fire's Flicker	1000
Sept.	26—His Sister's Children	1000
Sept.	27—A Western Heroine	1000
Sept.	29—The Ninety and Nine	1000
Sept.	30—Her Hero	1000
Oct.	2—Our Navy	1000
Oct.	3—The Wager (Com.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Mate of the John M. (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Carr's Regeneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Ups and Downs (Com.)	1000
Oct.	9—Daddy's Boy and Mammy	1000
Oct.	10—The Missing Will	1000
Oct.	11—The Indian Flute	1000
Oct.	13—Answer of the Roses	1000
Oct.	14—By Way of Mrs. Browning	1000
Oct.	16—The Fighting Schoolmaster	1000
Oct.	17—Vitagraph Monthly	1000
Oct.	18—Selecting His Heiress (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—The Cabin Boy (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	21—Lady Godiva (His. Dr.)	1000

Solax

"A CORNER IN CRIMINALS"
AND
"A LOVER'S RUSE"

SPLIT REEL COMEDY

RELEASED OCTOBER 18th

Two Good Ones On One Reel

"HIS BETTER SELF"

MILITARY

RELEASED OCTOBER 20th

Big Military Picture taken at Ft. Myer, Va., by Special Permission of the U. S. Govt.

"PERCY AND HIS SQUAW"

COWBOY—INDIAN COMEDY

RELEASED OCTOBER 25th

We Call Your Especial Attention to the Big Comedy.

"FOR BIG BROTHER'S SAKE"

DRAMA

RELEASED OCTOBER 27th

This is a Very Pretty Dramatic Story With a Fine Moral.

4—GOOD ONES—4

OBEY THAT IMPULSE

GET THEM ALL

Solax Company

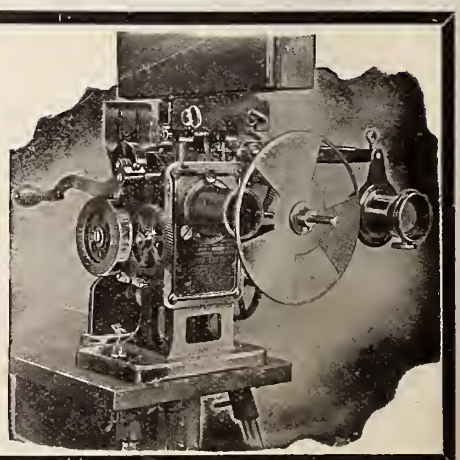
CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED

Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

The Exhibitor's Secret of Success and Happiness

USE POWER'S No. 6 CAMERAGRAPH



The moving picture exhibitor can find no better insurance of big receipts at the box office and freedom from worry than the use of POWERS' NO. 6 CAMERAGRAPH in his operating room. Most of the exhibitors have found this out. That's why orders are coming in to us at the rate of over one hundred machines per week. Don't you think you had better put in a POWER'S NO. 6 and become a member of the NO WORRY CLUB?

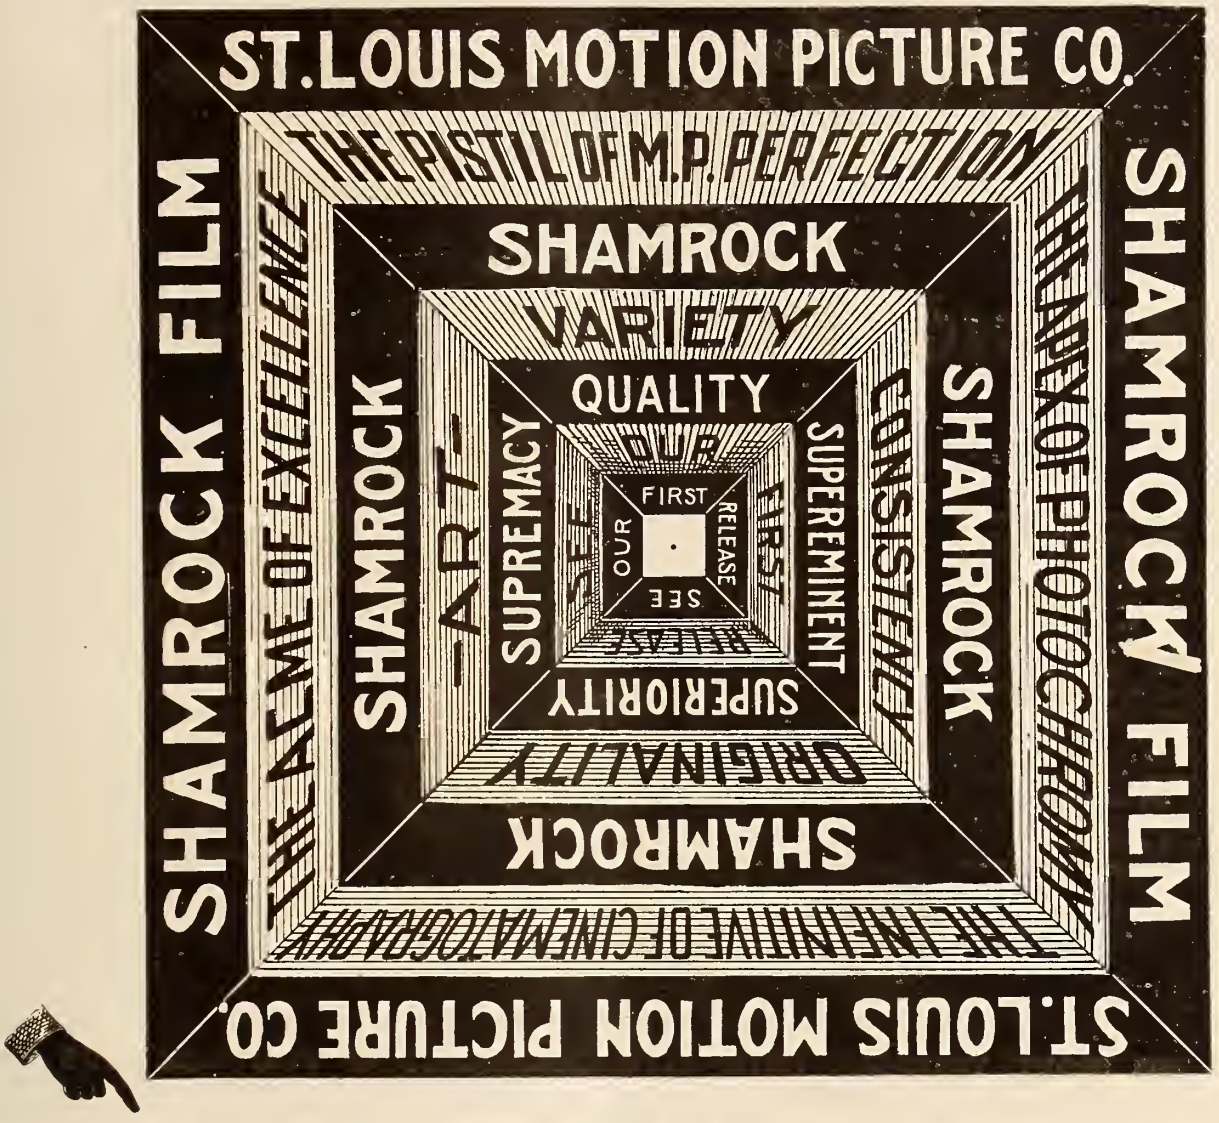
Why not take the matter up at once with your exchange, or with us direct, and get your order in in time to avoid any disappointment in delivery?

At any rate send for catalog D and our special Proposition.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For fourteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

"A REMARKABLE PHENOMENON"



READ CAREFULLY, the WORDS in above DRAWING, then GAZE INTENTLY at the SMALL DOT in the CENTER of the LAST SQUARE and the TITLE of OUR

FIRST RELEASE

will be

VISIBLE

St. Louis Motion Picture Company

Write for Descriptive Literature

Factory and Studio

25th and Montgomery Streets, St. Louis, Mo.

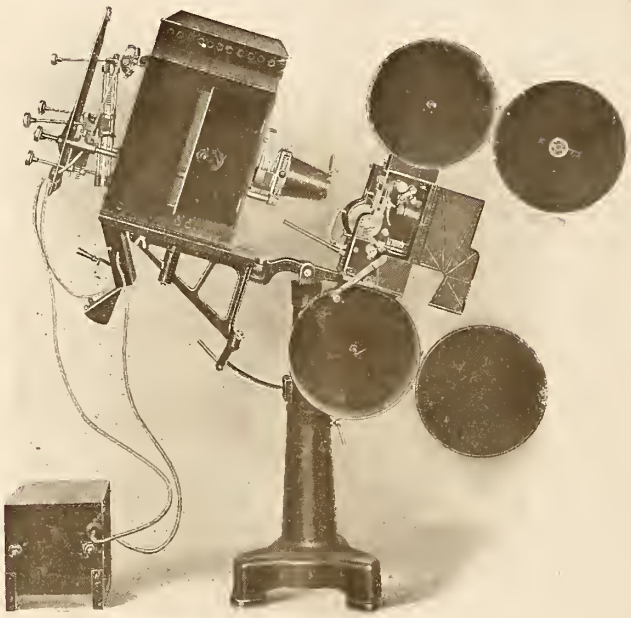
Announcement No. 3

Simplex

THE PEER OF ALL

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

The table for lamphouse is provided with a substantial swing movement which instantaneously brings the lamp into optical centre either with the M. P. Projection or Stereopticon lenses, and the Tilting arrangement, giving ample latitude, is governed by the moving of the support through the arc provided at the back of the stand.



The base, at its centre, rests on a device by which the machine can be swung to right or left, and the centre of gravity of this stand, together with its table support, and in conjunction with the Head and lamphouse, owing to careful calculation provides a machine of perfect rigidity and freedom from all vibration.

NO MORE TROUBLE WITH CITY EXAMINERS IF YOU USE THIS THOROUGHLY FIREPROOF MACHINE

New York, Boro of Brooklyn, Oct. 3, 1911.

MANHATTAN SLIDE CO.,
124 East Fourteenth Street.

Gentlemen: The "Simplex" Moving Picture Machine that I bought through you is undoubtedly the best projector we have ever used in Prospect Hall. After using the other machines, I cheerfully state that the "Simplex" is decidedly the best and gives us entire satisfaction.

Yours very truly,
WM. D. KOLLE, Prop.

"Just the Machine the Department has been looking for."—City Official Inspector

EASIEST OF ALL MACHINES TO HANDLE, THREAD AND OPERATE

Sales Office: 23 East 14th St., New York

NOV 4 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No 42

October 21
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
NOV
4
1911
PERIODICAL DIV.

PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from

THE WIFE'S AWAKENING

IMP Release of November 9th

The

PRODUCERS FILM CO.

Another New One

But

A STANDARD FILM

Made by

A STANDARD MAKER

A. M. KENNEDY HARRY DAVIS

Suite 408 Shubert Building
39th and Broadway, New York

MAJESTIC

INDEPENDENT FILMS

IMPROVING WITH EACH PICTURE

SINCE our last announcement we have added two pictures to our collection, and can truthfully state that they are better than our first ones.

¶ There is not a single exchange in the United States or Canada that will not be proud to add these pictures to its service, because they are exactly the class of pictures the Exchanges need and the kind most suitable to Exhibitors.

¶ We are able to attain these splendid results because the interests directly connected with this company, are comprised of men thoroughly familiar with the class of pictures most essential to the betterment of exchange interests.

¶ If the Independent exchanges buy the MAJESTIC PICTURES, they will increase their business, because we will have competent actors and actresses in all pictures, actors and actresses who have made big names for themselves, as well as big reputations for manufacturers, and people whose names will crowd theatres and make exhibitors demand the film.

¶ The MAJESTIC is endeavoring to look far into the future of the entire industry rather than thinking of its own immediate welfare.

¶ THE MAJESTIC cannot presume to carry out these ideas alone. It must have the combined support of all manufacturers who care for the future of the moving picture industry.

OUR FIRST FIVE RELEASES

"THE COURTING OF MARY"—A high class comedy.
"LOVE HEEDS NOT SHOWERS"—Another high class comedy.
"THE ULTIMATE END"—A strong problem newspaper drama.
"THE CADDIE'S DREAM"—A comedy—full of laughs.
"THE ROSE OF YESTERDAY"——An occult drama of very strong heart interest.

"LITTLE MARY" AND OWEN MOORE

Miss Mary Pickford and Mr. Owen Moore will positively appear in Majestic Pictures, and they show at their very best in the above pictures.

OUR FIRST RELEASE, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 26th

"THE COURTING OF MARY"

A SPLENDID HIGH CLASS COMEDY WITH MARY PICKFORD AND OWEN MOORE AT THEIR VERY BEST.

PLACE YOUR ORDER WITH THE MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO. AT ONCE, AND NOTIFY US AT THE SAME TIME.

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

145 West 45th Street, New York City

TOM D. COCHRANE, General Manager.

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

COMING! THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS COMING!

From the Novel by J. Fenimore Cooper

" 'Tis too late, 'tis too late!" Hawkeye exclaimed, dropping the useless piece in disappointment; "the miscreant has struck the rapid; and had we powder, it could hardly send the lead swifter than he now goes!"

Does not this quotation from the novel give you a vivid picture of a man-hunt across wild country? That's what the story is about. It is a chase in pursuit of malevolent Indians, who have in their power two hapless girls.

The Loves of David Copperfield

Third of the Series from the Novel by CHARLES DICKENS

RELEASED TUESDAY, OCT. 31

This chapter of David's life presents a simple study of character development.

David's marriage to Dora, his "doll-wife," is unfortunate and does not result in happiness for either. Dora dies shortly after their marriage. David, two years after the death of his first wife, learns that Agnes is in love with him. He marries her and in this second matrimonial venture he is more fortunate than in the first.

The story of Uriah Heep's forgeries are threaded with David's love affairs. Loquacious Mr. Micawber also plays a prominent part in this chapter of the play.

Their Burglar

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3

Ordinarily a visit from a burglar means a charge on the ledger against "Profit and Loss." But "Their Burglar," through one of those intangible twists of fate, becomes the special messenger of both Cupid and Fortune and delivers a note to a yearning youth and brings him to the side of the one he loves.

As a reward for his services the burglar is given all the wedding presents he had come to steal—because he had helped to rescue the bride from a loveless marriage. These gifts give the burglar a new start in life and later he turns plumber. Then it becomes a lead-pipe cinch for him to make an honest living.

ORDER SAMPLES OF THE DAVID COPPERFIELD HERALDS —They are business-getters and house-crowders—Quantities may be secured at $5.50 per thousand.

OTHER ADVERTISING MATTER FOR THE DAVID COPPER FIELD SERIES MAY BE SECURED FREE

THANHOUSER COMPANY NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK - - - - - - - -	LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK - - - - - - - - -	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP - - - - - - - - -	LIRE 5,750,000

THE FIRST SHIPMENT OF GENUINE WAR FILMS TAKEN AT TRIPOLI EXPECTED IN A FEW DAYS. EXHIBITORS GET NEXT TO THIS—IT MEANS MONEY TO YOU. EXCHANGES SEND FOR PARTICULARS.

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK

© Cl.B249002

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Agent and Correspondent for advertisements in Great Britain
B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W., London

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy.
844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV October 21, 1911 Number 42

SCARE HEADLINERS

WHAT is the objection of the daily press and why is it making so much ado about nothing in its articles on the moving picture industry? Our columns have time and again raised a warning note against false information being placed before their readers. We would like to know what is back of the Minneapolis Morning Tribune under date of Saturday, October 7th, when it publishes such articles as we herewith reproduce:

DANGER FROM FIRE AT PICTURE SHOWS FOUND EVER PRESENT IN MINNEAPOLIS; INVESTIGATION PROVES THEATER MENACE

Thousands of Children in the Flour City Are Subjected Daily to Danger of Death by Flame and Smoke

Inspection of Smaller Amusement Halls Reveals that Only a Few Are Equipped with Proper Safety Exits

Irresponsible Help and Cheap Films Make the Hazard Greater—Dark and Crowded Rooms Invite Panic in Trouble

Authorities Apparently Do Little in the Way of Regulation, Despite Constant Risk Taken by Building Patrons

Mere Boys Operate Machines, Thereby Increasing the Peril to About 234,000 Persons Each Week

Children are daily packed into moving picture theaters in Minneapolis, in darkness, without chance for escape in case of a panic of any sort; they are risking their lives, while parents and the public generally are unaware of what the conditions actually are.

Moving picture theaters, which are springing up all over the city as spontaneously as mushrooms, are a new element in city life. They house about 234,000 people a week and the majority of those audiences are made up of children.

Recently the Board of Education, aroused to the popularity of moving picture houses by the fact that a half dozen had been opened near schools, entered into an investigation of the moral character of the picture films.

No one (the parents of the children attending this new type of neighborhood theater least of all) has apparently thought anything about the fire risks in these places. A disaster in one of these theaters in Minneapolis would doubtless frighten the city into an immediate investigation of all of them and belated efforts to right conditions would follow. Recently there was a frightful disaster in a moving picture theater in Cannonsburg, Pa., but this shocking affair was too remote from Minneapolis to cause an investigation of Minneapolis moving picture theaters to be demanded by the public.

Thorough Investigation Made

Believing that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, The Minneapolis Tribune has had a thorough inspection made of all moving picture theater buildings in the city. Conditions found are such as to warrant grave fear of the results of even the slightest panic created in one of these theaters during a show. Investigation reveals that there are not more than half a dozen moving picture theaters in the city where the few exits are sufficiently lighted or accessible to give outlet in safety to the crowds packed into the darkened auditorium.

The history of the erection of these theaters has been, in many instances, the story of money-getting enterprise on the part of persons of small capital who have been willing to open moving picture shows in old, flimsy buildings with almost total disregard of the protection from fire or panic risk that is due to audiences that will attend these shows.

The horror of finding veritable death traps operating as moving picture shows is intensified by the knowledge that the audiences are almost entirely made up of children.

The manner of operating these shows locates the danger from fire, in most of the theaters, at the front end, and, therefore, crowds seeking safety in flight from the building would naturally run for the rear or side exits Investigation shows that many of these places have no side exits; others have side doors that would lead human beings into a death heap; while of those having rear exits, the greater number are only accessible through rear rooms clustered with rubbish, or dark, winding ways, and with no lights over doorways, either inside or outside the building, dark alleyways offer little hope of safe escape. Some of the rear doors were found nailed up.

Darkness a Menace to Life

The greatest menace to human life in case of panic in these theaters is the darkness maintained during the exposure of films. This darkness has in many cities been found to militate gravely against moral behavior on the part of children in these places. Greater than this danger, however, is the physical risk. In view of the number of theaters in Minneapolis using the films which require darkness for exhibition, it is extraordinary to learn that the cost of installing daylight pictures is less than $100.

Another bit of illumination secured on this subject is that mere boys operate the machines. The lights over which they operate are of 2,000 candle power and 250 volts. When the rays from this electric arc light are allowed to remain on the same spot of a film even half a minute, the film catches fire. There are films which are non-ignitable, but they are not generally in use. One of the best moving picture theaters in the city was found to be using the inflammable films, but an automatic shutter which closes as the machine loses speed, and the further protection of an asbestos curtain and fireproof cage containing the machine in a detached building, offers absolute fire protection, in this instance. A fair estimate credits but three moving picture shows in ten in the city using the automatic shutter protection.

Difference in Films

G. E. Raymond, manager of the Orpheum Theater, who uses the non-ignitable films and the automatic shutter machine, says the cost of non-inflammable films would deter many moving picture theaters from using them. A set of readily ignited films can be purchased for $5. The same thing, non-ignitable, brings $50. The old type of film burns with a loud report like an explosion, and a cloud of smoke is created. More recent films of the inflammable type are generally in use in moving picture theaters of the city. They burn with considerable flame, but no great amount of smoke.

The investigation made by The Tribune revealed almost an entire absence of fire-fighting apparatus in Minneapolis moving picture theaters; also little, if any, police regulation. Aisles were found crowded, crowds were found blockading front entrances to theaters already filled, dangerous air draughts exist in many, and others are scarcely ventilated at all. Employees in charge of many of the theaters were found to be too young to have the responsibility of the safety of the audiences of children.

The sum total of fire risk, of conditions that would contribute to a horrible catastrophe in case of panic, and of general negligence and indifference to public health and safety on the part of managers of moving picture shows which were found, is sufficient to arouse a general demand for regulation and reform for the safeguarding of life. The list of moving picture theaters with a description of the conditions found in each is appended and is eloquent in itself. New moving picture houses are now in process of erection and with an estimated attendance of 50,000 weekly for those now building, the total number of people taking great chances of injury or loss of life weekly would reach 285,000.

We would like the investigators mentioned in the above article to read copies of the News wherein we have shown how fallacious the idea is of fires in a nickelodeon, and how less in danger from fire and accident the people of Nickelodia remain, compared with other large amusements, and from other sources; we think the managers of the Minneapolis theaters ought to take it up and write vigorous protests against such wholesale misrepresentation of facts. Are not thousands of children in daily danger of death by fire and smoke in the public schools, in the meeting halls, in the churches, in the Sunday-schools, which are as veritable fire-traps as are the nickelodeons, and are their safety exits any better than are secured in the five-cent theater? Irresponsible help may be one fault, but we frequently complain and try to bring the proprietors of these theaters up to the standard of the best, with reliable and responsible men in charge; but on the question of cheap film we would like to ask the writers of the article to tell us the difference between cheap and expensive film, and then we might be able to give them a word or two of advice. They show considerable ignorance because both cheap and expensive film are just as inflammable in careless hands. The cheapness or the dearness makes no difference. We certainly blame the proprietors for nailing up doors if the statement is correct as published by the Tribune, but still more the carelessness of the city authorities for allowing such places to exist and such conditions to remain. They certainly do not pay much attention to proper examination of the places, and if the mere boys who operate the machine are eliminated we think great good may happen at Minneapolis, but where is the examining board for the licensing of operators? We trust to hear from some of the exhibitors or the exchanges further in relation to this question. We cannot for one moment believe the reports of a prejudiced investigator (as published on page 2 of the Tribune) are true. Are they, Messrs. Exhibitors of Minneapolis?

THE FIRST MOVING PICTURES

QUITE a number of correspondents of our own, and interviewers from daily and weekly papers and magazines, have been in to see us, asking our opinion and advice regarding the first moving pictures exhibited, and in reply to our correspondents we wish to give them a little data and as regards the magazine and other writers we want to say that they come in and pick our brains, getting all the information possible and, with one or two notable exceptions, they completely ignore their authority. However, it is all for the good of the industry, and while we do wish a little credit for our knowledge, to be completely ignored is a pretty hard knock; so, for the benefit of our readers, we give the gist of the matter issued to the various interviewers.

Regarding the first man that may lay claim to being the inventor or exhibitor of the first motion picture ever exhibited, this man certainly is Edouard Muybridge, of Oakland, California, who was one of the old "wet plate" workers and whose still pictures taken in the old wet collodion days are a marvel to the present generation. This man had a friend, Governor Leland Stanford, of California, who possessed a celebrated trotter, Occident, which was the first horse to trot a mile in two minutes and twenty seconds in the Rocky Mountains. This horse was so valuable, and was looked upon with such great pride by its owner, that he was having it photographed in practically every position he could conceive, the photographer being Edouard Muybridge, who made photographs from the small quarter-plate size, 3¼ x 4¼ to 16 x 20, and it is these photographs we specially speak of. A suggestion was made to Muybridge that it would be a good plan if he could take the horse trotting, showing every motion of its beauty and its spirited action. To get this, Muybridge made a series of snapshots as the horse passed, and to obtain action he thought of a novel scheme of placing a large number of cameras covering a distance of a quarter of a mile in view of the track, which we illustrated by permission of the Scientific American in former issues of the News. From these cameras, to a fence on the opposite side, he stretched silk threads about the height of the trotter's knee, and as the horse trotted along he broke these threads, and in breaking them it released a shutter in each camera, thus making a distinct snapshot of every action; then, putting them together in a panoramic view and rapidly projecting it, he made the first motion picture.

Another way was when he placed these pictures in a book form, which gave an idea of a number of postcards in use to-day rapidly twirled with the thumb, showing the views in motion of various stage beauties skipping, dancing, etc. We remember (we think it was in 1886) seeing these pictures of Muybridge exhibited in London at the Royal Polytechnic, and from these emanated a camera to take motion pictures with a rapidly revolving strip, thus doing the work with one camera which formerly occupied a large number, and from this idea, which was exhibited in the large cities of Europe, began the first patent applications for a moving picture camera. Somewhere about this time, we believe, the cameras were brought to America, and then William Friese-Greene sent his patent to Washington and so commenced the series of patents applied for, and granted, that we have to-day. We therefore give the first claim as the original inventor of pictures in motion to Edouard Muybridge. We have often wondered, if his spirit could visit these realms and see the culmination from his first efforts, what he would say.

St. Cloud, Minn.—The new Princess Circuit Company will establish a theater here at a cost of $12,000.

GET A REP

THE AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Announces that Richard R. Nehls, long and favorably known to the motion picture industry, has joined the forces of that progressive Western firm. He takes the place made vacant by the resignation of A. M. Kennedy. The American is to be congratulated upon the addition of so valuable a man to its staff.

Mr. Nehls has enjoyed a large and varied experience in the motion picture trade. His first acquaintance with motion pictures dates back some twelve years, when the business was still in its infancy. At that time he had charge of the motion picture mail-order business of Montgomery, Ward & Company, when that company did an extensive business in equipping ruralites and farmers with projecting machines and films. Pioneers in the field will remember when this form of exploitation was much in vogue, the exhibitors going from town to town wherever an audience could be obtained.

MR. RICHARD R. NEHLS

Also Mr. Nehls was for some years head of the importing department of the Kleine Optical Company, where his duties as film critic afforded an extraordinary opportunity to acquire an enviable knowledge of the trade.

Mr. Nehls is a native Chicagoan, having been born in that city in 1875. He was given every opportunity in the way of an education, receiving his early training from private instructors. He is a college man, having spent three years in Concordia College, Milwaukee, Wis., and in addition possesses an excellent training in business management and can qualify as electrical engineer. He was for some years the executive head of a prosperous business of his own.

Friends of Mr. Nehl will be glad to hear of his new connection. His wide knowledge of the business, his large circle of friends, coupled with his natural aggressiveness and keen business insight, promise more and better things for the American.

(The above notice will also answer the numerous correspondents who applied for the position of manager, as advertised by us in our columns of September 30th and October 7th.—Ed. M. P. N.)

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Crowley Investment Company will erect a new $10,000 theater on National avenue, between Thirtieth and Thirty-first avenues.

HIS DRESS SHIRT

A Comedy of Domestic Life in Which a Novice in Household Duties Comes to Grief

In the comedy, "His Dress Shirt," the Imp Company has hit upon a theme which is familiar to all and invested it with humorous situations. It is a story of domestic life in which a young married couple figure, the wife patient and forbearing and the husband irritable and impatient. The story also illustrates the trials and tribulations of a woman who, once married, sets out to please her husband, to the detriment of her peace of mind.

A young married man receives an invitation to attend a dinner which is to be given by some of his business associates. He is delighted and his wife urges him to attend. He makes a hasty examination of his party wardrobe and discovers he has only one dress shirt that is presentable and that is soiled. The party date is two days away and he commissions his wife to send it to the laundry and she promises faithfully to carry out his wishes. She has a pressing invitation to go on an automobile ride, and, of course, forgets all about the shirt and the dinner.

The night of the banquet arrives and the young husband goes to his room to prepare for the event. He cannot find the shirt and questions the wife. It dawns on her with a suddenness that is disconcerting that she has not sent it to the laundry. The husband is fuming and fretting. She is in a quandary, grieved and mortified. Her woman's wits stand her in good stead and she resolves to launder the shirt herself. Right there is where she made a mistake for the effort is a sorry one. The job is completed when she burns a hole through the garment and the husband enters the kitchen to see his hopes dashed to earth in the smoking shirt. He realizes the humor of the situation, bursts into a hearty laugh and kisses her tears away—a happy culmination of the affair.

St. Louis, Mo.—Elmer Coudey is reported to erect a new theater to cost $10,000.

Aiken, S. C.—Aiken Theater Company has plans for an opera house to be erected here.

Big Stone Gap, Va.—Jim Taylor will erect a theater to cost $20,000.

Shelbyville, Ind.—Rembusch Amusement Company, capital $5,000; F. J. Grace and George Rembusch.

A BREACH OF FAITH

Released October 29 by Rex Company

We are just forced to call your attention to the cut that goes with this item. It is one little piece of a Rex release of unusual strength and novelty. The theme is strong, the settings are strong, the atmosphere is strong—in the scene of the Italian restaurant real garlic is used—and we're strong for it. It is one of the consistent tributes paid to Rex once every week—Lord and the exhibitors know we would rather accuse them of two a week. Quality such as this is a cure for even that fatal illness called the desire for better pictures, and a film with such merit merits as strong a boost and boast as we can give and make in this rather modest type.

The story is the old tale of a brother's treachery, a tale of

THE MIND OF THE BRIDE IS FAR AWAY FROM THE FESTIVE SCENE

Latin love and lust and hate and heat, of broken vows and broken hearts. It is portrayed with the painstaking care and detail one would expect in nothing less than a two dollar big street performance. We really don't know whom to give the most credit for the creditable production, but it is apparent that everybody connected with it deserves and should and will receive strong praise and commendation. The photographic clearness, as well as the clear trend of the story itself, impresses all the more upon our minds the moral and meaning and momentum of the stirring scenes and incidents that comprise the tale, thus permitting us to give full response, in heart and mind and spirit, to the trials and thrills and tears of those who suffer from the ruthlessness of the traducer, played with the dash and vim and consummate artistic and dramatic instinct which Phillips Smalley injects into all his work.

ANTONE HAS EYES FOR NONE, FOR HIS HEART IS ANOTHER'S

In the Rex manner, the sun breaks through the clouds in the end, and as a new and happier day dawns for the people we have learned to love in the short twenty minutes on the screen, it dawns upon us that Rex is—King; the term, strong as it is, seems mild. "Monarch of all it surveys"—this is the thought its work conveys to us.

And a mighty rumble was heard in the land, as of the sound of thunder in the mountains, and a giant voice was heard to assert the trenchant words "Give us two a week! We demand it!" It was the voice of the exhibitors!

CHAMPION ON A NEW TACK

The Champion Film Co. will release on Monday, October 30th, the second series of their three-reel picture "Field Day Sports at Fort Riley." This is one of the best efforts up to date of the Champion Film Company, and great discretion has been shown in the choice of scenes. The portions of the film showing the field skirmishing, and the guns in action are especially good, and the scenes where the soldier boys are revelling in their athletic sports are of intense interest—to see their attempts at jumping the hurdle at "five foot seven" is a scream.

FIELD DAY SPORTS AT FORT RILEY
A Boxing Match

Exhibitors and exchange men should order this film, for it is a good one.

POWERS, "BOOSTOLOGIST"

In accordance with his plans for enlargement, details of which will be published in a later issue, P. A. Powers has corraled for his staff Mr. Leon J. Rubinstein, known as the "boostologist," to inaugurate a campaign for the Powers picture plays. Mr. Rubinstein has been known for about six years as editor of the Film Index and later as editor of Film Reports.

Of late he has given only part of his hours to publicity work for several manufacturers at a time, and in securing his services exclusively Mr. Powers pays the record price for this work.

ANDERSON & ZIEGLER

The above enterprising theatrical agency, as will be seen on another page in an advertisement, have secured the foreign rights for the "Dante's Inferno" film issued through the Milano Company comprising the story told in five reels. The exclusive foreign rights cover England and its possessions, Australia, New Zealand, France, Germany and South America. Will our foreign readers please note and address the above firm by letter or cable and get in on the ground floor for what they call the opportunity of a lifetime?

THE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE

Those exhibitors who were present at Cleveland at the founding of the Moving Picture League of America will recall with pleasure the interesting times they had, and the vast amount of business accomplished. We want to call our readers' attention to another meeting called by the Exhibitors' League of Ohio, which we learn will have their meeting at the Southern Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, on November 1, 1911. We urge every member of the league in that state to attend this meeting, as important matters relating to Ohio will be presented and discussed.

We learn that many new and important questions will come up for consideration. There will also be an entire new set of officers elected. This is the annual meeting of the league.

For the convenience of those attending as delegates or representing their own houses, arrangements have been made for a hall, committee rooms, and other accommodations at the Southern Hotel.

Another important matter interesting to the country at large is the fact that the executive committee of the Moving Picture League of America will hold a meeting on November 1, in Columbus, at the same hotel. Those who will be present are: M. A. Neff, president, Cincinnati, Ohio; J. J. Rieder, treasurer, Jackson, Mich.; C. H. Christenson, secretary, Cleveland, Ohio, and vice-presidents, S. E. Morris, Cleveland, Ohio; F. J. Harrington, Pittsburgh, Pa.; William J. Sweeney, Chicago, Ill.; William Ullman, Detroit, Mich.; H. S. Dickson, Winchester, Ind.; H. C. Farley, Montgomery, Ala.; H. F. McLain, Wheeling, W. Va., and H. G. Lux, Jr., Utica, N. Y.

We have watched with a great deal of interest, and have quite a large volume of correspondence, which makes us express the opinion that the National League is growing. Several states have been organized since the National meeting at Cleveland; the last state to organize was Minnesota. They started off with a state organization of forty members, with W. J. Edwards as president.

We learn on good authority that at this meeting the executive board of the M. P. L. of A. would be gratified if every state in the Union is represented by one delegate, or proxy, and meet with the executive board on November 1st. They want as large a number as it is possible to gather together as representing this organization, owing to the fact that they expect seven or eight new states to come into the league and will be acted upon in this meeting. They will also be pleased to receive as many applications of other states for a charter and confer with them at Columbus.

In embodying the above particulars of this meeting we trust every state will be represented and that great good will result to the benefit of every exhibitor throughout the states.

REPLACING OLD EQUIPMENTS.

In pursuance of the general widespread policy of replacing old moving picture machine apparatus with new and up-to-date equipments, theater managers all over the country are coming more and more to recognize the importance of producing on their screens the best obtainable light. In the matter of installation of current savers it has always been recognized that any of the devices on the market make some saving on alternating current on electric bills, but in the matter of light the cheaper devices do not meet the requirements. The Hallberg "Electric Economizer," recognized as the standard by which all others are judged, has replaced hundreds of these cheaper current savers, and the following are some of the exhibitors who have availed themselves of Mr. J. H. Hallber's exchange offer; and have expressed themselves as being abundantly repaid for the cost of making the exchange: F. W. Ober, Glendive, Mont.; Colonial Amusements Co., Joliet, Ill.; L. Matule, Carbondale, Pa.; E. W. Logan, Star Theater, Syracuse, N. Y.; J. A. McCurry, Rocky Ford, Colo., and hundreds of others.

An item from the Jersey City, N. J., Journal, October 4, 1911, states:

A license for a new moving picture theater to be erected at Thirty-eighth street and Broadway, Bayonne, by Frederick Wandelt, of Jersey City, was granted by the City Council last night. The structure will be a substantial one of brick, stone and iron.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.
Best advertising medium in North Europe.
Subscription 6 shillings.
Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

PROMISES

are not always fulfilled; sometimes they are broken outright, sometimes they develop into COMPROMISES.

REX has always given more, not less, than it promised. The first time it will ever have made

A Breach of Faith

WILL BE ON THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26th.

Though it sounds like a paradox, our

"BREACH OF FAITH"

will only increase and strengthen your faith in the grand brand.

It's a tale of strong Latin love and lust and hate and heat; a broken vow and broken hearts; it's a voice from desert wastes, the cry of a desolate heart.

And the sun breaks through in the end, in the traditional Rex manner.

YOU ARE COMMITTING A BREACH OF FAITH IF YOU DON'T GET "A BREACH OF FAITH"

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 ELEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

Sales Co. say the title is the nearest Rex can get to "A Breach of Faith."

FINE FILM OF ECLAIR CO. OF AMERICA NEARING COMPLETION

One by one they all have yielded,
Ended their career of strife,
One by one they all have left us
Gone unto the better life,
Voices of departed heroes,
Whisper in the evening air,
Voices of departed loved ones,
Mingle in the morning prayer.

"Hands Across the Sea in '76" is nearing its completion. Much careful and strenuous labor has been expended upon this film. Six weeks of steady concentration for somebody was required in order to gather together the properties, costumes, etc., for this production. Many of the costumes were obtained from Boston and Philadelphia. One hundred and fifty flintlocks, 200 Springfields, 150 muzzle-loading rifles, and 50 cavalry cutlasses were purchased specially for the production of this film.

The Story in Brief.

The smoke had hardly cleared away from Bunker Hill, when on the 3d of July, 1775, standing beneath a large elm tree at Cambridge, Washington took command of the Continental Army. Following this, Franklin was dispatched to France for aid. Silas Deane, with his wife and daughter, was already on the ground. Deane and Franklin found enthusiastic allies in Count de Rochambeau and the young Marquis de Lafayette. Through their good influence, Vergennes, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, was interested. The greatest drawback in the French Court was Montraville, English representative. He and Rochambeau were rivals for Grace Deane's hand, so this spurred Rochambeau and his bosom friend, Lafayette, to further efforts in behalf of the Americans.

At an audience with King Louis XVI, when assistance was refused, Lafayette and Rochambeau voluntarily offered their services to the cause of American liberty. Ships were equipped and soldiers armed at their own expense, and the expedition started out to the new world. Shortly afterward, Franklin and Deane returned to their own country.

Montraville, disappointed at Grace Deane's departure with her father, went back to England, resigned his office and secured a commission in the army. When on the point of sailing, he met Charlotte Temple, and persuaded her to run away from the convent where she was studying and elope with him.

With his poorly equipped raw recruits, Washington won several notable battles against the English and hired Hessians. He welcomed the arrival of Lafayette and Rochambeau with open arms. They were treated with highest honors, and given important commands.

A strange contrast was offered by Washington's poorly clad, but brave, hardy patriots, and the pampered, well-drilled Englishmen and hired Hessians under Clinton and Cornwallis.

Rochambeau and Lafayette found time even in the exactions of a busy campaign to visit Grace Deane. Their visit was most timely as she and her mother were alone and defenseless, and their home was about to be searched for a secret messenger whom they had concealed there. Montraville was in charge of the searching party. Lafayette and Rochambeau not only succeeded in protecting Miss Deane, but outwitted Montraville and sent the messenger safe on his way.

Montraville's old love for Grace Deane, was rearoused, so he neglected Charlotte Temple, who had confided her all to his keeping. She formed a pathetic figure, waiting patiently in her poor lodgings for his infrequent visits.

The air was portentous with rumors of war. There was hurrying and scurrying on all sides. The colonists flocked to the side of Washington. The field was left untilled, the tree lay where it fell, the builder dropped his hammer to take up the sword.

Lafayette and Rochambeau experienced the greatest feeling of brotherly appreciation on all sides. When Lafayette's men were struggling with a heavy cannon on a steep hill, Farmer Brown in a nearby field, unhitched his oxen from the plow and rushed to their assistance.

Washington decided to attack Sir Henry Clinton at Monmouth. Wayne and Lafayette were given command. Lee refused, but afterward changed his mind and headed an important force. Lee timidly ordered a retreat, but was met and publicly reprimanded by Washington. Afterward he redeemed himself in the field. Supported by Lafayette, Washington led the attack on Clinton at Monmouth. Clinton gallantly returned the charge. He makes the gunners and field pieces his special point of attack. Mollie Pitcher, a heroic woman, while carrying water to the parched soldiers, sees her husband shot dead beside the field piece he was operating. She throws aside the water bucket and takes his place.

Lee, in his anxiety to redeem his honor, advances too far into the enemy's lines. A hand-to-hand combat takes place in which he is wounded and about to be captured, when rescued by Lafayette. Washington secures a glorious victory over Clinton at Monmouth.

The general rejoicing is suddenly checked by the news of Benedict Arnold's treason at West Point. Major Andre is caught as a spy within the American lines and a secret message is found concealed in his boot. He is hanged as a spy while Arnold escapes.

In the midst of all this turmoil, no one has time to think of poor Charlotte Temple. Grace Deane finds her in a pitiable state. A child is born to her and she is in the extremest poverty. Miss Deane takes her home and cares for her. When she is convalescing, fate sends Montraville their way. He comes to renew his suit with Miss Deane and is confronted by the girl whom he has wronged. Miss Deane spurns him, but the shock of his meeting and his perfidy was too much for the youthful mother, and she died. So they buried poor Charlotte Temple in Trinity Churchyard, where her grave is yet to be seen, and a mysterious stranger, thought by some to be her granddaughter, regularly visits the grave, places her wreath of flowers, offers up a prayer, and sheds a tear for the unfortunate victim of an unhappy love.

This all served to bring Grace Deane and Rochambeau closer together. He vowed if chance threw him in his way to punish Montraville as he deserved.

That winter was severe on the small army of patriots at Valley Forge. Ill fed and poorly clad they slept by their camp fires on the bare ground. Often in the cold nights, their commander, forgetful of his own rest and comfort, could be seen walking among the sleepers, drawing the blanket or coat more closely over this one and that to protect them from the chill winds, and watching over them all like a father.

Cornwallis on the other hand, was in the midst of luxury. The soldiers were well quartered and spent their time in drinking and gaming. The Hessians were bravest of the brave in the tap-room, while in battle they were often found where the bullets were the thickest, under the ammunition wagon.

Lafayette was stationed near Yorktown, where he caused no end of trouble to Cornwallis, who occupied the town.

Washington, reinforced by Rochambeau, made a quick maneuver, outwitted Clinton at New York, and was well on his way for a concerted action at Yorktown before the enemy realized his intention. Earthworks and blockhouses were constructed. Frequent attacks were made under Lafayette. The outer works to Yorktown were taken. Cornwallis was in a state of siege. He made a gallant charge against Washington in the open but was met with too forceful a resistance. While the battle was raging, Rochambeau espied Montraville. A sharp encounter took place. These two, forgetful of the storm and roar of battle, engaged in hand to hand combat. Rochambeau finally conquered.

Lafayette, wounded, retires to a block house for protection. It is heavily attacked by the English. The block house takes fire, and he and his comrades are in danger of a horrible death. Knowing that he is the prize the English are after, he gathers his men around him and says, "Place a musket in my hands and place me before the door, they will all fire on me, and while their guns are empty, dash through them and away." Reluctantly they obey. He falls at the first shot, his comrades dash out to freedom. He is just about to be captured, when Washington's victorious troop dashes up and rescues him. The victory is complete. Cornwallis realizes the futility of further resistance and surrenders to Washington. Honors are showered on Lafayette and Rochambeau. Washington's return to the North is a triumphal march. And America stretches out her hand in love and gratitude to France, the friendly nation across the sea.

Notable Characters in the Cast.

AMERICANS OF COLONIAL DAYS.

General Washington, Ambassador Franklin, Col. Benedict Arnold, Allen, secret messenger; Silas Deane, Mrs. Deane, Grace Deane, Mollie Pitcher and Farmer Brown.

THE FRENCH IN HISTORY.

King Louis XVI, The Queen, Count de Vergennes, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Marquis De Lafayette and Count Rochambeau.

ENGLISH NOTABLES.

Cornwallis, Lieutenant Montraville, Private Jones and Charlotte Temple.

Steuben, Hessian soldier.

General Washington's staff, attendants, officers, army, etc. General Cornwallis's staff, attendants, officers, army. Rochambeau, officers and regiments. Lafayette, officers and regiments. Courtiers and attendants of Court of France. Indians and Hessians.

The staging of "Hands Across the Sea" is in the hands of three directors, the author, Mr. James Slewin, Mr. Lawrence McGill, and Mr. Will Rising. Mr. Rising was an attache to the American Ambassador to France in the early days, and thoroughly understands the costuming, etc., of the French portion of the play. Many of the scenes are laid in the neighborhood of Fort Lee, where the old log cabin which was Washington's headquarters, still stands, also other points of historical interest. Miss Dorothy Gibson, the beautiful model of Harrison Fisher, plays the part of Mollie Pitcher.

This film will be released November 21.

TRAVELING PICTURE SHOWS IN MEXICO.

Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

[From Consul William W. Canada, Vera Cruz.]

Moving-picture shows in this district, while still patronized, have long since ceased to be a novelty. In Vera Cruz, population about 50,000, the largest city in the consular jurisdiction, these shows have taken second rank in the estimation of the majority of the people, and wherever such a performance takes place it is in combination with a more or less theatrical enterprise. Spanish dancers, farces, and general variety business are the principal attractions at present. The Salon de Variedades is the only permanent place of entertainment of this kind in Vera Cruz.

As far as this office is informed, other towns of comparative importance, as, for instance, Jalapa, Orizaba, Cordoba, Coatepec, Cosamaloapan, Tlacotalpan, Alvarado, Tuxpam, Papantla, Huatusco, Rio Blanco, and others of 35 000 down to 2,000 inhabitants, have no permanent moving picture shows. All these places are visited at stated intervals by traveling exhibitors, who do not even own apparatus nor films, but are fitted out by the Compañía Cinematográfica Explotardora, Mexico City.

The Vera Cruz show operates a Pathé apparatus, and nearly all films shown are from the same concern. At long intervals only are American films shown. The fact is that, with few exceptions, pictures of American scenes are never well understood. This is due to the lack of familiarity with conditions as they exist in the United States, and also because the humor or pathos, as the case may be, represented on French films is of a nature that appeals to the people. In Mexico City, where the American element is better represented, matters are different.

It is worthy of mention that the films shown in Vera Cruz are all first class. There is no exception to this. The town has been worked by traveling shows for so long a time that the people will not now accept anything ancient or of inferior grade. This determination of the citizens to insist upon the best was exemplified some time ago when, upon the opening night of a show well advertised, over 1,000 persons attended; the succeeding evening, when the show was repeated, there were but six persons in the theater.

PLATINUM PRODUCTION IN AUSTRALIA.

[From Consul General John P. Bray, Sydney.]

Although not one of the chief mineral products of New South Wales, platinum is found in paying quantities. It has been mined in the central portion of the State and the beach sands on the north coast have been treated for the metal.

Up to the end of 1909 the total Commonwealth production was only 11,578 ounces, valued at $100.665, and nearly the whole of it was contributed by New South Wales. Last year 332 ounces, valued at $6,892, were won here. For some years the price of the metal abroad has been rising, until at the end of June, 1911, it had attained the record of $43.50 per ounce.

LEARN TO SAY COMET TO YOUR EXCHANGE

YANKEE

PRODUCTIONS OF HIGH QUALITY

MONDAY FRIDAY

OCTOBER 30

THE VAN OUSTEN JEWELS

An intensely dramatic story of a theft through hypnotic influence.

Toned and Tinted
Code—Jewels

NOVEMBER 3

AT DAISY FARM

An original drama amid beautiful rural setting.

Toned and Tinted
Code—Farm

YANKEE FILM CO.
344 EAST 32d ST. N. Y. CITY

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

MR. EXHIBITOR:

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write—wire—or call To-Day at

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford.

VITALIZING HISTORY BY MOVING PICTURES.

By A. L. Barrett

THE educational picture plays are growing daily in numbers and popularity, and those depicting well known historical events are always sure of a cordial reception, but with children this pleasure is greatly enhanced if they happen to see a play representing some event or period which they have recently studied, the majority becoming so interested that they immediately seek additional information from other sources. The interest in historical plays evinced by children is a little strange when we know that to most of them, history is a very dry study. Most American children are familiar with the most notable events and characters of Ameriean history, they have heard of Nelson, Drake, Wolfe, Montcalm, Napoleon and the Marquis de Lafayette, and a few others, but what knowledge they possess of these personages is chiefly confined to some famous battle described in a boy's book and the majority are firmly convinced that Lafayette was one of the finest of Frenchmen, who went back to France and started the Revolution there, but at the best, their knowledge is but hazy, and very few of them know, for example, that some years after the Mayflower landed a few people here to escape from persecution at home, those who remained in England expressed their disapproval of the lawless acts of the reigning king which prompted this emigration by taking off his head. Most children dislike the dry facts that are presented for their mental digestion and will do their best to evade learning the lesson. How often do we hear children say that they hate history, and what is the good of learning about those old things that are dead hundreds of years ago, that they have got "that horrid old history lesson to-morrow" and they would like to burn every history book that was ever made. How many persons have heard the same remarks about the modern history book—the historical picture play? To children it undoubtedly must seem strange to continually hear of the vital necessity of learning about "dead people," and made to con for an hour at a time, sometimes more, over to them, dry facts, dates and names, but what child would not read and study history with pleasure after seeing "The Crusaders" or a play showing the story of Magna Charta with King John grovelling on the ground and gnawing the straw in his rage at being circumvented and compelled to sign the Great Charter (the principles of which are the basis of the American Constitution), a picture story of the marriage and principal events in the lives of Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, the Gunpowder Plot, the landing of the Pilgrims and their hardships on the bleak New England Coast, the Battle of Trafalgar, Battle of Waterloo, old-time life in New York City, the burning of Chicago and its Phoenix-like rising from the ashes. Such picture plays would not only teach children as well as grown people, but they would, and do now, stimulate the interest in the history not only of their own, but other countries. Pictures are freely used in any child's history, for they can gain more knowledge of a lesson by one picture than by the whole page of description which they are forced to study.

Moving pictures can be used in every department of education, but in none more effectively (at least, from a child's standpoint) than in teaching history, for they clothe the dead bones of the past with the living flesh of the present. By using moving pictures notable events which a weary, discouraged teacher has in vain endeavored to impress on an unwilling class are indelibly impressed on the childish mind and the characters of five hundred or five thousand years ago are apparently as real and quite as natural as any member of the audience. They can bring an entire epoch, a series of events, or a political crisis into such a small compass that with all useless words eliminated a living story is depicted which possesses every human instinct and appeals to our best feelings. In fact, moving pictures both vitalize and crystalize historical events. One hour at a moving picture theater where one or two historical plays are presented will impress more facts, give more details and stimulate more interest than could be done with any number of text books, no matter how interestingly written. Even to those (grown people or children), who like history, the picture stories make it all the more interesting. Who could see the battle of Trafalgar without wanting to know the immediate causes that led up to it, the Landing of the Pilgrims and their early struggles to found a colony, and not be anxious to know all there was to be learned on the subject? Certain historical events of the leading countries, of course, are known to most children, but the particular value of the moving picture method of teaching lies in the fact that it can make even the dull facts entertaining. The scenes, too, are so realistic, the expressions on the various faces so natural, and the pantomime expresses the facts so convincingly that it would be worse than useless to attempt to bias the opinion of any child who has seen a picture play representing any particular occurrence.

In 1920, when history—and other things—is taught by means of the moving picture screen, the teacher, after writing on the blackboard the pages or paragraphs of history to be learned for the next lesson, will have the school picture screen depict the whole section. The children will take the deepest interest in whatever is pictured, and all the leading facts as well as interesting details will be ineradicably impressed on them. The succeeding session will find a class room of interested pupils, the majority of whom are bubbling over with information and data which they have gleaned from every available source, and will have numerous anecdotes to relate in connection with the lesson. The teacher will have a class room of interested pupils and teaching under such circumstances will be a pleasure. But to the teacher of 1911, 1920 seems so far away!

ANOTHER SHAMROCK STORY

The motion picture industry recently established in St. Louis is attracting widespread attention these days in the northwestern section of that city.

Automobiles carrying a motley crowd, followed by cowboys and Indians, mounted on bucking bronchos, are daily met in the thoroughfares, on their way to the adjacent country, in search of environment that will lend coloring and atmosphere to the photoplay subjects, which are to eventually bear the stamp "Shamrock."

Scenes, some ludicrous, others serious, are frequently enacted.

As an instance might be related an accident which nearly terminated seriously for one of the lady members of the company, Miss Dorothea Gray:

Several members of the organization were returning on horseback from a farm in the vicinity of Clayton, when nearing the corner of Grand and St. Louis avenues, Miss Gray's horse, a nervous, high-mettled animal, became restive and unruly, and started on a run.

Miss Gray, an excellent horsewoman, taken unawares, lost control of her mount and collided with a heavily laden beer truck. The impact was so forceful that the young woman was nearly unseated, and the animal started on a dead run.

Several blocks were covered with the intrepid horsewoman clinging with all of her strength to the now maddened animal.

Randolph Gray, the leading man, started in pursuit and caught the bridle of the fractious beast, stopping it just as Miss Gray fell from sheer exhaustion. Her injuries, while very painful, are happily confined to a few bruises and a sprained wrist. But these are only minor details in the strenuous life of the motion picture actress.

Young Mr. Gray by the way, has only recently been honorably discharged from Troop A, Eleventh Cavalry, in which he has served with distinction for the past three years. He was recognized by his comrades in arms as one of the most fearless and daring riders among "Uncle Sam's" recruits.

WHEN YOU CAN get the use of everything the Independents make from us, why not start right now?

"Real Film Service is our middle name."

Our twenty-four reels every week means that you get what you pay for.

Agents for Motiograph and Powers machines—Full line of parts.

WRITE WRITE NOW.

HON. SIR VIS

ANTI-TRUST FILM COMPANY

128 WEST LAKE ST., CHICAGO

Branch Office Grand Rapids, Mich.

Branch Office Minneapolis, Minn.

GET A REP

WHAT THE MAJESTIC IS DOING

Among the numerous new moving picture concerns just establishing themselves in business, the Majestic Motion Picture Company stands out with bold enterprising mien. A conversation with its manager, Mr. Tom Cochrane, divulged to us the knowledge that they have set their target high.

"We are going to try to supply the exchanges with the kind of pictures that they need," said Mr. Cochrane. "Good drama and high-class comedy will be our aim—no slap-stick stuff."

"Of course," he continued, after some deliberation, "we don't want to take the stand that we are the only ones aspiring to the very best, but we are going to be one of them."

Mr. Cochrane is very sincere in his intention to give to the public only his best efforts, and will personally inspect all films sent out, so as to be absolutely certain that the exchange man is supplied with only the best.

The Majestic is also fortunate in its choice of directors—Mr. Owen Moore and Mr. David Miles.

"So far," said Mr. Cochrane, "all of our pictures have turned out fine—not one has been spoiled."

They have already shipped several reels to Europe. When the Lusitania sailed out of the harbor on Wednesday, October 18th, she had on board the first of the Majestic Company's pictures for sale in Europe. And remember they have not yet been two months in business. This seems to us the real, quality, go-ahead spirit; in other words, they are going at it hammer and tongs right from the start, which the wide experience of these three men makes it possible for them to do.

MISS MARY PICKFORD

Also "Little Mary," who for some time past has been a popular favorite in juvenile and ingenue work, is figuring as leading woman for the Majestic. "Little Mary," we would like to say a word. "Little Mary," be it known, is a native of Toronto, Canada, and one of our staff has a tender leaning toward her on account of native kinship. I might add, in order to avoid any misunderstanding, that the individual who professes the "tender leaning" is a woman. Of "Little Mary" she has said, "She is very sweet indeed," and further, she added: "Perched on her valise in the office of the Majestic, rather than on a common, ordinary chair, she chatted away to me as though I had known her all my life. 'Just look at me; don't I look awful?' said 'Little Mary,' as lifting the side of her broad-brimmed hat, she displayed an abundance of hair still arranged in kid curlers, on her way to work. But to admiring me, it seemed that curls let loose would only make more compelling the tantalizing and piquant beauty of the bright little face."

Everyone loves to see "Little Mary" in the pictures. She has endeared herself to her audiences through her cute, child-like ways. She says of herself: "I have always been petted and spoiled. When I was out with Belasco's show, 'The Warrens of Virginia,' they petted me like everything. Why, Mr. Geene used to watch me so carefully, and if I looked just the least little bit pale, he would send me to the doctor, and he would go out and buy me medicine, a medicine glass to take it in, and all sorts of things, and now you see I'm spoiled because I naturally expect too much from everybody; the result is, now that I'm getting older, I get disappointed sometimes."

MARY PICKFORD AND OWEN MOORE
In "Love Heeds Not Showers," one of the early releases of the Majestic.

But one cannot realize that she ever could get any older, and one cannot help thinking that "Little Mary" will be turned

MARY PICKFORD AND OWEN MOORE
In "The Courting of Mary," one of the early releases of the Majestic.

sixty before anyone will ever be able to realize that age has anything in common with her whatever.

Mr. Owen Moore has also been a prime favorite in pictures, and is doing some remarkable work in picture production with the aid of Mr. David Miles, also a man of large experience. "Little Mary," who, by the way, is the wife of Mr. Owen Moore, says "The first love scene I ever played in was in pictures with Mr. Moore."

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES

(Inquiries in which the addresses are omitted are on file at Bureau of Manufactures. In applying for addresses refer to file number.)

No. 7454. Portable theater and films.—A business man wants manufacturers of portable houses to send him prices and plans of a portable theater, with chairs to seat about 1,000 all iron, walls to be double, leaving air space for heating pipes, and wants plans and prices for pipes separate, but does not want floor, as he will make concrete floors in about twelve towns in which he will rotate his moving picture films. He also desires films with prices f.o.b. Vladivostok, shipped via San Francisco and Tsuruga, Japan, and can take 60,000 to 100 000 meters per year. Quote in rubles f.o.b. Vladivostok; correspondence in German.

THANHOUSER GETTING LOCAL COLOR.

Near Lake George—to be more exact, several miles north, in the wilds of the Adirondacks—stands an old blockhouse which is said to be more than two hundred years old. This house is at present inhabited by a family of three—an old man of ninety-five, his wife of ninety and a young son of forty-five, who, the mother says, is still too young to get married.

The house was also inhabited by the father of the head of the family in possession now. The house stands in the locality described in James Fenimore Cooper's novel, "The Last of the Mohicans." When the Thanhouser Stock Company sojourned for nearly a month in this region to get a true setting for the production of Cooper's novel, they came upon this interesting trio.

The old man has never been in New York nor has his wife, but the "young" son made the trip and speaks of his experience in the "big city" with considerable awe. He informed his inquisitive guests that he sat up all night looking out of his hotel window watching the excitement and listening to the noise of "the gay White Way."

It was very hard to make the old man understand about motion pictures. He had never seen one in his life, and when it was explained to him that the Thanhouser players were at that very moment working on a moving picture production of Cooper's "Last of the Mohicans," he was beside himself with wonder and incredulity. The son, however, had already been initiated. In fact, he was enthusiastic and offered to assist the Thanhouser outfit.

He knew of a number of places which are said to be the exact spots to which Cooper alludes. Naturally, the Thanhouser players were glad to avail themselves of his good offices. He showed them scenes, the natural beauty of which engendered a feeling akin to bewilderment. They were dazzled by this display of nature's splendor and beauty.

The directors and camera men eagerly went to work and staged amidst this scenic paradise a large portion of the "Last of the Mohicans," which is to be released by the Thanhouser Company, Friday, November 10.

The exhibitors and the public will have this young man to thank for the authenticity of the scenery, and the fidelity of the reproduction.

SWAT THE NICKELODEON

A little boy, seven years old, was allowed to visit the moving picture shows every night. He became fascinated by the pictures of hold-ups, cheap melodramas, robberies, and other such exhilarating and uplifting exhibitions which the tired American public craves to take its mind off its business cares. This little lad would go night after night and feast upon these things.

Then he hunted up a partner, who also loved the moving pictures, and together these boys started out for adventures.

They would go up to a house, ring the bell and if anybody came to the door they would ask for a drink of water. If nobody came they would try the other doors, and in this way find out whether any one was at home. If not, they entered the houses. This is not a bit of fiction, figured up from what might happen. This, alas, is a plain, unadorned truth, and happened in a cultured little American city. The boys after entering the houses took whatever trinkets that might appeal to their childish eyes. What fun they were having; just like the moving pictures!

Soon the little city, for it was a place of about five thousand population, became stirred over the many robberies which were occurring. It was thought to have been the work of boys, for nothing of very much value was ever taken.

No one thought of suspecting two bright faced little lads who, when the doorbell was answered, asked for a drink of water. But such a thing could not keep up long, for they were not criminals, but just boys. They did not employ any of the tricks of professional burglars to cover up their tracks. They did these things in the day time, and of course in a very few days they were caught.

They were brought before the judge, a kind-hearted, fatherly man. He talked to them and tried to make them realize the awful thing which they had been doing. They seemed to understand and were allowed to go home after promising that they would never do anything of the kind again.

But the little seven-year-old went again to the moving pictures, and in the intoxication of his excitement he started out for more adventures.

He was again caught, and this time the judge ordered him sent to a boy's reform school. There he is to-day; he may come out a good boy and he may come out a criminal.

This same machine can reproduce the finest things in our literature; it can throw upon the canvas the inspiring pageants of history, or the beautiful stories of folk-lore. How are we going to use this wonderful modern invention? In it are untold powers for good or for evil. This is not a condemnation of moving pictures, for, used in the right way, they may, in my humble opinion, prove a blessing for mankind.

But in the meantime the great American public sits up and feasts its eyes upon a conglomeration of hold-ups, train robberies, murders, etc. And the little child who will be the great American public of to-morrow sits and gazes at them with a brain that is plastic. How are they molding that brain? Let us hope that the little boy in the reform school is the exception to the rule. Yes, let us hope!—Geo. B. Staff, in The Open Road.

LEARN TO SAY COMET TO YOUR EXCHANGE

Mr. Moving Picture Screen and Curtain Manufacturer Also Mr. Exhibitor:

We claim our Mirroroide Curtains and Screens to be superior to Any Curtain or Screen now before the Public. We respectfully invite you as manufacturers, to a Competitive Test of your output to be held at Mendelssohn Hall, New York City, October 19th. Send the best you have got, we stand ready to substantiate our claims.

We claim our Mirroroide screens and curtains superior to any Curtain or Screen now on the market. We desire to Prove it. Mr. Exhibitor, we expect you to be there. Will you come? Seeing is believing. A Fair test, convincing. It's up to you, Mr. Exhibitor. It's up to you, Mr. Manufacturer.

What we claim for Mirroroide we stand ready to substantiate. Bring on your Aluminum curtains, a fair test you will have.

Mirroroide Curtains and Screens sell for $2.50 per square yard, up to November 1st, 1911; $3.00 per square yard after November 1st. 9 square feet is contained in one square yard. "Are You Wise?"

Mirroroide is the best by test and the cheapest Curtain and Screen now on the Market. We can prove it.

All orders are shipped in three days.

Over 400 Curtains and Screens sold since August 3rd, 1911. We have over 300 testimonials from all over the World.

Demonstration size samples 50 cents, Ordinary 4 cents in stamps. We will certainly show you.

BENJAMIN GENTER CO., Newburgh, N. Y.

GET OUR LATEST, THE 1912 CURTAIN. IT'S A WONDER. IT'S A BUSINESS GETTER. REMEMBER, WE GUARANTEE YOU PERFECT PICTURES, THE BEST YOU EVER SAW, AND IT'LL SAVE YOU ONE-THIRD IN YOUR JUICE BILL. BESIDES, YOU CAN KEEP YOUR PLACE BRIGHTLY ILLUMINATED.

CHAMPION TRADE-MARK PERSONIFIES A HIGH STANDING IN THE MOVING PICTURE FILM LEAGUE.

THREE FORT RILEY RELEASES. MAKE A MEMO.

Field Day Sports at Fort Riley, Kans.

FILM 2 OF THE FORT RILEY MANOEUVRES

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR MONDAY, OCTOBER 30th, 1911

Regiments of Nat'onal Guard Militia and Companies of Field Artillery in real'stic sham battles. Every form of field sports, athletic stunts. Big gun target shooting, filmed at short range. Amazing to the spectator. Wonderful on the screen.

VERY ATTRACTIVE LOBBY DISPLAYS

"The Cowboys' Pies"

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 1st, 1911

For a laughing Tonic, this Picture comes hot off the griddle of Comedy, for the delectation of all Pho'oplay Phokes, who like to work their jaws with a Merry Ha! Ha! Though it's a dashing, careering, Champ Western Comedy.

COMING! FILM 3 OF THE FORT RILEY MANOEUVRES

National Guardsmen and Regulars at Fort Riley

MONDAY, NOV. 20th—FILM 3—MONDAY, NOV. 20th

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro' Motion Picture Distributing And Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,

12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released during the week of October 23d by the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Company:

Monday, October 23d

The Horse Thief's Bigamy.....American
The Copperhead .....Champion
A Biting Business.....Imp
Drummer Boys of Shiloh.....Yankee
Youth, Queen of Hearts.....Eclair

Tuesday, October 24th

A Noble Redman.....Bison
Bachelor's Ward.....Powers
Little Calf.....Powers
Little Em'ly and David Copperfield.....Thanhouser

Wednesday, October 25th

Law or the Lady.....Champion
Lone Bill's Last Ride.....Nestor
The Empty Crib.....Reliance
Percy and His Squaw.....Solax
Salambo .....Ambrosio

Thursday, October 26th

The Trail of the Eucalyptus.....American
The Waif .....Imp
The Breach of Faith.....Rex

Friday, October 27th

Flower of Forest.....Yankee
An Indian Hero.....Bison
The Jewels of Allah.....Thanhouser
For Big Brother's Sake.....Solax
Bill, His Wife and the Water.....Lux
Bertie and His Rivals.....Lux

Saturday, October 28th

Revenue Officer's Last Case.....Powers
Mutt and Jeff Discover a Wonderful Remedy.....Nestor
The Test of a Man.....Reliance
The Vicissitude of Fate.....Great Northern
Toto and Dummy.....Itala
Rearing of Pheasants.....Itala

"SUNLIGHT"

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

The box office is the pulse of the theatre. The profit or loss of your business depends on the flow of nickels and dimes through its window.

The public will patronize a good picture in preference to a poor one at the same price.

Ten new pleased patrons per day at 5c or five new patrons at 10c will within a year pay for a

"SUNLIGHT" SCREEN

How can you afford to be without one?

"Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain Co.

1100 Fisher Building CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE KINEMACOLOR GIRL

THE OPENING OF THE KINEMACOLOR THEATER.

At last there has sprung up in our midst a real moving picture theater entirely dependent upon the moving picture to entertain its audiences—a moving picture theater with regular theater prices, and regulation theater accommodations.

For some time past there has been heard from time to time among the masses in New York City the voicing of a desire for a moving picture theater. We have had many small houses—several hundred, I believe—but nothing on a large scale which could be called essentially a moving picture theater.

At its opening on Saturday night last (October 14th) the Kinemacolor Theater, formerly Mendelssohn Hall, was taxed to its full capacity of some nine hundred people, and it is estimated that at least four hundred more were turned away from its doors for lack of accommodation.

The success of the opening of the Kinemacolor Theater far surpassed the expectations of its directors. In anticipation of a probable small attendance at the first night of the newly installed theater, more than one hundred invitations had been sent out to interested ones. It was a gala night, and taxis and limousines were gathered thickly about the entrance of the theater, awaiting the outpouring of the delighted crowds.

This was a red letter day in the history of the moving picture in New York. The day of the arrival of the moving picture theater where people were willing to pay from 25 cents to $1 a seat to view the moving pictures; where men who had seldom if ever entered moving picture houses before, now laid down their five dollar bills without a grumble, is a day to be looked back upon in the history of accomplishment, in education, invention, and art.

To be sure, the Kinemacolor is a marvel of photography—a thing upon which thoughtful men look with curiosity, as one of the most wonderful scientific discoveries of the age. Therefore, it may be supposed by many of those opposed to the moving picture that only curiosity prompted those who on Saturday night last paid $1 for the privilege of an evening's entertainment of Kinemacolors. And, indeed, many may have done so from sheer curiosity, but curiosity alone, nor even the fascination of a novelty, could not have prompted the loud applause with which each picture was greeted. The gorgeousness of the coronation processions, and the fact of the natural colors being exhibited on the film, are drawing cards in themselves to those of us who have never had the opportunity of witnessing such a spectacle of pageantry. Knowing what an attraction this more or less stereoscoped program has been to the public, what is to expected when the drama appears upon the screen in the same living colors as are depicted in what has come before?

The interior of the old Mendelssohn Hall has been made more attractive by the insertion of magnificent panels on either side of the hall. These panels are 10 feet high and 60 feet long, and were painted to order for Mr. Lewisohn, owner of the building, by the court painter of Munich. The effect of these panels on a background of blue is most exquisite.

The Kinemacolor Company are already at work here, making films of different scenes which have been photographed in America. The National Cash Register works have been photographed by them. They are soon to start for New Orleans to take pictures of "The Clansman," and also outdoor scenes throughout the South.

A prominent organist of New York City, Mr. Discount, has been engaged by the Kinemacolor Company of America to preside at the organ at the Kinemacolor Theater. Also an orchestra of some ten or twelve pieces dispenses music. The chorus of the Kinemacolor Theater is composed of a number of church singers along with four singers from the Metropolitan Opera House. Previous to the regular program of pictures, with explanations by Mr. Grant, an organ prelude is given, lasting some seven or eight minutes, while the people are being seated; then follows the overture and the introductory march, and from here on the evening is filled with one continuous chain of wonderful, living, moving pictures in natural colors, accompanied at appropriate moments by the choir singers, organ, orchestra, or whatever fits in each individual scene. The effect with appropriate music is more beautiful than can be imagined by those who have not actually been eye and ear witnesses of the scene.

The Kinemacolor Theater is open every night, including Sundays, at 8:30 o'clock, and Wednesday, Friday and Saturday matinees at 2:30. And we understand that the coronation program will be adhered to for some time yet—or as long as an interest is manifested therein.

Sutter Creek, Cal.—A new moving picture theater is to be established on Main street.

Steven's Point, Wis.—N. B. Hackett, of Wausau, has purchased the Ideal Theater at this place from Mocogni & Bartkowiak.

Milwaukee, Wis.—M. C. Hensel, 402 Caswell Building, is preparing plans for a new theater for the Silver City Amusement Company.

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

CITY CUSTOMERS ARE ALL SATISFIED

NOW READY TO CATER TO OUT-OF-TOWN BUSINESS

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

THE AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO. CHICAGO

THEY'RE CALLING FOR THE OUT-OF-DOORS

This Great American Public!
Automobiling, Golf, and "Health Advice"—They're Sign-Posts—Guides To That CLAMORING DEMAND FOR THE OUT-OF-DOORS!

AMERICAN FILMS supply that DEMAND. Big, Breezy Prairies of the West—Great Mountain Ranges, Beautiful Lanes Through the Magnificent Forests of El Cajon Valley, California—They Satisfy That Longing For A Glimpse of the World's Garden Spot—California!

AMERICAN FILMS APPEAL To that Love of the Wild Out-of-doors—that Panoramic, Whirling Rush of Events that sends Red Blood Hurtling through Tired Veins. Primeval Instincts—Governed by no organized law, are products of that early Civilization whose wonderful Power to stir the jaded public pulse has never failed!

AMERICAN FILMS are flawless in Photography—Produced by Master Producers—Portrayed by the BEST TALENT OBTAINABLE ANYWHERE. No performance is complete without AMERICAN FILMS.

EVERY AMERICAN REEL PRODUCED IN EL CAJON VALLEY, SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA. RELEASE DAYS MONDAYS AND THURSDAYS.

RELEASE DATE, NOV. 6th.

"THE THREE SHELL GAME"

Dick Hankle, an outcast, after many rebuffs, succeeds in getting work at the home of a poor ranchman named Weston. He and Weston go to the bank to deposit Weston's savings. There they meet a three-shell man who induces Weston to gamble away his money. Returning heart-broken, the wife and daughter persuade Weston to discharge Dick, believing him guilty of having urged Weston to play. Made desperate by his ill-fortune, Dick goes forth to seek the three-shell man. He meets the gambler in a lonely trail and recovers Weston's money, which he returns for Weston's daughter. How he secured possession of the money makes one of the most exciting and genuinely entertaining films ever produced. Don't fail to ask for it.

Appropriate Length 1000 feet.

RELEASE DATE, NOV. 9th.

"THE MEXICAN"

Jose Curvez, a Mexican, while wandering idly about his ranch, discovers a baby girl. The years roll by, and Dolores grows into a beautiful girl. The Mexican has trouble with the lawless cowpunchers and, thinking Dolores would be safe, sends her off to do the shopping. She too is reviled and insulted and rushes home. The cowpunchers bombard the house and Dolores seeks aid. Clarence Stowell and a band of ranchmen put the invaders to flight and Stowell immediately makes love to the beautiful Dolores. But the Mexican, hating all Americans, gathers his friends and starts a race war, and, after an intensely interesting battle, is finally captured. He and Dolores are about to be hung when Clarence again comes to the rescue. The aged Mexican then reveals the circumstances surrounding Dolores' birth, and is permitted to go his way. A magnificent portrayal of the early race wars in California.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

PRODUCERS OF FLYING A FILMS
BANK FLOOR—ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

AMERICAN CHANGES ITS PLAYERS

Following out its new policy of giving its patrons even better service, the American Film Manufacturing Company announces that, in addition to the recent changes in its office force, several new faces will be seen in its productions in the near future.

The American believes that the introduction of new players will inject a new enthusiasm into its films, and result in obtaining an even better grade of work. Frequent changes in the leads has other advantages. Many exchanges complain that the sameness in features, when repeated week after week, has an influence in diverting business on the assumption that the patron has already seen the picture.

The American intends to be among the first to recognize this important principle, and in pursuance of that policy and its effort to produce the most acceptable line of pictures, has already completed negotiations with several high-salaried principals.

The American has made other important changes of late. Mr. R. R. Nehls has been taken in as manager, while Omer F. Doud, a well-known Chicago advertising man, has been made publicity manager.

The new building now being erected by the American promises to be a masterpiece of its kind. It is to be situated along the lake shore on one of the most valuable land sites in Chicago.

Minneapolis, Minn.—W. B. Fiske, 1403 East Franklin avenue, will erect theater to cost $4,500.

Modesto, Cal.—A new municipal theater is being planned for this city and bonds will be voted for same.

Toledo, Ia.—A new $10,000 opera house is being planned for this city.

Baltimore, Md.—A new $175 000 vaudeville theater is to be erected on Lexington avenue, between Liberty and Howard streets.

CAST YOUR EYE OVER THIS WEEKLY PROGRAM

MONDAY, OCTOBER 23d
THE HORSE THIEF'S BIGAMY.....AMERICAN
THE COPPERHEAD .....CHAMPION
A BITING BUSINESS.....IMP
DRUMMER BOYS OF SHILOH.....YANKEE
YOUTH, QUEEN OF HEARTS.....ECLAIR

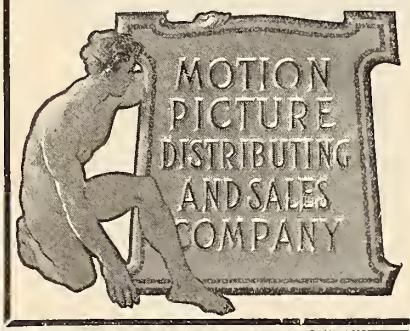
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 24th
A NOBLE REDMAN.....BISON
BACHELOR'S WARD .....POWERS
LITTLE CALF .....POWERS
LITTLE EM'LY AND DAVID COPPERFIELD....
THANHOUSER

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25th
LAW OR THE LADY.....CHAMPION
LONE BILL'S LAST RIDE.....NESTOR
THE EMPTY CRIB.....RELIANCE
PERCY AND HIS SQUAW.....SOLAX
SALAMBO .....AMBROSIO

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 26th
THE TRAIL OF THE EUCALYPTUS.....
AMERICAN
THE WAIF .....IMP
THE BREACH OF FAITH.....REX

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 27th
FLOWER OF FOREST.....YANKEE
AN INDIAN HERO.....BISON
THE JEWELS OF ALLAH.....THANHOUSER
FOR BIG BROTHER'S SAKE.....SOLAX
BILL, HIS WIFE AND THE WATER.....LUX
BERTIE AND HIS RIVALS.....LUX

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 28th
REVENUE OFFICER'S LAST CASE....POWERS
MUTT AND JEFF DISCOVER A WONDER-
FUL REMEDY..... .....NESTOR
THE TEST OF A MAN.....RELIANCE
THE VICISSITUDE OF FATE.....
GREAT NORTHERN
TOTO AND DUMMY.....ITALA
REARING OF PHEASANTS.....ITALA



AROUSES AN EPIDEMIC OF ENTHUSIASM WHEREVER SHOWN.
If you are not getting it from your exchange now communicate with the

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

111 EAST 14th STREET NEW YORK CITY

WILL MAINTAIN QUALITY.

Imp Company Will Increase Output to Three Reels a Week—A Talk With Carl Laemmle.

"CAN the Imp Company maintain its standard of quality if it produces three reels a week instead of two? No question about it, my dear sir. Not the least in the world. You see we have gone about it in a businesslike way by increasing the facilities of the plant, installing new machinery, engaging additional stage directors, scenic artists, camera men and actors until we are equipped for the added task. I have engaged some of the best moving picture talent in America and will pay the highest salaries of any concern in the country, bar none."

This was the answer to a question propounded Carl Laemmle, the president of the Imp Company, by a representative of this paper. Continuing, Mr. Laemmle further unbosomed himself.

"I will not be satisfied until the Imps are the best pictures in the world. This is saying a great deal, but we have mapped out a plan of campaign and will not depart from it one iota. We will forget about profits and dividends for the next year and spend the entire receipts in improving our pictures. Our films will be produced regardless of expense, and this determination, backed up by capital and experience, ought to make a combination that will win out. We are going to release three reels a week. The third one will be comedy, high-class polite comedy. We will also produce scenic, educational and historical pictures as well as dramas, selecting the subjects carefully and staging them with fidelity to facts and conditions. We are now engaged in the filming of a two-reel subject which will be one of the notable stories of the year. In the way of scenarios it is the intention to pay the highest prices of any concern in the business. We will enlist the services of writers of national reputation and expect to have strong, gripping dramas and bright, scintillating comedies submitted for our consideration. I am more enthusiastic to-day than ever before in regard to the picture industry, and I am out to give the best years of my life to improving conditions. I am encouraged in doing all those things, for it is a well known fact that moving pictures are more popular to-day than ever before, and the demand is becoming greater in consequence. The Imp product has always enjoyed a flattering patronage, and the incentive is to do bigger and better things and at the same time satisfy the growing demand for Imps.

"As to conditions in Europe, will say that I traveled extensively during my trip and found the future very bright on the other side. At present England is proving the best market in Europe. I noticed that on the continent they are showing extra reels, stories from 1,500 to 3,000 feet in length. I am heartily in accord with this arrangement, and it will only be a question of weeks when the best makers in this country will be compelled to fall in line. The European output recently does not have a tendency to elevate the moving picture industry, and I would not like to see such productions shown in America for the subjects are suggestive, in many cases, and not fit to show for the amusement of the young. I believe, however, that strong, gripping dramas of say 2,000 feet in length will become popular in this country. I notice in Europe a growing demand for scenic and educational subjects, which is a good indication, and they are bound to become popular in this country where the amusement caterer must provide entertainment for the student.

MR. CARL LAEMMLE

"Conditions on the whole are very favorable at present, and I desire to say my trip abroad was highly satisfactory as I learned that Imp films have become very popular in England, Germany, Russia, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, etc."

"AFTER THE BALL" OF THE SALES CO. EMPLOYEES

By Margaret I. MacDonald

THE ball given by the employees of the Motion Picture Sales and Distributing Co., on Saturday night, October 14th, was, to cay the very least of it, a grand success. It was one round of pleasure from start to finish, a round of pleasure in which some three or four hundred people participated.

Arrived at the entrance to the ballroom I stood dazzled for the moment by the bright lights and the gayety of the scene. Each of the many boxes surrounding the room was occupied by the different manufacturers and their representatives. Each box was identified by a pennant bearing the name of the manufacturer occupying the box, and which formed a part of the decoration of the exterior of it.

Never have I seen a bevy of more beautiful women than graced the interior of the ball room that night. There were many women there of whom it could be truthfully said, "She was a dream"—beautiful faces, and beautiful forms, enhanced by gowns in some of which were mirrored the flowing robes of ancient Greece. The grand march was indeed a beautiful sight; and as the different mazes of the march were gracefully sauntered through, from the boxes above were thrown brilliant colored serpentines, which wound in and out among the vari-colored costumes, adding a fantastical touch to the already beautiful scene. And then, all unawares, as if a mere look was not enough, but it must needs gather in its embrace the rampant beauty of the scene below, the entire ceiling decoration of serpentines, of pink, white. green, lavender, etc., fell upon the astonished throng, enveloping it in its subtle folds. It was a sight fit for the gods; and it did seem to me that little Cupid's wings fluttered for a brief moment among the suddenly disrobed candelabra. Maybe 'twas only a fancy!

MR. H. A. SPANUTH
President M. P. D. & Sales Co. Employees' Association.

During intermissions in the dance, pictures were thrown upon the screen which was arranged above the orchestra gallery. Among pictures shown were portraits of different Independent managers. The question "Who?" was prefixed to the exhibition of each picture, then as the picture was thrown upon the screen, the name of each individual subject was shouted from different parts of the ball room, followed by loud applause. It was indeed a gala night for the Independents. A night when they were all thrown together in friendly communication, forgetting their troubles of the moving picture plant, making merry together. Everyone seemed in good humor. The management had done everything to make the guests enjoy themselves—everything was done that ought to have been done—and nothing apparently had been left undone.

The following are the names of some of those present: Mr. and Mrs. Mark Dintenfass, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Thanhouser and the Thanhouser Kids, Mr. Harry Raver, Mr. Lawrence McGill, Miss Dorothy Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Nicholls, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius J. Henderson, Mr. William Russell, Miss Margaret Snow, Miss Florence La Badie, Mr. James Cruze, Mr. Harry Benham, Miss Martin, Mr. Levine, Mr. Joe Engel, Mr. I. C. Oes, Mr. Brulatour, Mr. Herbert Miles, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Saunders. Mr. Charles Sewell, Miss E. R. Steiner, Mr. Carle Laemmle, Miss Brown, Miss Pearl White, Miss Rock, Mr. Leon Rubenstein, Mr. Charles Simone, Miss Jessie B. Bishop, Mr. Theodore Heise, Mr. Charles Gercke, Mr. Emmett Williams Miss Tillie Specht. Miss Annie Egan, Miss Rose Scott, Mr. Carl L. Gregory, Mr. Gerald J. Bagley, Mr. J. P. Chalmers, Mr. G. A. Magie. These are all the names which I was fortunate enough to secure, and I do sincerely hope that those I have not mentioned will forgive me on the grounds that either they were personally unknown to me, or then that in the busy whirl of pleasure I missed seeing many who were doubtless concealed in the throng.

The memory of the pleasures of the 14th will remain a pleasant recollection to many of us until the calendar has rolled around another year, when we hope the occasion will repeat itself.

The souvenir programs and pillow tops were a much appreciated asset.

A Few Interesting Incidents of the Ball.

Mr. Harry Raver reports having a most enjoyable time at any rate he was noticed among the last to leave.

Some time during the evening a daughter of the "Trus was caught kissing a father of the Independent "A whi pered vow, a fond caress, a kiss—and all is well—o." H ha! but 'twas a joke, and the lights glimmered on.

Some of the more serious-minded guests were seen gliding early from the ballroom—among them was spotted Mr. G. A. Magie.

The exasperating penetration of the spot light to the secluded nooks was the cause of annoyance to many an interested pair.

The officers of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company Employees' Association are:

H. A. Spanuth, president
H. L. Taylor, vice-president
E. B. Garrett, secretary
J. R. Miles, treasurer
E. G. Brown, assistant treasurer
E. B. Deil, corresponding secretary
F. E. Gribbons, assistant secretary
G. Ryan, assistant corresponding secretary
A. H. White, sergeant-at-arms
J. Lewis, assistant sergeant-at-arms
Charles Abrams, general director
Charles P. Warshauer master of ceremonies
Robert B. Warshauer, floor committee

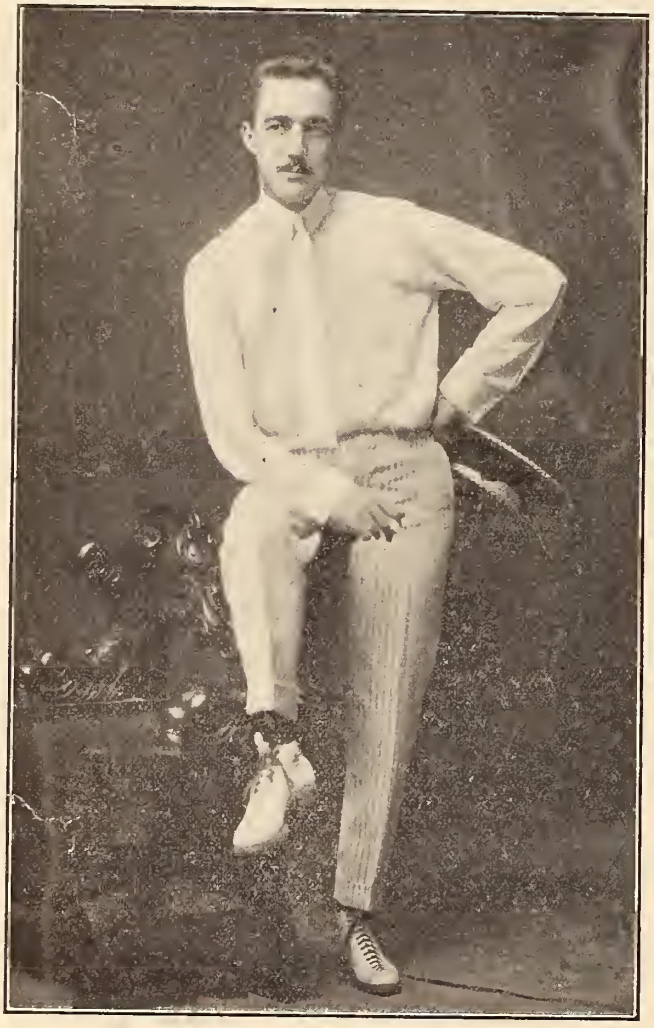
The members are as follows:

C. P. Abrams
E. G. Brown
R. E. Burns
E. B. Diehl
E. B. Garrett
R. C. Gallagher
F. E. Gribbon
J. H. Hoffmeier
T. M. Kurner
J. J. Lewis
J. R. Miles
N. M. Moore
M. H. Pivar
G. M. Ryan
Charles Sanwald
Charles Sanwald, Jr.
H. A. Spanuth
H. L. Taylor
J. V. Ward
A. H. White

MR. HERBERT MILES EXPRESSES SOME OF HIS VIEWS TO OUR "ROVING COMMISSIONER"

MR. HERBERT MILES was in his office completing the business for the day when I happened in upon him. Although he was about to depart on a mad rush for a train, he gave me the glad hand, and in a very few words imparted to me a few facts which I am about to impart to my readers, with regard to the arrangements and tactics to be followed by the Republic, of which Mr. Miles is the general manager and sole head of the concern.

"We are going to work on a new idea," said Mr. Miles, "of which we are the originators, or pioneers. We are going in for two-reel feature films and will release one a week on the same day. We have been convinced of the advisability of doing this by the great success of such films as "The Crusaders," "Dante's Inferno" and other feature films which have been recently placed on the market. We may be ahead of the times in this venture, and, to use a slang expression, we may prove ourselves to be the "fall guy," but we are doing this to offset a certain condition with which the exchange man all over the country is struggling.



MR. HERBERT L. MILES

"The exchange man pays a certain price for every reel he takes into his place. If he does not find use for these reels, they lie on his shelves—a dead loss. The exhibitor comes to him and says: 'Now, I am running a certain feature film this week, and I want you to give me a rebate on my account.' The exchange man had made preparation to furnish the exhibitor with a certain number of reels each week, therefore the week that the exhibitor has used a feature film, the exchange man has been at a dead loss, besides having to give a rebate on the exhibitor's bill.

"Each one of our films is to be examined by a person who is closely connected with the educational authorities of New York State, and if there is anything in any of those films that is not absolutely correct and eligible from an educational standpoint to be shown before children, that film will either be cast aside or remedied, if possible.

"In the first place, our scenarios will be very carefully selected and studied. Everything that we produce must be dramatically and chronologically correct—there must be no achronisms in our pictures. We want our pictures to be so thoroughly authentic that they can be used without scruple in the education of children. There is no way in which an erroneous idea of any subject can be placed in the mind of a child more easily than through the medium of a picture, and we propose to turn out pictures that are absolutely correct in every detail.

"We do not intend to confine ourselves to the resources of a stock company," continued Mr. Miles. "When you confine yourself to the limitations of a stock company in the production of different subjects, to be obliged to use the same people over and over again for all kinds of different characterizations, it is like trying to fit a round peg in a square hole, or vice versa. We have located ourselves near Broadway, and when it is necessary to look up a particular type for some particular story, we will look up and down Broadway until we find the type we want, and then pay for it. This insures much better work than the putting of the same faces and figures into picture after picture. For the part of George Washington in "Before Yorktown" we have a man who stands about six feet three inches."

The Republic Film Company have at 145 West Forty-fifth street, a suite of seven offices, which will be fitted up for the accommodation of the different departments of the work.

"I am still secretary of the Sales Company," said Mr. Miles, "and although I have given up everything else to take charge of the Republic Company, I still feel as if the Sales Company was a child of mine, for I was one of the original members of the firm.

"The Sales Company is a unique institution," he continued. "It is a very remarkable thing to see a large number of manufacturers of the same article contentedly pouring their goods into one common receptacle, to be handled altogether by one firm."

The directors of the Republic Film Company are Mr. William Davis, a very young man of large experience, and Mr. Harry Harvey. Mr. Davis has had three years' practical experience with various manufacturers; he was six years in stock at Proctor's at Toronto; he was with the Forepaugh and Girard Theaters, Philadelphia; was also with Savage's "Devil" Company, "The Child Wife," and a number of other Broadway productions. Mr. Harry Harvey, assistant to Mr. Davis, has grown up in the theatrical profession, and is not only an actor of consummate skill, but is also a clever writer.

Among the first "Reps" to be released will appear "Before Yorktown," "Daniel Boone," "A Leather Stocking's Tale" and "Ivanhoe."

As one of the pioneers of the moving picture business in New York, Mr. Miles' movements will be watched with a great deal of interest. We will endeavor to keep our eagle eye on Mr. Miles so as to be able to acquaint our readers from time to time with interesting facts of his progressiveness which are bound to occur.

GET A REP

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"
IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE
AIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,
PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.
28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.
Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI,
la, Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera di S Paolo) (Italy)
"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

FILMS FOR RENT
FREE LITHOGRAPHS AND SONGS
CHEAPEST HOUSE IN AMERICA
DIAMOND FILM COMPANY
538 SO. DEARBORN STREET CHICAGO

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 21st

HIS FIDELITY INVESTIGATED

A REAL feature comedy. A laugh producer that is sure to please every audience. Insist on getting this film from your exchange. Length 871 feet.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 28th

THE VICISSITUDE OF FATE

Powerful dramatic feature production, showing how time proved an employer's hasty conclusion to be ill-founded.

LOBBY DISPLAY PHOTOS OF ALL GREAT NORTHERN PLAYERS NOW READY. WRITE FOR CIRCULAR!

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCTIONS.

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

THE WAIL OF THE OPERATOR

FROM ONE WHO SUFFERS

The Moving Picture News being a professional publication, it's of no use to go over the old ground with regard to the conditions under which the operator works. Every one in the profession knows the kind of booth the average theater is equipped with. Some are good, roomy structures, others are not—some are well ventilated, while in others little or no attention is paid to the comfort of the man at the machine. Yet all expect a good picture, and it is astonishing how a good picture can be produced in some of the rabbit-holes provided for the operating-room. In these small booths it's just impossible to get away from the heat of the arc, the machine taking up most of the room. The boss thinks he's done a whole lot when he puts in a fan. This is generally placed so that it stirs up all the dust, etc., in the place, which finally goes down the operator's throat or in his eyes, at the same time blowing a draught of air upon his perspiring body, with the result that he has generally got a cold. As this individual is one that cannot be done without—as he and his machine constitute the whole show, at least the boss should see after his comfort—a fan properly placed in a shaft to draw out the hot air instead of fanning it about, is the best and costs no more than the other kind. Some bosses have done all this and this kick is not meant for them; but recently the city inspectors drew up plans, and booths, in a short while, are to be constructed according to them; they call for booths that will enable an operator to work in comfort, both with regard to size and ventilation. How do you suppose some of the bosses took that? Why, they organized and attended a meeting, engaged counsel to protest against this new humane order just to save their pockets. Don't think that this applies to all exhibitors, because there are a number whose booths are all and more than the new law calls for; then there are others, while in A1 condition, are just a few inches of floor space short of the new requirements. Theirs is hard luck, but the others—and there are quite a number that are not fit for a human being to work in—these are the guys who are wailing loudest. Inspectors of W. G. and E., as well as Inspector of Buildings, and even fire officers, have made suggestions in the past, but of course no notice was taken in most cases, as the law called for nothing except a box to hold the machine. The man who worked it was of no account.

So we kick. If we kick to the boss he fires us and gets another man who won't, and will work under any conditions—so we kick to you, sir.

GET A REP

Give This Souvenir and Pack Your House

Genuine Japanese Imported after dinner Cup and Saucer. Cup 2¾ x 1½ in., saucer 4½ in. Thin transparent china, typical Japanese decoration in Tokyo red. If you can't afford to give the cup and saucer with one admission, give the cup at one show and the saucer at the next; this keeps them coming. It's the biggest attendance increaser ever offered.

One Gross Cups and Saucers, 288 pieces, $8.40.
Deposit must accompany C. O. D. orders.
Sample mailed for 15c.

Illustrated catalog of Souvenirs and attendance increasing plans, free.

TAKITO, OGAWA & CO., 156 W. Lake St. P., CHICAGO, ILL.

Theatre Sales Co.

211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341

Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call.
Make Known your Wants

BARGAINS—BARGAINS

Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Cineograph $60. Motiograph $75. Powers Cameragraph No. 5 only $110.

Edison Model B, Powers No. 6 and Standard New are Specialties.

Model B Gas Outfit, $25. Stereopticons, Opaque Magic Lanterns, Etc.

Motion Picture Machines Wanted.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GET A REP

Through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

A 2 Reel Feature Subject Every Week From

The Republic Film Company

145 West 45th St., New York City

25c in Stamps Gives You One Copy of

HALLBERG'S

1912 MOTION PICTURE CATALOGUE AND REFERENCE BOOK

I, HALLBERG, "The Economizer Man," have advanced several thousand dollars to secure an edition of 10,000 copies of the above mentioned book, and guarantee the book to be the most complete and reliable information on the subjects of electrical equipment for theatres of all kinds; motion picture machine and opera chair installations, together with all specialties required for up-to-date motion picture theatres.

MANAGERS AND OPERATORS SEND 25c TODAY, TO SECURE A COPY from the first edition, with the understanding that I will give you credit for the 25c on your first order for any kind of goods amounting to $2.00 or more.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.

I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.

I Am Jobber of Powers and Motiograph Machines, and will Exchange for Either, or Any Other Make You Desire.

Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.

Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.

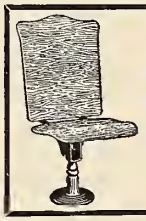
I Equip Your Theatre Completely

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.

Write for Free Catalogue No. 2.



THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-Saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.

HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

The MOVING PICTURE NEWS will be sent you for the balance of the year for 25 cents. This offer is for you to become better acquainted with us and to secure you as a regular subscriber next year.

GUARANTEED ACCURATE PARTS for all MOTION PICTURE MACHINES at very reasonable prices. SPECIAL parts and machines as also experimental parts made to order. All repair work on MOVING PICTURE MACHINES promptly attended to at remarkably low figures. CHAS. E. DRESSLER, 388 Second Ave., Betw. 22nd & 23rd Sts.

WANTED TO BUY

1000 Second-hand Moving Picture Machine Heads. Write and tell us what you have and how much.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY COMPANY

178 N. STATE STREET
CHICAGO, ILL.

HAVILAND'S MOVING PICTURE PIANISTS' ALBUM and the MOVING PICTURE NEWS for one year, 52 issues. $2.00

FILMS FOR RENT

THE OLD RELIABLE HOUSE
SEND FOR OUR BIG LIST

219 SO. DEARBORN ST. CHICAGO

EUGENE CLINE

The Independent Film Service You Need

We can take on a few more customers who want MONEY-DRAWING SUBJECTS.—All Reels are in excellent condition. A good FEATURE now and then will help you greatly.—Get in touch with us at once.—We will save you money.

WE ARE HEADQUARTERS FOR MACHINES AND SUPPLIES.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY, 109 N. Dearborn Street, CHICAGO

THE BIGGEST MONEY MAKER IN THE HISTORY of the MOTION PICTURE WORLD

DANTE'S INFERNO

MILANO FILMS FIVE REELS

THE RIGHTS CAN NOW BE SECURED FOR THIS MOST WONDERFUL MOVING PICTURE for

AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND

This Is An Opportunity of a Lifetime

CALL OR ADDRESS

ANDERSON & ZIEGLER

TIMES BUILDING

42d Street and Broadway NEW YORK

SHAMROCK FILM.

Enquiries are coming in thick and fast, as to the progress of the "Shamrock Company" of St. Louis.

During the past three weeks, more than three hundred letters and cards have been received by its projectors, anxiously enquiring the date of their first release.

The beginning, or formation of an industry, is the most trying problem to solve. A false start is often fatal to any chance for success that might have been in store for the projectors of any enterprise, or business.

Realizing this fact, the executives of the St. Louis Motion Picture Company have approached cautiously, and are devoting every energy and straining every nerve, to bring their efforts to a successful issue. The magnitude of the work thus far accomplished can scarcely be realized. The building up of their plant, the installation of the many new and improved devices, to insure perfection in their product, the organization of their company, said to be one of the strongest in the world of cinematography, has been no simple task, but the labor involved in this particular has been comparatively easy, when compared to the energy spent, and vitality consumed in the selection of suitable themes and the careful direction and minute attention to detail necessary to insure their being up to the same standard of excellence as that enjoyed by those with whom they hope to compete.

The ten and more negatives shown thus far are said to be "chef d'oeuvres" of photographic art. They have been prepared with a view to treating a variety of subjects all widely different which run the entire gamut, from tense drama to broad farce.

One picture recently completed is an Indian story, written along novel and original lines, and in construction and portrayal is apart from anything yet shown.

A breezy Western comedy is another of their efforts that is sure to attract attention, and will cause some of their competitors in this field to "sit up, and take notice."

Complete harmony has been a great factor in accomplishing the results obtained by the Shamrock Company. Only recently a member of the staff was asked by a visitor the secret of the seeming goodfellowship existing. The reply came quickly, "How could there be other than harmony, with two such able generals as Mr. Goebel and "Bert" Hamilton?" And it is reported that the visitor remarked: "Selah!" And departed.

QUALITY BOUND TO WIN OUT

ENDORSED BY EXPERTS
A DOCUMENT IN EVIDENCE

Moving Picture Machine Operators Protective Union

Boston Local No. 182

A. F. S. E. OF UNITED STATES AND CANADA

WHEREAS, This Local having applied to The Enterprise Optical Company, of Chicago Ill., for a "Mutoscraph" Machine to be used for demonstrating and educational advancement of this Local, and

WHEREAS, The Enterprise Optical Company, of Chicago, Ill., having kindly complied with the request of this Local, and presented for the above mentioned purposes an electrical "Mutoscraph" Machine, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That in order to show our appreciation and gratitude for said gift from The Enterprise Optical Company, of Chicago, Ill., a hearty vote of thanks is hereby tendered said Company, and be it further

RESOLVED, That a copy of same be spread on the minutes of Boston Local, No. 182, and an engrossed acknowledgement be presented to aforementioned Company, also a copy hung in the Lodge Hall as a constant reminder of their unselfish interest in our behalf.

James F. Burke, President
Edward T. McDermott
John J. Maloney
Thad C. Spencer, Committee on Resolutions

ORDER 1912 MODEL NOW
ADVANCE CATALOG READY TO MAIL

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MANUFACTURING CO.
564 W. RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO
For sale by reputable dealers everywhere

COMING! COMING! COMING!

Three Imps a Week

And Better QUALITY Than Ever! Watch! Wait! Listen!

NOTES OF THE WEEK

FROM THE OBSERVATORY.
By G. F. Blaisdell.

MOVING picture operators are coming to favorable public notice these days. They are establishing a deserved reputation for coolness and efficiency in emergencies. This past week or ten days two notable instances of the heroism of operators have come to hand.

In Baltimore, Ray Levy, the operator of the Little Gem, discovered four reels in a box blazing briskly. He threw on the house lights, stopped his projector, and quietly informed the audience that his machine had broken and would require several minutes to repair. He then removed the burning films to the street. In doing so he was burned on the hands and arms. On his return he told the audience that the break was too serious to admit of immediate repair, and, as it was 10:30 o'clock, dismissed the house. When the people filed out they saw the blazing films, and an approaching engine, summoned by a silent alarm.

Thomas Cochard, an operator in the Cameraphone, in Pittsburgh, had a painful experience on the afternoon of October 3. While reeling off the final scenes of a picture a spark flew from the glowing carbon of the electric light and sputtered on the film, sending a sheet of blue flame around the booth. Realizing the excitability of the average audience, the operator ignored his own danger, turned quickly and backed up against the "view hole" in sight of those in the seats. Fearing to leave this post lest those below should see the flames, Cochard saw four other films flash into fire. At the same time much of the hair on his brows and head curled into nothingness. Cochard attempted to pull the untouched portions of the films from the blaze and blistered his hands. In a few minutes the pictures had burned out. Then the operator turned, put his head through the hole and announced the show had ended.

* * * *

The captain of a good sized ship has no greater responsibility than at times devolves on the moving picture operator. If there is a yellow streak in a man there is no agency that will more quickly uncover it than a blazing film in the confines of a projection booth. That the operators are rising to the emergencies with which they are so suddenly confronted is a credit to themselves, but in greater measure it is a credit to the craft in general.

* * * *

The Sunday opening question is still agitating many communities, large and small, principally, of course, the latter. The new Mayor of Wichita, Kan., took his seat on September 30. His first act was to prohibit Sunday shows, under a penalty of a fine ranging from $100 to $200 or imprisonment for thirty days, or both. Mayor Shank, of Indianapolis, has stopped the charging of stated admissions to picture shows on Sunday, declaring that only contributions can be accepted. Illustrated songs will be permitted, but no vaudeville.

In Springfield, Mass., in spite of vigorous clerical opposition, the managers of four houses persist in running their shows on Sunday. Some of the managers are trying to weaken the ministerial antagonism by declaring that a percentage of their receipts will go to unnamed beneficiaries, one of them saying that his house had been paying out nearly $100 a week to charity, and inquiring if any of the churches could make an equal showing. There seems to be no good reason, however, why an exhibitor should give up to charity any part of his legitimate profits in order to display pictures on Sunday. As a general rule, the harder, the rougher, the tougher, any particular community, the more is that particular community benefited by Sunday evening picture shows.

The City Council of Plattsmouth, Neb., has passed to second reading an ordinance prohibiting Sundays shows. The bill was then referred to the Police Committee, where it is expected to remain.

The protest of the ministers of Lewiston, Idaho, did not avail against a petition of the majority of the voters in favor of Sunday shows. The managers promise that only appropriate pictures will be shown.

* * * *

On September 24 three proprietors of leading picture shows on Curtis street, Denver, agreed to advance their price of admission from 5 to 10 cents. The increase was in the nature of an experiment, and was to last thirty days. One of the owners was indiscreet enough to mention the time limit, and the patrons remained away. The "combine" lasted thirteen days and then went to pieces, and there is some feeling among the organizers of the pool.

* * * *

The "James Boys" are having a hard time of it these days. They have been prevented from performing in Minneapolis, Bowling Green, Ky.; Faribault, Minn.; Detroit, and Parsons, Kan. Poor Beulah has been barred also from the screens in Topeka and Parsons, Kan.; Grand Rapids, Mich., and Lowell, Mass.

* * * *

The Fort Worth censorship board may not disband, after all It hopes yet to find something for itself to do. It is said that several proprietors have disregarded the ordinance requiring the filing of synopses of coming pictures a week in advance of their exhibition. This rule ought to make some work for the exchange men.

* * * *

Mrs. E. K. Foster is the final appointee to the Police Commission of Los Angeles, Cal., which has been given jurisdiction over picture theaters and penny arcades. Mrs. Foster is a clubwoman. The other members are Miss Emma Bumiller, representing the Civic Association; Rev. Stanley Ross Fisher, appointed by the Mayor; Judge A. P. Tugswell, representing the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association, and Ralph C. Daniels, representing the Board of Education. The first question to be presented to the board was the petition of the Exhibitors' Association urging the abrogation of the ordinance requiring that parents or guardians accompany children under sixteen.

* * * *

In Trenton, N. J., sixty-nine members of the Mercer County Christian Endeavor Union have asked the Mayor to appoint a local board of censors to pass upon all films intended for local exhibition. These presumably ordinarily truthful churchmen make the startling assertion that "We believe that the majority of the moving pictures exhibited in Trenton are of such a nature as to be detrimental to the moral well-being of the youth of our city."

* * * *

Here's a bit of humor from the facetious editor of the Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal, who, in his issue of October 1, under the caption of "News of Beulah," says:

"News from West Virginia says that motion pictures of Beulah Binford are being displayed in that State, scriptural quotations accompanying the pictures, so as to better point the moral, and adorn the story of the Beattie tragedy, in which Beulah figured indirectly. It is understood that Beulah's manager has sold the exclusive privilege to exhibit her pictures in West Virginia for $2,000. It is said that negotiations are now under way to sell the same privilege in Kentucky and Virginia.

"At present Beulah is in New York drawing her weekly stipend of $125 per week from Bernstein. It was reported that she would soon get on the board herself."

* * * *

The first prison sentence to be imposed in New York City for admission of unaccompanied children to picture shows has been given to Moses Mass. The Court of Special Sessions made the term a flat twenty days. At the time of the arrest there were over forty minors in the house, and only fifteen adults. A neighborhood organization, the Unity Club, secured the evidence, and turned it over to the Children's Society.

Ciro Pavlitto, of Brooklyn, was fined $100 for a similar offense.

* * * *

Miss Irene Langford, the opera singer, has accepted the invitation of the National Censorship Board to join that body. She will confine her attention chiefly to the artistic and theatrical side of the pictures. Miss Langford is a prominent member of the Actors' Church Alliance and the Professional Woman's League. She was recently conspicuous by her activity in condemning the stage and screen appearance of Beulah Binford.

* * * *

In regard to the kindly reiterated invitation of the Western Correspondent to visit Hot Springs, and the very natural query as to whether the tentative acceptance was a promise or a threat: When a man who, for various consecutive moons has been perched high on the water wagon hits a town like Hot Springs things are more than ordinarily likely to happen, in chunks. Threat, undoubtedly!

* * * *

Bishop George M. Matthews, presiding at the East Pennsylvania Conference of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, in Reading, recently made a bitter attack upon moving pictures, taking for his theme the display of the Binford pictures in a local theater. Characteristically ministerial. If there happens to be one insignificant feature of an industry to which you take exception, by all means down the whole industry. It will put you in the local prints the next day. That ought to be glory enough for anybody.

* * * *

The Mayor of Donaldsonville, La., has ordered the discontinuance of the practice of giving cash prizes to the spectators at the two local picture houses.

* * * *

Among recent incorporations are the Republic Film Company, New York, capital $100,000; Ortho Film Company, New York, capital $150,000, and the New York Photo Play Company, capital $12,000.

* * * *

The recent increase in the price of admission from five to ten cents in some of the picture theaters of Denver has resulted in the ordering of an investigation by the license committee of the Board of Supervisors. Charges are freely made that in order to obtain a license to open a picture theater an applicant is asked to pay $1,000 for a license, whereas the city ordinances stipulate that the cost shall be $50. As the issuing authority takes the ground that there is no need of any more houses of this description, it is alleged that the only way a license may be obtained is to "see" a certain party who knows where can be found a man with a license which does not happen to be working and which he may be induced to sell.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 18.

The past week in the motion picture line witnessed the usual dull aftermath that follows the State Fair, and there wasn't much doing. The exposition of the State's products was the biggest and best that has ever been given, there isn't any doubt of that, and all of us spent our change more or less freely, so that the bottom of things appears to have dropped out.

Recall in my previous letters an account of a romance that has been going on in local picture society? Well, by heck, one of 'em has gone and "done" it. Yep, Leo is the guilty one. Married—sure. "Leo King and Miss Dorcia Dillow were quietly married," etc., is the way the local papers had it. Leo is the operator at the Lyceum Theater, and Mrs. King, nee Miss Dillow, was formerly cashier at the same institution. In fact, it was while watching the pictures together that the bond of affinity, divinity and all the other "inities" was discovered and day by day the romance grew until it just couldn't keep any longer. Leo is turning the crank of the machine with a smile on his face a yard wide.

I understand that his boss, Eddie Gavrel, took him to one side and made Leo tell him all about the marriage ceremony, what the minister says and what he said, because Eddie has that bee buzzing around him and when he flops off the bachelor's cart I'm going to get out an extra in Hot Springs.

Motion photography is certainly receiving a big boost in a series of special articles that are being written by Frederick Haskins, and published in the Arkansas Gazette. That paper, by the way, is the State's leading daily, and every day, on the editorial page, for the past week there has been a double column article devoted to motion pictures. These articles are interesting and have attracted a great many readers. Mr. Haskins, whoever he may be, knows what he writes about.

I didn't have time to write much about the attractions that were on the "Midway" at the State Fair, but the picture show there was the limit. The "front" of the theater was immense, but when one got inside it was seen that the machine had been thrown upon a small wooden stand. They showed two reels of pictures, one entitled "The Younger Brothers," and the other an alleged "Jesse James" reel, and both of them rotten. In fact, I never saw so much worthless junk since I gazed at the first picture years ago. It was the limit. I asked the operator how old the pictures were, and he told me that he had been with the "trick" for three years and that they were old when he came. The vaudeville was given in another theater and that, honest Injun, was worse than the pictures.

A day before coming here the girls left the show and the management must have raided several kitchens in order to get the bunch of "biscuit shooters" they brought on here. Poor things, they didn't know what to do with their hands or feet, and looked out at the audience with frightened, sheep-like eyes, and the boys guyed them unmercifully. One of the women—she was fifty-five if she was a day—sang "I Want Some One to Flirt with Me," and two back rows of empty seats toppled over and a pair of African lions in an adjoining tent fainted from actual fright.

Hats off to Thanhouser, and Mr. and Mrs. Thanhouser, the Thanhouser Kid and all the other Thanhousers go to the head of the class.

We had your "scoop," the Austin flood pictures, here this week, and desire to go on record at this time and state that they were the real thing and then some. It was a great surprise to the people of this city when the Scenic and Photo-Play theaters announced that they were going to show the pictures of the Austin flood. Some of the more skeptical ones did not believe it, but you delivered the goods and the pictures were wonderfully interesting. Congratulations on that "scoop," Thanhouser; it was a feat to be proud of.

There were several good pictures here the past week and the patrons who liked good wrestling had their fill in Ambrosio's reel of that nature. There was just one feature that I heard any kicking on, and that was when the negro wrestler appeared with the white men. People down here don't like to see a "dinge" in white society, and they manifested their displeasure.

American gave us a good reel in "The Love of the West," which contained more genuine sentiment than is usually found in a reel of that type. It was a great picture, American, and those who appreciate that unexplainable call that draws men to the mountains and the prairies—and I guess there is more or less of that in every one of us—took in every moment of that reel. It was immense. Give us some more like 'em.

Champion's "Barbara Frietchie" developed at the beginning an exchange of ladies that was amusing. That reel was hardly up to the standard, Champion, and a few good actors and actresses with your company might help some.

Imp sent us a good reel in "The Rose's Story" and "Through the Air." The latter was especially meritorious and elicited round after round of applause. That air craft caught the crowd in this city and the Photo Play and Scenic did a big business with the picture. The James Boys held forth at the Princess all week, three reels, and I cannot see that these pictures were any worse than the usual run of Western films. The scenario writer endeavored to show a good side to the life of Jesse, and he even went so far as to plant him in church. The pictures were thrilling and also much enjoyed.

"Mutt and Jeff's Quiet Day in the Country," as usual, was good for a packed house, and the boys who are handling this difficult comedy deserve a world of praise for the clever manner in which they are getting away with it.

And here, Thanhouser, is another bouquet. Your "Five Rose

Sisters" were about the niftiest bunch that hit these diggin's in many days. The little girl who won the "sky pilot" made an awful hit here, and if it had been possible to have cut her out of the curtain and taken her home with us, I fear me much there would have been a riot in the theater to get her. I think that the "Beauty Director" of Thanhouser has exceptionally good taste. Let us see more of that young lady, Thanhouser; give her other good parts to play. She's the real thing.

Biograph, as was to be expected, took the lead in the trust films and their reel, "The Squaw's Love," was immense. I was surprised at the little lady's performance in the water. I first became interested in her when she was with the Vitagraph and played the part, "When Bettie Became a Maid," but she eclipsed that performance tenfold in this latest Indian picture. It was a dandy reel and was the best of Western trust films.

"The Lady in the Baths" says that, in her opinion, Edison, however, deserves the blue ribbon of the week on his "Battle of Trafalgar," which, she claims, was about the best battle scene and military reel she has looked at in many days. Because it was historical in character she raved over it. She is still talking about the Edison reel, so I'll take her word for it.

Selig sent us "McKee Rankin's '49," and this, too, interested her greatly for the reason that she and the venerable actor-author are warm friends. It has been some time since I romanced "around old Boston" and used to hang out at the Adams House there, so when Selig took us on a trip through the "Hub" it brought back many well-known scenes.

I used to make a tour through New England with the stock companies every year, but never failed to run into Boston from Lynn, Mass., and other points. Although we couldn't enjoy the repast proper, we did appreciate Vitagraph's reel, "Over the Chafing Dish," which was a most interesting one, and "The Tired and Absent-Minded Man" was also a winner.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Tom Moore has some new schemes "up his sleeve" which will shortly surprise the patrons of the motion picture industry. These are not for publication yet, but it will be permissible to say that we are likely to see lots of local people on the local screens in the near future. The recent success of "Navajo Rag" in his theaters will cause the return of these singers to Washington when a "new stunt" of the Moore creation will be in order.

* * * *

Although such a dramatization as "Electra" would call forth a large attendance for a day or two, but when this kept big audiences for six days, as was the case at the Virginia, we are forced to admit that one of the chief causes was the appearance of a local favorite and former Washington girl, Mary Fuller. Contrary to a popular belief that one is not appreciated in one's home, local situations, local actresses and actors—and there are several of them—and local views always draw a crowd in the Capital City.

* * * *

An excellent demonstration of the above statement has been the great success of the military dramas of the Solax Company which have been presented at the Empress, in which our own Ft. Myer was the scene of action. Of course the music is also another attraction at this playhouse, an orchestral number always forming a part of the show's program. And this always calls forth applause, too.

* * * *

From the looks of things and a talk with William Airey, manager of the Alhambra, a news slide service will be shortly established in Washington. This will chronicle events in the East with a few pertinent views, something on the order of the "Pathé Weekly." Mr. Airey has been a long time in the motion picture business and he is always adding some "new tricks." As this slide service looks good to the up-to-date advertiser, several industrial corporations have become interested in the scheme, which means that we are likely to see some educational slides of excellent workmanship on the theater screens shortly.

* * * *

After a most successful run of a week at the Colonial of "Foul Play," "Colleen Bawn" took the screen for a week. It is a pleasure to add that the work of Mary Fuller in "Foul Play" has been highly praised in her home city.

* * * *

It is interesting to note that the Washington inventor, Sydney Jacobson, has launched his invention of the "Jacobson Arc Controller" in a company in St. Louis. The users of projecting machines have seen the advantage of this device, so that financial success is promising. Most all of the theaters in Washington are making use of the Arc controller, which is found very useful.

* * * *

There is little chance of "Just Kids" becoming popular. We can enjoy children's pranks and mischief, but disrespect to parents to the extent of hitting them, throwing things at them, or causing them to tumble when correcting their youngsters is not funny. Of course, this is on the order of the "funny papers" so eagerly placed by parents in the hands of children to-day, but we wish the motion picture industry to be more elevating and a stronger power for good.

* * * *

A progressive independent house is the Acme. The music here, under Mrs. Barr, is as much responsible for this condition as the pictures.

CHICAGO LETTER

Mr. R. D. Lett, formerly of the Reliable and H. & H. Film Exchanges has severed his connection with the above exchanges, in order to devote his entire time with the Amusement Supply Company, as manager of the film rental department. The Amusement Supply Company has taken a larger space, in order to handle its increase in business and have recently added a first-class independent film rental department.

* * * *

The Reliable Film Exchange has been purchased by Mr. Pearlman, the manufacturer and patentee of the well-known perfect calcium lights. At the present the Reliable is not a buying exchange, but Mr. Pearlman intends to enter it in this class as soon as conditions will permit. He is busily engaged building up his stock and installing various systems, so when the time comes to buy new films, he will be prepared to handle everything in a first-class manner. Mr. Pearlman's brother, who has had a great deal of experience in the managing of different branch offices for several exchanges will devote his entire time to the management of the Reliable Exchange. Mr. Pearlman will continue to look after his calcium light business, which he will enlarge and give his entire time to. He stated that business is past his expectations. He has contracted with the Sheldon Amusement Company to buy forty moving picture outfits. He has already sold them five outfits.

* * * *

Mr. J. B. Reilly has gone to St. Louis to demonstrate the system of the Exhibitors Advertising Association.

* * * *

The Western Song Slide service, Chicago, has recently enlarged their office in order to handle their increase in business, which has doubled in the last three months. They supply both the city and country with a high-class line of illustrated songs.

* * * *

At 1214 North Clark street, just north of Division, is an all-alive and successful independent moving picture theater, named the Lincoln, managed and owned by Mr. Autman, who, with the help of his operator, has brought about some unique improvements within the theater, at little expense. The screen is but ordinary canvas stretched over iron and painted with a mixture of alabastine and blueing. The pictures show well upon this home-made screen and the faintest facial expression can easily be seen from the rear of the theatre. A Powers' No. 5 machine is used, which throws a clear and as good a picture as any in Chicago. The lobby of this theater is fully as large as the interior and is neatly decorated with palms and posters, which are arranged upon the side walls in a manner which is pleasant to look upon. Around the sides of the lobby are comfortable benches where one may sit down and wait when necessary for the performance to end. When over with, the audience passes out of an eight-foot side space on the side of the building, thereby not pushing or tramping over people in the lobby. A different singer is booked in this theater every week by the American Theatrical Agency. The lady baritone there last week was extra good, and was well applauded by the audience.

* * * *

The boy who made Flo Adler is on the bill for next week, and is a good drawing card wherever he is engaged. The orchestra consists of a piano and mandolin and, although not as loud as a drum and a piano, they make very pleasant and agreeable music. They are played by Mr. Autman's brother and sister.

* * * *

One fact which I must mention is the original and unique lighting system which was installed by Mr. Autman and his operator. Six reflectors, made of ordinary tin in the shape of a hollow cone with beads attached to the edges, throw sufficient light so one may see all around the interior of the theater. The reflectors are both useful and ornamental and do not interfere with the clearness of the picture. Mr. Autman's unique ideas can be followed by any exhibitor with profit.

Increase Your Business
HOW?
By Giving Good Film Service

Scratched, brittle and defective films will not give you good results. THEREFORE send your films to the ORTHO FILM CO., 40 East 12th Street, New York, to be renovated.

WE MAKE THEM AS GOOD AS NEW

We have the only process on the market that positively redevelops photography, removes scratches and blemishes, and softens the film at the same time.

We can refer you to any film exchange in this city. Demonstration free of charge all over the United States. GOOD AGENTS wanted.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Oct. 12, 1911.

Once more the Independents of this city are going to the front. The latest recruits to this field are the Electric Theater, known as the old mainstay of the General Film Company, and the Optic Theater, which was the only five-cent theater in the city showing three first-run Trust pictures, is now showing four reels of first-run Independent. These exhibitors say, "that since they have been showing Independent pictures the increase in the receipts are about 20 per cent more.

The Ideal Theater exhibited Trust pictures for about a week and then changed back to Independent service, declaring that it is the only and best service it could secure.

The Mexican revolution pictures are being shown at the Grand Opera House for a week. The first two performances brought capacity houses, and the audience found much interest in the pictures. The pictures deal with the recent Mexican revolution, and are the first views of real battles to be shown; they embrace the engagements at Juarez, Morales and in Chihuahua and Guerrero states. Madero's arrival in the capital, and the floral parade in his honor, Taft and Diaz meeting on the international bridge in El Paso some time before the war, and a number of other now historic incidents.

The views of the battles are especially noteworthy, the attacks and defenses are being shown. The floral effects are unsurpassed, and the one of Madero's triumphal entrance into Mexico City is especially beautiful.

The new Board of Censors recently appointed by Mayor George Alexander held its first meeting this week, no definite steps were taken toward the organization of the board for the work to be accomplished by it.

Rev. Benjamin H. Ruetepohler, pastor of the Salem Congregational Church, has solved the problem of getting an attendance at his church by installing moving pictures and an orchestra. The pictures are of an educational nature and proved to be very satisfactory to the congregation. Rev. Reutepohler declares that he had an audience of from 600 to 700 people, where he formerly spoke to about 60 or 75 people. This also goes to show that moving pictures are rapidly going to the front.

The Gem Theater, which has been opened recently, was attached for about $220. The theater was opened after the proprietor paid all damages.

The Echo Theater, at 720 Temple street, has changed from the Los Angeles Film Exchange service to the California Film Exchange.

Among the Western Producers.

Manager McGee and some members of the Selig Company have returned from a trip to Northern California. While there several scenes were taken of the logging camps. Within the next two weeks they will make another trip to the same locality for additional scnes, calling into action the ox teams characteristic of that locality.

Alvin Wychoff, who has been associated with the Selig Company for over three years, as actor and operator, has severed his connection with that company, and will take charge of the supervision of all pictures manufactured by the Angelus Motion Picture Company, in which concern he is a stockholder.

Hazel Mitchell has severed her connection with the Pathé Company.

Anna Little, who was formerly with Ferris Hartman Musical Company, is one of the latest to join the motion pictures. She is now with the Bison company.

ALEX. FEINSTEIN.

LATEST FROM LONDON

8 Sherwood street, W.

Everyone whose memory of the trade goes back to its early days in the late nineties and a little later will remember the sensation caused by the pictures secured of the Boer War. Later the Russo-Japanese War provided the showmen of those days with some very special films. Both these little affairs occurred, however, before the cinematograph trade had really developed into a serious factor in the world of amusement—at least, so far as this country is concerned. What shows we had at that time were mainly of the touring variety; the establishments which now dot our chief thoroughfares were hardly dreamt of, so that the present disturbance at Tripoli is the first of the kind from which the present day cinematograph theater has derived subjects. Exactly how many films we shall have of the actual operation and of what class, it is yet too early to say. The campaign may prove to be a brief one—it is to be hoped it will—while the measures taken by military authorities to control journalists and photographers become more stringent with each war. Some of our leading firms are, however, disposed to risk some expense on the chance of securing some interesting films. The Warwick have already dispatched a man to the front and I know of another firm which has secured all the necessary permits and whose representative will set out for the seat of war immediately. These are English firms; I take it for granted that we shall have camera men from all the chief Italian producers on the spot. It seems doubtful if anyone is going to film the war from the Turkish side, if there is going to be any Turkish side at all!

I had an opportunity of making an inspection of Messrs. Jury's new premises this week and was surprised at the amount of space at the disposal of the various departments. The whole of a big building in Long Acre (Jury's have always been in that famous thoroughfare) has been secured and transformed both as to the exterior and interior, while a similar reorganization has, Mr. Jury tells me, been made in the business of the firm, whose business as compared to that with which it started its career in '97 has seen very many additions and alterations. To the hiring and exhibiting trade which was once his whole business, Mr. Jury has added a production department for topicals and locals, a department for the renting of special exclusive subjects, and an apparatus sale department; and his boast, not without reason, is that the showman can obtain under the one roof not only the film itself but everything necessary to its projection on the screen.

A question that is agitating the trade at the present moment is the ever increasing length of subjects. Hardly a day passes but one firm or another puts out a two or three thousand footer. At one time, such subjects would have had, perforce, to remain on the maker's shelves and opinion is very much divided at the present moment as to whether the showman is wise to feature them. The difficulty is mainly felt by shows of the continuous order, in which people are coming in and going out right through the performance. A person arriving after 1,000 feet of a three-reel subject has gone through cannot easily catch the thread of the story. Apart from this, there is no very strong reason why subjects should all be of short length, for the merits of the big subjects are usually on a par with its length or they would not be bought.

We are still waiting the first "Majestic" subjects. From what Mr. Aitken, who will handle them in the Western Import Co. has told us, and from the comments in the last issue of the COMING! COMING! COMING!

Three Imps a Week

And Better QUALITY Than Ever! Watch! Wait! Listen!

NEWS, we expect something very good when the first consignment does arrive.

"Flying A's" are now properly located in their new home, and a very attractive home it is which the American Co., Ltd., have secured at 101 Wardour street. They have two floors, offices on one and projection theater and packing room on the other and the scheme of decoration which Mr. Scott has chosen makes his new headquarters as comfortable and convenient as any in film-land. To signalize the change, "Flying A" gave us two special subjects in "The Mother of the Ranch" and "The Gun Man."

The daily papers here are just attempting to do what yours have done for some time, in making arrangements for a regular moving picture column or page. They are meeting with some difficulties, but I believe this feature will sooner or later be a common one and one which will work to the good of both film maker and film showmen. This, although the publicity man of a firm which happens to dislike the idea, has gone out of his way to pen a screed in one of the trade journals proving to his own satisfaction that money spent in this form of advertising is thrown away. When this writer in one place says that the London local press is not worth an advertising outlay and in another recommends the showman to advertise locally instead of in papers with a wider circulation, it seems that his ideas could do with a little sorting out, while remarks as to the inequity of the film manufacturer bearing the cost of such pages have no meaning in view of the fact that sound schemes of this variety appeal primarily to the showmen for advertising support.

Nothing but good can come of the regular supply of information to the general public regarding the living picture subjects which it is the showmen's interest they should pay to see. The man who reads in his daily paper an account of a film of merit, will undoubtedly visit the theater which advertises the attraction and if the showman can obtain customers by advertising his special film in this way he is spending his money wisely. The film maker too, can only gain by advertising to the public, as Hepworth's, to mention only one firm, seem to realize if one may judge from the fact that posters advertising their subjects are displayed at stations on the tube railways. And very good posters they are, too.

That boom in English films is not far off. It has been given a start by correspondence in various papers regarding the class of films shown in Canadian living picture theaters, which have drawn their supplies heretofore from American renting concerns. The Canadian public is getting tired of so much "Stars and Stripes" and as a result of a meeting in London recently attended by the English manufacturers and also by Mr. Evelyn Wrench, of the Overseas Club, and editor of the Overseas edition of the Daily Mail, you may look for a vigorous Colonial press campaign in favor of the English film. England will come later and before a year is passed, I shall be very much surprised if the home-made subjects do not occupy a considerably larger portion of the average program than at present. I know personally many patrons of cinematograph theaters who evince a preference for English subjects and are surprised that there are not more of them shown.

Kinemacolor has many new delights for visitors to the Scala—indeed, Mr. Charles Urban is practically changing the entire program with the exception of the Coronation, Investiture and Victoria Memorial films, now considerably curtailed, and moreover reproduced by a recently improved process which increases the clarity and beauty of the pictures. First "Etna in Eruption" is a subject at once unique and marvelous, and one that was only filmed at the greatest personal risk and danger to the operator. Deserted by his peasant guides when half way up the mountain slope, he still kept on his way throughout the night, and at three in the morning secured the wondrous scenes of the glowing red lava submerging in its ten-mile serpent's course villas and orchards, and eventually even a railway bridge. Next, a particularly fine series depicting the Turkish peasantry of Asia Minor shows Turkey's war material in the present crisis, the suite including types of the invading Italians as well as views of Naples and Vesuvius.

A first instalment of some strikingly realistic scenes on the Nile (which will be constantly changed) will deal chiefly with Cairo and the everyday occupations of the fellaheen; while in surrender to sporting tastes, Mr. Urban is including some new films of the Squadron Regatta at Cowes, and the motorboat racing at Lowestoft and Burnham-on-Crouch. In Nature Studies, a new array of prize dogs has been taken, and, last but not least, comes a new departure—famous songs rendered by popular singers and simultaneously pictured by Kinemacolor, the first two being "Simon the Cellarer" and "Kitty of Coleraine." B. A.

MOTIOGRAPH 1912 MODEL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. takes pleasure in announcing to the trade in general that their 1912 Model is now ready.

The most important changes in the 1912 Model over those of former ones will be found in the intermittent movement or framing device, and in the full metal equipment, the wooden base board having been entirely discarded on the No. 1-A Models of the Motiograph.

The manner in which the lamp house is now mounted permits of the use of this metal board in conjunction with the lamp house as a spot light, a feature very greatly appreciated by some of the large houses who have difficulty in securing a satisfactory spot on an extremely long throw, but with the Motiograph lamp house so arranged as to lower or raise it without disturbing the set of the machine as wanted for the picture, and by the use of a tin slide with a hole punched of any desired size, a very satisfactory spot can be had by dropping a tinted glass into the slide carrier with this tin slide and securing any color effect desired.

The makers of the Motiograph have also designed, and are now prepared to furnish, a full metal adjustable operator's seat, which may be fitted to all of the 1911 and 1912 Models, and when not in use can be dropped completely out of the way, the price of which is $5 when ordered with a Motiograph equipment.

Another very strong move adopted by this company is the furnishing, as an extra item, their well known Professional Rewind when ordered with a Motiograph equipment, for only $10 above the cost of the machine.

For those desiring to use a motor, this company has, as is well known, been furnishing motors for some years past, but they have now designed a plate with screws for fastening the motor to the lower half of the swivel at the top of the pedestal directly under and in line with the motor pulley on the mechanism. This plate is furnished without charge when the motor is ordered with the full Motiograph equipment, including the motor attachment.

There is small space in the news items to devote to the many good features of the Motiograph for 1912, but an advance catalog is now being prepared and should be ready for mailing by the end of this week. This is free for the asking.

AND NOW YOU HAVE IT

Just exactly what every blessed Independent exhibitor was wishing and praying for; in a few weeks we will begin to supply you with a

SUNDAY RELEASE

That will mirror the doings of the day. It will be a moving picture review of the most commanding events in the week's news, including floods, earthquakes, wrecks, scenes of sensational happenings, celebrations, demonstrations, conventions of civic, military and fraternal bodies and intimate views of men, women and things famous and foremost in the public eye; in short, the news of the day.

THE POWERS COMPANY

Has completed its scheme for covering the world with a network of camera reporters who will be the first on every spot to gather these features, which will be known as

TIMELY TOPICS

Constituting a weekly newspaper in moving picture form. The plan which makes this possible has entailed months of hard work and planning, but the Independent exhibitor has been clamoring for it.

AND NOW YOU HAVE IT

Hanford, Cal.—Arch. J. Carl Thayer is preparing plans for a new $25,000 theater building to be erected on West Seventh street by E. O. Miller, of Visalia, to cost $25,000.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Jacob Smith has prepared plans for a new theater to be erected at Pico and Albany streets, for Mrs. Carey.

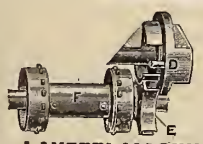
Milwaukee, Wis.—D. J. Borum will erect a moving picture theater at Thomas and Murray avenues, to cost $10,000.

Gulfport, Miss.—L. L. Chevalley will erect a new theater building.

SPLASH!

We have purchased 100,000 Pink Label 5/8 x 6 Electro Carbons, and while they last they go at $2.25 per hundred, or $21.00 per thousand, cash with order. Here's your chance; stock up for the winter.

Swaab Film Service Co.
129 N. EIGHTH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.



IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES

You can't put this movement out of order. Installed $12. Send head at once. 100 Pointers on repairing free with each order.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS, 2940 Herndon St., CHICAGO

SPECIAL NOTICE

NON-BREAKABLE

Lantern Slides

ANNOUNCEMENT
ADVERTISING
LECTURE
MICROSCOPIC
NATURAL HISTORY

We make slides of all kinds

SLIDES

Artistic and beautifully colored

Don't be faked by would-be Original Inventors who claim, and are trying to manufacture non-breakable slides.

SEND FOR CATALOG.

MICA NON-BREAKABLE SLIDE CO.
2737 N. Croskey St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

HIS DRESS SHIRT
Imp Release, October 30

Mr. Kirby has rather a tart disposition for a newly married man and his wife is exactly the reverse, being eager to look after his comfort even to the minutest detail.

Kirby receives an invitation to attend a stag dinner on Thursday night and begins to make preparations Tuesday. He has only one dress shirt and admonishes his wife to have it sent to the laundry immediately. The wife sets about to do so but she receives an invitation from a dear friend to go motoring and, of course, forgets all about the shirt.

The evening of the dinner arrives and Kirby returns home out of sorts. He hunts for the dress shirt and then consults his wife. It dawns on her that she has been remiss in her duty. Kirby fumes and rants to the consternation of the young wife. In her desperation, she decides to launder the shirt and takes it into the kitchen, where she makes elaborate preparations. As she is a novice in the laundry art, she makes a mess of it, ending in burning a hole through the shirt and ruining the garment.

Kirby enters the kitchen at the crucial time to find his wife in tears and the shirt smoking under the red hot iron. The humor of the situation mollifies him and he takes his wife in his arms and kisses away her tears.

Released with "His Dress Shirt" is "A Few Minutes with Steeplejack Lindholm," a thrilling picture of the adventures of a steeple jack in painting flag poles in the city of New York.

One of the pictures show the dare-devil climber swaying in the air thirty-six stories from the pavement where a false move means death. Several scenes are shown of him on other staffs at a high altitude, making one of the most exciting pictures ever released.

KING, THE DETECTIVE
Imp Release, November 2

A detective story showing an up-to-date method of apprehending criminals.

Mr. Armstrong, a banker, returns to his home in his motor car driven by Ashton, his chauffeur, taking with him a large sum of money.

His daughter, Edna, has a sweetheart, Walter Hoskins, who has been forbidden the house and ordered to cease his attentions to her. Hoskins gains entrance to the house by climbing the lattice work on the piazza and the act is seen by Ashton.

Armstrong, asleep in his den, is murdered, the perpetrator being indistinct in the semi-darkness.

King, an expert detective, is called into the case. Suspicion points to Hoskins, as it is known that he has had a wordy war of words with the banker. The chauffeur tells his story of seeing the young man enter the house in a clandestine manner and he is arrested and charged with the crime. Edna believes implicitly in his innocence and implores King to clear him. The sleuth makes a minute search of the surroundings, examining the person of the dead man carefully. He finds thumb prints on the collar worn by Mr. Armstrong and makes his deductions from that fact. The young man is visited in prison by his sweetheart and told to be of good cheer.

King makes a thorough examination of the premises and visits the garage, examining the tools, etc. He is seen working in his laboratory, studying the thumb print under a powerful glass and then determines to try an experiment. Placing powder on his wrist he has an interview with Ashton, shaking hands with the driver, pressing his thumb firmly on the powder. Returning home, the print is examined and he is satisfied.

He visits the room in which the banker was killed and summons Ashton. Dramatically the detective goes through the actions of the murderer and, grasping the hand of the chauffeur, points to the thumb and accuses him of the crime, producing the wrench which was used to inflict the fatal blow.

The chauffeur is terrified and, with shaking knees, confesses the murder. Hoskins is released from prison and is warmly greeted by his sweetheart. Together they seek out King and thank him for his interest in the case.

JOHN BAXTER'S WARD
Powers Release, October 24

A number of ranchmen and cowboys are gathered around the postoffice of a western village expecting their mail. A letter is received by John Baxter, ranchman, from his niece, who is also his ward. The cowboys have been expecting that some day she would visit the ranch and are curious to know what the letter says. Baxter satisfies them by reading them the letter, which states that the young lady will soon arrive. He also shows them a photograph of her and the men agree that she is a "jim-dandy." Ethelbert, the dude cowboy, is there and is so enraptured with her beauty that he kisses the picture repeatedly. The cowboys give him the laugh, take the photo away from him and "rough-house" him considerably.

Baxter suddenly becomes an important personage in the village. The cowboys visit him at his cabin and treat him with great consideration. They bring him presents, whiskey, tobacco, rope, saddles, etc., hoping thereby to get on the good side of him. All except Ethelbert. He stays at home and has lovely dreams of the beautiful lady. Baxter makes a promise to each cowboy that he will have the preference over the others when the girl arrives.

Finally the great day dawns, and the men are all at the depot, dressed in the height of cowboy fashion. Baxter's ward steps from the train, while the men look at her in speechless awe. With rare presence of mind, Ethelbert steps forward and offers to carry her valise. Instantly there is a rush by the men to carry the bag, but she hands it to Ethelbert because he spoke first. The girl and Ethelbert start for the ranch house, leaving the cowboys dumfounded. On the way Baxter's ward and "Bertie" become quite chummy.

The cowboys by this time are framing up a warm reception for Ethelbert. They find him later and duck him in the river, which is easily done because there isn't much fight in him. Thinking it a good joke the men find the girl and tell her of it, but she doesn't see the point. Instead she hunts up Ethelbert and finds him a very wet person. She sympathizes with him and he proposes. The girl accepts and they disappear. There is much excitement in the village over this. Next morning Baxter receives a letter saying that the pair have eloped and are on their way to find a minister. Baxter reads it to the cowboys and laughs. They become angry at this and demand their presents back. Baxter refuses and walks away laughing, leaving the cowboys quarreling among themselves.

THE LITTLE BROWN CALF
Powers Release, October 24

A farmer's little daughter is greatly attached to a pet calf that has been given to her by her father. The child's father has been owing on a note to a neighbor, who appears and demands payment or he will make an attachment. While arguing his eye falls upon the pet calf and he offers to take the calf in payment. This the farmer is loth to do because the calf belongs to his child and parting with it will be heartbreaking to the little one. At length the farmer consents to give up the calf because there appears to be no other way out of the difficulty.

The child hears of the transaction and weeps for her pet which will be taken away next morning. She is inconsolable and they put her to bed still weeping. The little girl tosses in her sleep until she awakes. She then determines that she will take the calf and go far away with it so they cannot take it away from her. Rising from bed the child goes in her nightgown to the shed and leads the calf away. When morning comes she and the calf are missed. The neighbor arrives to take possession of the animal which has disappeared. The party searching for the child find her in the field asleep with the calf grazing near. The neighbor, noting the strong attachment of the child for the animal, begins to see things in another light. He is not a hard-hearted man. His sympathy is aroused by the child's devotion and he ends the affair by tearing up the note.

THE REVENUE OFFICER'S LAST CASE

Powers Release, October 28

A story of love and hatred, depicting principally the violent hatred held by southern moonshiners for a revenue officer. In a moonshiner's cabin in the backwoods of Kentucky his daughter is being courted by a young mountaineer, who is also engaged in illicit distillation of liquor. It is plain to be seen that the moonshiner's daughter does not return his sentiments as she leaves the cabin impatiently. Her father appears and when the young man tells of his trouble the father merely laughs. Outside the cabin coming down the road is Jim Thornton, a United States revenue officer, disguised as a mountaineer, bearing a John Doe warrant for anyone whom he might find making moonshine whisky. Here he meets the moonshiner's daughter and strikes up an acquaintance which becomes a case of mutual admiration almost at once. They are still talking as the young lover emerges from the cabin. The latter approaches them from behind, and looking Thornton over fires a shot in the air. This shot is a signal to moonshiners that danger is near. From behind the cabin another shot echoes in answer for the father and his son are busy there taking liquor out of a hiding place in the ground. The disappointed lover goes to them and tells them of Thornton talking with the girl and of his suspicion of the revenue officer, after which he starts home through the woods.

On his way he comes across Thornton and the girl still talking. He takes occasion to tell the revenue man that he is not safe in those parts and had better be going. Finally the jealous youth forces a quarrel, but Thornton gets the better of it. Taking the young man's gun from him, he sends him on his way.

The following day as Thornton is going down the road he is shot from ambush by the young moonshiner who now hates him bitterly. Thornton is found lying wounded in the road by the moonshiner's daughter who assists him to her father's cabin. In loosening his shirt at the throat, the young woman discovers the warrant and knows for sure that he is a revenue officer, but by this time she is extremely fond of him and in order to shield him places the warrant in the bosom of her dress.

After three weeks Thornton is well and strong again. He is on good terms with the old moonshiner and his son and thanks them heartily for their assistance, but the two moonshiners are still a trifle suspicious. Thornton hides behind a bush in the rear of the cabin and awaits developments. Presently the girl's brother and her would-be lover appear at the hiding place to remove some of the liquor. As they do so the officer covers them and places them under arrest. The old moonshiner coming upon the scene is also arrested. The excitement attracts the moonshiner's daughter, who takes in the situation. She then pleads for her father and the other two and finally convinces Thornton that it is to her that he owes his life in more ways than one.

Thornton realizes that he owes a debt of honor, and as the girl produces the warrant he writes upon the back of it his resignation from the secret service and casts his lot with the moonshiner's daughter. As the two walk away the jealous lover raises his gun to shoot Jim Thornton, but the girl's father knocks the gun aside and allows the two lovers to proceed unmolested.

THE STRONGER MAN

American Release, October 30

Cliff Judson, a notorious bad man in a drunken imbroglio claims another victim and, rushing from the saloon, makes good his escape. Riding to the home of his sweetheart he tells her of the shooting, but claims it was an accident and that he will have difficulty in proving his innocence. She supplies him with food and water and he rides away. At the saloon the men are still discussing the crime when Bert Stevens, the sheriff, rides up and learns of the affray. Without pausing for food or water the sheriff follows the outlaw, whose trail leads to the desert.

Judson has a good start, but Bert follows the trail all day, gradually closing in on his quarry. At last, with the aid of his field glass, he locates Judson in the distance eating his lunch and preparing to camp for the night. The sheriff is beginning to suffer from thirst, while the sun and alkali dust affect his eyes, but he pushes on. He comes upon the outlaw asleep, and carefully removing Judson's gun from its holster, covers him and then awakens him. He compels his captive to put on the handcuffs and starts on the return trip.

But the long exposure to the sun and alkali have played havoc with the sheriff's eyes and he goes blind. Judson, seeing Bert's helplessness, slips from his horse and running to the opposite side of the sheriff wrests the gun from his hand and then deliberately shoots him. He places a note underneath the sheriff's star, and, finding the key to the handcuffs, he opens the lock by holding the key in his teeth. Then he puts spurs to his pony, leaving the sheriff for dead. Returning to his sweetheart's home, he tells her that the sheriff missed him in the desert and that he intends to make for the mountains. His story does not ring true and knowing that Bert is somewhere out in the desert, Bessies determines to follow him with provisions.

She finds the sheriff unconscious in the desert, but revives him by pouring water on his chest and down his throat. Then mounting him upon her horse she plods back to her home. She has read the note left by Cliff and knows that he has lied to her about missing the sheriff, but she still believes that the shooting in the saloon was accidental. She makes the sheriff promise not to prosecute her lover while she nurses him back to health and strength.

Some time later Judson comes to Bessie's home and she accuses him of attempting to murder the sheriff. Judson still denies having met him, when Bessie shows him the note. Judson becomes angry and starts to force his attention upon her when the sheriff appears. Covering the outlaw with his gun, he takes Judson's gun away from him, and orders him to leave the country.

Judson repairs to the saloon and, borrowing a gun from a crony, waits for the sheriff. When Bert appears Judson fires at him and misses, and the sheriff shoots in self-defense. In the melee that follows Judson is killed and Bert is wounded. Bessie, who has followed, rushes to the sheriff's side, ignoring her erstwhile lover, for she has learned that the sheriff is the nobler, stronger man.

A vivid Western drama that depicts the dangers to which the frontier sheriff was exposed. The story of a woman's awakening, a bad man's downfall, and the ultimate triumph of a noble character.

THE WATER WAR

American Release, November 2

Ed Newton encounters trouble with the ranchman the very day he starts surveying for the big dam. Tom Daniels rides up leading an extra horse and informs the young engineer that Bill Dolan, one of the wealthiest cattle barons in the neighborhood, desires to see him. Arrived at the ranch Dolan informs the engineer that the work on the big dam must stop. In vain the young engineer explains to the cattlemen that the dam will be a benefit to all the ranch owners. Dolan shows him his private reservoir maintaining that it is sufficient for his needs and if the engineer persists in the work there will be trouble.

Dolan's pretty daughter accompanies them to the reservoir and the young engineer is attracted by her sweet personality. Margaret starts to return to the ranch house when Tom Daniels intrudes himself upon her. She resents his attentions and Ed goes to her assistance. When he returns to his camp he has not only failed to help matters but has also made a personal enemy.

The surveying completed, the grading work is begun when the cattle baron sends Tom Daniels to the engineer with a message reading: "This is your last warning." Too busy to leave the camp himself, Ed sends one of his draughtsmen to the cattlemen, to reason with them. For answer the arrogant cattlemen assail the envoy and, strapping him to his horse, send it back down the trail to the camp. Realizing that further overtures for peace are useless, Ed and his workmen arm themselves and prepare for the attack they are certain is coming. When the cattlemen ride up and begin firing they find the working crew entrenched behind the building material ready to put up a good defense. In the battle that follows Bill Dolan and Ed Newton are both seriously wounded.

Hostilities having ended, the cattlemen learn that violence will not avail, and the injured engineer is carried to the Dolan ranch for proper care. Margaret prepares a room for him, although Tom Daniels remonstrates with her for allowing the engineer in her home after the recent trouble. Margaret's human sympathy for an injured man overcomes her own resentment.

In the days that follow she sees much of Ed Newton and propinquity and Cupid conspire to win her heart to the young engineer. Tom Daniels, who had hoped to win Margaret himself, is very bitter, but bides his time to be revenged on Newton.

At last the big dam is finished and the young engineer shows his sweetheart his latest triumph in engineering skill. Together they go over the magnificent structure, Ed explaining to Margaret the things she does not understand. Trailing them Tom Daniels skulks in the shadows with a bomb, determined to blow up the dam, and Ed Newton with his sweetheart and himself into oblivion. When the young engineer and his sweetheart visit the tower, the madman places his bomb and lights the fuse. Ed and Margaret returning, discover the culprit and although Daniels reaches for his gun Newton is too quick for him and engages him in a desperate combat. Margaret takes up the sputtering, hissing bomb and flings it way out into the water below.

Daniels is struggling with the strength of a maniac to throw Newton over the rail into the water below, but at last Newton gains the mastery and grasping his assailant around the waist metes out to him the fate the maniac had intended for him. Turning to his sweetheart he clasps her in his arms.

Around the building of an engineering triumph, in itself a great picture, the producer has woven this dramatic story of history building "The Winning of our West."

A film that is educational, interest-compelling, and true to life.

AN INDIAN HERO
Bison Release, October 27

Little Ruth is captured by Indians while the cowboys are in town. Returning home, the boys meet Lone Wolf, a half-breed, and proceed to haze him. Ruth's sister, Grace, and her father happen along and indignantly compel the cowboys to desist from their cruel sport, and Lone Wolf is grateful. When Ruth's disappearance is discovered the cowboys suspect Lone Wolf and try to force a confession from him. Grace, however, has faith in him, and he goes to the scene and finds the Indians' traces. Borrowing a gun and a horse he volunteers to take up the trail. He rescues Ruth in a thrilling scene and starts back on a break-neck ride, holding the girl before him, hotly pursued by the redskins. In the running fight he kills a number of his pursuers, who make amazing falls from the galloping horses. The cowboys, hearing the shots, take a hand, and Lone Wolf, riddled with bullets, dies a hero's death as Ruth is placed safely in the arms of her parents.

PERCY AND HIS SQUAW
Solax Release, October 25

By mistake Percy puts on his roommate's coat in which is a photograph of a pretty girl. Percy's sweetheart, Vera, by accident sees the photo and demands to know who it is. Percy doesn't know. Vera, thinking she has been deceived, gives Percy her engagement ring and tells him to go. Heartbroken, Percy leaves for the West. Later on he gets lost in the woods and doesn't know which way to go. He hears a scream, and after a desperate struggle kills a big bear that had attacked an Indian squaw. Sunshine, the squaw, embraces him and takes him to her camp. She tells her father, Thunder Cloud, who is the chief, how Percy saved her live whereupon he is greatly admired and made a chief. Then Thunder Cloud gives Sunshine to Percy for his squaw. Percy nearly faints. Later on he leaves the camp with Sunshine following. He tries several times to bribe Indians to take Sunshine but is unsuccessful, and also tries to kill himself but is saved by Sunshine. Next we see Percy and his squaw at a cowboy tavern, where they are met by Vera, who embraces Percy but is pushed away by the squaw. Lone Wolf, long in love with Sunshine, appears and leads her away. Percy explains to Vera and both are happy.

FOR BIG BROTHER'S SAKE
Solax Release, October 27

Jack and Dolly Harvey are orphans. Jack, a manly young fellow of twenty-three, is in love with Mae Stanley, who thoroughly detests little Dolly. Dolly, eight years old, has been keeping house for her big brother, sees that Jack will never be happy with Mae while she is around and runs away. She is picked up by a gang of thieves who try to teach her to steal. As she refuses to steal, they treat her brutally and make her sell newspapers on the street. In the meantime Jack misses her and realizing why she has left home, he comes to the conclusion that he does not really love his fiancee, Mae Stanley. He hunts up Fannie Moore, a neighbor girl who has always admired Jack and been a good friend to little Dolly, and together they search for the child. Several days go by without any success. During this time Jack and Fannie have become sweethearts. At last Jack finds his little sister in the hands of ruffians and after a fight takes her home. Jack and Fannie are married and all three are very happy.

THE TEST OF A MAN
Reliance Release, October 28

Fred Allen and George Barr are in love with Grace Winters. Allen is favored, though he is inclined to fast companions. He promises Grace never to drink, but is persuaded by friends to join them in a jollification. While intoxicated he meets Grace, and she, in mortification and anger, breaks her engagement and marries Barr. Allen feels keenly the loss of her love, loses interest in life and becomes a derelict. Barr is secretly speculating with his employer's funds, and fearing exposure arranges a faked-up robbery. He is surprised by the watchman after he has opened the safe, dumped papers on the floor, etc., and in the struggle that follows the watchman is killed. Allen, who has been passing the building, hears the shot and enters. In an intensely dramatic scene he accuses Barr, and snatching up the revolver holds the bigger man covered, waiting for the police. His great love for Grace overcomes him, however, and to save her the pain of the disgrace he quickly pushes the gun into the hand of Barr, and when the police arrive Allen is arrested as the offender. He accepts a penitentiary sentence, and is seen working in convict's garb on the rock piles. He makes a sensational escape, unhurt by the bullets which the guards send after him. The great self-sacrifice of Allen preys on Barr's mind, and he writes a letter of confession to Grace and goes out to find Allen and bring him back. He locates Allen, and his nerve failing at the crucial moment, he destroys himself. Allen buries him and then writes to Grace, who comes and kneels in prayer over the grave. Through the heartaches and trials she has experienced, Grace recognizes the worth of the man who stood the test.

THE VAN OSTEN JEWELS
Yankee Release, October 30

The metropolitan police are mystified by a number of robberies in which the robber leaves absolutely no clew. When a cable from France informs them to be on the lookout for a famous French crook who is a master of hypnotism, they assign their best detectives on his trail.

At the Van Osten reception the police mingle with the guests and one of their number becomes suspicious of an apparently dignified French nobleman with exceptionally piercing eyes. His watchfulness is finally rewarded when he sees the Frenchman put under hypnotic power the young woman who is engaged to marry the son and heir of the Van Osten millions. The detective hears the explicit instructions given to the young woman to take the famous Van Osten jewels from their hiding place and bring them to him. Under the hypnotic power, the young woman obeys the command and is seen handing them to the Frenchman by her fiance. Thinking that his sweetheart is in league with the man, he obtains the jewels and permits suspicion to fall upon himself. All ends happily when the detective steps forth and arrests his man, compelling him first of all to release the woman from the hypnotic spell.

AT DAISY FARM
Yankee Release, November 3

Mrs. Burridge, a widow, satisfied that her husband has died while in the U. S. Army service, marries an honest old farmer, Andrew Armstrong, who gives her and her son a pleasant home. To supply his stepson with money the old man is compelled to mortgage his home. While he has the money in his possession he is accosted by an old tramp who claims to be his wife's first husband and to keep the tramp from revealing the secret he hands him the money he has received from the mortgage. This transaction is witnessed by his stepson, who robs the old tramp and throws him over a cliff.

Captain Craven, an ex-army officer who is spending his vacation in the town, saves Kate, the stepson's fiancée, from drowning and falls in love with her. In visiting Kate at her home he finds the tramp, who has recovered from the fall over the cliff, proclaiming himself as the husband of the present Mrs. Armstrong. He recognizes the tramp as Keets, a deserter of the U. S. Army, and denounces him. The old tramp then confesses his identity and upon seeing the stepson upon the scene, he accuses him of having robbed him and thrown him from the cliff. Kate, upon hearing that her fiancé is a thief, breaks her engagement and accepts the attentions of the man who had saved her from a watery grave.

BILL AND THE BEAR

Lux Release, November 3

Bill and his little bear are employed to track burglars. They succeed in tracking them to a river where bruin spends a lively quarter of an hour fishing them out one by one. The bear quite enjoys his unexpected bath, and succeeds in obtaining free board and lodging for several little burglars. One the same reel is:

TOMMY'S CAMERA

Tommy has been a good boy at school and his delighted parents present him with a camera. Tommy then sets out in search of something to snapshot. Going into the kitchen he soon finds a subject worthy of his attention. The cook and the butler are snapshotted in the act of consuming their master's whisky. Unknown to them Tommy steals quietly out and goes into his auntie's bedroom. He manages to snapshot that dear old lady in the act of removing her wig. The old lady does not notice his presence and neither do his fond mamma and papa when they have a slight tiff and papa gets his face slapped. Tommy's sister and the nice young man that calls to talk finance with papa are also caught in a compromising attitude. The consternation of the guilty ones can well be imagined when they enthusiastically inspect the negatives. The cream of the joke is when they each get hold of the negative which reveals to them the misdeeds of the others. They all start laughing at each other, but the laughter dies away when they exchange negatives. Their consternation will afford much laughter to the beholders of this cute idea.

BILL, HIS WIFE AND THE WATER

Lux Release, October 27

Billy was shaving when he discovered that he had no water with which to wash the lather from his noble countenance. He made a rush for the tap only to find that the water had gone on strike, and that there was a famine in the land. Bill then went forth to beg, borrow or steal, but water was so precious that none would part with what little they possessed. There was no hope for Billy but go further afield. He therefore took the first train to the seaside, and returned later in the day with two large jugs full of the preeious liquid. Meanwhile his wife had developed an awful thirst. She began to look at Bill in a way that made him feel nervous when he arrived, and she very soon drank both the jugs of water. Poor Billy, he had a lively time of it until the water taps were in action again. On the same reel is:

BERTIE AND HIS RIVALS

This is an excellent comedy of rather a different character from the ordinary class of humorous films. Jackson receives an invitation to a dance at the house of the father of Ethel, with whom he is in love. He aceepts with alacrity, and arrives at the ball to find that he has two rivals for her hand, and how the three suitors attempt to outvie each other is very amusingly depicted. At last, however, Jackson manages to propose, in spite of the fact that the two others plaee the foot of a chair on his toes whilst he does so, which causes him the most excruciating agony. The proposal successfully accomplished, Jackson rushes to his room to bathe his tortured member, and presently falls asleep with his foot in a basin of water. The rivals discover him in this position, steal away, and shortly return with a large bag of cement, which they pour in the water. They then contrive to cause Ethel to fetch Jackson that he may lead her out in a dance. The wretched Jackson jumps up and discovers to his horror that his foot is firmly attached to the basin, which he has perforce to drag with him whenever he walks. Thus they arrive in the drawing-room where, as may be imagined, their entry is very sensational. All ends happily, however, and a final view shows Jackson and Ethel joyously united.

FIELD DAY SPORTS AT FORT RILEY, KANSAS

Champion Release, October 30

This film of Fort Riley Encampment is a grand revelation of the work National Guard Troops undergo. The average person knows very little of what is called "Military Manœuvres." The marching of soldiers in gala attire on some national holiday is all they ever witness in this regard; and they do not know that the soldier is trained in any other performance, except perhaps the carrying of his gun.

And if there be any who doubt what our "boys" can do one look at this pieture, of their work on the Pawnee Flats, will be a convincing answer to the question. In the target drills we behold the amazing accuracy of our gunners. The Champ camera man was on the job, and the boys crept up with the camera until they were within 500 yards of the target against which rage missiles were smashing.

They were compelled to vacate the danger zone in quick order by the officials as they were in imminent peril of their lives; but the camera had caught the targets under fire, at a focus never before attempted in picturedom. It was a singular achievement.

This feature alone of the picture puts it in a class entirely by itself; but apart from the daring charges and counter-charges, the many and wonderful evolutions, bewildering drills, realistic sham battles with lumbering field artillery, this film is an educator. It is unique merely as a spectacle, in fact, without a peer, but viewed from a patriotic standpoint it has a mission. To inculcate a feeling of self-protection in that our country is in the vanguard as to military prestige.

Every form of field sports, drills and athletic stunts are gone through with a vim and dash that make the spectator's veins sparkle and thrill with new life and spirit. This release is part two of the Fort Riley manœuvres. The first issue is our release of October 9th, entitled "National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley." There is a third release of this subject, which will be announced in the near future.

THE COWBOYS' PIES

Champion Release, November 1

There is an old bachelor ranchman—well not so old, about forty or thereabouts, living not fifty miles from Silver Springs, Colorado. Two nieces and a sister pay him a visit. We see the party drive up in the carry-all and it is a cure for sore eyes to look at those nieces. Splendid looking girls with mischief peeping out all over them. We feel instinctively when looking at them that something will soon be "doing."

The auntie starts to bake a cake and the girls resolve to try a hand at pies. Out in the bunkhouse they see the forms of the handsome cowboys. Well, you may surmise some complications will ensue, something stormy and worth while, when handsome cowboys and dashing girls have a fling together.

Slipping over a lot of amusing incidents and detail, we come where the girls with cakes and pies have become the object of the cowboys' quest. These latter spy the girls and not knowing of their advent or the manner of it are after them in genuine cowboy fashion in full tear. But the girls are their match to a certain extent. Their wild dash on horseback followed by the cavaliers of the prairies in full chase is most exciting.

The boys swing the ropes. Swish! Swish! They whirl through the air and the girls become their prey; "roped in" as it were in true Western style. Then the cowboys get to "workin'" on those pies such as mother used to bake, and there is a good old time that beggars description.

We have only attempted a partial narration of this A-1 cowboy comedy, but we leave it to those who will see the picture to enjoy twenty minutes of swell Champion comedy.

A BREACH OF FAITH

Rex Release, October 26

It is the unpleasant truth that Iscariots still walk among us. There is a Judas in every camp; there are Cains still stalking the face of the earth, and there are those who kill more than the mortal flesh of their brothers—those who slaughter hope and faith and trust.

Antone and Luigi are sitting in the latter's café in Mulberry street, talking of their affairs. Or rather should it be said that Luigi was talking of their affairs, for Antone was silent with thoughts of a girl, a girl far away yet near to him. Antone had received a letter with a very flattering offer to go west, but he cannot go away, because Anita, the only girl, is even now on her way to Ameriea, to him and happiness. Luigi prevails upon him, however, and tells him he will take care of Anita when she arrives. And so Antone, confident that the girl will be comfortable, leaves a note for her and departs.

Anita arrives, and Luigi receives her and welcomes her heartily. Anita is pretty and winsome and sweet, and her eyes—they are the kind that buy men, and Luigi sells himself. He is just about to give her the letter from his brother, when—he realizes! He tells her Antone has gone away, but that he will take care of her. And the girl becomes a woman, one of the legion of them who have lost faith and trust in the men they loved because fate, or misfate, so directs.

Luigi asks her to marry him, and the girl is forced to do so. And when he has attained that which he desired, in the manner of men, he forgets to appreciate it. He neglects Anita, pays attentions to other women, and once again causes Anita to hate the creature called man.

Far away in the West, far away in all except his thoughts, Antone's thoughts wander. He wonders why his letters have not been answered, he worries, and at last wearies of the suspense. In frantie frenzy he deeides to return home. . . . He enters the little café to see Anita sitting with head bowed upon her arms, weeping with the abandon of one who knows only dreary desolation and the death of hope. Recognition, a happy cry, questions, answers, explanations—and they see the light, they understand, they realize! As they are talking they hear Luigi, returning from a drunken spree, chanting a ribald song. Antone conceals himself behind the counter; Luigi saunters in and roughly hurls the woman aside. Antone, unable longer to restrain himself, rushes out and faces his brother, the traitor and traducer. Latin blood calls for vengeance; a great wrong cries for revenge; Antone strikes, and a Cain is slain by Abel.

THE LOVES OF DAVID COPPERFIELD

(Third of the series from the novel by Charles Dickens)

Thanhouser Release, October 21

This chapter of David's life presents a simple study of character development.

Uriah Heep, the 'umble creature, loquacious Mr. Micawber, eccentric Aunt Betsey, Mr. Wickfield, the lawyer, Dora, the "Doll wife," lovelorn and sighing Agnes, and the others, all move about in a sphere totally Dickensonian.

The scenes are set in Mr. Wickfield's home, and his office, the homes of Aunt Betsey and David, and the church in which David is married to Dora.

These scenes are reproduced with remarkable fidelity to the masterpiece.

The different incidents chosen for reproduction help to bring out forcibly the characteristics of the chief actors.

The picture introduces the irrepressible Mr. Micawber, who is always waiting for something to "turn up." It covers the period of the story where David and his Aunt Betsey come to the office of Wickfield and Heep on a business transaction. Heep, the 'umble creature, is portrayed with almost startling realism.

Threaded with the machinations and forgeries of Uriah Heep and his final undoing, through the sagacity and suspicions of Mr. Micawber, are David Copperfield's love affairs.

David is much attached to Agnes and Dora, but Dora's doll-like face and childish manners captivate him and he marries her. The marriage, however, does not turn out a happy one, for Dora is a poor housekeeper with little mentality and less adaptability. Dora dies shortly after her marriage, and on her deathbed she asks Agnes to marry David. Agnes is in love with David from the very first, and when he returns from a trip abroad, after the death of his wife, he learns of Agnes' love for him and he marries for the second time.

THEIR BURGLAR

Thanhouser Release, November 3

In the course of a fashionable reception at her home, a young girl quarrels with her suitor. Piqued by a fancied wrong, the girl with complaisance accepts the proposal of a foreign nobleman and determines to forget the man forever.

As time progresses and the day set for her wedding to the sallow baron approaches, she is obsessed by a feeling of discontent and a yearning for her former lover. On the night before the wedding, in a moment of decision and desperation, she decides to recall her idol.

She pens a note in her boudoir, asking her lover to rescue her from a loveless marriage. At midnight she quietly goes downstairs. The drawing room is in darkness, but by candle light she fancies she sees the butler locking things up; in reality it is an interrupted half-scared burglar who had come to "look over" the wedding presents. She excitedly thrusts upon the bewildered burglar the note with instructions to deliver it at once, which he does after experiencing some trouble with a policeman who happens to be awake at the time.

By delivering the letter to a happy recipient the burglar dodges the officers of the law. But the young man is slightly suspicious, and forces the burglar to accompany him back to the house, until he can learn why the girl selected such an extraordinary looking messenger.

At the house the girl is bewildered. The burglar then confesses, and explains that he had called to steal the wedding presents, and asks them in return for the service he has rendered to give him his liberty.

They grant his request and do more than that. As the girl points out, the wedding gifts are valueless to her under the new arrangement. She is deeply grateful to the burglar, and is anxious to make him happy. So she gives him all the wedding gifts for his very own, and he departs, happy and contented.

Later when the couple are married they hear from him. He writes them that he has reformed, and is no longer a burglar, but a plumber; and he sends them a wedding gift, explaining that it is in return "for the bunch youse gave me." Being a plumber is a lead-pipe cinch for him to be honest.

LONE BILL'S LAST RIDE

Nestor Release, October 25

Thankful that at last he might call the little home his own, Sheriff Kirby was starting out to make the final payment, when from Governor Wright arrived an order to escort the stage coach from Big Run to Culver, as Lone Bill had been seen in his country. Reluctantly, Kirby handed the money to his son, Joe, then hastened to execute the Governor's orders, while Joe rode gaily away to make the last payment on their home.

Unfortunately, however, he stopped in at Dan's saloon to bid his friends goodbye, and there, although not recognizing him, Joe met Lone Bill, whose adroit persuasion soon induced the young man to play "just one" game. He let Joe win at first, then gently led him on, so that ere two hours had passed, the sheriff's money had changed hands, and Lone Bill had departed to don his mask and await the stage coach at the bend of the road. But as he sprang out and commanded the driver to throw up his hands, Sheriff Kirby and his men dashed forward. Springing upon his horse, Bill galloped furiously away with the posse in close pursuit. Although severely wounded, the desperado managed to evade them by dismounting and sending his horse off the other way.

Seeing that he had been duped, the sheriff sent his men out in various directions, while he and Deputy Ward chanced upon the very path that Bill had taken, and soon discovered their man hiding near a large tree. At the first shot, the desperado fell and lay motionless, nor did he move when Kirby touched him with his boot, but no sooner were their backs turned than the command came to throw up their hands, and upon wheeling found themselves looking into the muzzle of Lone Bill's six shooter.

Quickly the desperado took possession of the sheriff's horse; but had scarcely gone half a mile when he lost consciousness, and it was only when brought to the Kirby home that Bill managed to slip to the ground, where kind-hearted Mrs. Kirby soon found the wounded man and helped him into the house. Here, from another room, he heard Joe's broken confession to his mother of the gambling, so that ere the angel of death claimed him, Lone Bill had an opportunity to repair at least a part of the havoc he had wrought.

MUTT AND JEFF DISCOVER A WONDERFUL REMEDY

Nestor Release, October 28

Dr. Fakewell has cleaned up $30,000 and is now in search of pastures new. Who'll fill his place? Why, Mutt and Jeff. So they take up their "working" quarters at the old stand, that is, Dr. Fakewell's late office.

The electrician in charge is glad to decamp, so he pockets whatever cash Mutt and Jeff can spare, shows them the workings of the wonderful machinery with which all the ills that flesh is heir to may be annihilated and "vamooses."

The first patient is an old man who has not walked in twenty years. Jeff plays doctor while Mutt manipulates the electric wires from behind the screen. With a yell, the old chap springs up and discovers that he is cured and dances away, leaving behind a goodly sum of money.

The news of this wonderful cure spreads like wildfire, and a poor devil on crutches, who has tried everything in vain, decides to see the new doctors. He finds them still busy counting the "mazuma."

Jeff gets busy over the new victim with the aid of a mallet, and, finding the case rather hopeless, takes fifty dollars for the examination and demands two hundred bones for treatment. The patient is willing, in fact, he says they can make him an extra charge should they cure him. An extra charge? Why certainly! Mutt is not going to be stingy with so generous a cripple, so he not only gives him the full benefit of the electrical appliances, but uses the emergency lever as an extra charge. A flash, a puff of smoke and everybody drops to the floor in a writhing heap. Kind-hearted neighbors rush in, and in splinters and bandages, doctors and patient are carted away to the hospital. On the same reel is:

DIPPY ADVERTISES FOR A PUP

His name is J. Lancaster Dippington, but his friends call him "Dippy" for short. The surname fits him like the proverbial glove, for, besides his apparent stature shortage, his desire to make his little chee-ild happy has made him "dippy" on the dog question.

Notwithstanding his better half's opposition, "Dippy" advertises for a pup, and numerous dog salesmen, together with a motley crowd of mutts, mongrels, curs, cross-breeds and miscellaneous bow-wows, storm his home.

A belated dog fancier meets with success, and "Dippy's" little chee-ild is made happy with a pup to fondle and caress. "Dippy" is also made happy, and, as the Mrs. refuses to share his happiness, he insists on sharing it with his neighbors.

While engaged in reading the dog's pedigree to a friend, the chee-ild and the pup disappear back of the house. The dog catchers' wagon is spied in the distance, and "Dippy" promptly gives chase. This is "some" chase. The chaser is finally routed with a net and driven to the police headquarters. Here mamma and the chee-ild put in an appearance at the psychological moment, and the happy trio, plus pup, go home.

SALAMBO

Ambrosio Release, October 25

This is another of the Ambrosio big features which is put out as a regular release. It is magnificently staged and costumed, the cost is very large, and the acting and photography are perfect. Salambo is in command of the Mercenaries (hired foreign soldiers). Payment being delayed they make a hostile demonstration and the High Priestess addresses them. Salambo becomes infatuated with her and quiets the threatening men. Violating the sacred rules, he enters the temple and forces his way to the Idol Chamber where the Sacred Veil reposes, in quest of the woman. He is set upon by the holy guards, and tears down the veil and wraps it about himself, and while the priests and guards are spellbound with horror at the sacrilegious act he makes his escape. The Priestess, whose heart has been stormed by the fearless, dashing soldier, goes to his tent and in a wonderfully acted emotional scene persuades him to give her back the veil. After she has returned it to the temple, amid the great rejoicing of the priests and the people, she goes back to Salambo and becomes the warrior's bride.

THE VICISSITUDE OF FATE

Great Northern Release, October 28

Charles, a young trusted clerk, is in love with his employer's daughter, and while talking to her in the office one day a draught of wind carries away unnoticed several of the bank notes which he had just been busy counting. Their pleasant tete-a-tete is interrupted by the entrance of the girl's father, who sends his daughter away and proceeds to check up the work of the young man. He finds a shortage of $75 and demands an explanation as to the missing money. The young fellow, unable to give a satisfactory reply, is accused of stealing the amount, and is instantly discharged in spite of his protestations of innocence. Arriving at his home, he breaks the ill-tidings to his mother and father, expecting sympathy, but, although his mother clings to him and declares her belief in his innocence, his father turns him out of the house. Charles, in his dejected wanderings from home, strays near the docks, and becomes friendly with the captain of a sailing vessel. He gets a free passage to a new country, where ere long he is seeking employment. Having no credentials, however, he fails to find a position. Being compelled to sleep in a shed one night, he overhears the plot of a band of thieves. As luck would have it, the plot is directed against the manager of a firm who had refused Charles employment owing to lack of references. Our hero advises him of the plot at once with the result that the thieves are foiled in their attempt and arrested and Charles secures the coveted position. In the meantime, spring cleaning at his former employer's office has disclosed the fact that the missing bank notes were blown under a steam radiator, and the result is that when Charles returns his innocence has already been established, and he gains a reward for what he has undergone by his old employer giving him his daughter's hand in marriage.

The Independent manufacturers are producing films fifty per cent better than they were six months ago; and a hundred per cent better than they were a year ago. If you haven't seen a real genuine bona fide Independent program lately, you owe it to yourself to wake up and see what's doing. Try Laemmle films, Laemmle service and "Laemmle luck" for a change and you'll get a program that will make your patrons stronger for you than ever. Slide a letter to me this instant!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS:
204 W. LAKE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

SYKES BLOCK.....MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
1517 FARNAM STREET.....OMAHA, NEB.
1110 WYANDOTTE STREET.....KANSAS CITY, MO.
515 MULBERRY STREET.....DES MOINES, IOWA

THE BIGGEST AND BEST FILM RENTER IN THE WORLD.

(MY FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU IS TREMENDOUSLY POPULAR. MAKE USE OF IT!)

THEATRE WANTED

Will buy Moving Picture Theatre located in the Middle West. BOX 58, VANDALIA, OHIO.

QUICK—CHEAP—GOOD

OPERA CHAIRS

Ask for Catalog 306

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.,
218 So. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

AMUSEMENT MANAGERS

Learn of our AERIAL ATTRACTIONS, TOY RUBBER GAS BALLOONS, ELECTRIC SPARKLERS and Parade Torches. Illustration shows our COMET BALLOON in action. TWO complete large outfits $1. Write to-day and learn to-morrow of our many unique but effective AERIAL ADV. STUNTS that will arouse public interest and gather the crowds and shekels.

BRAZEL NOV. CO.,
Northside, Cincinnati, O.

PERFORATING MACHINES

TO FILM MANUFACTURERS.

If you require an accurate, adjustable film perforator, built specially for negatives,

BUY THE MICROMETRIC

Manufactured by

CHRONIK BROTHERS
73 Gold Street, New York.

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.) Feet

Sept. 20—Tiny Tom as a Detective.....
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death.....
Sept. 27—Alice's Dream .....
Sept. 23—The Hornet (Com.).....
Sept. 27—Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)
Oct. 4—Wrestlers and Wrestling.....
Oct. 11—The Little Chimney Sweeper.....
Oct. 14—Tweedledum's Monkey .....
Oct. 14—One of Tweedledum's Tricks (Com.)
Oct. 18—The Conversion of St. Anthony....
Oct. 25—Salambo .....

AMERICAN

Aug. 24—Aunty and the Cowboys (Com.)....
Aug. 28—The Western Doctor's Peril (Dr.)..
Aug. 31—The Diamond Smugglers (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—The Cowboy and the Artist (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 7—Three Million Dollars (W. Dr.)...1000
Sept. 11—The Stage Robbers of San Juan (W. Com.-Dr.) .....
Sept. 14—The Mother of the Ranch (W. Dr.) 1000
Sept. 18—The Gun Man .....
Sept. 21—The Claim Jumper .....
Sept. 25—The Circular Fence (Com. Dr.)...1000
Sept. 28—The Rustler Sheriff (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—The Love of the West (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—The Miner's Wife (W. Dr.).....1000
Oct. 9—The Land Thieves (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 12—The Cowboy and the Outlaw (Dr.).1000

CHAMPION

Sept. 11—Charley's Butte (Dr.).....
Sept. 13—The Red Devils (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 18—Shenandoah 950
Sept. 20—The Stolen Horse..... 950
Sept. 25—The Black Horse Troop of Culver. 950
Sept. 27—The Cook of the Ranch..... 950
Oct. 2—Barbara Frietchie 950
Oct. 4—As Things Used to Be..... 950
Oct. 9—The National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley 950
Oct. 11—What the Indians Did..... 950
Oct. 16—A Girl and a Spy (Dr.)..... 950
Oct. 18—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.).... 950
Oct. 23—The Copperhead 950
Oct. 25—Law or the Lady..... 950

ECLAIR

Aug. 28—A Marriage in the Stars (Com.)... 755
Sept. 4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.).. 886
Sept. 11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris 630
Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.).. 335
Sept. 18—Magic Music 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall..... 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies..... 370
Oct. 9—Better to Have Remained Blind (Dr.) 740
Oct. 9—The Motor Chair (Com.)..... 260
Oct. 16—A Lucky Change (Com.)..... 805
Oct. 16—Lake Garda (Scenic)..... 185
Oct. 23—Youth! Queen of Hearts" (Com.). 740
Oct. 23—Percy Gets Tired of the Theater (Com.) 260

GREAT NORTHERN

July 29—A Happy Home.....
Aug. 5—The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.)..
Aug. 12—The Mother's Mark (Dr.).....
Aug. 12—Teddy Trained by His Mother (Com.) .....
Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.)....
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson.....
Sept. 16—The Conspirators (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)....
Sept. 30—The Conspirators (Dr.).....
Oct. 7—The White Tulip (Com.).....
Oct. 7—Barcelona (Scenic) .....
Oct. 14—Secret of the Underground Passage (Dr.) .....
Oct. 21—His Fidelity Investigated (Com.)..

IMP

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Aug. 28—His Royal Highness (Com.).....
Aug. 28—Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.).....
Aug. 31—The Toss of a Coin (Com.).....
Sept. 4—The Haunted House (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 7—Duty (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.) 1000
Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood .....
Sept. 18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream.....
Sept. 21—By Registered Mail.....
Sept. 25—The Co-Ed. Professor (Com.)..... 750
Sept. 25—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.)..... 250
Sept. 28—'Tween Two Loves (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—The Rose's Story (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—Through the Air (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 9—The Sentinel Asleep.....
Oct. 12—The Better Way.....
Oct. 16—Uncle Pete's Ruse.....
Oct. 19—The Aggressor .....
Oct. 23—The Biting Business.....
Oct. 26—The Waif .....
Oct. 30—His Dress Shirt.....
Oct. 30—A Few Minutes with Steeplejack Lindholm .....
Nov. 2—King, the Detective.....

ITALA

July 20—The Charitable Young Lady (Dr.).
July 22—Foolshead's Heels (Com.).....
July 27—The Fatal Sonata (Dr.).....
July 29—Toto's Butterfly (Com.).....
July 29—Toto Without Water (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Evening Bell.....
Aug. 5—Foolshead's Last Roguery.....
Aug. 12—Sport Restores Youth.....
Aug. 17—Toto's Little Cart.....
Aug. 17—In the Valley of Viege.....
Aug. 19—Foolshead—Manikin .....
Aug. 19—The Blunt Sword.....
Aug. 24—Modern School of Italian Cavalry..
Aug. 26—Foolshead—Chauffeur .....
Aug. 26—For a Straw.....
Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes.....
Sept. 7—The Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dr.) .....
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.).....
Sept. 9—Toto Has a Purse.....
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Com.)
Sept. 16—Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.) .....
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death.....
Sept. 23—The Hornet .....
Oct. 7—Foolshead a Model Guest.....

LUX.

By Prieur.

Sept. 8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.).... 642
Sept. 15—Bill as a Billposter (Com.)..... 573
Sept. 15—His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.) 357
Sept. 22—Bill as an Express Messenger (Com.) 344
Sept. 22—The Stolen Diamond (Dr.)..... 629
Sept. 29—Bill and His Friend (Com.)..... 491
Sept. 29—The Little Goatherd (Dr.)..... 386
Oct. 6—Bill Has a Bath (Com.)..... 452
Oct. 6—Neighbors (Com.) 488
Oct. 13—A Dog in a Coiner's Den (Dr.).... 593
Oct. 13—Bill, Police Cyclist (Com.)..... 390
Oct. 20—Bill Pays His Debts (Com.)..... 442
Oct. 20—Henpecked Bertie Goes Fishing (Com.) 514
Oct. 27—Bill, His Wife and the Water (Com.) 455
Oct. 27—Bertie and His Rivals (Com.)..... 472
Nov. 3—Bill and the Bear (Com.)..... 554
Nov. 3—Tommy's Camera (Com.)..... 393

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

Sept. 20—Across the Divide (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Mutt and Jeff and the Dog Catchers (Com.) .....
Sept. 23—Obliging a Friend (Com.).....
Sept. 27—The Young Doctor (Dr.).....
Sept. 30—Mutt and Jeff as Reporters (Com.)
Sept. 30—Getting Even (Com.).....
Oct. 4—Those Jersey Cowpunchers (Dr.)..
Oct. 7—Mutt and Jeff Spend a Quiet Day in the Country (Com.).....
Oct. 7—The Meddling Parson (Com.).....
Oct. 11—Let Us Smooth the Way (Dr.).....
Oct. 14—Mutt and Jeff and the Blackhand (Com.) .....
Oct. 14—Romance and Uppercuts (Com.)..
Oct. 18—The Town Marshal (Com. Dr.)....
Oct. 21—Mutt and Jeff Join the Opera Co.
Oct. 21—The Blessed Baby (Com.).....
Oct. 25—Lone Bill's Last Ride (Dr.).....
Oct. 28—Mutt and Jeff Discover a Wonderful Remedy (Com.).....
Oct. 28—Dippy Advertises for a Pup (Com.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Aug. 29—An Indian Legend.....
Sept. 1—The Sheriff's Love.....
Sept. 5—Little Dove's Romance .....
Sept. 8—A Western Tramp.....
Sept. 12—The Lost Letter.....
Sept. 15—Lone Star's Return.....
Sept. 19—The Sheriff's Brother.....
Sept. 22—The Missionary's Gratitude.....
Sept. 26—Lucky Bob .....
Sept. 29—White Fawn's Peril.....
Oct. 3—The Red Man's Penalty.....
Oct. 6—Range Justice .....
Oct. 10—The Pioneer's Mistake.....
Oct. 13—The Indian Rustlers.....
Oct. 17—A Western Bride.....
Oct. 20—A Warrior's Treachery.....
Oct. 24—A Noble Red Man.....
Oct. 27—An Indian Hero.....

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Feet

Sept. 5—Red Feather's Friendship (Dr.)... 960
Sept. 9—The Twin Squaws (Dr.)..... 975
Sept. 12—Gray Wolf's Grief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 16—The Horse Thief (Dr.)..... 950
Sept. 19—Lost in a Hotel (Dr.).....
Sept. 19—An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.)...
Sept. 23—Red Man's Honor (Dr.).....
Sept. 26—The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.)..... 300
Sept. 26—Imaginative Willie (Com.)..... 670
Sept. 30—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.) 970
Oct. 3—The Call from the Hills (Com.)...
Oct. 3—A Matrimonial Idyl (Dr.).....
Oct. 7—The Branded Indian (Dr.).....
Oct. 10—Large Lakes of Italy (Scenic).... 285
Oct. 10—Thou Shalt Not Steal (Com.)..... 700
Oct. 14—Running Fawn's Chief (Dr.)..... 990
Oct. 17—Yarn of a Baby's Shirt (Com.)...
Oct. 17—First Mail by Aeroplane (Topical).
Oct. 17—Headline Acrobats (Com.).....
Oct. 21—The Awakening of John Clark (Dr.) .....
Oct. 24—John Baxter's Ward (Dr.).....
Oct. 24—The Little Brown Calf (Dr.).....
Oct. 28—The Revenue Officer's Last Case (Dr.) .....

RELIANCE

Oct. 4—Winning Papa's Consent.....
Oct. 4—A Quiet Evening.....
Oct. 7—The Anonymous Letter.....
Oct. 11—The Human Sacrifice.....
Oct. 14—A Narrow Escape.....
Oct. 18—The Trapper's Daughter.....
Oct. 21—Divorce .....
Oct. 25—The Empty Crib.....
Oct. 28—The Test of a Man.....

REX

Aug. 24—Castles in the Air (Com.).....1000
Aug. 31—The Torn Scarf.....
Sept. 7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic)....
Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.) .....
Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.)..
Sept. 28—The Derelict (Dr.).....
Oct. 5—Lost Illusions (Dr.).....
Oct. 12—Chasing a Rainbow.....
Oct. 19—Her Sister .....

SOLAX COMPANY

Sept. 22—Nellie's Soldier (Dr.).....
Sept. 27—How Hopkins Raised the Rent (Com.) .....
Sept. 29—An Italian's Gratitude (Dr.).....
Oct. 4—A Breezy Morning (Com.).....
Oct. 6—His Sister's Sweetheart (Military)
Oct. 11—He Was a Millionaire (Com.).....
Oct. 13—His Mother's Hymn (Dr.).....
Oct. 18—A Corner in Criminals (Com.)....
Oct. 18—A Lover's Ruse (Com.).....
Oct. 20—His Better Self (Mil. Dr.).....

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug. 11—Cupid the Conqueror (Dr.).....
Aug. 15—Nobody Loves a Fat Woman.....
Aug. 18—The Train Dispatcher (Dr.).....
Aug. 22—The Cross .....
Aug. 25—The Romance of Lonely Island....
Aug. 29—The Moth.....
Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet, Part I.....
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress.....
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet, Part 2.....
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.) .....
Sept. 19—The Lie (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Honeymooners (Dr.).....
Sept. 26—Lochinvar (Dr.).....
Sept. 29—Love's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Oct. 3—The Five Rose Sisters (Dr.).....
Oct. 6—The East and the West (Dr.).....
Oct. 9—The Higher Law (Dr.).....
Oct. 13—The Tempter and Dan Cupid (Dr.)
Oct. 17—The Early Life of David Copperfield
Oct. 24—Little Em'ly and David Copperfield
Oct. 31—The Loves of David Copperfield...
Oct. 20—The Satyr and the Lady (Dr.)....
Oct. 27—The Jewels of Allah (Dr.).....

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Aug. 14—A Children's Paradise (Scenic)....
Aug. 18—Her Father's Secretary (Dr.).....
Aug. 21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.).....
Aug. 25—Retaliation (Dr.) .....
Aug. 28—The Power of Devotion (Dr.)....
Sept. 1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.).....
Sept. 4—Inshavogue (Dr.) .....
Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.).....
Sept. 8—Faded Roses (Dr.).....
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstrings .....
Sept. 15—Woman .....
Sept. 18—The Star Reporter.....
Sept. 22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)..
Sept. 25—For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.)
Sept. 29—Man (Dr.) .....
Oct. 2—She Never Knew (Dr.).....
Oct. 6—The Goose Girl (Dr.).....
Oct. 9—His Second Wife.....
Oct. 13—Society Hobos .....
Oct. 16—The Lost Handkerchief (Com.).....
Oct. 20—The Man Who Came Back (Dr.)..
Oct. 23—The Drummer Boy of Shiloh (Dr.)
Oct. 27—Flower of the Forest (Dr.).....

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

		Feet
Sept.	7—The Old Confectioner's Mistake (Dr.)	998
Sept.	11—The Village Hero (Com.)	675
Sept.	11—The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)	321
Sept.	14—The Squaw's Love (Dr.)	998
Sept.	18—Dan, the Dandy (Com.)	998
Sept.	21—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.)	463
Sept.	21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.	534
Sept.	25—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.)	999
Sept.	28—Her Awakening (Dr.)	997
Oct.	2—Too Many Burglars (Com.)	499
Oct.	2—Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Com.)	497
Oct.	5—The Making of a Man (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—Italian Blood (Dr.)	999
Oct.	12—Trailing the Counterfeiter (Com.)	529
Oct.	12—Josh's Suicide (Com.)	469
Oct.	16—The Unveiling (Dr.)	998
Oct.	19—The Adventures of Billy (Dr.)	999
Oct.	23—Through His Wife's Picture (Com.)	530
Oct.	23—The Inventor's Secret (Com.)	468
Oct.	26—The Long Road (Dr.)	999

EDISON

Sept.	30—The Maiden of the Pie-Faced Indians (Com.)	500
Sept.	30—Turning the Tables (Com.)	500
Oct.	3—Eugene Wrayburn (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Summer Girl (Com.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part I (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part II (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Foul Play—Part III (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Leaves of a Romance (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	10—How Mrs. Murray Saved the American Army (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	11—Mae's Suitors (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—At the Threshold of Life (Edu.)	1000
Oct.	14—Her Wedding Ring (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	17—An Old Sweetheart of Mine (Dr.)	945
Oct.	18—Mike's Hero (Com.)	650
Oct.	18—Launching of the Battleship Rivadavia	350
Oct.	20—A Conspiracy Against the King (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	21—Three of a Kind (Com.)	1000
Oct.	24—A Day at West Point Military Academy, N. Y.	1000
Oct.	25—The Fairies' Banquet (Com.)	400
Oct.	25—How the Telephone Came to Town (Com.)	600
Oct.	28—An Island Comedy (Com.)	1000
Oct.	28—The Kid from the Klondyke (Com.)	1000
Oct.	31—The Reform Candidate (Dr.)	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Oct.	5—Master Cupid, Detective (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The Sheriff's Decision (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Townhall, To-night (W. Com.)
Oct.	10—Reparation (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Get Rich Hall & Ford (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—The Deacon's Reward (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	14—The Stage Driver's Daughter (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	17—A False Suspicion (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—Their Tiny Babies (Com.)
Oct.	19—'Tis Better to Have Loved and Lost (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—Dr. Bill's Patient (Com.)	1000
Oct.	21—A Western Redemption (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	24—The Tricked Trickster (Com.)
Oct.	24—The Family Pet Revenge (Com.)	1000
Oct.	25—Athletics vs. Giants in the World's Championship Baseball Series of 1911 (Topical)	1000
Oct.	26—Too Many Engagements (Com.)	1000
Oct.	27—Pals (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	28—The Forester's Plea (W. Dr.)

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Sept.	19—Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)	710
Sept.	19—Crossing the Alps in a Motor	285
Sept.	23—A Heart Breaker by Trade (Com.)	710
Sept.	23—The Culture of Bulbous Flowers	290
Sept.	26—A Friend of the Family (Com.)	850
Sept.	26—The City of Bordeaux, France (Trav.)	175
Sept.	30—Hearts May be Broken (Dr.)	1015
Oct.	3—Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Dr.)	675
Oct.	3—Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Trav.	325
Oct.	7—The Upward Way (Dr.)	726
Oct.	7—Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal	269
Oct.	10—The Missing Bracelet (Dr.)	1150
Oct.	14—Rejected (Dr.)	845
Oct.	14—Pansies (Botanical)	155
Oct.	17—Done Brown (Com.)	837
Oct.	17—A Fairyland of Frost and Snow (Scenic)	163
Oct.	21—The Masked Huntsman (Dr.)	784
Oct.	21—Opening Flowers (Botanical)	216
Oct.	24—Jimmie in Love (Com.)	555
Oct.	24—The Ostrich Plume Industry, France (Ind.)	428
Oct.	28—Fridolin	578
Oct.	28—The Principality of Monaco	400
Oct.	31—The Widower	1020
Nov.	4—The Jesting Princess (Com. Dr.)	787
Nov.	4—Belgian Cavalry at Exercise (Mil.)	200
Nov.	7—The Vagabond (Dr.)	623
Nov.	7—A Trip on a Dirigible Balloon (Topical)	331
Nov.	11—The Hour of Execution (Dr.)	787
Nov.	11—Manresa, a Spanish Town (Travel)	200
Nov.	14—Jimmie and His Country Uncle (Com.)	820
Nov.	14—The Outskirts of Paris (Scenic)	164

KALEM CO.

Sept.	8—When the Sun Went Out (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	11—A Sheepman's Triumph (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	13—The Express Envelope (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	15—The Alpine Lease (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	18—The Ranger's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	20—Losing to Win (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	22—The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	25—Arizona Bill (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	29—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—The Phoney Strike Breakers (C.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Saving Sign (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—The Mistress of Hacienda Del Cerro (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	11—For the Flag of France (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	13—The Smugglers (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	16—The Colleen Bawn (3 reels)	3000
Oct.	18—Daniel Boone's Bravery (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	20—The Mesquite's Gratitude (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	23—A Prisoner of Mexico (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	25—The Lost Freight Car (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	27—The Peril of the Plains (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Sept.	27—A Cowboy's Love (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	28—A Counterfeit Roll (Com.)	1000
Sept.	30—A Nearsighted Chaperon (Com.)	1000
Oct.	2—His Stubborn Way (Com.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Idle Boast (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—His Exoneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)
Oct.	7—From the Field to the Cradle (Ind.)	1000
Oct.	9—What Will Be, Will Be (Com.)	1000
Oct.	11—The Slavey's Affinity (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—The Gambler's Influence (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	14—A Hot Time in Atlantic City	1000
Oct.	16—The Maniac (Com.)	1000
Oct.	18—The Cure of John Douglas (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—Git a Hoss (Com.)	1000
Oct.	21—Tobacco Industry (Edu.)
Oct.	21—Her Exclusive Hat (Com.)
Oct.	21—Willie's Conscience (Com.)	1000
Oct.	23—The Scandal Mongers (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	25—The Tars Ashore (Com.)	1000
Oct.	26—A Rural Conqueror (Com.)	1000
Oct.	28—Love's Victory (Dr.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Aug.	17—Two Foolies and Their Follies (Com.)
Aug.	24—A Spanish Love Song (Dr.)
Aug.	31—The Call of the Wilderness (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	21—$200.00 (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	28—The Mission Waif (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—The Stolen Grey (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Tommy's Rocking Horse (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—The Cross of Pearls (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	26—The Gypsy Bride (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Sept.	28—Gypsy Honor (Dr.
Sept.	29—The Bell Ringer of the Abbey
Sept.	29—Across the Polar Seas (Scenic)
Sept.	30—A Convict's Heart (Dr.)
Oct.	2—Little Moritz is Too Short (Com.)
Oct.	2—Rangoon, India (Scenic)
Oct.	3—Pathe's Weekly (No. 40)
Oct.	4—Crazy Dope (Com.)
Oct.	4—Circus in Australia (Scenic)
Oct.	5—The Squaw's Mistaken Love (Dr.)
Oct.	6—Flirts (Dr. Com.)
Oct.	6—Fishing in the Ceran Islands, Oceania (Scenic)
Oct.	7—For Massa's Sake (Dr.)
Oct.	9—The Little Animal Trainer (Dr.)
Oct.	9—Bttty's Boat (Com.)
Oct.	9—Marvelous Transformations
Oct.	10—Pathe's Weekly (No. 41)
Oct.	11—One on the Masher (Com.)
Oct.	11—Scenes on the U. S. S. Connecticut
Oct.	12—Romance of the Desert (Dr.)
Oct.	13—Raffles Caught (Dr.)
Oct.	13—Guerrero Troup
Oct.	14—Marooned (Dr.)
Oct.	16—The Gambler's Dream (Dr.)
Oct.	17—Pathe's Weekly No. 42
Oct.	18—The Ranch Girl's Terrible Mistake (Dr.)
Oct.	19—The Renegade Brother (Dr.)
Oct.	20—A Trip Down the Magdapis River (Scenic)
Oct.	20—Eva Moves In (Com.)
Oct.	20—Up the Flue (Com.)
Oct.	21—A Puritan Courtship (Dr.)
Oct.	23—The Traitor (Dr.)
Oct.	23—Nomadic Tribes in El Kantara Gorges (Algeria) (Sc.)
Oct.	24—Pathe's Weekly No. 43
Oct.	25—Revolution in a Bachelor's Club (Com.)
Oct.	26—In Frontier Days (Dr.)
Oct.	26—The Island of St. Kilda, Scotland (Sc.)
Oct.	27—Mother is Strong on Hypnotism (Com.)
Oct.	27—Funeral in Annam (Sc.)
Oct.	27—Logging and Milling in Sweden (Sc.)
Oct.	28—Saved by the Flag (Dr.)

SELIG

Sept.	25—Two Orphans	1075
Sept.	26—Two Orphans—Part II	986
Sept.	28—Two Orphans—Part III	1090
Sept.	29—John Oakhurst—Gambler (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—A Summer Adventure (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	3—The Rival Stage Lines (Com.)	1000
Oct.	5—Maud Muller (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The Artist's Sons (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—An Indian Vestal (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	10—Told in Colorado (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Out-generaled (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—Making a Six-Ton Cheese (Edu.)	425
Oct.	13—Seeing Washington (Sc.)	575
Oct.	16—Making a Man of Him (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	17—On Separate Paths (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—The Run on the Bank (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—His Better Self (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	23—Coals of Fire (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	24—Why the Sheriff is a Bachelor (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	26—Lost in the Jungle	1070
Oct.	27—A Painter's Idyl	1000

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

July	5—Ancient and Modern London	530
July	5—Boys Will Be Boys (Com.)	470
July	12—The Free Lance (Dr.)	640
July	12—Temples of India	365
July	19—The Tie That Binds (Dr.)	760
July	19—A Round-Up In Chili	240
July	26—An Amateur Skater	440
July	26—Satan on a Rampage	660
Aug.	2—The Struggle for Life	650
Aug.	2—On the Coast of Bengal	326
Aug.	9—The Heiress	705
Aug.	9—Lyons, the Second City of France	295
Aug.	16—For the Honor of the Name (Dr.)	790
Aug.	16—Moss-Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight	245
Aug.	23—Condemned for Treason (Dr.)	845
Aug.	23—Wool Industry of Hungary	135
Aug.	30—A King for an Hour (Com.)	572
Aug.	30—Sights of Berlin	423
Sept.	6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)	675
Sept.	6—Lake Thun in Switzerland (Scenic)	325
Sept.	13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)	665
Sept.	13—Norwich and Vicinity, England (Travel)	330
Sept.	20—In Ancient Days (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.)	458
Sept.	27—Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)	542
Oct.	4—A Jealous Wife (Com.)	338
Oct.	4—The Grand Chartreuse (Trav.)	292
Oct.	4—Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Com.)	348
Oct.	11—Pardoned by the Governor (Dr.)	646
Oct.	11—Making Cheddar Cheese (Ind.)	342
Oct.	18—Ordered to Move On (Dr.)	605
Oct.	18—Madeira, Portugal (Travel)	385
Oct.	25—A Woman's Slave (Dr.)	950
Nov.	1—Trapped (Dr.)	975
Nov.	8—An Eye for an Eye (His. Dr.)	1000

VITAGRAPH

Sept.	1—The Thumb Print (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	2—The Prince and the Pumps (Com.)	1000
Sept.	4—Jealousy (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	4—A Friendly Marriage (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	6—The Willow Tree (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	8—Cherry Blossoms (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	9—Jimmie's Job (Com.)	1000
Sept.	12—Her Crowning Glory (Com.)	1000
Sept.	13—Beyond the Law	1000
Sept.	15—Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.)	1000
Sept.	16—By Woman's Wit (Com.)	1000
Sept.	18—One Flag at Last (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Sept.	19—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.)	1000
Sept.	20—Beyond the Law (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	22—Forgotten (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.)
Sept.	23—The Tired, Absent-Minded Man (Com.)	1000
Sept.	25—By the Camp Fire's Flicker	1000
Sept.	26—His Sister's Children	1000
Sept.	27—A Western Heroine	1000
Sept.	29—The Ninety and Nine	1000
Sept.	30—Her Hero	1000
Oct.	2—Our Navy	1000
Oct.	3—The Wager (Com.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Mate of the John M. (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Carr's Regeneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Ups and Downs (Com.)	1000
Oct.	9—Daddy's Boy and Mammy	1000
Oct.	10—The Missing Will	1000
Oct.	11—The Indian Flute	1000
Oct.	13—Answer of the Roses	1000
Oct.	14—By Way of Mrs. Browning	1000
Oct.	16—The Fighting Schoolmaster	1000
Oct.	17—Vitagraph Monthly	1000
Oct.	18—Selecting His Heiress (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—The Cabin Boy (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	21—Lady Godiva (His. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	23—The Foolishness of Jealousy	1000
Oct.	24—Wig Wag	1000
Oct.	25—Aunt Huldah, the Matchmaker	1000
Oct.	27—Kitty and the Cowboys	1000
Oct.	28—Regeneration	1000
Oct.	30—Captain Barnacle, Diplomat	1000
Oct.	31—Madge of the Mountains	1000

Solax

WEDNESDAY—COMEDY

"PERCY AND HIS SQUAW"

COWBOY—INDIAN COMEDY

RELEASED OCTOBER 25th

We Call Your Especial Attention to this Comedy.

"FOLLOWING COUSIN'S FOOTSTEPS"

COMEDY

RELEASED NOVEMBER 1st

A Rube comes to New York to visit his cousin and proceeds to get gay along Broadway.
A very funny picture.

Scene from "Following Cousin's Footsteps"

FRIDAY—MILITARY AND DRAMA

"FOR BIG BROTHER'S SAKE"

DRAMA

RELEASED OCTOBER 27th

This is a Very Pretty Dramatic Story With a Fine Moral.

"A HEROINE OF THE REVOLUTION"

MILITARY

RELEASED NOVEMBER 3rd

Big Revolutionary War picture. A wonderful picture. Beautifully staged, costumed and acted.

Scene from "A Heroine of the Revolution"

4 - VERY EXCELLENT PICTURES - 4

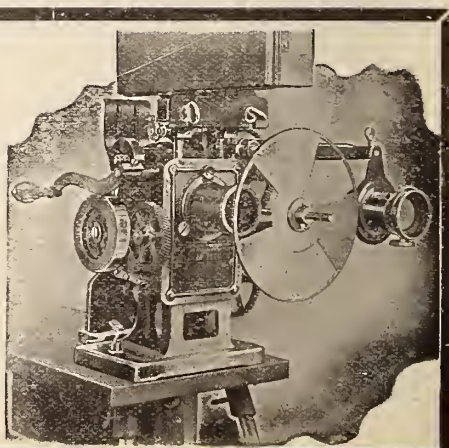
Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED
Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

The Exhibitor's Secret of Success and Happiness

USE POWER'S No. 6 CAMERAGRAPH



The moving picture exhibitor can find no better insurance of big receipts at the box office and freedom from worry than the use of POWERS' NO. 6 CAMERAGRAPH in his operating room. Most of the exhibitors have found this out. That's why orders are coming in to us at the rate of over one hundred machines per week. Don't you think you had better put in a POWER'S NO. 6 and become a member of the NO WORRY CLUB?

Why not take the matter up at once with your exchange, or with us direct, and get your order in in time to avoid any disappointment in delivery?

At any rate send for catalog D and our special Proposition.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For fourteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

"A REMARKABLE PHENOMENON"

READ CAREFULLY, the WORDS in above DRAWING, then GAZE INTENTLY at the SMALL DOT in the CENTER of the LAST SQUARE and the TITLE of OUR

FIRST RELEASE

will be

VISIBLE

St. Louis Motion Picture Company

Write for Descriptive Literature

Factory and Studio

25th and Montgomery Streets, St. Louis, Mo.

ANNOUNCING THE FIRST OF A GREAT SERIES OF DETECTIVE STORIES, PRODUCED AS ONLY THE "IMP" CAN PRODUCE THEM. THE TITLE OF THIS FIRST STORY IS

"KING, THE DETECTIVE"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

Introducing the scientific methods of the modern detective; and weaving in a love story to maintain the heart interest. The story of the thumb prints will enthrall every "picture fan." Make arrangements for an early booking. You'll want the whole series! The first story will be released Thursday, Nov. 2. Succeeding stories to be announced later.

"HIS DRESS SHIRT"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A dainty and short little comedy of the sort that has made the Imp famous all over the world. On the same reel you will get

"STEEPLE-JACK LINDHOLM"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A genuine thriller, showing some of the most dare-devilish feats ever performed in mid-air by America's champion steeple-jack. Released Monday, Oct. 30th.

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

NOV 4 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No 43

October 28
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS COPYRIGHT DIV.

PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from

THE HIGHER THE FEWER

THANHOUSER Release of November 14th

Coming! Coming!

3 Imps a week

and better quality than ever!

WATCH! LISTEN! WAIT!

BY all means get your name and address on our mailing list. Matters of vital importance are to be announced in our mailing matter from week to week. Here are our next two releases:—

"Waiting at the Church"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

A comedy every bit as good as our famous "Fruit and Flowers." Don't you dare to miss it. Released Monday, November 6th. A 1,000-foot scream.

"The Wife's Awakening"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

One of the most intensely gripping dramas we have ever produced. Read the synopsis sure! Released Thursday, November 9th. Go after it hard!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America.
102 W. 101st St., New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.

Don't forget to get on our mailing list!
Send us suggestions on how to improve Imps.

IMP A. B. C. BOOKS now only Two Cents each and going fast. Rush your order.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

THE FIRST MAJESTIC

RELEASE WILL BE

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 26th

REGULAR SUNDAY RELEASES THEREAFTER

MR. OWEN MOORE

MISS MARY PICKFORD

"The Courting of Mary"

Mischievous Mary and woman-hating Owen, scions of neighboring estates, are brought together in married bliss by the wiles of ever industrious Cupid.

Mary's Uncle, although seemingly severe, has a tenderness for a spinster of interesting, although an uncertain, age. The spinster will not accept Uncle until "that child" is safely married off first. This highly commendable result is finally attained through a chain of ludicrous and entertaining adventures.

The Majestic Motion Picture Co.

TOM D. COCHRANE, General Manager. 145 W. 45th St., NEW YORK CITY

PLACE YOUR ORDER WITH THE MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

"Touchin' on and Appertainin' to—"

THE HIGHER THE FEWER

An Elopement by Aeroplane. RELEASED TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 14th.

A prize fighter carries away in an aeroplane an unwilling sweetheart, because the higher you go the fewer are the rivals. Have you ever had something which was really good and yet which you were loath to praise because you were afraid some one would question the truth of your enthusiastic opinion?

That is exactly how we feel about "THE HIGHER THE FEWER." It is a comedy of the Willie Collier type. Refined, clean and full of novel and delicate comedy situations.

The Missing Heir

RELEASED TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7th.

A dumbwaiter is the silent vehicle used by a wide-awake newsgirl and a good-natured janitor with which to ride the Missing Heir, a child of the streets, into his fortune and thus frustrate the plans of an avaricious Italian and a calculating relation.

The waif is an heir to a fortune, bequeathed to him by a repentant grandfather, who at the time of his death was ignorant of his grandchild's whereabouts. The waif is the offspring of a disinherited son.

The Last of the Mohicans

From the Novel by James Fenimore Cooper.

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10th.

This Cooper novel has been declared "the greatest Indian story ever written." It is a story of Indian cunning, daring, devotion, revengefulness and superstition. It is the most vivid portrayal ever attempted of the "classical" Indian in his own environments in the year 1757.

The story revolves about two young women who, in an attempt to reach their father stationed at a fort in the wilderness, are waylaid by a treacherous guide.

The unreeling of the story is punctuated with vistas of scenic beauty and convincing acting.

FREE Descriptive DAVID COPPERFIELD POSTERS and free sample copies of DAVID COPPERFIELD four-page Illustrated Herald

THANHOUSER COMPANY NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK - - - - - - - -	LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK - - - - - - - -	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP - - - - - - - -	LIRE 5,750,000

THE FIRST SHIPMENT OF GENUINE WAR FILMS TAKEN AT TRIPOLI EXPECTED IN A FEW DAYS. EXHIBITORS GET NEXT TO THIS—IT MEANS MONEY TO YOU. EXCHANGES SEND FOR PARTICULARS.

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK

© Cl.B249003

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Agent and Correspondent for advertisements in Great Britain
B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W., London

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy.
844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV October 28, 1911 Number 43

PECULIAR TACTICS

WE have once or twice before given an expose of some of the tactics adopted by the General Film Company. Here is the latest: Mr. Rice, of Milwaukee, opened a new theater on Saturday, October 14th, and took his rental service from the General Film Company and was supplied by one of the prominent exchanges. The film was shipped and everything went right, but in the middle of the second reel a Mr. Bomb, assistant to the Film Company, goes to the manager, Mr. Schermaly, and asks him what interest Mr. Freuler, of Milwaukee, has in that theater. Mr. Schermaly replies, "None whatever. He has no interest in this house." "Sure he has," replies Mr. Bomb, "and you cannot put one over me like that." He immediately goes to the operating booth and before the operator could finish running the second reel, he orders him to stop, take it out, and taking the three or four reels which were ready for the other part of the exhibition goes into an automobile and hands it over immediately, stating that Freuler was not smooth enough to slip one over them. This, in a house full of people with five hundred outside. The manager hardly knew what to do, so he rings up Mr. Freuler, who calls up another exhibitor and arranges for four reels of Independent subjects to be taken to the house which was there in twenty minutes, but the mischief had already been done. The audience were dissatisfied and demanded their money back, which was given to them and the film from the Trust was taken away. In addition to that they took some film belonging to Mr. Rice, which he bought and paid for, such as a runner of title film giving the words of "Ladies, please remove your hats," "Intermission of ten minutes," etc. Are not these beautiful tactics, are they not honest, are they not to be commended, beautiful magnanimous General Film Company? But here is the fun of the whole thing. Are they conceited enough to think that Mr. Freuler would run their film in one of his houses? Are they conceited enough to think that Mr. Freuler is going to damage his reputation by running licensed film when the Independent proves much more popular in every way, is a better money-getter and Milwaukee is strongly and firmly Independent. Hence such tactics fail in their purpose and only act as a boomerang returning to the one who throws it.

THE WAIL OF THE OPERATOR

In our last week's issue, on page 21, we gave an article with the above caption, and so that we might be better posted as to conditions we want to call the attention of the city authorities to booths which are a disgrace to the city. The article is rather over than under the mark. The law is not being complied with by any means in the instances we know of, and if we were operating the machine in the conditions that we were invited to see, whether we lost our job or not, we would ring up the Department and ask them to send an inspector right away to see if such conditions, worse than slavery, should be allowed to exist. Fancy an operator being almost chained in a booth 6 feet by 4 feet 6 by 4 feet, and another 5 feet 6 by 4 feet 6 by 4, to be in these places and grind from 12 o'clock until 11 at night is a little too hard on any man's constitution.

It is not our province to publish the names of the five or six booths that we examined, but unless conditions are altered quickly we will bring it before the attention of the Mayor. In the meantime any other operators working under such conditions, if they will send to us the names and addresses and the dimensions of the booths of the shows they are working in, we will see that the conditions are made at least bearable for them to work in.

CANADA AND THE AMERICAN FLAG

By Margaret I. MacDonald

I WAS surprised and not a little ashamed of the attitude of my country with regard to the use of the American flag in moving pictures. Patriotism is a very good thing; in fact, but for the predominance of the patriotic spirit the great achievements of nations might never have been accomplished.

What does patriotism mean, may I ask? I request permission to make answer to my own query. Patriotism means love of country and loyalty to its welfare. The welfare of a nation demands good citizenship. Good citizenship is born of good environment, and an environment filled with petty prejudices is as a poison to true patriotism and model citizenship. Prejudice is a hindrance to mental growth, and so long as a nation allows individuals of limited mental expansion to occupy positions of the nation's trust, to be loud voiced in matters pertaining to the nation's welfare, just that much longer will that nation be in attaining the broad, healthy mental sphere which shall place it among the great nations of the earth.

To bar from the country moving pictures in which appear the Stars and Stripes, seems not only to Americans, but to Americanized Canadians as well, to be a thing worthy only of ridicule; and I am indeed sorry that my fellow countrymen have placed themselves in such a ridiculous position. To the casual observer the action savors of the petty jealousy of a country maiden for her city cousin, or vice versa. On the part of Canada it is surely adding insult to injury as regards her sister country, both in connection with the turning down of the Reciprocity bill and the trivial matter of the American flag in the moving picture.

Says the Independent on the matter of the flag, "The Over-Seas Club of Toronto has held a mass meeting demanding expurgation of the American flag from all the films. The managers yielded and have notified the American film manufacturers to substitute the Union Jack for the Stars and Stripes in all pictures henceforth, though they are not sure the Yankee manufacturers will consent to do this in the plays of the Spanish-American and Civil wars. Now it seems to us that this will lead to a lot of trouble. To have Colonel Roosevelt charging up San Juan Hill and Dewey bombarding Manila under the Union Jack is certainly misleading. If these films are preserved in a museum they may some day be brought forward in support of British claims to Cuba and the Philippines by right of visible conquest. In the case of the Civil War the confusion would be no less, for the British flag would be on the other side, if on either, since Great Britain supported the rebels with men and money, ships and shouting. And think how it would look in Revolutionary scenes. We should see —after the dramatic manner of moving pictures—Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown hauling down the British flag with his own hands and then General Washington hoisting in its place its twin brother."

Canada as regards her resources of trade and commerce is a great and beautiful country. Where is there another that can outshine her in mineral, vegetable, forest or fruit wealth? Is it not a pity that anything but a broad spirit of universal love—a love that has room for more than just the immediate family and friends of the nation—should be allowed to permeate the atmosphere of her skies?

MRS. MARY LAWTON METCALFE GIVES THE MOVING PICTURE FIRST PLACE AS AN EDUCATOR

By Margaret I. MacDonald

A FEW days ago I was privileged to meet one of the most energetic and progressive women that it has ever been my pleasure to meet. Mrs. Mary Lawton Metcalfe is a female phenomenon of brain and magnetism—the magnetism that follows in the wake of a higher intelligence—the natural essential of a power that makes itself felt. Some one has said of her, "She is the reincarnation of the brain of a man in the body of a woman," and maybe it is so. However it may be, or to whatever source it is due, Mrs. Metcalfe has already had a marvelously eventful and useful career. She has accomplished what it would take many others, at the rate at which some of us go, a half dozen lifetimes to accomplish.

Mrs. Mary Lawton Metcalfe is a Southern woman by birth, born in South Carolina. Her people came to this country in 1690. The grandfather of Mrs. Metcalfe was the Hon. Winton Lawton, "Owner of a Hundred Pines and six hundred slaves." She was the organizer and former state secretary of the King's Daughters in South Carolina. Mrs. Metcalfe has been widely associated with educational movements of all kinds, and was manager of the Department of Education of the Richmond County Agricultural Society, and was the originator of the first educational tent. Here at the recent Agricultural Fair on Staten Island she arranged for a tent where were all kinds of exhibits in connection with things educational—work from different schools, etc. She was the originator of the school garden. As Mrs. Metcalfe says, speaking of the school garden, "It creates in the children not only the love of caring for the plants, but it inspires a love of ownership. The child says, "This is my garden," and therefore at that moment there takes root in the mind of the child the desire for ownership—the desire to own something more—and consequently the seeds of good citizenship are sown, later on to produce the fruit of usefulness nourished in the proper environment."

Of the moving picture, Mrs. Metcalfe has said, "The moving picture has appeared upon the threshold of the Temple of Knowledge to distribute its teaching to the world." Further she continued, "The world's great necessity is the distribution of knowledge. The eye receives impressions long before the portals of the ear are unlocked for understanding and instruction. The picture in the camera of the mind sets in action the brain of the thinker. Therefore in the mind of the child is its hunger for food. Moving pictures reproducing life suggest such ideas as to create healthy impressions in the child mind. Reading alone cannot satisfy the demands of the mind thirsting for knowledge. It is more cruel to teach reading and then keep back pure books to satisfy ideas than it is to leave the child in ignorance. Therefore, moving pictures and stereopticon talks are the most valuable and progressive education through every step of the child's life from the beginning of its consciousness to receive impressions and to digest the same. Therefore the introducers of public and village libraries must be attracted to establish and supply apparatus for this work of eye teaching, if they desire to create thinking individuals in future citizenship."

MRS. MARY LAWTON METCALFE

Mrs. Metcalfe continues further to say, "Citizenship begins in the individual before either a knowledge of language or customs is arrived at, because of the impressions received through the eye, of what goes on around them. As the foreigner walks along the street he may not know a single word that he hears spoken, yet his eyes, drinking in the sights around him, establish a knowledge in his mind without the aid of a single word."

As she chats away with one, Mrs. Metcalfe is constantly dropping words of truth and encouragement that are an inspiration to the weary sojourner.

"Stagnation is death," says Mrs. Metcalfe. "And at the same time you may use up a great deal of energy doing something for which you have no call, before you at last succeed in finding your rightful place in this world. In me there is no ego—I recognize no ego—I am simply a manifestation of the infinite force in nature. My only heaven is the satisfaction I get out of being understood.

"Environment means everything to children," continued Mrs. Metcalfe. "In the mind is a camera which photographs the pictures of life which present themselves, and the influence surrounding the individual—the picture creates an idea, and the idea creates a thought. The picture necessarily determines the nature of the thought, and the nature of the thought influences the action of the individual. Do away with reformatories for boys: supply them with environment of the right kind and give them something to keep them busy. As Luther Burbank created a white raspberry out of a black one, so is it possible for the blackest soul to be made white, as was the raspberry. If you delve deep enough into the slime and grime enveloping the criminal of the slums, you will find beneath the folds of vice and crime the smile of God."

Mrs. Metcalfe is most enthusiastic in her praise of the educational value of the moving picture, and has gone so far as to write a lecture on "The Moving Picture to the Good." Says Mrs. Metcalfe at another time, "The picture creates an idea, and the idea creates a thought. The picture necessarily determines the nature of the thought, and the nature of the thought influences the action of the individual. And above all things the moving picture—the picture with a good, wholesome theme—the picture that is a true representation of what it is intended to represent—is a valuable aid in the establishment of good citizenship. My daughters attend a private school on Staten Island, where the lessons are illustrated by stereopticon views, and they are obliged to take the pointer, and as they relate the lesson, point to the different objects in the picture relative to the lesson. Oh, what I would have given if such a thing had been possible when I was a girl going to school."

Mrs. Metcalfe belongs to the National Press. She was the "Dorothy Dix" of the Staten Island World for several years, and wrote under the name of "Electral Sparks." As the name would imply, she is interested in psychology, and is interesting herself most enthusiastically in the psychology of the moving picture. Mrs. Metcalfe has written a book which is now in the publisher's hands, entitled "New Light on Old Thoughts." She has made herself so loved in her own state, in connection with the King's Daughters, and also with The Daughters of the Revolution, that when she last returned to South Carolina she went there as the guest of the state. At the semi-annual meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs of New York City, held on Friday, October 27th at the Hotel Astor, and which includes a membership of some fifty thousand women, Mrs. Metcalfe was the guest of honor, when she laid before the club her views on some important subjects.

Mrs. Mary Lawton Metcalfe is undoubtedly a wonderful woman—an inspiration to all who meet her. "Electral Sparks" is indeed a fitting name, for her presence at once inspires with a desire to do. You leave her filled with an enthusiasm and a new light in your soul. Said she, "I am a Daughter of the Revolution, but just change the R into an E and you have 'A Daughter of Evolution,' which I really am."

Surely knowledge is a folded book which unfolds as we grow, and Mrs. Metcalfe says, "Truth means the universe in harmony."

It is expected that in the near future Mrs. Metcalfe will be heard in a lecture on "The Psychology of the Moving Picture," also as a contributor of interesting articles in the columns of The Moving Picture News.

SOLAX SCOOP OF ATLANTIC SQUADRON MOBILIZATION

We congratulate the Solax Company on being commissioned by the Sales Company to produce for them and for the Independent ranks, the special feature film of the mobilization of the Atlantic Squadron on the Hudson River, New York. It is well known that this is to be the largest assemblage of warships of one country ever gathered together in any waters of the world. The mobilization will show 102 fighting vessels comprising 39 battleships, 2 armored cruisers, 22 destroyers, 16 torpedo boats, 8 marines, 4 gunboats with oil tanks, miscellaneous fighting war craft with tenders, tugs, and all the adjuncts necessary to a fleet of war vessels, when either on defensive or offensive tactics engaged (which we trust they may never be engaged in).

We understand the Solax Company have permits on several of the war vessels, and every facility that they may require to make this an unique feature film will be at their disposal. We feel sure that in the hands of the Solax Company the Independents will receive the finest pictures it is possible to produce by the aid of cinematography, and especially as they have the exclusive rights from the Sales Company. It should be a record runner.

Official Call of the Ohio State Moving Picture Exhibitors' League

Dear Sir:

Every member of the Ohio State League is notified that the annual meeting for the purpose of electing officers and transacting other business will be held at Columbus, Ohio, November, 1911.

It is the duty of every member of the League to be at Columbus. I urge upon all members to be there. The League is growing and the great amount of good we have accomplished should influence every exhibitor to put forth his best effort to get every worthy exhibitor in the State to join our League.

Matters of keen importance will come before the meeting to be decided, matters of vital interest to exhibitors. Money spent in attending this meeting is like bread cast upon the water. We are now a strong, thorough organization, in a position to promote the best interest of every exhibitor in Ohio.

We would ask every exhibitor in Ohio to attend this meeting; if they are not members now they can join the League when they arrive at Columbus. Brother Exhibitor, remember you have a duty to perform if you would protect your own interests. That duty is to co-operate with your brother exhibitor, that all may receive a fair and square deal.

M. A. NEFF, President,
Exhibitors' League of Ohio.

Sheridan, Wyo.—The Pastime theatre, owned by Waisner & Kerby, was sold to James Brown.

Shelburn, Ind.—S. K. Baird and Harry Banister have sold the Sambo House to Harvey Arbaugh, of Terre Haute.

Detroit, Mich.—L. R. Grosslight is considering the erection of a theatre on the site of the building owned by him at 9-11 Cadillac Square.

Worthington, Ind.—Charles Risely has sold the Palace Theatre to Walter Kunz.

MOVING PICTURE POSSIBILITIES AND REALITIES

By M. A. Neff
President, Moving Picture League of America

THE wonderful progress that is being made by the moving picture, the average citizen does not realize. Of the educational features, the industrial, commercial, political, historical and religious possibilities of the moving picture, the average citizen has only a faint realization, for instance, the moving picture has advanced surgery many years and has made it possible for students of surgery to see clearly and quickly comprehend the most difficult operations performed.

All are warned of the disease germs carried by insects and distributed by them one to another; the pictures bring vividly to the mind of every citizen the destruction of the germs of disease carried by insects. Therefore, they are educated to the facts of the dread disease that we are often called upon to battle with by reason of our ignorance heretofore until the moving picture came and educated along these lines.

M. A. NEFF

The moving picture has already been used in moulding political sentiment; what the result will be in the future with sixteen or twenty thousand moving picture theaters, time only can tell. We can draw on our imaginations only.

History that it takes volumes to tell, and months to read, can be fully comprehended in only a few hours and longer retained in the mind by watching and studying the moving picture. The primitive ways of living of the most ignorant and superstitious will be shown to the highest civilization. The highest civilization with all of its inventive genius and the wonderful progress of the world will be shown to every nation and people.

The moving picture is really the great civilizer of the age. The pictures and names of every important ruler and person will be made familiar to the whole world, and by the moving picture the Czar of Russia in a short time will be known in the most remote part of every country, and the President of the United States will be known everywhere. His picture is now as well known by many in India, China, and Africa as it is in the United States.

Thirty-two picture shows in China have done more to bring about the higher standard of civilization and inspire patriotism in the hearts of the Chinese than all the lecturers and books that have been shipped into China in the last hundred years.

The foreign element coming into our country that heretofore knew nothing of the struggle for independence and the history of these United States, quickly absorbs it. He sits quietly in a moving picture theater and looks upon a patriotic picture and sees Paul Revere as he makes his famous ride, notifying the settlers of their danger, Washington and his soldiers crossing the Delaware at night, the rain pouring down on them; the surrender of the British; Lincoln delivering his speech at Gettysburg, which will live in the hearts of every American as long as the human heart throbs; General Grant and General Lee, as they clasp hands and the great Civil War is closed.

Patriotic pictures tell of the suffering and hardships that it takes to bring about a republican government, that he might enjoy freedom. These pictures tell him a story that he could not have read; they impress upon his mind things he otherwise would never have known; they inspire a greater love in his heart for his adopted country, and he becomes a better citizen than he otherwise would be. Things that books could never tell him he has learned in a few nights at the picture theater.

It will not be long until the pictures will bring to the churches history and tidings that will arouse and fill the churches, and many that are now condemning the pictures will be lecturing with them.

The National League is growing very fast. The spirit of organization is manifested by the large number of inquiries received. It is only a matter of a few days until every state in the Union will be represented in the Moving Picture League of America.

As our business interests increase the necessity for a strong National organization is more manifest. To every exhibitor we urge the necessity of local and state organization.

Thousands of dollars are being invested in the moving picture business, and hundreds of people are daily becoming financially interested in this, the greatest business of the century.

To any one desiring information, it will be freely given.

M. A. NEFF, President,
1003 Mercantile Library Bldg.,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

IMPORTANT GAUMONT LETTER

New York City, October 26, 1911.

Moving Picture News,
30 West 13th Street,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Saunders:—In passing through New York, I take the opportunity to inform you, in case the news should interest your readers, that we have made arrangements to terminate the contract between Mr. George Kleine, of Chicago, and ourselves, for the importation of our ordinary moving picture films, and that after the 1st of January, 1912, films of our make will be independent and the Gaumont Co., of Flushing, New York, will have charge of our interests.

Yours very truly,
SOCIETE des ETABLISSEMENTS GAUMONT.
L'Administrateur Directeur.
L. GAUMONT.

HOW MOVING PICTURE MAKES THEATERGOERS

Robert Grau, the Famous Old-time Impresario, Shows How Millions of People Have Been Started Towards the High-Class Playhouse by the Cinematograph—Fortunes Made in a Short While

By Robert Grau

ALTHOUGH it has been the custom of late to blame the moving picture for any lack of public interest in high-grade attractions, it can be truthfully said that millions of new theatergoers have been created in the last few years by the cinematograph. The moving picture has implanted the theatergoing impulse to thousands by arousing in them a desire to see the fresh plays and players portrayed on the screen. Ten thousand biograph theaters varying in seating capacity from 200 to 5,000 each have been erected in this country in the last decade. A large portion of these are conducted by men who have refused to invest their capital in theatrical ventures. It is true that some of these have since reverted to theatrical usage, but the reason for this the reader will see later.

But this is offset by the astounding fact that thirty-three and one-third per cent of the American playhouses have had their problems finally solved by the advent of the camera man. Fifty millions of dollars are now invested by a score of big operators in this line of endeavor, and among this number are a few men who have risen meteorically within a very few years and by reason of their ambitions and because they have raised the level of their entertainments have become, not only millionaires, but central figures in the amusement world.

Less than five years ago a middle-aged man was conducting a penny arcade in Harlem. He began to observe that the craze for moving pictures was interfering with his patronage so he shifted to the newer field. That man was the Marcus Loew of to-day. In five years he has made a fortune of not less than five millions. He has fifteen theaters in greater New York alone, and he owns a number of these. Moreover he is building a theater at the corner of Thirty-first street and Sixth avenue which is to cost two million dollars, and it will be inaugurated this fall with Mr. Loew's favorite policy of "pop" vaudeville which means an entertainment divided between motion pictures and a "minor" grade of vaudeville.

The term minor may well be qualified here, for recently in a five-cent theater Amelia Bingham and the Four Mortons were on the program. No seat in the house was held above 10 cents, and this is a status recorded in the infancy of an amazingly successful policy in playhouses quite as large and beautiful as those in which the public is asked to pay $2 a seat.

The advent of such men as Marcus Loew has made difficult the conduct of the higher grade of vaudeville theaters. Managers of these, who have for years accumulated vast fortunes, are now face to face with the first serious problem which has yet confronted them. This is so true that it is quite likely that New York will see far fewer of these theaters in the next year than have been in operation up to now.

On East Fourteenth street just three years ago a wholly unknown showman, William Fox, was intrepid enough to lease the Dewey Theater, paying an annual rental of $50,000. He had prospered in Brooklyn and he adopted a 5 and 10 cent scale of prices. It is a fact that his profits exceeded $1,000 a week, in that one house, despite the tremendous rental. Then Mr. Fox took a half dozen more theaters and he made gold mines of them all. Now he has ten places in greater New York. Mr. Fox leased the Academy of Music at a rental of $100,000 a year; his plan was to prevent any one from operating it as a moving picture house in opposition to the Dewey.

He owns a part interest in the new City Theater, and when that failed in the high-class drama, Mr. Fox—in self-defense, no doubt—took the house and began to operate it with a higher grade of vaudeville at popular prices, yet much higher than at the Dewey, next door. The public stayed away; Mr. Fox was in a quandary, but he argued that he had struck a bonanza every time he charged low prices, and made his first failure with an attempt to raise them. So he conducted the handsome City Theater on the very same policy which was so successful at the Dewey, and what do you suppose did happen? The City Theater had its problem solved by taking in the overflow from the Dewey. Both houses are packed day and night, and there are those who predict that Mr. Fox will yet turn the Academy of Music over to the camera man. This would mean that the great "stomach" of New York City (which a decade ago contained five legitimate theaters), as Fourteenth street has often been called, has eight moving picture places including the historic house at the corner of Fourteenth street and Sixth avenue where for forty years every manager had met disaster, until a few years ago in desperation, the present lessee saved himself from bankruptcy by adopting the same policy now so profitable at the Union Square Theater on the same street. To-day the profits are about $1,000 a week.

ICE

Isn't always what it's cracked up to be. So it doesn't cut any with us that there are so many new manufacturers entering the field. Suffice it to say that REX remains

THE STANDARD

We recommend that the three exchanges not yet buying REX glimpse our next release,

"THE TALE of a CAT"

"The Blind Child's Companion"

which happens REXDAY, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2nd.

It's one of those strong, simple stories that tug at something somewhere deep down in you. A dumb animal is often the agent of Providence. Kindness shown any of Earth's creatures often results in happiness for ourselves. And running

"THE TALE OF A CAT"

is told by
——you guessed it——

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 ELEVENTH AVENUE,
NEW YORK CITY

Sales Co. says it has heard many tales, but this one by Rex is the head and tail of all good film.

Among the playhouses which have reverted to moving pictures in New York City in the last three years are: The Harlem Opera House, Proctor's 125th Street, Fifty-eighth Street, and Twenty-third Street Theaters, the Union Square, the Lincoln Square, the Circle, the Savoy, the Dewey, the Gotham, the Family, the Star, the City, the Fourteenth Street, the Manhattan (now the site of the Gimbel stores, but since rebuilt at Thirty-first street and Broadway), and the Majestic.

A number of places where high-grade vaudeville prevailed are now operated with "pop" vaudeville at prices ranging from 5 to 25 cents. Among these are the American, the Plaza and until this week, the New York. Thus it will be seen that the moving picture is now the compelling feature of more than one-half of New York's theaters. While in addition there are over five hundred smaller theaters in which cinematography is either the sole attraction or else one or two minor vaudeville acts are added.

But if the situation in New York is an extraordinary one, what may be said of conditions outside of the metropolis?

In Philadelphia five years ago there were seven of what are called "neighborhood" theaters. These are establishments equal to the best, but which were used to present popular plays at prices a shade lower than the highest grade houses. All of them now are either moving picture theaters or devoted to "pop" vaudeville. In those five years two hundred new theaters have sprung up, some of them of surpassing beauty, and all now are prosperous. There are a half dozen new houses in the Quaker City with an average seating capacity of 2,500, and not one of these cost less than $200,000 to erect. They are packed to the doors from noon to midnight, and the greatest theatrical firms in that city are protecting themselves from losses that threaten to their high-grade establishments by investing their personal fortunes in the gold-laden field whereof I write.

In the cities known as "one night stands" conditions simply beggar description. There are fifty towns between New York and Boston where five years ago the one theater in each was open perhaps one or two nights a week. Now these theaters are closed to the legitimate stage, and are conducted by the very same local managers as moving picture resorts, and it is a fact that all are tremendously profitable. Not a single one of these cities has a stage to offer to a company of real actors. This has resulted in an increase in patronage for the playhouses in the larger cities, where now the playgoers from the smaller sections must go to see worthy stage performances.

In one city of 30,000 population, not twenty-five miles from New York, three years ago it was not possible to find an audience for anything theatrical at all. The one opera house there had bankrupted every manager intrepid enough to tempt fate with it. Keith & Proctor in their quest for new worlds to conquer came to this town three years ago. They leased the opera house, put up an electric sign, installed a picture machine, charged five and ten cents admission, and invited the public to enter. It is a poor week now when one-half the population of the town is not found there at least once a week. The theater seats 1,700, but one has to be at the box office by 6.30 p.m. to gain admittance, while it is a common sight to see from 1,000 to 1,500 persons standing in the lobbies or on the sidewalk awaiting an opportunity to see the "second show."

But the extraordinary part of all this is yet to be told.

Notwithstanding the results at this opera house, and that another exclusively moving picture house plays to 1,500 persons a day, the craze for moving pictures has brought about a community of theatergoers. In this self-same town, where it was impossible to draw a paying house for even one night, there now is a company of "stock" players appearing in a remodelled theater but two blocks away from the picture house. Here a play is given an entire week; the prices range from twenty-five to seventy-five cents, and yet the house is packed, while on Saturdays it is impossible to obtain standing room.

One can only believe that the "theater habit" has been formed in this little town through the motion picture craze, and that the immense crowds come to desire more solid theatrical food. At any rate, it is a unique condition, and one that may well cause a complete change of the theatrical map.

If the motion picture has really created ten million new theatergoers, and if the many thousands of new theaters erected in the last few years are gradually to become "stock" houses, and a renaissance of the drama is in sight, who shall say that cinematography has come in vain? Already the spectacle of stranded actors is a thing of the past, as the demand for players by the film companies is too great, and these have the most complete stock organizations and the country's best stage directors in charge of them.

A well-known impresario in the foyer of the Metropolitan Opera House the other evening informed the writer that the phonograph had helped to solve the grand opera problem, and that the galleries are now filled by thousands of music lovers whose incentive for being present came from hearing the vocal

YANKEE

VARIETY AND QUALITY

MONDAY

NOVEMBER 6

COWARD'S REGENERATION

A semi-military picture of intensely dramatic situations.

Code Coward

FRIDAY

NOVEMBER 10

HE DIDN'T LIKE THE TUNE

A roaring comedy of a wife's sweet vengeance.

Code Tune.

YANKEE FILM CO.
344 EAST 32d ST. N. Y. CITY

W. E. GREENE
FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

MR. EXHIBITOR:

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write—wire—or call To-Day at

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford.

records of the world's greatest singers, such as Caruso, Bonci, Sembrich, Melba and Tetrazzini in their own homes, and even in penny arcades.

The roster of such film manufacturers as the Biograph, the Vitagraph and the Edison companies now contain quite as well-known players as will be found on the stages or our best theaters. Moreover, the custom of not advertising the picture player is going out of practice, and the day is not far off when the stars of cinematography will be featured the same as they are in legitimate and vaudeville theaters.—The Globe & Commercial Advertiser.

THE SHAMROCK OF ST. LOUIS

The extensively heralded and anxiously awaited "Premier," of the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, will be announced in our issue of November 4th.

The anxiety which existed in the minds of the projectors of the Shamrock Company has gradually been allayed by the excellent showing, and highly praised quality of their product. It is within the bounds of reason to venture the statement that no organization in the history of cinematography has excited the comment and conjecture occasioned by the formation of this company.

In the beginning, some of the knowing (?) ones elevated their eyebrows, smiled audibly and remarked:

"It will never materialize."

But it has.

Not only is it a living, breathing fact, but a sturdy and healthy enterprise, which is destined to lend additional strength to the already robust proportions of the Independent ranks.

At first it was a difficult task to even obtain a hearing when the name "Shamrock" was mentioned, but as affairs progressed, and their wares were shown, the doubters and skeptics were gradually weaned from their obstinate unbelief, and by ocular demonstration became converts.

Ten stories widely divergent in theme, which run the entire gamut, from broad farce to tense and gripping drama, the photography of which has been pronounced faultless by a number of unbiased experts in the realms of motion pictures, are now complete and ready for the markets. Visitors to the plant of the St. Louis company have been quite numerous during the past fortnight, and the willing, courteous treatment they have received from President Goebel and Manager of Production Hamilton has been most convincing that their efforts are in the right direction, and that success cannot fail to be their reward.

CARL GREENBAUM OF VITASCOPE

The name of Carl Greenbaum is familiar to the majority of our readers as being the representative of the original Vitascope machine of Berlin. Mr. Greenbaum has been out of the country for some little time looking after the interests of his firm in Berlin, and we understand he is now on the way to New York on the Kaiser Wilhelm II, and that he is bringing with him one of the greatest films staged by the Monopoly Film Company. The length of these films are two and three reel subjects, and on his arrival in New York we will have something further to say about his prospects for the future.

AMUSEMENT MANAGERS

Learn of our AERIAL ATTRACTIONS, TOY RUBBER GAS BALLOONS, ELECTRIC SPARKLERS and Parade Torches. Illustration shows our COMET BALLOON in action. TWO complete large outfits $1. Write to-day and learn to-morrow of our many unique but effective AERIAL ADV. STUNTS that will arouse public interest and gather the crowds and shekels.

BRAZEL NOV. CO.,
Northside, Cincinnati, O.

THE AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO. CHICAGO

THAT DEMAND FOR COMEDY

Is Universal. But—IT'S THE BIG, BROAD COMEDY OF THE WEST they want—Not the Slap-stick, tiresome "Hot-house Humor" of the East—AMERICAN FILMS SUPPLY THAT DEMAND. Every scene a Western Scene, pictured in El Cajon Valley, Southern California, Garden Spot of the World! AMERICAN FILMS will increase your attendance. Bring a better class of patrons—Irresistibly appeal to any and all classes—and—There's TWO CORKING GOOD FILMS—"THE EASTERN COWBOY" and "THE WAY OF THE WEST"—dated for November 13th and November 16th, respectively, that you shouldn't even think of missing!

"THE EASTERN COWBOY"
Release date, Nov. 13th.

"THE EASTERN COWBOY"

A Rollicking, Rip-roaring, "one-long-laugh" picture of the efforts of two Western girls to capture a good-looking Easterner out West on a heart-curing mission that failed! They didn't land him but—another did—and—but that's telling, and we wouldn't spoil the joy of seeing that film for anything. It's a Humdinger from Funnyville!

"THE WAY OF THE WEST"

You know they have a way out West of getting what they want. Well, two old men wanted to marry off their kiddies—and they did—but not just as they planned. Anyhow—but what's the use. For genuine, side splitting, clean-cut Western humor it's in a class by itself. Order it while the ordering is good. You won't regret it.

"THE WAY OF THE WEST"
Release date, Nov. 16th.

AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY, "Producers of Flying A Cowboy films"
Bank Floor—Ashland Block, Chicago, Illinois.
Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE CINEMATOGRAPH

The Artistic Film (Continued)

By L. W. D.

THE producer who is anxious to produce a really "artistic" film would do well to borrow a few of the painters' principal laws of light, shade and composition. "The great object of composition," said Ruskin, "is always to insure unity; that is to make out of many things one whole—the first mode in which this can be effected is by determining that one feature shall be more important than all the rest; and that the others shall group with it in subordinate positions."

Lines, like colors, affect one another by their juxtaposition and combination. The camera man will notice in most pleasing landscapes a balance of lines which are opposed in direction, so that if on one side of the picture, for example, a mass of trees of foliage slope downwards from left to right, be in almost certain of finding a corresponding mass sloping downwards from right to left; and so on with rhythmical interlacing of line. Moreover, sets of line will often appear to radiate from a common center, whether from effects of retreating parallel forms which converge to a common point in perspective, or from the influence of a common origin, such as is often visible in the branches of a well-formed tree. In addition to correct composition an artistic film must have contrast, which is the most effective when spread unobtrusively throughout the subject; it should combine the principle of repetition with that of opposition; harmoniously blending portions of light with masses of shadow and vice versa, and thus exemplifying another rule of composition, viz.: interchange. Furthermore, the light should be so arranged as to show a distinct variation of tone perceivable throughout the picture. Remember a mass of light is only seen as such by contrasting with something dark, thus a dark picture will have its gloominess accentuated by the introduction of a beam or spot of light. Great care should be taken to insure consistent treatment. We have seen many an otherwise excellent "scenic" film spoiled for want of attention to this rule. Should one portion of the composition present an appearance of strong action, whilst another is in calm repose, the whole picture will be thrown, as it were, out of tune, and will lack harmonious feeling. There should again be unity—the "object" of the film should be evident at a glance; it should therefore contain a dominant note, having the less important details kept in strict subordination. Too many accentuated points will distract the attention from the main object, and the "motive" will be lost. Moreover, unless several subordinate figures are included in a composition for the purpose of supporting the principal object, it should never occupy the center of the picture, which is at variance with the laws of correct pictorial composition. In scenic and travel films the line representing the horizon should never be equidistant between the top and bottom of the picture, but either above or below the center. Following upon these principles the camera man should be enabled to produce a really pleasing and artistic film.

THE SUPERIORITY OF THE AMERICAN FILM—A PROMINENT ENGLISH PRODUCER INTERVIEWED

THE increase in the number of cinematograph theaters in London has been so rapid of late that the time is ripe to take them in hand for serious criticism. There are fresh ones opening every week; each one more palatial than the last. There is a preponderance of the American film, and let us consider in this article the reason for its popularity. We cannot do better than give our attention to the views of a prominent English producer, Mr. A. J. Ellis, of the Warwick Trading Co. When discussing the subject recently, he said: "The percentage of foreign films is about 97½. A full explanation would make a long story. But chiefly the reason is that we are such fools in England! The picture theater managements are not to be blamed. Most of the important films are American and French, and they receive preference because they are mechanically much better than ours. The pictures are taken more skilfully and more carefully. Consequently, they are presented more clearly to the spectators. A flickering film tries the eyes. The foreign films are much steadier and the figures are larger than ours."

AMERICAN FILMS RECORD FACIAL EXPRESSION

"Why is that? Partly because the Americans and French, when they are photographing a picture drama, place the instrument close up to the actors, so as to get the facial expression and gestures intimately revealed; and they get the incident so plainly that you can't fail to follow the play coherently. Again, the foreigners rehearse more often than we do before taking the film. I have just produced a play called "Ave Maria" on the American principle. We rehearsed and rehearsed again. We placed the machine close up; then with a synchronising invention we took acting, singing and dialogue together; and the result is a picture with "effects," that no foreigner can beat.

A QUESTION OF CAPITAL

"Why are there so many Western American films? Because boys like them. They have an inbred love of Wild West adventures, and these cannot be done realistically in England. Then we must remember, also, that the American climate is more favorable to picture making than the English. For example, when I was in New York taking films of the performance of a well-known American actress, one day, the temperature was below zero. We took the photographs on a roof in the open air. And the cold was so intense that we only threw the actress' furs off her when she had to step within the range of the lens. She would go on and do her turn. And when she stepped out of the scene we had to rush at her and pile furs on her to save her from frost bite. On a bitter winter day such as that, photographing would have been impossible in London.

"We can do the acting and find the plays, but if I am to state briefly why we are behind, I should say that capital has been supplied liberally for the building and equipment of the cinematograph theaters themselves, but insufficient has been put into the film business. So if the public want more British films, we must have more capital."

A NEW EXPERIENCE FOR THE EXHIBITORS

Our customers have found one Exchange that tells the truth.

It's easy with twenty-four reels a week to give what we promise.

Let us supply you with film service and quit worrying over broken promises.

Agents for Motiograph and Powers machines—Full line of parts.

WRITE—WRITE NOW
HON. SIR VIS

ANTI-TRUST FILM COMPANY
128 WEST LAKE ST., CHICAGO

Branch Office
Grand Rapids, Mich.

Branch Office
Minneapolis, Minn.

TREATING OF THE ENTERPRISE OF REV. GEORGE J. BECKER, THE PLUCKY YOUNG PASTOR OF MONTCLAIR, N. J.

THE religion of to-day is a religion of education. It is not, among intelligent, thinking people, so much a pounding in of rules and precepts as it is a sympathetic teaching of the doctrine of Christ applied in a practical way to the modes of modern living.

The up-to-date pastor of to-day is the man who realizes that, as the whole universe is in motion, so is the mind of man. The course of evolution keeps sternly on its way, and the religion of to-day must be just as much in keeping with the life of modern humanity as was the old religion with the lives of the people who lived before the days of steam cars, conveniences of electricity, moving pictures and such things.

An interesting interview was obtained during the week with the enterprising young pastor of Montclair, N. J., Rev. George J. Becker. Mr. Becker is the pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, Montclair, and is a young man of advanced views and sincere interest in the welfare of the human race. Notwithstanding the fact that moving pictures had been previous to this time barred from Montclair, Mr. Becker, for very sensible reasons apart from the educational value of the moving picture, introduced them into his church on Sunday evening last, in connection with his sermon. The church was packed to the doors; so much so that the Sunday school room had to be thrown open to accommodate the crowds.

Said Mr. Becker in answer to a query: "Montclair is suffering, as are many other small cities, from little local prides. It is a wealthy town where plenty of amusement is provided for the richer members of the community, and none whatever for the poorer members. My aim has been to offset this condition to a great degree by introducing moving pictures into my church, and providing cheap musical entertainment as well.

"Montclair," continued Mr. Becker, "is very ambitious and progressive in a way: they are going to build a music hall which is to cost $50,000, and also the erecting of an art museum is in view, at a cost of $100,000." We understand from Mr. Becker that pictures will be shown in his church one night a week during the winter. He was not able to say whether or not he would be allowed to use moving pictures in the church on Sunday, as the matter is up before the board of trustees of the church, for approval.

"I have experienced no trouble with regard to showing them," said Mr. Becker, "but have of course been subjected to a great deal of criticism. I have discussed the matter with a number of prominent New York clergymen, and not one of them found any fault with me for the move I had taken; on the contrary, they approved it—all of them were in favor of the use of the moving pictures. Also the other churches in Montclair heartily sympathize with this work and they will help us carry it on."

It is Mr. Becker's belief that no church should exist unless it is some specific good to the community. That the ground occupied for church purposes being exempt from taxation on the ground of its service to humanity, should give its equivalent or more in service to the people. It is his desire that Grace Church shall render the highest service possible.

The pictures used by Mr. Becker on week nights will be of various kinds, comprising religious, community welfare, educational, and clean comedy subjects. Some trouble was experienced by Mr. Becker in obtaining pictures desired for the Sunday evening entertainment and an appeal has been made by him to the editor of the Moving Picture News to aid him in the selection of films for the different occasions on which the church may see fit to use them.

THE LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS OF CHICAGO

Below we reproduce a sample of the letters which Mr. Lavezzi is receiving from his satisfied customers:

Lavezzi Machine Works,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs—I received your improved star, cam and intermittent sprocket all O. K. and installed same in Powers' No. 5 machine, and would be willing to stake $10.00 that I am projecting the steadiest picture and have the quietest running Powers machine in this city

Yours respectfully,
Morton E Bundy,
441 Rembroke St., Bridgeport, Conn.

Mr. Lavezzi advertises that he will send 100 pointers on repairing, free with each order for his movement, which is installed for twelve dollars.

TOLEDO OPERATORS FORM LOCAL UNION TO AFFILIATE WITH C. L. U.

The Toledo Motion Picture Operators' Union was formally organized at a meeting held on October 17th.

Carl Kock was elected president; Belmont Homes, vice-president; A. M. Vignall, recording secretary, and Edward Boze, sergeant-at-arms. L. B. Duncan was selected as temporary financial secretary.

The new union was formed last Friday, and includes a membership of more than half the motion picture operators in the city. W. S. Croft, of Kansas City Local No. 170, I. A. T. S. E., assisted the local operators in organizing and launching the project, and Tony Leon, Jr., of the T. M. A., acted as secretary.

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 o'clock last night, with L. B. Duncan acting as temporary chairman. The election of officers did not take place until midnight.

William Cameron, business agent of I. A. T. S. E. Local 24, representative of the International Alliance, and representative of the Central Labor Union, with which the local is to be affiliated, obligated the newly elected officers. He also gave a short talk, outlining the work ahead of the newly organized union men, and assuring them of the support of the other labor organizations in the city.

The Toledo Motion Picture Operators' Protective Union is under a charter from the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, affiliated with the A. F. of L. The new charter is expected within a few days.

With the organization of the motion picture operators, every branch of the theatrical business is organized in Toledo.

Permanent offices of the new union have been established in Moose Hall.

Cleveland, Ohio.—The Gordon Square Realty Co. will erect a new theatre at Detroit avenue and West Sixty-fifth street.

Butte City, Mont.—The Montana Amusement Co. will build a $50,000 theatre on West Park street.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Atlas Amusement Co. will erect an addition to their theatre at Third and North avenue, to cost $3,000.

Owing to the disbanding of the MELIES COMPANY, at Los Angeles,

WILLIAM PALEY

the father of American cinematograph camera men, is out of a position and wants another.

Who needs him? He can put some of the younger men to blush in the work he has turned out in his fifteen years' experience. Write him, OCCIDENTAL HOTEL, LOS ANGELES.

DINNER IN HONOR OF MR. NICHOLAS POWER

The directors of the Nicholas Power Company celebrated the fifty-seventh birthday of Mr. Nicholas Power on Saturday, the 21st inst., by a dinner and a theatre party in his honor.

The dinner was given at Martin's restaurant and those present were Mr. Power, Mr. Edward Earl, Mr. John Munroe, Mr. J. C. Bell and Mr. Baxter Morton.

During the course of the dinner Mr. Power was the recipient of numerous congratulatory telegrams from old friends and persons prominent in public affairs and in the moving picture trade. He also received a number of souvenirs of the occasion, among which were a box of fifty-seven Havanas especially made up to suit Mr. Power's taste in smokes, and a large basket containing samples of all of Heinz's "fifty-seven varieties." After dinner the party adjourned to the New Amsterdam Theatre under the chaperonage of Mr. Edward Earl, who acted as master of ceremonies for the evening, and personally saw to it that each member of the party reached home in good repair and in time for Sunday breakfast.

MR. NICHOLAS POWER

Formal speechmaking was not indulged in, but anecdotes were the order of the evening and all present contributed their quota. The only regret expressed was that no opportunity would ever be presented for again celebrating Mr. Power's fifty-seventh birthday.

Bankruptcy Matters

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Simplex Home Motion Picture Company, of 46 West 24th street. The business was started in January last and was incorporated on May 12th, with capital stock of $500,000, and a factory was equipped at 511 West 42d street. Liabilities are said to be $30 000 and assets $15 000. (We have received the above with the request that we state if this is Simplex Co. of 14th street. It is not! The above is a poor, small machine for home. Simplex is professional.—Ed. M. P. N.)

MOVING PICTURES AND PAPER-BAG COOKING

By Rose Small Hill

Fail to see the connection, do you? Well, read what follows.

Some busy housewives I met told me they wished they could go to a show more often, and when I smiled and said: "Why you have a theatre within a stone's throw; you could go every day if you wished to," one (she seemed to be the spokeswoman) replied as she glared at me: "Yes, precious lot you know about it. By the time the dinner dishes are washed and a half-dozen nasty, greasy pots scraped and scrubbed you'd be tired, too."

"Hm!" I supposed she was right, but—a brilliant idea struck me. "Why don't you go in the afternoon?" I said, "then you have no dishes to wash."

"Oh yes, you are right," she retorted sarcastically. "I really have no dishes to wash, just a soup to cook and some vegetables and a roast, that takes from two or three hours to get done, and sometimes a pudding or pie. Yes, I could go if I wanted to."

I felt "squelched," and I must have looked uncomfortable, for she added more gently: "I do go when I have steak or chops for supper, but John likes roast meat best, so I don't have the others often."

The day before yesterday I met this same little group of women coming out of a moving picture theatre. Immediately I thought of all the steaks that would be eaten by discontented husbands that night, and hurried on. One of them spied me and greeted me.

"Had a pleasant time?" I called to her.

"Splendid," she answered. "We are all going again tomorrow. They have something special."

"Poor John," I thought. Aloud I said: "I'll not delay you."

"Oh, we're not late," said the spokeswoman of the meeting of the other day.

"Let's tell her all about it," she said, turning to her companions.

"You see, Mrs. J. went to the food show, and they exhibited some wonderful paper bags that you can cook in. A lady cooked a chicken in one right at the show. Mrs. J. bought some of the bags and told us all about them. Now, whenever we want to go to a show, we just use the paper bags instead of pots, and then we get dinner ready in time."

"But," I interrupted, "steak doesn't take long in a pan either."

"But we don't have steak, we have ——. 'Oh, don't you know it takes half the time for things to get done in these bags."

"Oh," I ejaculated in my turn.

Then, as I started home: "Hurrah for paper bags and moving picture shows!". Five pairs of eyes smiled an answer.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Paul Biel will build a $3.000 addition to the theatre at 2604 North Broadway.

Akron, Ohio.—The Pastime Theatre, at South Main street, will be remodeled at a cost of $500.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.
Best advertising medium in North Europe.
Subscription 6 shillings.
Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

SEND YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS TO THE

COMET

FOR ADVANCE INFORMATION

COMET FILM CO. 344 E. 32nd St., New York

CHAMPION'S FORT RILEY MANOEUVRES

THREE DISTINCT FEATURES

RELEASED
OCT. 9th, '11
OCT. 30th, '11
NOV. 20th, '11

"The Fort Riley Manoeuvres'

are the best films for photography, interest and action." So writes Will Hunt, of Elkhart, Ind., and so will every other exhibitor commend Champs who books them.

FIRST, SEE A CHAMP—THEN NAB IT

"Folks of Old Virginia"

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR MONDAY, NOVEMBER 6th, 1911

Deeds of Southern chivalry shine forth, as the penetrating rays of a searchlight, through the fitful period of Civil War Strife, and in this picture they are sublimely brought before you.

THIS PICTURE SHOULD SURELY BE BOOKED BY YOU

"The Moonshiner's Trail"

CHAMPION RELEASE FOR WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8th, 1911

A Drama of the Southwest, built about the Moonshiner's defiance of and capture by the Law's officials, during the progress of which Love darts his shafts.

CAPTURE THIS REEL AND INSURE PROGRESS HENCEFORTH

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro' Motion Picture Distributing And Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,
12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

SALES COMPANY

The following films have been released during the week of October 30th by the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company:

Monday, October 30th

The Stronger Man.....American
Field Day Sports at Fort Riley, Kan.....Champion
His Dress Shirt.....Imp
Few Minutes with Steeplejack Linhorn.....Imp
The Van Osten Jewel.....Yankee
A Father's Heart.....Eclair

Tuesday, October 31st

The Cattlemen's War.....Bison
Downfall of Man.....Powers
Progressive Book Agent.....Powers
The Loves of David Copperfield.....Thanhouser

Wednesday, November 1st

The Cowboys' Pies.....Champion
Big Noise Hank.....Nestor
Mixup in Suitcases.....Reliance
Following Cousin's Footsteps.....Solax
Judas.....Ambrosio

Thursday, November 2d

The Water War.....American
King, the Detective.....Imp
Tale of a Cat.....Rex

Friday, November 3d

Daisy Farm.....Yankee
A Young Squaw's Bravery.....Bison
Their Burglar.....Thanhouser
A Heroine of the Revolution.....Solax
Bill and the Bear.....Lux
Tommy's Camera.....Lux

Saturday, November 4th

Pride of the West.....Powers
Mutt and Jeff and the Lady Stenographer.....Nestor
Suitcase Mystery.....Nestor
The Greater Love.....Reliance
The Actor as a Soldier.....Great Northern Foolshead's Holidays.....Itala

MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC

Everything comes to him who waits and works and looks. So many of us sit through really fine subjects and interesting scenes at the various playhouses, and those of us who have any musical sensibilities are shocked by a thoughtless pianist playing ragtime music whilst a wife is parting with her husband, who is going to prison for twenty years, or something like this. We really owe Mr. Gregg A. Frelinger a debt of gratitude for his excellent selections contained in this book, some 150 different styles of musical compositions, all well known and suitable for most any kind of situation or scene.

I wish there was a law compelling all pianists to use this book in an appropriate way—"Motion Picture Piano Music," published by Gregg A. Frelinger, of Lafayette, Ind., at one dollar per copy, is a valuable book for all moving picture pianists and is well worth their consideration. E. R. S.

Donizetti had to be arrested for imbibing too much and the mayor, at his home, would have to tell him that he could not gain his freedom until he would write another opera. "Lucia" was composed and scored for orchestra in nine days. Query: If it took imbibing and nine days in jail to produce such a wonderful sextette as the one in "Lucia" (the best ever written), how long would it take with the present composers locked up, to produce a real melody once more. The life of some of the immortal composers would make wonderful moving pictures.

Donizetti was a prolific writer and a fine man. His friends (?) made him drunk, however. E. R. S.

Majestic Going Ahead

We learn that the Majestic Company are sending their two stock companies out to California, for the purpose of taking pictures under sunny skies and good photographic conditions, that they may keep up the excellence of the work which they have started, and which our readers will be able to judge of the quality on November 26th. We learn that they are staying over in Chicago to do some very special work which at present is secret, but of which we will give full information in an early issue, so it is our duty to say "Adieu, Majestic, may success attend your efforts."

GET A REP

"OUR REP"

THREE MASTERPIECES

COSTING OVER $6,000.00

DANIEL BOONE

BEFORE YORKTOWN

IN THE DAYS OF THE SIX NATIONS

A TWO REEL FEATURE EVERY SATURDAY

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE

WRITE FOR BOOKLET

REPUBLIC FILM CO., 145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK

"GET A REP"

GET A REP

"AT THE END OF THE WAR"
Scene from "Folks of Old Virginia"
Champion Release of November 6th

MIRROROIDE

ROLLABLE MOVING PICTURE CURTAINS AND SCREENS HAVE THE WORLD BEAT.

TESTS ALL OVER THE WORLD PROVE IT.

The Secret of an Exhibitor's Success, Insurance of Big Receipts and Increased Patronage is MIRROROIDE—Perfect Pictures, Without Haze, Glare or Eye Strain, Perfectly Detailed.

DARKNESS A MENACE TO LIFE—Install Our Mirroroide Screen or Curtain and

KEEP YOUR THEATRE Brightly Illuminated.

MIRROROIDE Will Save You 20 Per Cent of Your Juice Bill. We are the Only Firm Who Will send you Demonstration Samples.

We Show You. We Invite Any Tests in Comparison With Any Curtain or Screen Now Before the Public.

MIRROROIDE Is Sold By the Square Yard. 9 Square Feet to Every Square Yard. At a Cost of $2.50 Per Square Yard Up to Nov. 1st. After Nov. 1st $3.00 Per Square Yard.

MIRROROIDE Will Not Crack, Blister, Peel or Tarnish.

IT IS A MERCURY FOIL COATING That Will Last a Lifetime. Demonstration Samples 50 Cents, Ordinary 4 Cents, The Cost of Mailing. Circulars, Testimonials, Etc. Ask for Them. All Orders Shipped in 3 days.

BENJAMIN GENTER CO., Newburgh, N. Y.

A1 Pianist-Director

desires position with first-class picture or vaudeville house. Six years in the biz.

A. WALSTEIN 733 Canal St. New Orleans, La.

RETAIL

"MACKIE HAS IT"

EVERYTHING IN MOVING PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXCEPT THE FILM.

Special This Week—No. 6 ASBESTOS WIRE, per ft. 7c, per 100 ft. $5.75

A REQUEST WILL BRING OUR NEW PRICE LIST, JUST ISSUED.

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 851-853 Broadway, Corner 14th Street, NEW YORK CITY

WHOLESALE

Cinematography and Farming

Illustrating this short article are two cuts showing the value of dynamite to the farmers. They are taken from a film made by the Industrial Moving Picture Company, of Chico, of which Mr. Watterson R. Rothacker is the enterprising general manager. They illustrate stump and boulder blasting, tree felling, deep plowing to break up hardpan, tree planting, and ditching by means of dynamite. The one cut shows the action of lighting the fuse in sub-soil blasting and the other the blasting of hardpan. We understand these pictures have been and are to be exhibited at fairs and farmers' institutions throughout the country.

SUBSOIL BLASTING BY MEANS OF DYNAMITE; LIGHTING THE FUSE

BLASTING HARDPAN BY MEANS OF DYNAMITE

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—The Lightner Bros. have been awarded the contract for the erection of a new opera house at Conroy, to cost $10,000.

George Le Soir with the "Comet" Co.

Pursuant with the policy to produce nothing but the best, the Comet Film Company has engaged the services of George Le Soir as one of their directors. Mr. Le Soir is well fitted to hold this position, owing to his many years' experience in the theatrical business.

Mr. Le Soir studied art in London and Paris and pantomime under Cavallazzi. He was one time producer at the Palace Theater, London; was in charge of several stock companies in New Orleans New York and other cities; formed the first Commonwealth Stock Company in America, and also founded the first school of dramatic art in Canada.

GEORGE LE SOIR

Thanks is also due to Mr. Le Soir for having discovered Isadora Duncan, the famous dancer. For ten years he was stage director for Augustin Daly and later became director for Pathe Freres' American studio. Among his many successes with the Pathe Company may be mentioned "Society Girl and the Gypsy," "The Billy Series," "Up-to-date Squaw," "The Step Sister," "Dramatic Mirror," etc.

Mr. Le Soir will devote his entire time to productions of refined comedy and high-class drama.

UTILIZING OPPORTUNITIES

Opportunities for profitable advertising are constantly arising, if only the manager watches for them and then exploits his discoveries for his advantage.

This was illustrated not long ago by a manager in a town just outside New York who learned that a certain film was made in his town, or most of the scenes were set there. He immediately began advertising that film. The result far surpassed his expectations. His house was crowded afternoon and evening of the day the film was on view, and the audiences in each instance expressed themselves as pleased with the show.

It was only another example of the well-known fact, that people like best to see pictured that with which they are familiar. This manager was astute enough to realize it and his advertising brought good results. During the evening, for example, there was a line on the sidewalk, waiting for each show, so dense that the police were required to keep a line open through the waiting throng. And all because a picture was to be shown which had its outdoor scenes set in their home town.

It seems as though that here is a hint worth remembering. Maybe not all managers can obtain films with the scenes in their own community or even vicinity, but they can exploit what they do get. There are plenty of good subjects which have some connection with the news of the day, and in these there is ample opportunity to advertise as a special attraction.

There isn't a theater in existence whose patronage cannot be increased by proper advertising. One of the best ways of all is to use your home paper, if you have one, advertising by means of liners on the local page. These short liners are read by everyone and advertisements inserted in those columns will be seen and read when display would be overlooked. In a daily two or three lines every day will go a long way toward keeping your theater filled, and the expense is not great.

In weeklies the problem is more difficult, but the liner is still the best and while a small display can be carried containing general information, the place to advertise the specific features is in the local column, where everybody looks to see who has a two-headed calf, or whether the Widow Jones has got married yet, or not.

Get your theater before the people and keep it before them by judiciously advertising, arousing their curiosity and gratifying their desire for information. In this way you will accomplish much more than you would by carrying a considerable display without specifying what you intend to do.

The posters and other display matter which most managers have is good, but it needs to be supplemented with the more specific information which can be imparted through the columns of your local paper. Two two-line readers in the local columns will be seen by more people than the display advertisement, though the latter is by no means to be decried. Both are essential, but the reader is the better of the two.

Make them large, if you want. It won't do any harm, but these little fellows are helpful and accomplish much good work. Make the experiment and see your theater fill.

HAVE YOU SEEN MY BULL DOG

LUG?

IT'S A CORKER—WON'T BURN OFF

Condensers, Pure White, 40c. Each. Electro Carbons, Pink Label, 5/8 x 6, $1.85 per hundred.

BIO CARBONS—5/8 x 6—$1.75 PER HUNDRED

Send for my new Illustrated Catalog of machine parts and supplies.

N. Y. MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY HOUSE,
167 Sumner Ave., BROOKLYN, N. Y.

WILL SELL CHEAP ON ACCOUNT OF DEATH —a Missouri state right—Feature Film in good condition—write today.

B. FOX, Gen. Del., CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR SALE

		Each.
3	Continuous Printing Machines (includes Motor)	$150.00
9	W. B. H. Printing Machines	150.00
8	Prevost Printing Machines	150.00
2	Prevost Perforating Machines (Large)	150.00
1	Prevost Perforating Machine (Small)	100.00
2	Itala Perforating Machines	250.00
9	Carlton Perforating Machines	50.00
1	Itala Printing Machine	100.00
8	Motors, 1/8 h.p.	5.00

CARLTON LABORATORIES,
540 W. 21st ST., NEW YORK.

The Independent Film Service You Need

We can take on a few more customers who want MONEY DRAWING SUBJECTS. Are you satisfied to continue using uninspected, worn out films? Try our service for a week and WE WILL CONVINCE YOU. Our reels are sent out ready to run.

WE ARE HEADQUARTERS FOR MACHINES AND SUPPLIES.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY, 109 N. Dearborn Street, CHICAGO

BARGAINS $35 UP, BARGAINS.

Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Cineograph complete $65. Powers Cameragraph No. 5 only $110 as new. $225 Standard for $175. Model B Gas Outfit $25. Electric Lamps, Calcium Jets, Rheostats, etc. NEW Edison Model B, Powers No. 6 and Standard are Specialties.

Send for Sup. No. 33 Bargain List.

Motion Picture Machines Wanted.

HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

One of the Most Modern European Film Manufacturers

Specialty: { MONOPOLY FILMS
SENSATIONAL FILMS
FEATURE FILMS

Will arrive in America about November 15th. All persons interested, write "M. O. R.," Moving Picture News

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-Saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.

HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

NAVAL REVIEW

THE LARGEST AND MOST IMPORTANT NAVAL REVIEW EVER HELD IN THIS COUNTRY WILL TAKE PLACE IN NEW YORK HARBOR OCT. 31st TO NOV. 2nd—102 OF UNCLE SAM'S WAR VESSELS WILL BE IN LINE, MAKING THE MOST FORMIDABLE FLEET EVER SEEN IN AMERICAN WATERS.

We have been appointed by the Sales Co. to make the picture of this review—and we are going TO MAKE IT ESPECIALLY GOOD.

This reel will be released as a "Special" immediately after the Review, and we expect to have them ready for shipment about Nov. 3rd. TINTED AND TONED AND GUARANTEED MECHANICALLY PERFECT. VERY ATTRACTIVE POSTERS.

ORDER THROUGH SALES CO.—GET YOUR ORDER IN QUICKLY.

Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED

Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

A CORRESPONDENT'S VIEW OF AMERICAN FILMS

The rejection of reciprocity by Canada surprised no one born in the British Isles who is resident in the United States. Canadians share that distrust of American business men and their methods which prevails on your side of the Atlantic. The United States, as a country, has not yet "found itself." Unbounded prosperity for a period has led to the virtual exhaustion of its natural resources. "God's own country" is almost played out, whilst Canada's time is to come. Hence, the Canadians wisely refuse to throw in their lot with such a prodigal and untrustworthy partner.

Although at present largely a pastoral country, the future of the United States is bound up with manufacturing. In time, when she has acquired the rudiments of honorable business ideas, she will probably be the greatest manufacturing nation in the world. But that time is a long way off. The Americans have much to learn, and they are not good learners.

What has all this to do with the film business? A great deal. Years ago, when I began to interest myself, practically and with the pen, in the moving picture, I did my utmost to wake up my fellow countrymen to the importance of putting quality into their work. The stuff that was sent here was childish, as compared with the American-made picture. The British picture was poor in plot, badly acted, and unattractive in theme to this market, although the photography, as a rule, was good. The result was that the British picture was not well received here.

Excellent though the average American picture was, however, it still left room for improvement. Has that improvement yet taken place? Yes and no. In one or two instances, American-made pictures are better to-day than they were two years ago, but generally they have manifested a standstill quality. The American manufacturers don't care; they have no need to care; they have an assured sale for their productions, and there's an end on't.

What is more, many manufacturers, and their employees also, are mostly unreceptive of new ideas. Why should they trouble to use their brains and really work hard, when prosperity comes to them without being asked for? Why indeed? And the same question is of general application in this country, which has thriven so far on the enormous natural resources with which it has been blessed.

Meanwhile, what of the British-made film? From authoritative hearsay, and what is more, from actual observation, the quality of the British picture has advanced by leaps and bounds. I am not alone in this opinion. My congratulations, Messieurs, the British Manufacturers.

The regrettable feature of the situation is that greedy, jealous Americans won't let good British films come on this market. The National Company is trying to release some, but I fear I shall be an old man before it finds its way into reputable theatres.—Kinematograph Weekly, London, England.

Chicago, Ill.—A new moving picture theatre will be erected at 2611 Lincoln avenue for Fred Hartman, to cost $5,000.

Laramie, Wyo.—A new opera house is being considered for this town.

Butte, Mont.—The Montana Amusement Co. will erect a new theatre to cost $96,000, on Park street.

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

CITY CUSTOMERS ARE ALL SATISFIED

NOW READY TO CATER TO OUT-OF-TOWN BUSINESS

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

THE HIGHER THE FEWER
Up in the Air with Thanhouser

When the Thanhouser directors had in preparation "The Higher the Fewer," an aeroplane elopement, which is to be released Tuesday, November 14th, there was a question of either dropping the whole production or else getting a real aeroplane and an instructor to teach one of the Thanhouser players the science of aeronautics. Without realism it was decided that the force of the humor of this comedy would be considerably weakened.

The directors knew that if they wished to make effective the scene where the "Yorkshire Kid," a prize fighter, carries off the girl he loves in an aeroplane, from under the very nose of a rival, the picture had to show the kid and his sweetheart in actual flight.

Actors are people who usually can act, but it is, at this date, too much to expect that they should know the intricacies of a flying machine. The problem, therefore, was, how much would it cost to hire a real aeroplane and a man who could instruct a Thanhouser star?

After jockeying a bit, arrangements were finally consummated with Captain Thomas Baldwin and Augustus Post. They undertook to run a kindergarten for the benefit of the Thanhouser Company, and gave up the use of their machine. Of course, there were many interesting incidents and narrow escapes during the time of training. Chief among these incidents was the experience with a farmer on Long Island, who demanded a thousand dollars because a Thanhouser actor alighted on his property. A thousand dollars from an actor! One may just as well ask the moon for a Swiss cheese sandwich.

There are many comedy situations in "The Higher the Fewer" that would make William Collier envious. In his haste to evade his rival and get to a parson, the "Yorkshire Kid" goes up in the air with a Prince Albert and a silk hat.

This incongruity, coupled with the astonishment of the girl when she unexpectedly finds herself defying the laws of gravitation, produces the kind of comedy that is clean and at the same time infectious. The sight of the rival trying to follow the eloping couple by auto also presents an unusual scene.

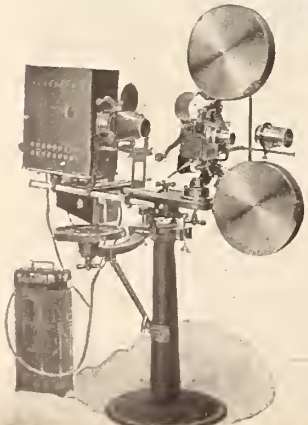
KINEMACOLOR PICTURES OF NATIONAL CASH REGISTER AT BUSINESS SHOW

The first Kinemacolor pictures taken in America shown in connection with the National Cash Register exhibit at the Business Show at Madison Square Garden constitute an interesting feature of the exhibit.

The manner in which the work of the National Cash Register Co. is conducted is indeed a credit not only to the immediate company but also to the nation, and as a subject for photography and for motion picture films to be distributed throughout the country none could be better. The manipulation of these works is more or less a solution of the labor and capital problem.

The National Cash Register Co. started out with one small building, in the most disreputable portion of Dayton, Ohio. To-day it comprises no less than sixteen buildings of thirty-six acres floor space, four-fifths of the wall space being glass. In "Slide town," as that portion of Dayton was named, many bad boys lived; they broke the company's windows with stones. The Cash Register Company, instead of arresting them, made beautiful gardens for them to work in which employed their time and fostered a desire to be of use. Soon these boys grew into suitable applicants for different positions in the factory, becoming proficient in their work and each growing into a useful unit of the community; sewing classes and cooking schools were also instituted, and general welfare settlement work began, and to-day "Slide town" has so far evoluted as to become worthy of a change of name—it now goes by the respectable name of "South Park." Classes for the purpose of teaching landscape gardening were started, and lectures given on the subject, illustrated by lantern slides. The result of this latter is that to-day that portion of Dayton shows back yards, and unsightly back fences converted into things of beauty. Classes of all kinds are arranged for the employees—salesman's classes, agent's classes, etc. Every accommodation, convenience and comfort is arranged for at the factories. All machinery of a dangerous nature is safely capped. A playground where all kinds of amusement and accommodation for modern sports is arranged for is provided. $90,000 is the weekly average payroll for the National Cash Register Company, and $15,000 daily.

The Kinemacolor pictures of this wonderfully conducted modern business plant are full of interest and are introduced by stereopticon views illustrating the evolution of machinery, from the very crudest beginning up to the sawing in two of the American continents and the instituting of the Panama Canal. The Kinemacolor pictures cover most thoroughly every detail in the manufacturing—the making of the different portions of the register, etc., and the wonderful photography in natural colors gives an added interest to the many interesting scenes.



1912 MODEL No. 1000-B WITH OPERATOR'S SEAT

The Final Word in M. P. Machines
Always in the Lead

1912 MODELS READY—SEND FOR ADVANCE SUPPLEMENT

OVER ONE HUNDRED SALES OF THE 1912 MODEL IN THREE WEEKS attest the fast growing demand for THE MOTIOGRAPH—Deliveries are being made in the fastest possible time consistent with THE HIGH QUALITY of THE MOTIOGRAPH.

The Motiograph is the last word in Motion Picture Machines and always wins out, in the best Theatres, after all other makes have failed—for instance—Keith's Bijou, Bijou Dream and National in Boston—Cameraphone in Pittsburgh and Cleveland—Starland, Ltd., Circuit in Canada and hundreds more for which we have no space.

ONCE A USER ALWAYS A USER.

NECESSITY IN M. P. MACHINE QUALITY IS THE MOTHER OF THE MOTIOGRAPH.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564 W. Randolph St., CHICAGO

For Sale by Reputable Dealers Everywhere.

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, OCTOBER 28th

THE VICISSITUDE OF FATE

Powerful dramatic feature production, showing how time proved an employer's hasty conclusion to be well founded.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 4th

THE ACTOR AS A SOLDIER

A real comic. One of the funniest pictures of the year, showing the ruses adopted by an actor to secure liberation from military service.

THROUGH THE SOUTH OF FRANCE

One of the finest travel subjects issued for some time.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

DOROTHY DAVENPORT WITH NESTOR

"Flickers," the interesting little paper published by the United Motion Picture Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., had this to say concerning Miss Dorothy Davenport's recent engagement with the Nestor Film Company:

David Horsley has been stirring things up lately. The general changes that are usually made in the fall in the moving picture business have taken place with the Nestor Film Co., and they have made an entire re-organization of their stock companies.

Dorothy Davenport, who has done such splendid work with the Reliance Company, now heads the dramatic company. Her work needs no recommendation, as it has won her thousands of friends among moving picture audiences throughout the world. She has played leading parts with the Reliance Company, and her splendid work has given charm to each and every picture in which she has appeared.

We are mighty glad to see Nestor engage such fine people, which only goes to show that they are sparing neither money nor pains to give the exhibitor the best pictures that can be produced. Mr. Horsley is certainly entitled to a great deal of credit for the manner in which he has worked to further the interests of the Independent movement, even when it was a losing proposition to himself, and we are glad to see him at last attaining the success that he so justly deserves. Mr. Horsley was the first of the present Independent film manufacturers. Personally, it does us good to see David coming to the front.

Nestor Notes

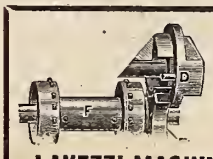
There are three distinct Nestor companies in the field, a Western, a Mutt and Jeff—Desperate Desmond and an Eastern, the latter producing only high-class comedies and light dramas. Of these three Nestor companies, the Western and Mutt and Jeff are now releasing; Desperate Desmond will make his debut on Saturday, November 11, and "His Vacation," a brilliant comedy, will mark the beginning of the Nestor Monday release by coming to the fore Monday, November 20.

This third Nestor release is due to that vast legion of enthusiastic exhibitors who are loudly clamoring for more Nestors. The "Three-Nestor-a-Week" announcement will be hailed with delight by all lovers of motion pictures.

Apropos, we had almost forgotten to say that on Saturday last David Horsley started on his cross-country trip, his destination being Los Angeles, Cal., or thereabouts, where he intends to permanently locate his Western company. For the winter months, all the three Nestor companies will operate there, and these are now en route for the West.

Alice Davenport, the well-known actress and sketch writer, has been engaged by the Nestor Film Co. to do character parts, and she and her daughter, Dorothy Davenport, leading lady with one of the Nestor companies, are now speeding in the direction of Lower California with fifty more Nestor players.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Atlas Theater Co. will erect a new moving picture theater at Twentieth street and Fond du Lac avenue, to cost $50,000—not $20,000, as we reported last week. Thirty thousand dollars make a big difference.



IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES

You can't put this movement out of order. Installed $12. Send head at once. 100 Pointers on repairing free with each order.

LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS, 2940 Herndon St., CHICAGO

THE EDUCATIONAL VALUE OF THE MOTION PICTURE ONCE AGAIN

THE educational value of the motion picture is growing every day that we live. And best of all, the world is beginning to recognize that fact. The press in different parts of the country are repeatedly referring to the question. In fact, the educational value of the moving picture is a thing so taken for granted, except with the ossified mind, that there is no room to question the fact.

The best of everything is now being given to the production of the moving picture, even the wonderful talent of the "divine Sara"—Sara Bernhardt has been lent to the aid of the cause, so we are told on good authority; the best actors and actresses of both Europe and America are demonstrating their willingness to pose for the pictures which are to play a large part in the enlightenment of not only the adults and children of today, but the more intelligent beings of future generations. According to the Literary Digest, "Sara Bernhardt, as if to add one more proof of her greatness, has taken even 'the second step down,' if you choose the expression, and appeared before the moving picture camera. She gave one of her greatest roles, Marguerite Gautier, in 'La Dame aux Camelias,' in a special adaptation for this purpose." The Cincinnati News says, "Vowing that she would ne'er consent, Mme. Sara Bernhardt has at last consented to present her art to the masses through the medium of moving pictures." And again, "Furthermore, it is a progressive step that will perpetuate dramatic art as it never has been or could be perpetuated before. To us the great stage names of the past are only names. To posterity Bernhardt will be almost as flesh and blood. They will know that she was a great actress, not simply because she is now acclaimed as such, but because their own eyes will tell them so."

"With the best players acting in pantomime, and thus staging the best of the drama for popular consumption, an awakened imaginative interest in the artistic side of the theater will be the result. People will come to depend less on the words of the play, to supply that which their imagination should afford them.

"Besides, when Bernhardt acts for the camera, her work will become immortal. What would we give today for graphophone and cinematograph records of the acting of Garrick or Peg Woffington? Only ghostly descriptions of them remain; when they left the stage all of them except mental impressions disappeared."

As we see all around us signs of such wonderful progressiveness, is it not good to be allowed to live? My only "kick" is that I may not live to see the ultimate outcome of the preparations in which we all are participating, for the education of the thrice lucky individuals of the future. To-day the moving picture manufacturers are bending their best efforts toward the improvement of the moving picture as an educator. It may not be realized by the majority of people, but at the present time what is good for the child mind is the thing that is uppermost in the minds of many of the manufacturers. That the child is father of of the people is something that is sinking itself deep into the minds of the more intelligent portion of humanity. Says the Dallas, Tex., News, in connection with the child and the moving picture, "It will at once be conceded that they should have the best that can be produced; that they should be instructive—and they are either for good or evil. Even the painted picture can scarcely have for the child the influence possessed by the moving picture, for while the one is still and lifeless, he sees depicted in the other the actual movements of living human beings, and thus he knows that whatever the action depicted, it was actually enacted in real life, even if the scene was a 'make-believe.'"

The above quotation brings to mind a fact which should never be lost sight of, and that is the care that should be taken in the selection of themes for moving pictures—what may seem a moral lesson to some may prove an incentive to criminal action to another. Especially does the child believe what it sees in the picture. The happiness in a picture is much more real to a child than a story read to it out of a book. What the child sees in the moving picture is, to it, absolute truth—the moving picture to the children in its truthfulness is infallible. Manufacturers, do not lose sight of this fact; and especially in the picture intended to be used for educational purposes, be very exact as to detail, historical or otherwise.

THE VALUE OF CINEMATOGRAPHY

WHEN we have the full value of the work of cinematography many of the old ideas will be exploded and the people will get the truth, especially such as regards the food supply of the nation. When we received the following information from Brussels, Belgium, we thanked our lucky stars that we had nothing to do with the slaughtering of life for food. In other words, we were rather more than pleased that our practice of vegetarianism did not necessitate the nauseating effects of the information. It certainly is a step in the right direction when the camera is put to such good use:

GERMS SHOWN IN MOVING PICTURES

Butchers Get Object Lessons Which May Improve the Quality of Meat

Cattle dealers and others are greatly interested in reports from Berlin that in that city the cinematograph has been made use of, and quite successfully, too, in the discovery of microbes in meat. It is expected that similar experiments will be made in other large cities on the Continent.

The cinematograph continues to advance in public favor as much for its practical use as for the amusement it provides. In Germany they are making it serve a very practical purpose, for the inspectors of slaughter houses have called it in to aid them in detecting bad meat.

In the past this has been done with the microscope, involving much delay. There have been many disputes with cattle dealers and meat purveyors who insisted that the inspectors' judgment was often wrong and always unreliable.

In Berlin, it is reported now, the cinematograph has been set to work, the meat photographed, the films rapidly developed and then the pictures enormously enlarged and the results, with often horrifying revelations in the form of microbes, set before the eyes of the slaughtermen, butchers and cattle dealers. They could not well deny what they saw with their own eyes.

So satisfactory has been the result in Berlin, where time is saved, as well as much friction, that other German town authorities intend adopting the same plan.

After reading the above we hope more of our readers will join the ranks of food reformers and let the cinematograph teach them a lesson that they may appreciate and profit by. When other branches of food supply are taken up a great advance will be made for the enforcement of the pure food laws, and in time we feel sure the Government will use this form of education to instruct their health officers in the duty of the selection of the fittest for mankind's consumption.

Minneapolis, Min.—F. J. Lake will erect a new moving picture theatre at 1305 West Lake street, to cost $2,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Edward Kezick is preparing plans for a new theatre to be erected at Green Bay avenue and Ring street.

THE FILMING OF FICTION

Predilection of Manufacturers to Produce Well-known Stories Regardless of their Fitness for Picture Production

By H. A. C. Kryter

MANUFACTURERS of moving pictures are facing a dilemma and the cloud that is hovering over studios is somewhat larger than the proverbial man's hand. There is a famine in the way of suitable scenarios—subjects to film. The more enterprising producers are clamoring for something new—and there is nothing original. The field has been scraped bare, so to speak, and directors are at their wits' end for plots that have a semblance of something new. A find is welcomed with open arms and out of the thousands of manuscripts submitted very few acceptable ideas are culled. The hopes of these thousands of authors receive jolts that they are not prepared to withstand. The writer who is successful is immune from rebuff but the novice weakens when his story is returned and he concludes that the hand of every scenario editor is against him and that he is the victim of a foul and premeditated conspiracy to blanket his talent and deny him the privilege of making a livelihood in the way of selling his ideas to the moving picture concerns.

It is a fact that the person who can write acceptable scripts is the most sought after of any writer at present, and few of them have "arrived." Owing to this fact concerns have sought to film well-known stories by the best authors, hoping that the fame of the writer or the excellence of the story, which is a familiar one, may account for any shortcomings in the film. A number of stories written by the best known of the novelists have been dramatized and the result has not always been satisfactory for the reason that few written hits are suited to the picture story. To attempt to faithfully follow the story plot means failure in almost every instance, and to garble the version robs it of its original value as a story, and the changing of the plot to conform to the mechanics of the picture is sure to be detected to the detriment of the film version and booklovers are disappointed.

As an instance in point I will refer to the film "Foul Play" recently released by a trust concern. This story was written by Charles Reade, many years ago, and is a familiar tale. It is done in three reels and has been lauded by the way of the press agent route as the ne plus ultra of the picture. The production suffers in many respects for the reason that the story cannot be told convincingly on film. Stripped of the master hand of Reade, it stands out cold and unsatisfactory in the pictures. The graphic description of the author is lacking. The story is an interesting one to read and one becomes so absorbed that he forgets to consult the clock and generally finishes with a yawn at an unseemly hour in the morning, if the reading is done by artificial light. I have no timidity in saying that the staging of the story is crude in spots. This is said with all respect to the concern, which has a well-earned reputation for putting out excellent film stories. The producer no doubt thinks he made the best of the material at hand, but he was handicapped in not having an excellent picture story as the nucleus. He confined himself too closely to the Reade version. To depart from it meant failure, and there you are.

Young Wardlaw forges his father's name to a check to assist his friend. The friend, not doubting the young man, presents the check for payment and the spurious signature is at once detected. There is a speedy trial and Robert is convicted, being abandoned by John. In after years the dishonesty is cleared up by a very simple process—that of employing an expert in handwriting. To analyze this part of it critically, one is led to inquire why the delay in resorting to this procedure? Robert knows that John imitated the handwriting of the elder Wardlaw, and yet John is excused from court by reason of illness. The honor and integrity of Robert was at stake and yet he went to trial, apparently, with his unsupported denial that he had forged the check and it availed him nothing, for appearances were against him and he was convicted before going to trial.

The novelist explains this to the satisfaction of the reader, but as a film incident it is inconsistent. Reade never intended to have Robert and Helen, together with two sailors, pull away from a sinking ship in mid-ocean in a skiff which would not keep afloat in any sort of a sea. There must have been lifeboats on the ship he wrote about and the craft in which the two principal figures reach the deserted island would never be carried on any sea-going boat. This particular incident in the film story is laughable. That Reade erred in his version—so far as the picture worth of the story is concerned—in having Rolleston leave Robert on the uninhabited island to starve for the reason that he recognized in him a convict is apparent. It is quite difficult to reconcile this particular situation.

Robert had saved the life of Helen. She loved him. Yet when her father comes to rescue her she walks calmly away from her savior—her lover—and leaves him to his fate with very little provision in the larder and the flat-bottomed skiff. It would seem that any man possessed of an atom of the milk of human kindness would not be a stickler for the upholding of the law and taken Robert off the island.

The incident of the duck—the homing-duck—alighting on a ship far at sea with the call for help attached to his leg, or wing, is quite far fetched. One could read this and follow along in the chain of events, but it is doubtful if ducks really fly far out to sea, and the providential alighting on the ship is a miracle to say the least.

Again, the heroic act of the convict in protecting his employer from robbery, and thus earning his gratitude, is a cheaply contrived situation and is somewhat ludicrous. Reade had words to waste on this incident but the producer was hampered by a mathematical proposition. He was working inside the three thousand feet limit.

The one thing that stands out clear and sharp is the hirsute appendage provided for Robert. As an often and much-bewhiskered character, he stands alone in the moving picture class. He wears whiskers of all lengths, and in the final scene appears with the most rapidly grown tapestry in the history of the picture. He has the Seven Sutherland Sisters looking like a bald-headed quartet. His rapid change of beard when he decides to accompany Helen home is a good stunt, but the uncombed bunch did not prevent recognition on the foam-lashed rocks of the deserted island, Mr. Rolleston lamping him immediately.

There was a great opportunity for a shipwreck scene but the producers seem to be short on marine effects throughout the whole picture. The scenes in the Wardlaw office were repeated too often. One becomes tired of the same setting. This cannot be laid up against the author of the book. The arriving at the latitude and longitude of the island by the means of a watch, a crooked stick and a piece of cloth might get over with a landlubber, and one cannot be technical, for without locating the haven of rest, Robert would have had no incentive for snaring the ducks while concealed behind his whiskers; the feathered messenger would not have alighted on the ship—but why go on? The young people were doomed to double in the Robinson Crusoe act to the end of of their days, or until speared by cannibals with teeth for the white meat, unless something heroic was done and performed quick—and the way devised was unique, novel, and has all the required elements of the drama.

The denouement comes swift and conclusive. Young Wardlaw is shown up as completely as any stage villain was ever unmasked. He gets all that is coming to him, including the loss of his sweetheart, who buries her face in the whiskers of the hero, who is Johnny-on-the-Spot with the signed papers to cinch the case.

As a novel "Foul Play" is an entertaining story and one well done by a master in story writing, but the picture version is subject to criticism and the principal objection is that can overlook the incongruities for the reason that they are the dramatic incidents are not convincing—on film.

Virginia, Minn.—Work has just begun on the new Lyric theatre to be erected here.

Wenatchee, Wash.—The Wenatchee Realty Co. will erect a new theatre at Mission and Palouse streets.

PRESTO

Poster frames, the best poster frame made, $1.75 each in quantities up to five. Six or more $1.50 each, cash with order.

ELECTRA Pink Label Carbons 5/8 x 6 soft cored, $2.25 per 100. $20.00 per 1,000, cash with order.

Swaab Film Service Co.

Pioneer Film Exchange
129 N. EIGHTH STREET PHILADELPHIA
Power's and Motiograph Machines

NOTES OF THE WEEK

FROM THE OBSERVATORY
By G. F. Blaisdell

THE committee on civic affairs of the Lynn (Mass.) Interchurch Union declares that the motion picture theatres in Lynn are one of the most successful substitutes for the licensed saloon. Here's the exact language:

"We are impressed anew by the social possibilities of the moving picture exhibition, regarding it as the most effective foe of the saloon as well as the low-grade theatres."

Representatives of thirty-three churches have delegated a committee to consider the question. Fine! At last churchmen have recognized a condition which for a long time has been patent to many non-churchmen. The saloon men also knew all about it, so also did the owners of the low-grade theatres. Another class of men has felt the effect of the moving picture domination, and that is the high-priced theatre owner.

Of course, it should be understood that in Lynn, at times, there are two different kinds of saloons—hence the reference to "licensed" saloons. Under the local option law there are occasions when at the annual municipal election the voters declare that no licenses shall be issued for the sale of liquor. The result is the following year the unlicensed saloon—the "speak-easy," the pocket, or perambulating saloon; the disappearing closet, the hotel "gag"—all a piece of unmitigated nonsense, folly. The sale of liquor is not much restricted. The sale of abominable liquor is encouraged by referendum enactment.

The licensed saloon, in the opinion of most rational-minded men, is far less an evil than is the unlicensed. The term "evil" is used advisedly. Evil it is when men spend too many of their waking and some of their sleeping hours in a gin-mill. The shorter the sessions at the bar the better the general welfare of the community.

So it is a fact that the moving picture, by providing a place where people of ordinary means can "kill" an evening and at the same time be entertained and instructed, is a benefit to any neighborhood.

* * * *

How much wiser and of keener observation are the men of Lynn (good, old Lynn—the Observer's "home town") than, for instance are such men as the Rev. J. C. Bierri, of Reading, Pa., who in addressing 250 delegates attending an Epworth League convention in Phoenixville, Pa., recently, declared that "The sooner the church awakens to the necessity of combating this growing danger, which threatens the religion of the young, the more secure can she feel in what the future holds for her. If the moving picture shows and cheap vaudeville are permitted to continue undisturbed in impressing upon the minds of the young pictures of melodramatic adventure, the tragedy of divorce and stories of evil and debauchery, the child patrons of these disgusting exhibitions will grow up with an unhealthy and distorted view of life and of what it holds."

The means advocated by Mr. Bierri are the introduction into the church of religious entertainments for the children which will satisfy their cravings and at the same time drive home some lesson of morality.

Glittering generalities! What sort of entertainment will the reverend gentleman substitute for the moving picture to satisfy this craving? Dr. Warner, of Park Congregational Church in St. Paul, and the Rev. Mr. Becker, of Grace Presbyterian Church of Montclair, N. J, have tried the experiment of giving the children and the adults of their churches and communities moving pictures on Sunday evenings—and with remarkable success. The latter had his first experience last Sunday evening. The church was crowded; at the close of the services the officers of the church were talking of a larger structure.

The experience of the last-named clergyman is the unvarying experience of the many who have introduced in their churches similar innovations.

* * * *

Clerygymen—real live ones, at any rate—desire men and women and children in numbers. The more they can reach the better are they satisfied with their opportunities. Your militant pastor wants to reach non-churchgoers. He knows he will find the regulars in their pews on Sunday morning. The moving picture will serve as a medium to bring to his church those who under other circumstances would not enter his doors.

* * * *

An interesting phase of the introduction of pictures in Mr. Becker's church lies in the fact that in Montclair the municipal authorities have refused, uniformly denied, applications for permits to open picture houses. It is not inconceivable that the popularization of pictures by the pastor will in time force the city officials to reverse their former decisions—which, of course, were ridiculous—and permit the establishment of picture theatres in what the New York Sun on a former occasion described as "that pluperfect spot."

* * * *

An Aurora (Ill.) dispatch to the Chicago American tells of the following film romance:

A sister and brother, for twenty years lost to each other, both now old and bent with age, have been reunited through the brother's fondness for five-cent picture shows. He attended a performance at a theatre here and saw his long-lost sister in the nurse role in "Romeo and Juliet." John Stanton, seventy-three years old, is the brother, and Mrs. G. W. Walters, seventy-six years old, of Philadelphia, Pa., is the sister. The aged couple are to spend their remaining years together.

* * * *

Under a charter from the I. A. of T. S. E., affiliated with the A. F. of L., the Toledo (Ohio) Motion Picture Operators' Protective Association has been formed.

* * * *

The Ammex Motion Picture Company has leased the old National Bank Building in National City, Cal., and on two floors, each eighty by fifty, is installing appliances for the manufacture of moving pictures. With one exception, the plan is said to be the only one on the Pacific Coast that will turn out the finished film for the producer. The company expects to deal with foreign as well as domestic exchanges.

Actual photographing will begin November 18. Western pictures and Spanish scenes will be the principal productions to begin with. The company has contracted, it is reported, with one of the best known producing managers in New York City, who will assume charge of the stage productions. Six other leading people will accompany him. The remainder of the company will be filled out with local talent, principally cowboys, cowgirls and a small-sized army of supers. The plant will be equipped to turn out 200,000 feet of films a week.

The Ammex Motion Picture Company was recently incorporated with F. W. Randolph as general manager. It is the claim of General Manager Randolph that the water supply of National City is particularly adapted for developing motion pictures, for the reason that it does not produce rust, being free of iron. The general offices of the company are to be in San Diego.

* * * *

Those who were so fortunate as to witness the work of Windsor McKay in the four thousand drawings reproduced by Vitagraph will be glad to know that this artist is at work on another series, which he promises will be the greatest he has ever drawn.

* * * *

Thirty-five Minneapolis exhibitors have organized to protect the interests of the first-class picture theatres. Steps were taken to raise a fund of $450 for mutual protection.

* * * *

Five moving picture outfits will be used in the Kentucky State campaign. The pictures will be non-political and will be exhibited free. They are to be in the interest of Judge O'Rear, the Republican candidate for Governor.

* * * *

The Rev. Dr. J. H. Hackenburg of Reading, Pa., has denounced moving pictures and billboards. As to the latter, much might be said. Posters that are not issued by the manufacturers of pictures, and that have absolutely no relation to the pictures that are supposed to be displayed on the inside of the house, unquestionably do more to bring into disrepute moving pictures than any other single agency. They are an unmitigated abomination. They are dishonest in that they do not portray what they pretend to portray. They make no appeal to intelligent discrimination. They do appeal to those who will be less interested in wholesome comedy, drama or educational subjects than they are in the more sensational pictures.

If the National Exhibitors would make a stand for the display only of posters actually descriptive of the pictures on exhibition they would do much toward removing one of the most vulnerable of the picture features that are the subjects of attack.

* * * *

Telling the story of the moving picture show proprietor who was sent to jail for admitting to his theatre children unaccompanied by adults, the Norfolk (Va.) Landmark rises in its editorial wrath to inquire:

"If it is not freakish to bar children from moving picture shows, what is it?"

The Landmark goes on: "One is inclined to wonder, when reading that verdict, what kind of shows are given in the metropolis. If such an ordinance were enacted in Norfolk there would be a righteous and sky-piercing howl. The best patrons of these miniature show places are the children; and, to insist that they should not be admitted unless some adult accompanied them would amount locally to a practical confiscation. If the scenes are not fit for children to witness they should not be exhibited. If the theatres are unsafe they should be altered. But to bar children from pleasure and prevent mothers purchasing inexpensive relief is freakishness run riot."

* * * *

The question raised by the Landmark is a great one—one on which wise and observing men and women differ—and, it may be added, that is the situation right in New York City.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles King, employed in a picture theatre in Memphis, Tenn., were severely burned a few days ago by a blazing film.

* * * *

Butte, Mont., is to have a $96,000 picture theatre, which will be one of the finest west of Chicago. The Montana Amusement Company will operate it. George W. Bennethum, of Allentown, Pa., will begin, on November 1, work on the Hippodrome, seating 800, which will occupy a plot forty by one hundred and fifty.

* * * *

Among recent incorporations are the Clansman Kinemacolor Company of New York, capital $10,000; Kanawha Film Company of Charleston, W. Va., capital $5 000.

* * * *

Searching for data of moving picture shows as they affect children, an investigator in a Connecticut factory town has learned that out of 350 pupils from ten to fourteen years of age, all but thirty-four were habitues, more or less, of the picture shows; 183 went twice a week or oftener; nine children went daily, three of them having business connections with the theatre, selling popcorn, etc. Of the 316 who attended, 130 were allowed to go unattended by grown people.

From Our Western Correspondent

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 25.—When I sent last week's letter to the official headquarters I had no idea that in the next one I would have to chronicle as the concluding chapter of the moving picture romance and matrimonial finish of the first, the fact that the happy bridegroom was kidnapped and passed a very strenuous night "in the hands of his friends," as they say in political circles, yet such is the case.

Leo Kind and Miss Dorcia Dillow were happily married here about ten days ago. They didn't expect that the glories of their flat would be rudely shattered, for the reason that they did not count on the program that was especially arranged for the benefit of Leo being pulled off and gone through with in such a realistic manner. Leo had concluded his day's work on a certain evening the past week and with his bride was happily discussing the joys of married life, when, without warning, bedlam broke loose beneath their window. He thought that the world had come to an end and he rushed to the window to get a good view of the show. In the glare of a nearby street lamp he discovered fifteen of the moving picture employees of the various houses in the city "doing things." These active workers had brought with them about everything that would produce sound and all of 'em were turned loose at one and the same time. Carl Hansen, trap drummer at the Lyric, headed the bunch, and to make a real genuine, honest-to-goodness-serenade Carl had raided the orchestra pit of the Lyric and appropriated several of his specially-made whistles and other effects that he uses for the pictures.

While Leo was bowing his thanks, Joe Hunt, stage manager at the Lyric, stole softly up the stairs, accompanied by "Pat" Gilliam, and while the noise outside drowned Leo's yell of protest and his bride's screams they yanked the bridegroom out of his apartments and almost out of his trousers at one and the same time and hurried him downstairs into the willing hands of the other Indians awaiting him. "The Black Hand" could not have accomplished it with better results. The first place they took Leo was to a nearby emporium where they serve those concoctions that were responsible for the W. C. T. U. movement in this glorious land of ours. There were many things to sample and none of them were overlooked; aiso, there were many like places to visit, and fearing that the others might feel jealous they played the entire circuit. Along about 3 "P. X." they decided to show Leo sights that he never dreamed existed in the city of his birth, and the gang set forth to accomplish the fitting finale. They did, believe me. Two hours later—5 o'clock—they were, oh, so tired! It was then that Carl Hansen decided to show the true spirit of philanthropy and he telephoned for his horse. "Selig," named after the moving picture firm. Carl had other reasons for his charity. There were several members of the night force strolling along the avenue, and their appearance was such as might cause said officials to believe that a delegation of inmates from Bloomingdale had visited the resort without preliminary warning. The little carriage had not been built to accommodate such a crowd, and "Selig" protested with more horse sense than his heavy-ladened companions possessed, but man was ever destined to rule and "Selig" was given a good idea of what "The White Man's Burden" actually consisted of. He hauled 'em all home, one at a time.

Now, what did Dorcia say when her illuminated "hubby" was delivered into her waiting arms. Hoot mon! That is another story, and "The Man in the Baths" isn't telling tales out of school. "Pat" Gilliam informs me, however, that they'll never catch him napping that way for when he decided to include the little yellow buggy among his personal assets—for it is in this same vehicle that he goes "romancing around," accompanied by one of Hot Springs' most talented and pretty young ladies—that he will make his honeymoon of such long duration and so thoroughly barricade his doors that it will take a regiment of soldiers to capture him. The "bunch," however, just dare him to get married.

There arrived in this city the past few days an old moving picture theatre stalwart, Frank Ritter, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Frank had left the pretty "valley of vapors" some months ago for a visit East stopping in Memphis long enough to tear off a few hunks of harmony in some of the houses of that booming city, after which he hit the train for the "City of Churches." They do say, though, that once you come here you don't want to leave, and I guess that is eminently correct in Frank's case, for he's back once more.

He holds the record for long engagements in this city. Previous to his departure he sang at the Lyceum for over two years. Being acquainted with the big song publishers, his melodies are always up-to-date. Frank is taking it easy at present, enjoying a much-needed rest. There is a rumor to the effect that when the new theatre opens that George Walker is building, he will be found in charge of the harmony department, as he and George are very good friends.

Mr. Walker isn't saying much concerning his new theatre, but from the rapidity with which the work is going on I opine that this house will be a credit to the city. There is considerable discussion of the report he will only charge five cents admission. That idea hasn't been a howling hit with the other managers, who would like to see him maintain the same standard as they are doing and have his patrons lay a dime at the cashier's window. The new house will have one of the swellest entrances of any in the city. George has promised to outline to me every feature of his theatre, which I hope to put in cold type in the very near future, and let the other managers get a slant at it and see what they think of the same.

The Photo Play has found business to be so good since taking on Independent service that they have recently placed a very pretty and unique tile floor in their lobby, as well as redecorating the same. This little house is located right in the heart of the business section and the pictures there are immense. The regular "season" is rapidly approaching and business is picking up at every theatre in the city. Eddie Gavrel, of the Lyceum, had two pretty pictures painted on each side of the lobby, enclosing them in large oak frames, which enhances the beauty of that theatre. Eddie is a real "live wire" in local picture circles, and his house is doing a banner business.

Harry Hale informs me that when the baseball series between the Giants and the Athletics are released that they will be shown at his theatre, the Lyric. This series is attracting a great deal of attention in this city, where many of the big league teams come to train, and the moving pictures of the same will be the magnet that will draw packed houses.

There was one picture the past week that caused a laugh and the reel was, I believe, intended to portray an historical event. It was the limit. Imp, how could you do it? And little Mary, we sure pitied you. I refer to "The Sentinel Asleep." It's too bad that "sentinel" ever woke up long enough to get out of the factory. "Napoleon" might have looked the way the "Little Corporal" actually did look, if he hadn't looked the way he looked when he looked that way. Some directors must imagine that all that is necessary to get a "Napoleon" acceptable is to pick out a small man, twist a bunch of his hair down between his eyes, get a soft hat, mash it together and slam it sideways on the poor boy's head, and he's the hero of the Island of St. Helena. That's just the way that Imp "Napoleon" appeared. Ring down the curtain, mother, I can't sing to-night! Also, officer, call a cop!

The American sent us two good reels the past week, "The Land Thieves" and the "Cowboy and the Outlaw," both of which were not only well acted but contained some of that glorious scenery for which this firm is noted. Keep it up, American; you've won first place here in this man's town for Western pictures.

Great Northern gave us an excellent view of "Barcelona," which was much enjoyed, and Nestor's "Mutt and Jeff" series drew the usual big house Wednesday, at the Scenic and Photo Play theatres. Powers enabled us to see what the "Largo Lakes of Italy" were like, and the view we got was all to the good. "The New York Cowboy" was the best Trust picture of the week, for which Selig deserves mention.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

CHICAGO LETTER

The Laemmle Film Service has recently installed the fan-effect air-purified system for the benefit of its employees and is agent for the same throughout the United States. Mr. Fleckles, at this exchange, states that business is better than ever and that they are doing more business to-day than ever before.

Abe Stern, of the Crusaders Exhibiting Company, has recently purchased State right for "Old Wyoming Days" in Wisconsin, and is busily looking after the booking of the same.

Art, operator at Laemmle's, is going to be a member of Local No. 2. He stated that he is a lucky guy as another baby boy has been added to his family; therefore, Local No. 2 should plug for Art. May his troubles be little ones.

We will have to hand it to Hammond for a local of game and nervy fellows. Local No. 103 at Hammond, Indiana, went out Tuesday, October 17, and demanded the union scale of wages, and to make sure of it the old men have been put back in their former places. An operator from Detroit, Mich., not knowing that the strike was on, worked at Hammond, and not wishing to have his card taken from him by the crowd of union men waiting for him at the railroad station, he walked from Gary, Ind., to Ann Arbor, Mich., in order to get a train.

The Orpheum Theatre, Kenosha, Wis., which was closed for alterations, has reopened under the same management, with a run of first-class pictures. It has a seating capacity of six hundred and is owned and managed by Mr. George Rugg.

In my interview with Mr. Franke, of the Sheridan Theatre, at 939 Irving Park Boulevard, last week, he stated that they were a happy-go-lucky bunch at his theatre and couldn't be otherwise, on account of the good business they were doing. A kinodrome machine is used, which throws a clear and steady picture. The seating capacity of this theatre is about 750 and therefore a good programme can afford to be shown.

Owing to a recent article of one of my contemporaries about a moving picture theatre situated on Halsted street just south of Thirty-third, I investigated the matter and found that the theatre has a first-class and good programme for a theatre of its size. Three reels of first-class Independent pictures are run and also an illustrated song is on the evening bill. The theatre is managed by Mr. Walter Immerman, and although run down by recent managers it has steadily come to the front through the persistent advertising and excellent management of Mr. Immerman, who is well experienced in this business.

The orchestra consists of a violin and piano, played by Mr. Immerman's father and sister. The elder Mr. Immerman is a violinist of no mean ability, being a graduate of the Conservatory of Music of Berlin. Miss Immerman is also a talented musician and, although only classical music is played in this theatre, it is a big drawing card and is appreciated by all who attend. The operator, Mr. Charles Forberg, of Local No. 2, knows his business, having worked for the Jones, Linnick & Schaffer circuit for several years. The picture which is produced by Powers' No. 5 machine on an ordinary curtain, shows very clear and plainly. I can say it is as good as the average picture shown in Chicago. The theatre itself, which although not built fancy, is plain and a very attractive house. The side lights are placed in a position where they do not interfere with the clearness of the picture. The floor has a gradual incline, making it convenient for everyone to see without craning or stretching their necks.

Mr. Immerman has been manager of this theatre only a short time and he has made good so far, and we sincerely hope his success will continue.

Mr. A. A. Frudenfeld, proprietor of the Barrison Theatre, at Waukegan, Ill., was a visitor to the Standard Film Company last week. He stated that business was great in his part of the State. He has one of the most successful and best-managed theatres in this part of the country. He never shows less than two reels and always has first-class pictures, which he can very well afford as his theatre has a seating capacity of eight hundred.

Mr. Joseph Hopp, of the Standard Film Service, Chicago, is not only a big man in the motion picture business, but is classed as one of Chicago's prominent citizens by the Chicago Magazine, which had a whole page of data on Mr. Hopp's life.

WARNER KENNEDY.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

To provide the proper facilities for the censor committee is now up before the city council, to purchase a moving picture machine and employ an operator and to fit up quarters in the Temple Block. Mayor Alexander will make this recommendation if his further investigations do not run him up against the city's ordinances, for the building laws are very strict. So the Temple Block may not be suitable after all, but if it is it may be possible to arrange one of the largest rooms in the building for an experiment station where the new films can be tried out.

There are about two hundred moving picture theatres in the city and fifty-five new films come to Los Angeles every week. It would require a straight sitting of the committee for about twenty hours to see all the pictures shown in the city, if they saw them in one place. Divided into working days of eight hours each, the actual watching of the films would require about three of these working days, leaving but little time for the other pursuits of the members of the committee. And this committee serves without pay.

LUX FILMS

THE FILMS OF PICTORIAL QUALITY

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1911

BILL AND THE BEAR

COMEDY Length 554 ft.

A very exciting comedy showing the Bear after a wild chase capturing several Burglars.

TOMMY'S CAMERA

COMEDY Length 393 ft.

An amusing comedy which will afford much laughter to your audience.

R. PRIEUR, 10 East 15th Street, NEW YORK CITY

TELEPHONE 3427 STUYVESANT

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED.

This is the time required to view the films if the committee could sit in one spot and watch reel after reel. But as no provision has been made for this one spot, the committee would have to go from one show to another, covering all two hundred of them. In such a case the committee would not have time to do anything else at all; in fact the seven days of each week, with twenty-four hours a day, would not be nearly long enough to do all the work required.

The finance committee will have to be convinced that the city should run a municipal moving picture show.

The Co-operative Film Manufacturing Company filmed the pictures of President Taft's parade. A very clear picture was secured, especially that of President Taft.

The European, First and Wilmington, has for the third time sent its owners to bankruptcy. Who's the next one.

The G. A. R. picture released by the Imp Company was shown at the Optic Theatre. Manager Woddley said that while the picture has shown for three days there was not an empty seat in the house. The Daughters of the G. A. R. attended this picture.

Berkeley, Cal., is planning to establish a municipally owned moving picture theatre in the high school building. They propose to purchase one of the finest machines available and install it in the high school auditorium. The pictures will be shown at periodical meetings and will be of the best educational pictures. The meetings will be far enough apart so as not to come with the local picture shows.

The Lyric Theatre has installed five 500 candle-power globes in the lobby, and has also a new aluminum curtain.

F. O. Keife, Tucson, Ariz., has changed his service from Trust to Independent.

The Pastime Theatre of Long Beach has changed from Trust to Independent service from the California Film Exchange.

Manager Fred Dawes, of Miles Bros'. Film Exchange, is once more on the sick list.

The Consolidated Securities Company has an option on the Tally's Theatre in Santa Barbara.

Miss Louise Glaum, who played ingenues with Nat Goodwin, has been engaged by the Pathe Freres studio in Edendale. Manager Youngdeer declares that Miss Glaum is a valuable addition to his forces, as she was at one time a member of the Selig Chicago studio.

Hobart Bosworth, of the Selig studio, returned to work last week after being ill for about two weeks.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT

(London Office of the News.)

8 Sherwood street, London, W.

The News' editorial comment on the stopping of the Johnson-Wells match has acquainted the American trade with some of the aspects of the campaign waged by the Rev. F. B. Meyer and his allies, including the Archbishop of Canterbury, who distinguished himself by describing the South African War as "a regrettable necessity" and who can usually be relied upon to oppose any humanitarian medicine which reaches the House of Lords, and the Bishop of London, whose opinion is certainly worth more. What has not been pointed out, is the shifty methods of these gentlemen, who started on the "brutalizing spectacle" tack and finished on the color question. I would like to publish in the News Mr. Will G. Barker's letter to the Rev. F. B. Meyer. Mr. Barker, like the rest of us, had no objection to fair criticism, but it is a trifle too much, that any boxing match should be stopped at the instance of men who confess they have never seen a match, and on the pretext that one man is a black. Is there not a general idea that Christianity knows no distinction of race or color?

It is not my intention to discuss the pros and cons of the Johnson-Wells affair, however. What led me to the subject was the part played in the agitation by the Rev. F. B. Meyer. Now it can be said without offense that Mr. Meyer, whose many fine public services are not forgotten by those who happen to differ with him in this matter, is just a wee bit disposed to start a crusade without thoroughly investigating the facts. About a year ago, I was producing a special issue of a cinematograph trade paper here and asked Mr. Meyer to substantiate in an article for that publication some general charges against the cinematograph theatre which he had made on a public platform just before —I believe at a Free Church Congress. I also placed facts before him which went to show that it was practically impossible for an immoral film to be put on the screen. Mr. Meyer replied very courteously, accepted my assurances that everything was as it should be, and said that his remarks had been prompted by the facts that films of a doubtful nature had been sent for showing at his institute three or four years before. At that time of course, there was no cinematograph trade to speak of. Now it seems to me that just as Mr. Meyer levelled an accusation at the cinematograph trade in 1910 on the strength of things which happened in 1907, so he has been led to attack a modern glove fight on account of things he has heard of happening in an old-time prize fight some time early in the 19th century. For which reason, whether we are or are not greatly concerned at the stopping of the fight, we are opposed to the methods which went to bring that stoppage about.

Truth to tell, fight films are not great drawing cards here. Many showmen will not feature them, realizing that many members of their audiences do not like them. It is not worth while to get extra patronage for a week if you lose part of your regular patrons. Then again the prices asked for these subjects are usually much too heavy for the average show and out of proportion to the film's drawing powers. Even the Johnson-Jeffries film fell very flat and I do not think the N. S. C. can have broken records with their bookings of the pictures of the matches at their establishment.

The "American" Co. Ltd., which is the name of the company now handling "Flying A's," is very cosily established at its new premises in Wardour street, which undoubtedly are among the most comfortable and convenient in the trade. Mr. Scott now has Mr. Leslie Smith as his lieutenant. Mr. Smith is a brother of "Jack" of that ilk, Barker's Baron Munchausen, and another brother, Harry, is doing good business as sales manager for Edison. We have also connected with the trade Mr. George H. Smith of the Vitagraph and Mr. Smith of "Kinemacolor," but it's quite easy to tell one from the other when you've had a little practise.

There was sure to be trouble sooner or later over the question of incompetent operating. It is going to become a very acute question before many weeks are over. The N. A. C. O. are behind a bill which will be before Parliament, making it essential for an operator to pass an examination and secure a license. The N. A. C. O., of course, is the National Association of Cinematograph Operators and its members are in a particularly good position to give instances of the really scandalous manner in which various music hall proprietors are jeopardizing the safety of the public for the sake of a little economy in the wages list. Mr. Hutchings, their president, who is now with Mr. Barker, and whose standing as an operator is evidenced by the fact that W. G. B. has placed him in charge of the projector at the Empire Theater, was himself discharged by one of the chief music hall combines and his work given to an electrician for two shillings (50c.) a week extra.

I happen to visit the hall in question fairly frequently, and you may take my word for it that the picture nowadays is calculated to make angels weep. This hall is owned by a company with two millions of pounds capital, whose variety shows are not remarkable either for their length or quality. The shortsightedness of spoiling which was often the best turn in the program would be obvious to the manager if he took the simple precaution of seating himself among the audience and listening to their opinion of the greyish smudge he calls a picture. This hall is one out of many such; in London alone I know of twelve halls where the operating is in incompetent hands. Let's hope the bill goes through; it will mean a bigger wages bill for the music hall companies, but emphatically this is a case where money well spent is money earned.

SPECIAL NOTICE

NON-BREAKABLE

Lantern Slides

ANNOUNCEMENT
ADVERTISING
LECTURE
MICROSCOPIC
NATURAL HISTORY

We make slides of all kinds

SLIDES

Artistic and beautifully colored

Don't be faked by would-be Original Inventors who claim, and are trying to manufacture non-breakable slides.

SEND FOR CATALOG.

MICA NON-BREAKABLE SLIDE CO.
2737 N. Croskey St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

AN IMP DETECTIVE STORY

Clever Method of Detecting Crime Depicted on Film in an Interesting Drama

As theatre patrons are always interested in the methods employed by officers in the detection of crime the Imp company has in contemplation the producing of a series of detective stories. The first of these will be released Thursday, November 2, under the title of "King, the Detective." It is a powerful and convincing drama, with King Baggot in the title role, and it gives that excellent actor a great chance to display his histronic ability. The story is a cleverly constructed one, with that suspense that holds the attention from start to finish. The plot hinges on the murder of a banker for his money. The deed is committed in his own house and his son-in-law, who has been secretly wedded to his daughter, is suspected. There is strong evidence that he committed the deed, for he was seen to enter the house in a stealthy manner by a servant. The young man is arrested and thrown into jail pending his trial and the young wife is distracted. In her desperation she seeks the services of King, the famous detective, and he enters into the work with a relish. He is nonplussed as he proceeds with his investigations, but finally discovers a thumb print on the collar of the dead man. He procures the thumb print of the suspected young man and discovers he is not the guilty party. By a clever ruse he obtains an impression of the thumb print of the chauffeur, who has not been suspected. This is an exact replica of the telltale print. King confronts the auto driver and by a novel demonstration compels him to confess. The young husband is liberated and the wife is profuse in her thanks to the detective. The unfolding of the plot is unique and original, and the suspense is interesting and entertaining.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"
IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE
AIMATED PICTURE BUSINESS,
PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.
28 Large Pages. Eight Shillings per annum.
Editor-Proprietor: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABBRI,
la, Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera di S Paolo) (Italy)
"La Cinematografia Italiana" is the official organ of the Universal Exhibition of 1911 at Turin.

OUR REGULAR Release is Somebody Else's SPECIAL Release

IT'S THE MOBILIZATION OF THE AMERICAN FLEET

Hear them shouting about their SPECIALS? Yet, here's a nice present for you on our REGULAR day. TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7th, The Fleet on the Hudson and Fun and Work Among the Jackies on Board the Big Fire-Shooter Utah and Others. Your exchange ought to have it for you—it's a REGULAR RELEASE.

That same week, on SATURDAY, the 11th of NOVEMBER, we release an Indian Drama that will set tongues going fit to bust all speed limit laws.

"FOR THE TRIBE"

Just about a full reel, but you'll wish it was more.

POWERS MOTION PICTURE CO.

511 WEST 42d STREET, NEW YORK CITY

GETTING OUR "WEEKLY TALKS"?. FREE—SHOOT A LINE

Powers at Mobilization

The mobilization of the Atlantic Squadron on the Hudson River, the assembling of the greatest fleet ever gathered at one place under the American flag, began early Tuesday morning, October 24. At the same time the camera man for the Powers Motion Picture Company was on the job, armed with permits that took him without delay on board the big flagship Connecticut.

From on the bridge beside Admiral Osterhaus he got a point of vantage. There is no question but that the gathering of this giant fleet will arouse the greatest enthusiasm, and it is a commendable fact that the great event has been exposed to the film from its very beginning. Mr. P. A. Powers is going to put it out as his regular release for November 7th. The film already taken has been blessed by ideal weather. so that the results are beautiful.

J. H. HALLBERG'S CATALOGUE

We have received from Mr. J. H. Hallberg, Hallberg's catalogue and we congratulate Mr. Hallberg on the artistic get-up of it and the admirable printing and also for the display of practically everything necessary for an exhibitor. It has been our province to examine catalogues of various supply houses, but can safely say Hallberg's is the premier of them all. In the whole ninety-six pages there is grouped together such a vast display of goods that an exhibitor need not go anywhere else for anything that he may need, and we heartily commend the catalogue to every exhibitor, it being well worth the price of twenty-five cents. Ask for it, if only for the information contained therein.

Picture Show Operators Strike

Union operators in all the 5 and 10 cent theaters in Lake County are out on a general strike because of the refusal of the managers to grant them an increase of $4.50 per week. Gary operators are now receiving $15 per week. Non-union operators have taken the places of the strikers and unless a settlement is reached the strike threatens to involve other unions.—La Porte, Ind., Herald.

Gulfport, Miss.—L. L. Chevalley will erect a building to be used as a moving picture theatre.

An official meeting of the Executive Board of the Moving Picture League of America will be held at the Southern Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, November 1. Every member of the Executive Board is requested to be there without fail. Important matters will come before the meeting, that vitally interest every exhibitor. All States that desire to join the National League will please send their application to C. M. Christenson, and if possible have an authorized delegate attend the meeting.

The League is making splendid progress. It is the duty of every officer of the League to be at Columbus on the first day of November, and those that cannot come will please send a brother with an authorized proxy to act for him.

M. A. NEFF,
President of the Moving Picture League of America.

To M. P. Owners, Managers and Pianists.

"MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC"

This is a book of music to fit all possible scenes, actions, characters, etc., shown in Moving Pictures. Compiled by a MOTION PICTURE PIANIST, who is a competent and experienced musician. This book is NOT a Dance collection, or copies of LATE HITS, but "THE REAL ARTICLE" for any Pianist in a Motion Picture Theatre. Very highly endorsed by all of the Amusement Journals, Theatre Managers, and Thousands of Picture Pianists, and this book is now in actual use in Thousands of M. P. Theatres. This Book sent to any address upon receipt of price, $1.00.

Send all orders to,

G. A. FRELINGER, 1012 Ferry St., Lafayette, Ind.

FREE—An eight page booklet, fully describing this Music Book will be sent FREE to any one upon receipt of name and address.

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

THE THREE SHELL GAME

American Release, November 6

Dick Henkle, an outcast, is seen crawling out from beneath a a freight car. After many rebuffs he finally secures work at the Weston Ranch, where he is made welcome by the daughter, Clara, and her mother.

Weston and Dick start for the bank to pay off a mortgage long due. At the entrance to the bank they are attracted by a three shell game and despite the remonstrances of Dick Weston gambles away his money, returning heartbroken to his home.

Clara and her mother blame Dick for their father's weakness. Appalled by his desperate situation Dick goes forth into the mountains, where he luckily meets the three shell gambler, whom he holds up, at the point of his revolver. He then goes back to the ranch and returns Weston's money. In the joy which follows he successfully pleads his cause with Clara, who had learned to love him during their brief acquaintance.

A powerful tale, vividly told, showing the extremes to which a desperate man may go.

THE MEXICAN

American Release, November 9

Joe Curvez, a Mexican, while idly strolling about his ranch finds, in a basket, a charming baby girl evidently deserted by her parents. He names her Dolores, and adopts her. Eighteen years elapse. A bitter race prejudice against the Mexicans prompts Charlie Mason, leader of a lawless gang of cowboys, to assault Joe Curvez when the latter calls at the local store for supplies. Thinking the beautiful Dolores would be unmolested, her aged foster father sends her on the next shopping errand. She, too, is reviled and insulted by the drunken cowpunchers, who finally bombard her and the Mexican in their dugout hut. A lively fight follows. Dolores then steals away for help. She returns with Clarence Stowell and a band of rangers who quickly put the invaders to flight.

Clarence immediately falls in love with Dolores, who returns his affection. The Mexican, however, rankling under his many injustices, gathers his friends together and an extremely interesting battle between rangers, cowpunchers and Mexicans is the result. Charlie Mason and his gang finally capture the old Mexican and his daughter, and are about to hang both of them when Clarence Stowell again arrives in the nick of time. The Mexican then confesses that Dolores is an adopted daughter, and removes all objection to her marriage with Clarence Stowell.

An intensely exciting story, beautifully told, depicting the fierce racial animosities of early California.

WAITING AT THE CHURCH

Imp Release, November 6

The trials and tribulations of a young man in reaching the church to become one of the principals in a marriage consummation furnishes the material for an amusing comedy.

Harry Graham is to marry Elsie Williams at high noon and the preparations are all made for the event which is to occur at the church in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

Graham visits the office where he is employed and announces the coming event to his fellow workers. He is admonished to make haste as the hands on the clock dial are rapidly approaching the hour.

He rushes out and at his lodgings has trouble in preparing his toilet. Becoming impatient everything goes wrong but he is finally arrayed in his wedding suit.

Starting on a run for the church he collides with a nurse carrying a child. The woman is thrown violently to the ground and badly injured. The prospective bridegroom picks up the child and impatiently awaits the coming of the ambulance to convey the nurse to the hospital. He stuffs a wad of bills into the hand of the surgeon and tries to dispose of the child. No one will take it off his hands and he is in a quandary.

In the meantime the wedding party has arrived at the church and waits.

Graham rushes on and at last, in his desperation, places the baby in an ice wagon but it does not remain. The vendor of congealed water grabs the baby and pursues and gives it to Graham. The latter hails a cab, jumps in with the child, and is driven to the church where he arrives just as the patience of the party is exhausted. The ceremony is performed but as the bridal party emerge from the church, the cabman approaches with the baby and indignantly demands that Graham care for his own.

There is consternation and the bride and her parents are horrified. Graham is roundly denounced and his troubles multiply and he is in despair. At this time the parents of the baby arrive and are overjoyed to find their offspring and all is made clear. Graham is forgiven and is once more happy.

THE WIFE'S AWAKENING

Imp Release, November 9

The drama opens with the household of Enoch Harrington plunged in sadness. Their first born has died and the father and mother are inconsolable in their grief. Mrs. Harrington later seeks diversion in society, but the husband is engrossed in his work as a scientist, having a laboratory in his house. He conducts several experiments and is on the verge of success in his invention when an explosion of the chemicals occurs and it subsequently develops that he is blinded for life, his eyesight being permanently destroyed. The wife is saddened for a time, but again seeks relief from sorrow by attending society functions, being the gayest of the gay.

At a ball she meets Gilbert Huston, a blase devotee of fashion, who has a penchant for flirting with young, handsome married women. He is genuinely impressed with the beauty of Mrs. Harrington and lays siege to her heart. She is lonely, as her husband's affliction prevents him from mingling with her set and turns to him. The intimacy is dangerous. At first she is horrified and then listens interestedly. The villain pleads ingeniously and she yields and consents to elope with him. They plan flight and everything is in readiness.

They have an interview in the garden underneath her husband's window. He overhears and it is made clear. He is heartbroken as the perfidy of his wife dawns on him. Harrington procures a revolver and debates whether to end his own life or try to wreak vengeance on the polished tempter. While he is revolving the matter in his mind, the wife has stealthily repaired to her room and is packing a few of her belongings in a grip. She discovers a shoe and stocking worn by her dead child and then the horror dawns on her. She sees her contemplated shame in all its hideousness—her afflicted husband—the memory of the dead child—their child—and she is stricken with remorse, sobbing bitterly.

Summoning her maid, she bids her go to Huston and tell him to leave the grounds as she has reconsidered her decision. Then she goes to her husband, who is crazed with grief, and takes him in her arms, begging his forgiveness, which is freely given and there is a happy reconciliation.

THE MISSING HEIR

Thanhouser Release, November 7

A lawyer is given the execution of a will, which bequeathes to the child of a disinherited son a large fortune. The disinherited son is now dead. The father, on his deathbed, is penitent. By way of making amends he leaves to his son's offspring his entire fortune.

He is ignorant of his grandchild's fate but provides that a thorough search should be made. The will further provides that should the search for the child prove a failure, the fortune should go to the old man's nephew—a worthless and idle youth of loose morals. The nephew tries his best to make the finding of the child impossible, while the lawyer, who had a sentimental interest in the dead son, uses every known means to locate the missing heir.

The missing boy falls into the hands of an Italian fruit vender. The Italian reads in the papers that there is a hunt for the boy. He easily establishes the boy's identity by a scar on his cheek. Then he goes to see the lawyer to claim the reward.

But he meets the nephew at the lawyer's office and is bribed to keep quiet. It was the nephew's plan to keep the boy out of the way until after the expiration of the time limit set in the will.

In the tenement house where the Italian lived, there was a very wideawake, energetic janitor. And he had a sweetheart, a newsgirl, who also took a great deal of interest in what was going on. The girl's suspicions were aroused when the natty nephew called on the shabby Italian.

The two men hold a conference in one of the Italian's two rooms, having sent the boy into the kitchen. The girl listens outside, at the keyhole, and is shocked to hear of a plan to send the boy adrift. She decides to rescue the boy by strategy.

The plotters are earnestly conversing in the front room, and they do not hear a slight stir in the back kitchen. But the janitor, a former sailor, comes up the dumb waiter rope, hand over hand, hoists the car, and lowers the boy to safety, before the astonished villains realize that anything out of the way is happening.

Seeing that their scheme has failed they try to escape, but are trapped on the roof of the tenement, and ignominiously marched off by the janitor and turned over to the police. And the missing heir is produced in time to secure the fortune.

THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS

Thanhouser Release, November 10

During the French and Indian war, while America was still under the rule of England, Col. Munro was the commander of Fort William Henry, in New York State. His two daughters arrived from England, and pushed their way into the wilderness, determined to join their father.

The last stage of their journey was made under the escort of a young army officer, Major Heyward, one of their father's most trusted officers, and who was deeply in love with Alice, the younger girl.

Their guide was a treacherous Indian who had planned to lure them into the wilderness and make them captives. They were saved, however, by a chance meeting with a trapper and his two Indian companions, who were men of reputation throughout that wild region.

The trapper, American born, had lived with Indians all his life, and because of his skill with his rifle was known as Hawkeye. The Indians were the last of the tribe of Mohicans, who at one time ruled the country that is now New York City. But they had been driven back by the encroachments of the white men, and made their homes in the then wild region around what is now Lake George.

Through the aid of this trio, the little party of whites were led toward the fort, but their treacherous guide escaped, and backed by the Huron Indians, a hostile tribe, followed and attacked them.

During the attack the girls were captured, and carried off to the Hurons' village. Heyward and Hawkeye, disguised as a medicine man and his trained bear, by skill and daring, managed to rescue the younger of the two girls, but the elder was still in the power of Magua, their former guide. He was cornered at last with his fair captive, and in an effort to rescue her Uncas was killed. His death was avenged by the unerring rifle of Hawkeye.

The old chief, the last of his tribe, mourned his dead, comforted by Hawkeye, who tells him, "the gifts of our color may be different, but God has so placed us as to journey in the same path. I have no kin, and, like you, no people. The boy has left us for a time, but, sagamore, you are not alone."

FOLLOWING COUSIN'S FOOTSTEPS

Solax Release, November 1

George Moore, a young man living in the country, visits his cousin Harold Sidney in New York City. He tells Harold he has come to have a good time and Harold promises to break him in. Harold shows him a number of photographs of different girls, giving a little story with each. George sits with eyes and mouth wide open taking it all in. George refuses a cigarette, but Harold tells him in order to be a sport he must learn to smoke. The usual sick scene follows. The next day Harold, dressed as the typical college boy, takes George for a walk. Harold flirts with several girls and makes engagements. They escort two girls to a soda fountain. George is very bashful and the girls make fun of him. He slips out and runs home. Harold finds him at the house and tells him he has got to be a sport and go out and get acquainted. George goes to the park alone. He tries to flirt with a couple of girls but they get indignant and threaten to call an officer. He walks away, gets some cards printed. After making faces at a young lady, he offers her his card. She bangs him on the head with her parasol and he runs away. Thinking his clothing is what is causing him to be turned down, he buys a flashy suit and cane and goes out to try again. He gets very bold and finally gets thrown in the pond. Harold witnesses the ducking and rescues his cousin, who has had enough and wants to go home.

A HEROINE OF THE REVOLUTION

Solax Release, November 3

Ruth Fairfax lived with her widowed mother on the banks of the Potomac. She was in love with Will Rathburn. Will is a captain in Washington's army. One day while going to the spring, she sees two British soldiers hold up an American soldier and take from him a message from George Washington to Colonel Montgomery. Ruth, hiding behind a tree, hears one of the British soldiers read the message, which is to the effect that Colonel Montgomery must turn his regiment aside in order to elude 5,000 British soldiers who are lying in ambush waiting for him. She rushes out, grabs the message and runs home followed by one of the British soldiers. She jumps on horseback and flies to warn Montgomery. A most exciting chase follows. She reaches the American regiment just in time to save them, and falls in her lover's arms.

BIG NOISE HANK

Nestor Release, November 1

Hank Rouser, "Big Noise Hank," as a daring stranger had called him, was mad clear through. Julius Jones had faithfully promised to return that $500 after thirty days, and now it was long past due, and not even a line from Mr. Jones. So after a little friendly persuasion, in which Hank's six-shooter was brought into prominence, the bar was effectively cleared of its patrons, despite the protests of the bar-keeper, and the bully sat down to despatch a few terse sentences to his tardy friend, upon the receipt of which Julius, with the aid of Caleb, his old family servant, quickly packed his traveling bag and started on a little journey, which, he wrote to Mr. Rouser, would surely keep him away several months.

As Caleb pushed out the rowboat which was to take his master to the railroad station by a short cut he tumbled into the water, and Julius upon coming to his aid, met with the same fate, while the boat with his coat and bag drifted calmly away. Hastily they returned to the house for dry clothing, but had scarcely reached the sitting room, when a violent ringing of the bell and a cautious glance through the window warned them that Mr. Rouser, true to his promise, had arrived; Caleb had scarcely time to lock his master in the bedroom before their unwelcome guest, after shooting off the lock on the door, strode angrily into the room, and to the servant's consternation declared that he would camp right there until Mr. Jones returned!

Julius had gone supperless to bed, and had almost given up hopes of breakfast, when his door opened stealthily and Caleb appeared. Not with breakfast, however, but the morning paper with the headlines, "Julius Jones Drowned—Body Not Yet Recovered!" Then followed a long account of the empty boat, the coat and suit-case. But comment was cut short by Mr. Rouser lustily calling for breakfast. As it was impossible for Caleb to get out through the sitting-room, Julius hastily tied the sheets together and assisted him out of the window.

All might have gone well had it not been for the new policeman, who, seeing a man leaving the house in that fashion, called for assistance, and in a few moments, not only were Caleb and Hank whisked off to the station house, but Julius as well. Fortunately, the lieutenant recognized the latter and his servant, and at once discharged them, while "Big Noise Hank" was unceremoniously locked up for carrying concealed weapons and disturbing the peace.

THE SUIT-CASE MYSTERY

Nestor Release, November 4

"Red Mike" and "Yellow Joe," a pair of crooks, overhear Ethelyn Flounce's appeal to Policeman Macclub. Her suit-case, filled with all her valuables, has been stolen. Won't the uniformed chap please find it for her? He will.

The two crooks are also on the lookout for the lady's valuables, and prove to be better sleuths than the guardian of the peace. From the interior of an auction room issues forth a man and a suit-case. The man fits the description given to the police and the case—well. "Red Mike" and his companion, "Yellow Joe," are very much on the job and follow both the man and the suit-case.

After some patient work on the pursuers' part, they almost succeed in getting the lady's valuables, but the lynx-eyed officer of the law is there with bells on and captures man, suit-case and valuables—three Teddy bears and a doll. On the same reel is:

MUTT AND JEFF AND THE LADY STENOGRAPHER

Hurrah! Mutt and Jeff go into the life insurance business; the former as a canvasser and the latter (lucky dog!) as a chair-warmer in the company's office.

Mutt tries his "muttiest" to insure various people, but his efforts spell failure. Though a magnet, he's not magnetic, and the people's wrath as well as hands and feet are drawn to him. At last, an old man permits the persistent canvasser to explain the multitudinous advantages of insurance; but, alas! the aged fellow, though a very good listener, does not hear—he's both deaf and dumb.

Jeff, however, faces quite differently; he is "solid" with the man "higher up" and is making a decided hit with the charming lady stenographer. The little chap believes in making hay while the sun shines, and as a result, the girl coyly consents to go to the theatre with him this very evening.

Mutt tires of the "receiver general" job and goes home pretty well mussed up and feeling considerably sore. Here he finds his little friend all spruced up and enveloped in his evening togs. What's up? Jeff won't tell and departs. Mutt follows; and at the affectionate meeting of Jeff and the pretty gir-r-r-l, his optics bulge out with envy.

Will the lady be glad to see a nickel show? No; she will not. Mutt comes to the rescue and walks away with the fair one.

Who is that big, burly gent camping on Jeff's trail? The stenog.'s hubby. Ha! the plot thickens. With a diplomatic whisper Jeff saves himself, and the tough "gink" goes after the "tall" game. Poor Mutt gets the finishing touches and soon reposes on the cold, cold ground. The "woman in the case" casts a derisive smile at the fallen Don Juan and leisurely walks away with her hubby.

Jeff, true to his business training, sits upon Mutt's chest and hastily writes him a life insurance policy.

A COWARD'S REGENERATION

Yankee Release, November 6

Courage was never a great factor in the make-up of Dick Moore, and, when his father orders him to give up the girl whom he loves Dick, after a mild excuse, consents to do so. But when he meets his sweetheart, her love and beauty overcome all promises and he decides to run away.

In the meantime, the butler and his wife decide to rob the old man of a large sum of money and in the struggle which ensued the butler picks up a riding crop which belongs to Dick and strikes the old man in the head, killing him instantly. Dick's crop is considered sufficient evidence and a general search is made for him. Instead of facing an inquiry, he deserts his sweetheart at a ferry landing and disappears.

A year later, as a private in the U. S. army he volunteers to carry important papers across the enemy's camp and almosts loses his life in the attempt. While in the hospital tent he is put in the care of a special nurse, in whom he recognizes the sweetheart he had deserted. Explanations follow and the young woman is finally satisfied that she can trust her future with the man who, though at one time a coward, had completely vindicated himself in the brave action for his country.

HE DIDN'T LIKE THE TUNE

Yankee Release, November 10

Mr. and Mrs. Le Moine have just returned from their honeymoon and are visited by Mrs. Le Moine's brother, Franklyn Bachelder. Mrs. Le Moine and her brother both possess musical talent and are very fond of one tune that they play as often as possible, which proves very annoying to Mr. Le Moine. His constant pleading to have them play something else proves unavailing and at last the "worm turns." Le Moine, seated in his room, hears the strains of the hated tune and rushes down to the music room and tearing the violin from his wife's hands, smashes it into a thousand pieces.

The wife and brother plan to repay him for his loss of temper by pretending that the wife has eloped with another man. They leave a note stating these facts and leave the house.

The brother disguises himself and taking two grips they board a train. When the husband reads the note he jumps into an auto and gives chase. An exciting race takes place between the auto and train in which the train wins. The supposed elopers board a launch and are chased in another by the husband. The chase continues in carriage and auto until finally in a roundabout way the elopers reach their home and are having a hearty laugh over their sweet revenge when the husband comes in. When he discovers the trick he shamefacedly promises never again to interfere with their music and to buy his wife a new violin.

FOLKS OF OLD VIRGINIA

Champion Release, November 6

In this story we have a splendid exhibition of the moral and physical strength of courage possessed by the chivalrous Virginians. Don Preston is refused the heart and hand of Vera Chatbourne, one of the fairest of Virginia's femininity. Don is a splendid fellow, strong and courageous, but he retires in defeat before the beautiful Vera. Vera likes him very much; though not after the fashion she cares for Frank Burnell. She loves Frank, and when he sues for her hand, she gives him all the happiness that mortal man need look for—the love of a beautiful woman—beautiful in mind and body.

The breaking out of war starts Don for the front at the head of a regiment. Not so, Frank. He has an invalid mother, and she exacts a promise of her boy to remain with her and soothe her weary progress to the grave.

When it is discovered that Frank is not going to war, he is taunted by his comrades; but their taunts avail not. His moral courage rises above it all; he'll stay with his mother. Not understanding or knowing the reason of his action Vera turns against him for his seeming cowardice, and thus she throws him over, and accepts her old suitor, Don, on the eve of his departure for the front. So Don got a taste of happiness also.

Now six months later, Frank's mother departed the world in peace, and Frank flew to the service of his fair Virginia State. Then one day, it became his fortune to save a comrade in the heat of battle. That comrade was Don, mortally wounded. He dragged him into an old house. In looking over the wound, he found a locket of his sweetheart, and there came to Frank a jealousy born of Satan. The house was struck by a bomb and was soon burning fiercely—but not more so than the fire of jealous hate raging within Frank's breast.

He decided then and there to leave his rival to the flames. But he hesitated, his better nature regained the mastery of him, and he seized and carried the stricken man to safety—the Confederate hospital. There, as if ordained by Fate, Vera was nursing. The heroism of Frank now stood out in bold relief. On learning the true cause of his first objection to joining the ranks, Vera opened up the well springs of her heart to him once more, and true happiness came to them.

THE MOONSHINER'S TRAIL

Champion Release, November 8

Up in the mountains of Tennessee, Dave Harvey and his son Jack plied their nefarious calling of making and disposing of illicit whisky. For years they had defied Government sleuths, and offset every plan and trap laid for their capture. However, boldness born of security proved their undoing, and Dave Harvey met with it. One day he drove from his cabin with his wagon stocked with "Mountain Dew" all neatly covered with hay—a very innocent load.

A handsome young revenue officer, one of the bravest and most intelligent in the service, came their way. The wagon did look quite harmless to him, but unfortunately for the Harveys, a jug had overturned and a tiny stream was dripping all the way. In an instant the officer's instinct was aroused. He followed the trail back until it brought him to the cabin.

Harvey's niece was at home. The sleuth had met her before and had been struck by her winsomeness as he slaked his thirst, by her kindness. The girl, too, had been taken by his manly bearing. But yet she deemed his presence a menace and had set off immediately to warn her relatives.

In the meantime, a mishap had befallen them, for an axle had broken on the wagon. Jack at once went for assistance. It so happened he missed the girl on the way, and when she arrived on the scene her uncle mounted the horse, which had been unhitched, and his niece getting on behind him, a wild dash was made for the cabin.

At the cabin the young revenue officer awaited their advent with drawn revolver. Jack was the first to fall into the trap. Later came the father, who found himself looking into the muzzle of a big .45. It seemed all up with them; but not yet. Down on the head of the young officer came a sharp, hard blow from a club, in the hands of the young mountain girl. They fastened the handcuffs on his own wrists.

After making merry at his expense, the two Harveys turned into their blankets and sought repose. A revulsion of feeling overcame the girl. She released the prisoner. Before the morning, he returned with others and made his capture. Love triumphed over the sorrow which the maiden experienced, for locked in the sweet embrace of her lover, a new vista of a brighter world unveiled before her.

THE FALL OF MAN

Powers Release, October 31

Algy, a city chap, visits the country and comes upon a farmer's daughter peeling apples in the yard. He uses all his city tricks to make a mash. He gives her some advice about peeling apples and she tells him that he may go and pick some since he knows how to do it so well. Algy starts for the orchard with a basket and is soon seen up in the tree picking apples.

A couple of tramps come along and endeavor to hold him up. About this time the farm hands learn that there are tramps on the premises. Algy in fear of the tramps comes down from the tree and runs for his life. The farm hands, thinking that Algy is one of them, pursue the frightened dude. Algy runs until out of breath and they overtake him in a marsh where he has floundered in a helpless state. In a sadly bedraggled condition they march him back to the farmhouse, where he is seen by the farmer's daughter, who explains she sent Algy to pick apples and thereby taught him a lesson that he would probably never forget. On the same reel:

THE PROGRESSIVE BOOK AGENT

A foxy book agent comes to a general storekeeper in a country town and expatiates upon the merits of a book that he is handling. The storekeeper does not want to buy it and tells him he has no money and that he will have to see his wife. The book agent goes at once to the storekeeper's house and tells the wife that her husband wants the book and wants her to pay for it. She gives the book agent $2.00 and he leaves the book. The agent then proceeds back to the storekeeper and tells him that his wife desires a copy very much and for him to buy one for her. In this way the book agent gets $2.00 from the merchant and starts on his way to the depot.

After he has gone the storekeeper notices that the book fakir has not left a copy of the book and dispatches his son to overtake the book agent and get the volume. The boy comes upon the man and tells him that he wants the book. The agent gives him the book but tells him that there is $2.00 due on it, whereupon the boy digs deep into his pockets and produces the $2.00 and returns to the store with the volume. At the end we see the book agent smiling to himself on the back platform of the train as it pulls out of the station.

THE PRIDE OF THE WEST

Powers Release, November 4

A group of cowboys are gathered about the railway station post-office in a Western town. The mail train comes and from it alights the paymaster of a large mine situated in that vicinity. The paymaster carries a grip full of money, which is intended for the payroll. John Archer, a cowboy, received a letter at the same time from his mother, stating that the mortgage upon her home will be foreclosed unless a certain amount of money reaches her at a certain time. Previous to this Archer has had trouble with another cowpuncher by the name of Denny O'Shea over the affections of Julia Brett, who is known far and wide as the "Pride of the West" through her abilities as a horsewoman. Archer rides off through the woods. The paymaster follows that way shortly after on his way to the mine.

Knowing the contents of Archer's letter and the contents of the paymaster's bag, O'Shea evolved on the spot a scheme both of revenge and profit and for that purpose rides in their direction. Archer is troubled over the contents of his mother's letter and dismounting sits by the wayside and ponders over how he can raise the funds. In a short time he falls asleep and the letter falls beside him. Denny riding up sees the letter and the cowboy sleeping there, but hides when he hears the paymaster approaching. When he is near O'Shea steps out from the bushes with a mask upon his face and holds up the paymaster. The paymaster rides furiously back to the station and summons a party of cowboys. They ride to the spot and there find only the letter. They read the letter and at once discover what they consider to be his motive for robbing the paymaster. During this time O'Shea is among the cowboys who accuse Archer. By this time Archer has joined his sweetheart and while they are conversing in the meadow, the cowboys descend upon them and arrest Archer. Julia is indignant and determines that she will clear her sweetheart's name before they have a chance to hang him. As the party rides into camp Denny O'Shea lingers behind, riding beside Julia. He takes this opportunity to propose to her and suggests that they elope, at the same time displaying a large roll of bills to show her that he is well fixed. The money arouses Julia's suspicion and as they ride she stealthily draws Denny's pistol from his side and covers him. She then compels him to ride up to the others and they accuse him of being the thief. The money is examined and identified by the paymaster as that which was taken from him. This settles all doubt as to Archer's innocence and the rope is transferred from his neck to the neck of Denny O'Shea. They lead him off exclaiming: "Hang the Mick!"

THE ACTOR AS A SOLDIER

Great Northern Release, November 4

A real comic. One of the funniest pictures of the year, showing the ruses adopted by an actor to secure liberation from military service. Smith's time to become a soldier under conscription has arrived. Smith is an actor, and we see him at a farewell dinner given him by his pals. He makes a bet that on the following Monday morning he will be back with them, exempt from all military service. Off he goes to the barracks, and soon we see him attired in his new garb. He adopts all sorts of tricks in order to win his bet. In his squad he does everything wrong. His rifle always gets on the wrong shoulder; his fingers get jammed in the barrel. On sentry duty, he wraps himself up with all manner of apparel to keep out the cold. Before the commanding officer or at mess, he appears as Hamlet, or Napoleon, and is always giving one the impression of a mad actor. Taken before the surgeon, he is examined and his antics procure for him the coveted document informing all and sundry that "Mr. John Smith is unqualified for military service on account of mental debility."

Armed with this, he repairs to the restaurant where his friends have assembled in the hope of winning their bet. But they are doomed to disappointment for at the stroke of time agreed upon, Smith enters and collects ten to one all around.

THE TALE OF A CAT

Rex Release, November 2

A dumb thing to which we show a kindness isn't always the only animal that benefits by it. Sometimes the human animals who bestow the kindness profit as much as the primary recipient. Even a thing as scruffy and unimportant as a cat may be the agent Providence selects to secure its ultimate purpose, and bring peace and content that before were not.

Mrs. Moore takes in washing to support herself and her blind little child, Helen. Among her patrons is Mr. Thornton, a wealthy widower. His little motherless boy, Robert, alone and lonely all day in the big empty house, with its luxury and dreariness, its wealth and woe, yearns for a comrade. So Mr. Thornton gives him a kitten to be a companion to him. Housekeepers are not the most tender and sentimental brand of humanity, and Thornton's housekeeper, determined to be rid of the feline nuisance, gives it to Mrs. Moore when she calls for her wash.

The heart of the blind little girl is made happy by the soft, furry, little pussy. So, as all through life, one's joy is another's grief.

Then fate, or a feline whim, or the wanderlust, or kittenish skittishness, impels the cat to return to the scenes of her childhood. She meanders back to her former master, and the little girl is desolate over the loss of her loved possession. She sets out to find the treacherous treasure, and after an ardent and arduous search discovers her in the proud and protecting possession of Master Thornton. She demands the cat, and what at first looks like a belligerent episode transforms into a peace congress. The boy looks at the tender little face, shy and sweet and sombre with the shadow of suffering. He looks into her unseeing eyes, and something that one day the world would call manhood comes to the fore. That which more than any other one thing has banished brutality and bestiality from the earth and made men civilized—the little thing called sympathy—surges through the three feet of his being, an eloquent response to the silent sorrow of the other. . . . They become friends.

Mrs. Moore, anxious about the girl's absence, sets out to seek her, and finds the three playmates together. She asks the girl to come home, but the boy, who now wants to keep his new playmate even more than before he wanted to keep the cat, protests. He appeals to his father to detain the girl, and the latter solves the problem by engaging Mrs. Moore as housekeeper.

Mr. Thornton procures surgical assistance for the girl. . . . The operation is successful, and the little blind girl can at last SEE the blessings of friendship. The years fly by, you know, and perhaps some day the boy and girl will tell another little boy and girl to LOVE DUMB ANIMALS!

FOR THE TRIBE

Powers Release, November 11

Frank Deerhead is his name to-day. It's twenty years since Banker Ferguson adopted him, and took him away from the land of tepees to the East, where he became one of the Ferguson family, and a valuable business aid, trusted and highly honored by the old banker. More than that, in fact, for it had long been whispered about that the handsome Indian was paying reciprocated court to pretty Jane Ferguson.

He wrote his father, Chief Sharp Arrow, often, and he was the pride of the tribe. One day the long-kept peace of the tribe was broken by Fierce Wolf, who incited his Indian brethren to rise against their white neighbors. Old Sharp Arrow delivered a mighty oration, pleading with the braves to be peaceful, but they would not have it so, telling him he was old and tired of the excitement they craved. So the old chief sent for his son, from the land of the white man.

And Frank came. Came, and saw, and conquered. But even while he was preparing to go back to his love and the Eastern light, Fierce Wolf, the plotter, laid the old chief low in a jealous rage. But before he went to the Happy Hunting Grounds he called his son to him and charged him with the duty of keeping peace in the tribe.

Frank's situation—Jane Ferguson, luxury, civilization on one hand; on the other, his father's last wish that he remain the Indian chief he was born to be. And now, as ever, the call of blood, of race, of tradition and the primal order of things, conquers absolutely. Frank is an Indian.

MOBILIZATION OF THE AMERICAN FLEET

Powers Release, Tuesday, November 7

The gathering of the greatest fleet ever assembled under the American flag has set the world agog. One hundred and two fighting vessels strung along the beautiful Hudson River is an inspiring sight, and most appropriate it is that Uncle Sam chose that magnificent setting for this gigantic display of his strength on the seas. We steam up along the line of grim fighters, then take a survey of the general make-up of several of the biggest of the water bulldogs, with their trim decks and majestic new-style skeleton masts.

But even more than this, for we now go into the quarters of the men, and call them out on the big parade-deck to go through their masterful drills for us. We size up the work of various crews, then watch them at the serious work of keeping their big floating home in order. By this time they are all pretty well tired out, so they adjourn to the forecastle, and start their dances, music, and those hundred and one pranks and tricks that have made your Uncle Sammy's Jacktars the rollicking, jolly sailor boys that they are.

Theatre Sales Co.
211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call.
Make Known your Wants

25c IN STAMPS GIVES YOU ONE COPY OF
HALLBERG'S
1912 MOTION PICTURE CATALOGUE AND REFERENCE BOOK

I, HALLBERG, "The Economizer Man," have advanced several thousand dollars to secure an edition of 10,000 copies of the above mentioned book, and guarantee the book to be the most complete and reliable information on the subjects of electrical equipment for theatres of all kinds; motion picture machine and opera chair installations, together with all specialties required for up-to-date motion picture theatres.

MANAGERS AND OPERATORS SEND 25c TODAY, TO SECURE A COPY from the first edition, with the understanding that I will give you credit for the 25c on your first order for any kind of goods amounting to $2.00 or more.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Powers and Motiograph Machines, and will Exchange for Either, or Any Other Make You Desire.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Free Catalogue No. 2.

QUICK—CHEAP—GOOD

OPERA CHAIRS

Ask for Catalog 306

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.,
218 So. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Something Interesting

Moving Picture Exchanges and Exhibitors Increase your business by writing to

ORTHO FILM CO., Inc.,
40 East 12th Street, New York.

THEATRE WANTED
Will buy Moving Picture Theatre in small city of the Middle West. W. S. PUTNAM, Hotel Wellington, CHICAGO, ILL.

TRUE MERIT ALWAYS WINS

Through the perfecting of our quality the demand for quantity has increased.

We have studied the popular taste, caught the spirit of the New Era and release in our weekly Program rare pictorial dramatizations that have a noble mission to fufill, but an advertisement is not the place to proclaim it. It is up to you to run them in your theatre and thus let the public reap the educational benefits therefrom.

Did you ever stop to think how easy it is to claim FIRST QUALITY, HIGHEST STANDARD ?

This the Sales Co. is in position to do, as popular opinion is with us on this point.
Through our superior Program of weekly releases

MONDAY	IMP, ECLAIR, COMET, AMERICAN, CHAMPION.
TUESDAY	THANHOUSER, BISON, POWERS.
WEDNESDAY	CHAMPION, SOLAX, RELIANCE, AMBROSIO, NESTOR.
THURSDAY	REX, AMERICAN, IMP.
FRIDAY	COMET, SOLAX, LUX, THANHOUSER, BISON.
SATURDAY	POWERS, ITALA, GT. NORTHERN, NESTOR, RELIANCE.

we have won this popular opinion not only in this country but foreign countries, thereby creating a greater demand for our films and enabling the public to see and appreciate the best. Years of experience and expenditure of vast sums of money have brought our releases up to this standard.

COMING ADDITIONAL RELEASES

NESTOR'S THIRD WEEKLY RELEASE—Starts MONDAY, NOVEMBER 20th.
ECLAIR-AMERICAN—Starts TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21st.
REPUBLIC (Two reel subjects)—Starts SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18th or 25th.
MAJESTIC RELEASE—Starts SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 26th.
IMP, REX, SOLAX AND POWERS, additional release dates will be advertised later.

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING SALES & COMPANY

114 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

		Feet
Sept.	23—The Mask of the Red Death
Sept.	27—Alice's Dream
Sept.	23—The Hornet (Com.)
Sept.	27—Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)
Oct.	4—Wrestlers and Wrestling
Oct.	11—The Little Chimney Sweeper
Oct.	14—Tweedledum's Monkey
Oct.	14—One of Tweedledum's Tricks (Com.)
Oct.	18—The Conversion of St. Anthony
Oct.	25—Salambo
Nov.	1—Judas (Dr.)

AMERICAN

Sept.	7—Three Million Dollars (W. Dr.)	1000
Sept.	11—The Stage Rohhers of San Juan (W. Com.-Dr.)
Sept.	14—The Mother of the Ranch (W. Dr.)	1000
Sept.	18—The Gun Man
Sept.	21—The Claim Jumper
Sept.	25—The Circular Fence (Com. Dr.)	1000
Sept.	28—The Rustler Sheriff (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—The Love of the West (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—The Miner's Wife (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—The Land Thieves (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—The Cowhoy and the Outlaw (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	16—Three Daughters of the West (Dr.)	850
Oct.	16—The Caves of LaJolla (Sc.)	150
Oct.	19—The Lonely Range (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	23—The Horse Thief's Bigamy (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	26—The Trail of the Eucalyptus (Dr.)	1000

CHAMPION

Sept.	27—The Cook of the Ranch	950
Oct.	2—Barhara Frietchie	950
Oct.	4—As Things Used to Be	950
Oct.	9—The National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley	950
Oct.	11—What the Indians Did	950
Oct.	16—A Girl and a Spy (Dr.)	950
Oct.	18—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)	950
Oct.	23—The Copperhead	950
Oct.	25—Law or the Lady	950
Oct.	30—Field Day Sports at Ft. Riley, Kansas	950
Nov.	1—The Cowhoy's Pies	950
Nov.	6—Folks of Old Virginia	950
Nov.	8—The Moonshiner's Trail	950

ECLAIR

Sept.	4—All On Account of a Coat (Com.)	886
Sept.	11—How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris	630
Sept.	11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.)	335
Sept.	18—Magic Music	330
Sept.	18—When the Leaves Fall	665
Sept.	25—A Just General (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—Hearts and Eyes	630
Oct.	2—For Your Hats, Ladies	370
Oct.	9—Better to Have Remained Blind (Dr.)	740
Oct.	9—The Motor Chair (Com.)	260
Oct.	16—A Lucky Change (Com.)	805
Oct.	16—Lake Garda (Scenic)	185
Oct.	23—Youth! Queen of Hearts" (Com.)	740
Oct.	23—Percy Gets Tired of the Theater (Com.)	260
Oct.	30—A Father's Heart (Dr.)	920

GREAT NORTHERN

Aug.	5—The Burglar and the Girl (Dr.)
Aug.	12—The Mother's Mark (Dr.)
Aug.	12—Teddy Trained hy His Mother (Com.)
Aug.	19—The Victory of Love (Dr.)	950
Aug.	26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.)
Sept.	2—The Foundling (Dr.)
Sept.	9—A Dream with a Lesson
Sept.	16—The Conspirators (Dr.)
Sept.	23—Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)
Sept.	30—The Conspirators (Dr.)
Oct.	7—The White Tulip (Com.)
Oct.	7—Barcelona (Scenic)
Oct.	14—Secret of the Underground Passage (Dr.)
Oct.	21—His Fidelity Investigated (Com.)
Oct.	28—The Vicissitudes of Fate (Dr.)

IMP

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Aug.	28—His Royal Highness (Com.)
Aug.	28—Hot Springs, Arkansas (Sc.)
Aug.	31—The Toss of a Coin (Com.)
Sept.	4—The Haunted House (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	7—Duty (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	11—By the House that Jack Built (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	14—The Brothers (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood
Sept.	18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream
Sept.	21—By Registered Mail
Sept.	25—The Co-Ed. Professor (Com.)	750
Sept.	25—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.)	250
Sept.	28—'Tween Two Loves (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—The Rose's Story (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—Through the Air (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—The Sentinel Asleep
Oct.	12—The Better Way
Oct.	16—Uncle Pete's Ruse
Oct.	19—The Aggressor
Oct.	23—The Biting Business
Oct.	26—The Waif
Oct.	30—His Dress Shirt
Oct.	30—A Few Minutes with Steeplejack Lindholm
Nov.	2—King, the Detective

ITALA

July	27—The Fatal Sonata (Dr.)
July	29—Toto's Butterfly (Com.)
July	29—Toto Without Water (Com.)
Aug.	3—The Evening Bell
Aug.	5—Foolshead's Last Roguery
Aug.	12—Sport Restores Youth
Aug.	17—Toto's Little Cart
Aug.	17—In the Valley of Viege
Aug.	19—Foolshead—Manikin
Aug.	19—The Blunt Sword
Aug.	24—Modern School of Italian Cavalry
Aug.	26—Foolshead—Chauffeur
Aug.	26—For a Straw
Sept.	2—Clio and Phyletes
Sept.	7—The Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dr.)
Sept.	9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.)
Sept.	9—Toto Has a Purse
Sept.	16—The Horse of the Regiment (Com.)
Sept.	16—Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.)
Sept.	23—The Mask of the Red Death
Sept.	23—The Hornet
Oct.	7—Foolshead a Model Guest
Oct.	21—Foolshead Quarrels With His Sweetheart

LUX.

By Prieur.

Sept.	8—A Romance of a Wager (Dr.)	642
Sept.	15—Bill as a Billposter (Com.)	573
Sept.	15—His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.)	357
Sept.	22—Bill as an Express Messenger (Com.)	344
Sept.	22—The Stolen Diamond (Dr.)	629
Sept.	29—Bill and His Friend (Com.)	491
Sept.	29—The Little Goatherd (Dr.)	386
Oct.	6—Bill Has a Bath (Com.)	452
Oct.	6—Neighhors (Com.)	488
Oct.	13—A Dog in a Coiner's Den (Dr.)	593
Oct.	13—Bill, Police Cyclist (Com.)	390
Oct.	20—Bill Pays His Dehts (Com.)	442
Oct.	20—Henpecked Bertie Goes Fishing (Com.)	514
Oct.	27—Bill. His Wife and the Water (Com.)	455
Oct.	27—Bertie and His Rivals (Com.)	472
Nov.	3—Bill and the Bear (Com.)	554
Nov.	3—Tommy's Camera (Com.)	393

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

Sept.	27—The Young Doctor (Dr.)
Sept.	30—Mutt and Jeff as Reporters (Com.)
Sept.	30—Getting Even (Com.)
Oct.	4—Those Jersey Cowpunchers (Dr.)
Oct.	7—Mutt and Jeff Spend a Quiet Day in the Country (Com.)
Oct.	7—The Meddling Parson (Com.)
Oct.	11—Let Us Smooth the Way (Dr.)
Oct.	14—Mutt and Jeff and the Blackhand (Com.)
Oct.	14—Romance and Uppercuts (Com.)
Oct.	18—The Town Marshal (Com. Dr.)
Oct.	21—Mutt and Jeff Join the Opera Co.
Oct.	21—The Blessed Bahy (Com.)
Oct.	25—Lone Bill's Last Ride (Dr.)
Oct.	28—Mutt and Jeff Discover a Wonderful Remedy (Com.)
Oct.	28—Dippy Advertises for a Pup (Com.)
Nov.	1—Big Noise Hank (W. Com.)
Nov.	4—Mutt and Jeff and the Lady Stenographer (Com.)
Nov.	4—The Suit Case Mystery (Com.)

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

Sept.	8—A Western Tramp
Sept.	12—The Lost Letter
Sept.	15—Lone Star's Return
Sept.	19—The Sheriff's Brother
Sept.	22—The Missionary's Gratitude
Sept.	26—Lucky Boh
Sept.	29—White Fawn's Peril
Oct.	3—The Red Man's Penalty
Oct.	6—Range Justice
Oct.	10—The Pioneer's Mistake
Oct.	13—The Indian Rustlers
Oct.	17—A Western Bride
Oct.	20—A Warrior's Treachery
Oct.	24—A Noble Red Man
Oct.	27—An Indian Hero
Oct.	31—The Cattlemen's War
Nov.	3—A Young Squaw's Bravery
Nov.	7—A Race for a Bride

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

		Feet
Sept.	16—The Horse Thief (Dr.)	950
Sept.	19—Lost in a Hotel (Dr.)
Sept.	19—An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.)
Sept.	23—Red Man's Honor (Dr.)
Sept.	26—The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.)	300
Sept.	26—Imaginative Willie (Com.)	670
Sept.	30—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.)	970
Oct.	3—The Call from the Hills (Com.)
Oct.	3—A Matrimonial Idyl (Dr.)
Oct.	7—The Branded Indian (Dr.)
Oct.	10—Large Lakes of Italy (Scenic)	285
Oct.	10—Thou Shalt Not Steal (Com.)	700
Oct.	14—Running Fawn's Chief (Dr.)	990
Oct.	17—Yarn of a Bahy's Shirt (Com.)
Oct.	17—First Mail hy Aeroplane (Topical)
Oct.	17—Headline Acrohats (Com.)
Oct.	21—The Awakening of John Clark (Dr.)
Oct.	24—John Baxter's Ward (Dr.)
Oct.	24—The Little Brown Calf (Dr.)
Oct.	28—The Revenue Officer's Last Case (Dr.)
Oct.	31—Apples and Destiny (Com.)
Oct.	31—The Progressive Book Agent (Com.)
Nov.	4—The Pride of the West (Dr.)

RELIANCE

Oct.	7—The Anonymous Letter
Oct.	11—The Human Sacrifice
Oct.	14—A Narrow Escape
Oct.	18—The Trapper's Daughter
Oct.	21—Divorce
Oct.	25—The Empty Crih
Oct.	28—The Test of a Man
Nov.	1—A Mix-up in Suitcases
Nov.	4—The Greater Love

REX

Sept.	7—Picturesque Colorado (Scenic)
Sept.	14—Faith (Dr.)
Sept.	21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.)
Sept.	28—The Derelict (Dr.)
Oct.	5—Lost Illusions (Dr.)
Oct.	12—Chasing a Rainhow
Oct.	19—Her Sister
Oct.	26—A Breach of Faith (Dr.)
Nov.	2—The Tale of a Cat

SOLAX COMPANY

Oct.	4—A Breezy Morning (Com.)
Oct.	6—His Sister's Sweetheart (Military)
Oct.	11—He Was a Millionaire (Com.)
Oct.	13—His Mother's Hymn (Dr.)
Oct.	18—A Corner in Criminals (Com.)
Oct.	18—A Lover's Ruse (Com.)
Oct.	20—His Better Self (Mil. Dr.)
Oct.	25—Percy and His Squaw (Com.)
Oct.	27—For Big Brother's Sake (Dr.)
Nov.	1—Following Cousin's Footsteps (Com.)
Nov.	3—A Heroine of the Revolution (Dr.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug.	15—Nohody Loves a Fat Woman
Aug.	18—The Train Dispatcher (Dr.)
Aug.	22—The Cross
Aug.	25—The Romance of Lonely Island
Aug.	29—The Moth
Sept.	1—Romeo and Juliet, Part I
Sept.	5—Count Ivan and the Waitress
Sept.	8—Romeo and Juliet, Part 2
Sept.	12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.)
Sept.	15—In the Chorus (Dr.)
Sept.	19—The Lie (Dr.)
Sept.	22—The Honeymooners (Dr.)
Sept.	26—Lochinvar (Dr.)
Sept.	29—Love's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Oct.	3—The Five Rose Sisters (Dr.)
Oct.	6—The East and the West (Dr.)
Oct.	9—The Higher Law (Dr.)
Oct.	13—The Tempter and Dan Cupid (Dr.)
Oct.	17—The Early Life of David Copperfield
Oct.	24—Little Em'ly and David Copperfield
Oct.	31—The Loves of David Copperfield
Oct.	20—The Satyr and the Lady (Dr.)
Oct.	27—The Jewels of Allah (Dr.)
Nov.	3—Their Burglar

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Aug.	21—Colleen Bawn (Dr.)
Aug.	25—Retaliation (Dr.)
Aug.	28—The Power of Devotion (Dr.)
Sept.	1—A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.)
Sept.	4—Inshavogue (Dr.)
Sept.	8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.)
Sept.	8—Faded Roses (Dr.)
Sept.	11—Tangled Heartstrings
Sept.	15—Woman
Sept.	18—The Star Reporter
Sept.	22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)
Sept.	25—For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.)
Sept.	29—Man (Dr.)
Oct.	2—She Never Knew (Dr.)
Oct.	6—The Goose Girl (Dr.)
Oct.	9—His Second Wife
Oct.	13—Society Hohos
Oct.	16—The Lost Handkerchief (Com.)
Oct.	20—The Man Who Came Back (Dr.)
Oct.	23—The Drummer Boy of Shiloh (Dr.)
Oct.	27—Flower of the Forest (Dr.)
Oct.	30—The Van Osten Jewels (Dr.)
Nov.	3—At Daisy Farm (Dr.)

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

		Feet
Sept. 11	The Lucky Horseshoe (Com.)	321
Sept. 14	The Squaw's Love (Dr.)	998
Sept. 18	Dan, the Dandy (Com.)	998
Sept. 21	When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.)	463
Sept. 21	A Convenient Burglar (Com.)	534
Sept. 25	The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.)	999
Sept. 28	Her Awakening (Dr.)	997
Oct. 2	Too Many Burglars (Com.)	499
Oct. 2	Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Com.)	497
Oct. 5	The Making of a Man (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 9	Italian Blood (Dr.)	999
Oct. 12	Trailing the Counterfeiter (Com.)	529
Oct. 12	Josh's Suicide (Com.)	469
Oct. 16	The Unveiling (Dr.)	998
Oct. 19	The Adventures of Billy (Dr.)	999
Oct. 23	Through His Wife's Picture (Com.)	530
Oct. 23	The Inventor's Secret (Com.)	468
Oct. 26	The Long Road (Dr.)	999
Oct 30	Love in the Hills (Dr.)	998
Nov. 2	A Victim of Circumstances (Com.)	382
Nov. 2	Their First Divorce Case (Com.)	616

EDISON

Oct. 17	An Old Sweetheart of Mine (Dr.)	945
Oct. 18	Mike's Hero (Com.)	650
Oct. 18	Launching of the Battleship Rivadavia	350
Oct. 20	A Conspiracy Against the King (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 21	Three of a Kind (Com.)	1000
Oct. 24	A Day at West Point Military Academy, N. Y.	1000
Oct. 25	The Fairies' Banquet (Com.)	400
Oct. 25	How the Telephone Came to Town (Com.)	600
Oct. 28	An Island Comedy (Com.)	1000
Oct. 28	The Kid from the Klondyke (Com.)	1000
Oct. 31	The Reform Candidate (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 1	The Rise and Fall of Weary Willie (Com.)	1000
Nov. 3	The Girl and the Motor Boat (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 4	Love and Hatred (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 7	A Modern Cinderella (Com.)	1000
Nov. 8	Logan's Babies (Com.)	1000
Nov. 10	The Black Arrow (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 11	Willie Wise and His Motor Boat (Com.)	650
Nov. 11	Icebergs Off the Coast of Labrador	340
Nov. 14	Ludwig from Germany (Com.)	1000
Nov. 15	The Living Peach (Com.)	600
Nov. 15	The Young Men's Christian Association	400

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Oct. 13	The Deacon's Reward (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 14	The Stage Driver's Daughter (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 17	A False Suspicion (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 19	Their Tiny Babies (Com.)
Oct. 19	'Tis Better to Have Loved and Lost (Com.)	1000
Oct. 20	Dr. Bill's Patient (Com.)	1000
Oct. 21	A Western Redemption (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 24	The Tricked Trickster (Com.)
Oct. 24	The Family Pet Revenge (Com.)	1000
Oct. 25	Athletics vs. Giants in the World's Championship Baseball Series of 1911 (Topical)	1000
Oct. 26	Too Many Engagements (Com.)	1000
Oct. 27	Pals (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 28	The Forester's Plea (W. Dr.)
Oct. 31	Outwitting Papa (Com.)	1000
Nov. 2	The Right John Smith (Com.)	364
Nov. 2	Hi Feather at the Fair (Com.)	636
Nov. 3	Bill Bumper's Bargain (Com.)	1000
Nov. 4	The Outlaw Deputy (W. Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Sept. 19	Jimmie on Guard (Dr.)	710
Sept. 19	Crossing the Alps in a Motor	285
Sept. 23	A Heart Breaker by Trade (Com.)	710
Sept. 23	The Culture of Bulbous Flowers	290
Sept. 26	A Friend of the Family (Com.)	850
Sept. 26	The City of Bordeaux, France (Trav.)	175
Sept. 30	Hearts May be Broken (Dr.)	1015
Oct. 3	Jimmie's Midnight Flight (Dr.)	675
Oct. 3	Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Trav.	325
Oct. 7	The Upward Way (Dr.)	726
Oct. 7	Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal	269
Oct. 10	The Missing Bracelet (Dr.)	1150
Oct. 14	Rejected (Dr.)	845
Oct. 14	Pansies (Botanical)	155
Oct. 17	Done Brown (Com.)	837
Oct. 17	A Fairyland of Frost and Snow (Scenic)	163
Oct. 21	The Masked Huntsman (Dr.)	784
Oct. 21	Opening Flowers (Botanical)	216
Oct. 24	Jimmie in Love (Com.)	555
Oct. 24	The Ostrich Plume Industry, France (Ind.)	428
Oct. 28	Fridolin	578
Oct. 28	The Principality of Monaco	400
Oct. 31	The Widower	1020
Nov. 4	The Jesting Princess (Com. Dr.)	787
Nov. 4	Belgian Cavalry at Exercise (Mil.)	200
Nov. 7	The Vagabond (Dr.)	623
Nov. 7	A Trip on a Dirigible Balloon (Topical)	331
Nov. 11	The Hour of Execution (Dr.)	787
Nov. 11	Manresa, a Spanish Town (Travel)	200
Nov. 14	Jimmie and His Country Uncle (Com.)	820
Nov. 14	The Outskirts of Paris (Scenic)	164

KALEM CO.

Sept. 18	The Ranger's Strategem (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 20	Losing to Win (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 22	The Cowboy's Bride (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 25	Arizona Bill (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 27	Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 29	The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	The Phoney Strike Breakers (C.)	1000
Oct. 4	The Saving Sign (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6	The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 9	The Mistress of Hacienda Del Cerro (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 11	For the Flag of France (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 13	The Smugglers (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 16	The Colleen Bawn (3 reels)	3000
Oct. 18	Daniel Boone's Bravery (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 20	The Mesquite's Gratitude (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 23	A Prisoner of Mexico (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 25	The Lost Freight Car (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 27	The Peril of the Plains (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 30	For Her Brother's Sake (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 1	The Greatest of Engineering Feats.
Nov. 1	The Plot Against Bertie (Com.)
Nov. 3	The Price of Ambition (Dr.)

LUBIN

Oct. 5	His Exoneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 7	Revenge is Sweet (Com.)
Oct. 7	From the Field to the Cradle (Ind.)	1000
Oct. 9	What Will Be, Will Be (Com.)	1000
Oct. 11	The Slavey's Affinity (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 12	The Gambler's Influence (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 14	A Hot Time in Atlantic City	1000
Oct. 16	The Maniac (Com.)	1000
Oct. 18	The Cure of John Douglas (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 19	Git a Hoss (Com.)	1000
Oct. 21	Tobacco Industry (Edu.)
Oct. 21	Her Exclusive Hat (Com.)
Oct. 21	Willie's Conscience (Com.)	1000
Oct. 23	The Scandal Mongers (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 25	The Tars Ashore (Com.)	1000
Oct. 26	A Rural Conqueror (Com.)	1000
Oct. 28	Love's Victory (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 30	Somebody's Mother (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 1	A Gay Time in Atlantic City (Com.)	1000
Nov. 2	One on Reno (Com. Dr.)	1000
Nov. 4	The Mexican (Com.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Aug. 24	A Spanish Love Song (Dr.)
Aug. 31	The Call of the Wilderness (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 7	The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 14	A Shattered Dream (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 21	$200.00 (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 28	The Mission Waif (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 5	The Stolen Grey (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 12	Tommy's Rocking Horse (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 19	The Cross of Pearls (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 26	The Gypsy Bride (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 2	Right or Wrong (Dr.)	360
Nov. 2	Mexican as It Is Spoken (Com.)	590

PATHE FRERES

Oct. 3	Pathe's Weekly (No. 40)
Oct. 4	Crazy Dope (Com.)
Oct. 4	Circus in Australia (Scenic)
Oct. 5	The Squaw's Mistaken Love (Dr.)
Oct. 6	Flirts (Dr. Com.)
Oct. 6	Fishing in the Ceran Islands, Oceania (Scenic)
Oct. 7	For Massa's Sake (Dr.)
Oct. 9	The Little Animal Trainer (Dr.)
Oct. 9	Bttty's Boat (Com.)
Oct. 9	Marvelous Transformations
Oct. 10	Pathe's Weekly (No. 41)
Oct. 11	One on the Masher (Com.)
Oct. 11	Scenes on the U. S. S. Connecticut
Oct. 12	Romance of the Desert (Dr.)
Oct. 13	Raffles Caught (Dr.)
Oct. 13	Guerrero Troup
Oct. 14	Marooned (Dr.)
Oct. 16	The Gambler's Dream (Dr.)
Oct. 17	Pathe's Weekly No. 42
Oct. 18	The Ranch Girl's Terrible Mistake (Dr.)
Oct. 19	The Renegade Brother (Dr.)
Oct. 20	A Trip Down the Magdapis River (Scenic)
Oct. 20	Eva Moves In (Com.)
Oct. 20	Up the Flue (Com.)
Oct. 21	A Puritan Courtship (Dr.)
Oct. 23	The Traitor (Dr.)
Oct. 23	Nomadic Tribes in El Kantara Gorges (Algeria) (Sc.)
Oct. 24	Pathe's Weekly No. 43
Oct. 25	Revolution in a Bachelor's Club (Com.)
Oct. 26	In Frontier Days (Dr.)
Oct. 26	The Island of St. Kilda, Scotland (Sc.)
Oct. 27	Mother is Strong on Hypnotism (Com.)
Oct. 27	Funeral in Annam (Sc.)
Oct. 27	Logging and Milling in Sweden (Sc.)
Oct. 28	Saved by the Flag (Dr.)
Oct. 30	Grandfather's Violin (Dr.)	754
Oct. 30	A Burlesque Bullfight (Com.)	210
Nov. 1	Love Moulds Labor (Dr.)	941
Nov. 2	A Sioux Lover's Strategy	899
Nov. 3	An Episode Under Henri III	968
Nov. 4	The Coward (Dr.)	1000

SELIG

Oct. 9	An Indian Vestal (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 10	Told in Colorado (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 12	Out-generaled (Com.)	1000
Oct. 13	Making a Six-Ton Cheese (Edu.)	425
Oct. 13	Seeing Washington (Sc.)	575
Oct. 16	Making a Man of Him (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 17	On Separate Paths (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 19	The Run on the Bank (Com.)	1000
Oct. 20	His Better Self (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 23	Coals of Fire (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 24	Why the Sheriff is a Bachelor (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 26	Lost in the Jungle	1070
Oct. 27	A Painter's Idyl	1000
Oct. 30	Little Injin (Dr. Com.)	1000
Oct. 31	Captain Brand's Wife	1000
Nov. 2	The Inner Mind	1000
Nov. 3	His First Long Trousers (Com.)	500
Nov. 6	The Coquette	1000
Nov. 7	Western Hearts (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 9	Old Billy	1000
Nov. 10	Lieutenant Grey	1000

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

July 5	Ancient and Modern London	530
July 5	Boys Will Be Boys (Com.)	470
July 12	The Free Lance (Dr.)	640
July 12	Temples of India	365
July 19	The Tie That Binds (Dr.)	760
July 19	A Round-Up In Chili	240
July 26	An Amateur Skater	440
July 26	Satan on a Rampage	660
Aug. 2	The Struggle for Life	650
Aug. 2	On the Coast of Bengal	326
Aug. 9	The Heiress	705
Aug. 9	Lyons, the Second City of France	295
Aug. 16	For the Honor of the Name (Dr.)	790
Aug. 16	Moss-Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight	245
Aug. 23	Condemned for Treason (Dr.)	845
Aug. 23	Wool Industry of Hungary	135
Aug. 30	A King for an Hour (Com.)	572
Aug. 30	Sights of Berlin	423
Sept. 6	Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)	675
Sept. 6	Lake Thun in Switzerland (Scenic)	325
Sept. 13	The Hand of the Law (Dr.)	665
Sept. 13	Norwich and Vicinity, England (Travel)	330
Sept. 20	In Ancient Days (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 27	The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.)	458
Sept. 27	Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)	542
Oct. 4	A Jealous Wife (Com.)	338
Oct. 4	The Grand Chartreuse (Trav.)	292
Oct. 4	Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Com.)	348
Oct. 11	Pardoned by the Governor (Dr.)	646
Oct. 11	Making Cheddar Cheese (Ind.)	342
Oct. 18	Ordered to Move On (Dr.)	605
Oct. 18	Madeira, Portugal (Travel)	385
Oct. 25	A Woman's Slave (Dr.)	950
Nov. 1	Trapped (Dr.)	975
Nov. 8	An Eye for an Eye (His. Dr.)	1000

VITAGRAPH

Sept. 4	A Friendly Marriage (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 6	The Willow Tree (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 8	Cherry Blossoms (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 9	Jimmie's Job (Com.)	1000
Sept. 12	Her Crowning Glory (Com.)	1000
Sept. 13	Beyond the Law	1000
Sept. 15	Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.)	1000
Sept. 16	By Woman's Wit (Com.)	1000
Sept. 18	One Flag at Last (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 19	How Millie Became an Actress (Com.)	1000
Sept. 20	Beyond the Law (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 22	Forgotten (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 23	Over the Chafing Dish (Com.)
Sept. 23	The Tired, Absent-Minded Man (Com.)	1000
Sept. 25	By the Camp Fire's Flicker	1000
Sept. 26	His Sister's Children	1000
Sept. 27	A Western Heroine	1000
Sept. 29	The Ninety and Nine	1000
Sept. 30	Her Hero	1000
Oct. 2	Our Navy	1000
Oct. 3	The Wager (Com.)	1000
Oct. 4	The Mate of the John M. (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 6	Carr's Regeneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 7	Ups and Downs (Com.)	1000
Oct. 9	Daddy's Boy and Mammy	1000
Oct. 10	The Missing Will	1000
Oct. 11	The Indian Flute	1000
Oct. 13	Answer of the Roses	1000
Oct. 14	By Way of Mrs. Browning	1000
Oct. 16	The Fighting Schoolmaster	1000
Oct. 17	Vitagraph Monthly	1000
Oct. 18	Selecting His Heiress (Com.)	1000
Oct. 20	The Cabin Boy (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 21	Lady Godiva (His. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 23	The Foolishness of Jealousy	1000
Oct. 24	Wig Wag	1000
Oct. 25	Aunt Huldah, the Matchmaker	1000
Oct. 27	Kitty and the Cowboys	1000
Oct. 28	Regeneration	1000
Oct. 30	Captain Barnacle, Diplomat	1000
Oct. 31	Madge of the Mountains	1000
Nov. 1	Southern Soldier's Sacrifice (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 3	The Gossip (Com.)	1000
Nov. 4	A Message from Beyond (Dr.)	1000

Solax

WEDNESDAY—COMEDY

"FOLLOWING COUSIN'S FOOTSTEPS"

COMEDY

RELEASED NOVEMBER 1st

A Rube comes to New York to visit his cousin and proceeds to get gay along Broadway.
A very funny picture.

"AN INTERRUPTED ELOPEMENT"

(COMEDY)

RELEASE OF NOVEMBER 8th

A clever comedy. Held up by thieves and arrested. This couple, however, escape and love triumphs.

FRIDAY—MILITARY AND DRAMA

"A HEROINE OF THE REVOLUTION"

MILITARY

RELEASED NOVEMBER 3rd

Big Revolutionary War picture. A wonderful picture. Beautifully staged, costumed and acted.

"GRANDMOTHER LOVE"

(DRAMA)

RELEASE OF NOVEMBER 10th

A beautiful, simple little drama of intense heart interest. An especially good picture.

We call your attention to our "ad" on page 19 of this issue for our Special Release

"THE NAVAL PARADE"

WE RECOMMEND ALL 4 TO YOU

Solax Company CONGRESS AVENUE FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED
Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

THE MACHINE OF LONG SERVICE

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

The only moving picture machine guaranteed against wear and tear.

Our fourteen years of experience in the exclusive building of moving picture machines have taught us many things that other manufacturers have still to learn. The culmination of our efforts to produce a moving picture machine for steady service is Power's Cameragraph No. 6. It is not only superior to other machines in absence of flicker, steadiness of picture, ease in running and freedom from noise in operation; but it is the only machine on the market which is built to last.

The purchase of a Power's No. 6 is an investment; not an expense.

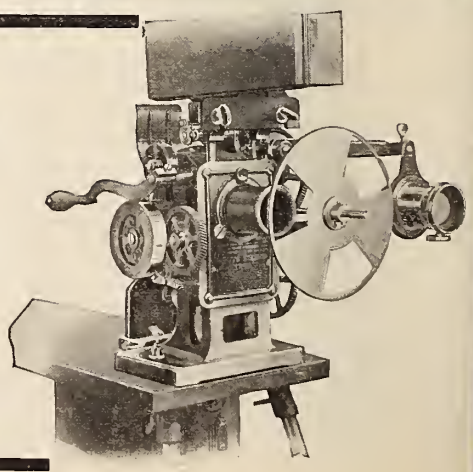
Send for Catalog D and our special proposition.



NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau St., New York

For fourteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.

COLLAPSE of the TRUST'S COLOSSAL BUBBLE!

After nearly two years of unsuccessful bluffing,

the Flimco Trust's bluff bubble has busted! Instead of threatening the exhibitors of America with all sorts of ghastly things, Flimco is now wheedling them feeding them with flattery and honeyed promises and trying its blamedest to win them away from the ranks of the Independents! In many cases it is actually "permitting" licensed theatres to mix a few Independent subjects in with their licensed programs, rather than lose such exhibitors from the licensed lists! What would have happened to any licensed exhibitor who dared to use an Independent film in his theatre a year ago, or even six months ago?

What is the cause of this sudden change in tactics? The answer is simple. Gen. Flimco has seen his customers leaving him by hundreds and by thousands during the past year or two. He has finally awakened to the fact that the exhibitors of America are not to be bluffed: and that there are ten good fighters on the Independent side to every one brainy fighter on the trust side. He now seeks to gain by flattery what he lost by bone-headed mismanagement.

You've won a tremendous fight and it's up to you to reap the benefits. Don't be wheedled or flattered into giving up the fruits of your victory. The Japs licked the very dickens out of Russia on the field of battle and then lost on the field of diplomacy. Don't let that happen to you. Don't believe any of the promises of the very trust that tried to throttle you. Place your faith in the Independents; in the film exchanges which have helped you make a winning fight; in the Independent manufacturers who made it possible for you to be your own boss, and who are turning out better films every day so that you can crush your competition by means of Q-u-a-l-i-t-y! and not by bluffs or threats. Hook up with Laemmle films, Laemmle service and "Laemmle luck" and make the profits you are entitled to!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

HEADQUARTERS:
204 W. LAKE STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

SYKES BLOCK.....MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
1517 FARNAM STREET.....OMAHA, NEB.
1110 WYANDOTTE STREET.....KANSAS CITY, MO.
515 MULBERRY STREET.....DES MOINES, IOWA

THE BIGGEST AND BEST FILM RENTER IN THE WORLD.

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

SHAMROCK FILM

THE BOX IS OPEN

TITLES of SEVERAL of OUR FINISHED PICTURES

THE BOX IS OPEN

Each of such

UNIFORM EXCELLENCE

We must ask for a little time to decide upon

OUR FIRST RELEASE

FACTORY AND STUDIO 25th AND MONTGOMERY

ST. LOVIS, MO.

WRITE FOR DESCRIPTIVE LITERATURE

NOV 16 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 44

November 4
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
NOV 16 1911
PERIODICAL DIV.

PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from

A GYPSY'S LOVE

A Forthcoming SHAMROCK Release

Coming! Coming!

3 Imps a week

and better quality than ever!

NOTICE—It looks as though our three-Imps-a-week plan will be in operation about the last week in November, Imp release days being Monday, Thursday and Saturday. If you want the three Imps every week (and they're going to be better than ever), notify your exchange man immediately, so he will be justified in placing his standing order for the Saturday Imp. We also take this opportunity of thanking those thousands of exhibitors and exchange men who have overwhelmed us with letters and telegrams commending us for bringing out THREE IMPS A WEEK instead of only two. It is the greatest testimonial of friendship we ever received!

OUR NEXT TWO RELEASES:

"THE FALLIN' OUT"—One of the sweetest stories ever filmed. The kind that reaches the heart and satisfies completely. Released Monday, Nov. 13. (Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

"BREAKING THE SEVENTH COMMANDENT"—Another of the "dog dramas" for which the Imp has been praised so highly. Get it sure! Released Thursday, Nov. 16. (Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

BULLETIN! BULLETIN! BULLETIN!

2,000-FOOT FEATURE IMP SOON TO BE RELEASED!

The United States Government has co-operated with the "Imp" Company in producing what we believe to be the grandest feature film ever attempted by any manufacturer in America. A feature film—BUT A REGULAR "IMP" RELEASE! Meet your exchange man halfway by offering to pay extra for this feature, so that he can afford to buy this 2,000-foot subject. Just tell him you want the Imp's great Submarine Picture, and he'll understand. Do this on your faith in the "Imp." Take our word that it is a marvelous film. Extra posters in preparation. Title, "FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA."

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP AMERICA

"IMP" FILMS COMPANY
102 W. 101*st Street, New York.*

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

The MAJESTIC

Positively Will Be a Valuable and an Essential Addition to the Present Splendid Output of the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co.

¶ We say this advisedly and truthfully, because we know good films when we see them. We see the product of other manufacturers, as well as our own and we are contented.

¶ We know of no Independent Exchange that is not anxious and willing to improve its service to the extent of satisfying its present customers as well as taking over many from our common friend, "the enemy."

¶ We know of no Exhibitor who would willingly overlook the opportunity to increase his patronage.

¶ With these thoughts in mind, we are working very hard and have good reason to believe that the Exhibitors and Independent Exchanges will appreciate our efforts when once they see our product.

LET THE SCREEN TELL THE STORY

FIRST RELEASE

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 26th

"The Courting of Mary"

A HIGH CLASS COMEDY

PLACE YOUR ORDER THROUGH THE SALES CO.

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.

TOM D. COCHRANE, General Manager

145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK CITY

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

GET YOUR BOOKING DATE NOW (RELEASED FRIDAY, NOV. 24)

"THE BASEBALL BUG"

STARS OF THE STAR PHILADELPHIA

BIG CHIEF BENDER
JACK COOMBS
FEATURING
RUBE OLDRING
CY MORGAN

ATHLETICS

CHAMPIONS OF THE WORLD

RELEASED TUESDAY, NOV. 14
An Airy Aeroplane Comedy

The Higher the Fewer

A prizefighter who inherits a mania for aeroplanes and a title loves a cultured girl. He determines that this "swell dame" should carry his name through life. So he carries her off in an aeroplane and cinches things up in the air—for the higher he went the fewer thoughts his sweetheart had of his rivals. A number of delicate comedy situations punctuated the story. The "big scene" shows the prizefighter dressed in a frock coat and silk hat, going up with the "swell dame" at his side, defying the laws of gravitation.

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOV. 17
The Story of a Resurrection

A Mother's Faith

The ne'er-do-well son of a rich man "goes wrong," but throughout his long career of dissipation his mother never loses faith in him. After the death of his father the son comes back, a broken-down tramp. His sister sees him before he sees his mother and she advises him to go out into the world and "make good"—and thus sustain his mother's unbroken faith. The boy strikes out and after years comes back a man who knows how to earn a living by toil. This story will bring many a tear.

FREE Descriptive DAVID COPPERFIELD POSTERS and free sample copies of DAVID COPPERFIELD four-page Illustrated Herald

THANHOUSER COMPANY NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK - - - - - - - -	LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK - - - - - - - -	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP - - - - - - - -	LIRE 5,750,000

THE FIRST SHIPMENT OF GENUINE WAR FILMS TAKEN AT TRIPOLI EXPECTED IN A FEW DAYS. EXHIBITORS GET NEXT TO THIS—IT MEANS MONEY TO YOU. EXCHANGES SEND FOR PARTICULARS.

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Agent and Correspondent for advertisements in Great Britain
B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W., London

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy.
844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV November 4, 1911 Number 44

PICTURE PLAY DIRECTORS AND SCENARIO WRITERS

WE are constantly hearing the cry, "Why don't the Independents put out educational films, and why do they not try to improve, and beat the licensed manufacturers and turn out more and better educational subjects?" We have listened to this cry and have urged again and again in these columns the elevation of the industry and it has been our province within the last six weeks to receive on an average of eight or nine scenarios that have been rejected by the various directors, and no cause whatever has been assigned, or reason made for this rejection. In our opinion the scenarios submitted have been of the highest class, clean, moral, heart-touching stories, that the only reason we can give is that the directors or the manufacturers are afraid to produce such good material.

In conversation with one or two of the principal directors of a company, we learned that looking over the scenarios it simply came to the question of "I don't like this. Who wrote it? Oh, I don't know who he is, and who is she anyhow? Oh, this is not spicy enough, throw it out." Now, Messrs. Directors, this is not the way to select scenarios, because you don't know a man, woman, girl or boy writer, and because it is not spicy enough, must you reject real good stories? We want to say that they should be taken fully upon their merits and some of the useless material thrown out. Take, for instance, this wail from a correspondent, who writes:

"For God's sake, cannot something be done to stop this crazy epidemic of Western and Indian pictures? This Western thing is getting to be a joke, and unless the manufacturers come to their senses before long and begin producing something other than Western junk, they are going to put such a big crimp in the moving picture business that it will take more brains than what is necessary to make these fool Indian pictures to straighten out that crimp."

Some of the pictures you produce are fairly good photography, some of it is most excellent photography, but the story is, to use a slang expression, "Rotten." It is obscure in its meaning and its teaching, but because there is plenty of shooting, racing, and something a little blase, it has to go. This is entirely wrong. The people of Nickelodia, and especially the National Exhibitors' Association, are looking for clean-cut, healthy, heart-stirring stories that will elevate and uplift the attention of the audiences to whom they are shown. Is it any wonder that intelligent people are getting utterly disgusted with some of the stories exhibited? Directors, please note and put your house or houses in order and select, not from favoritism, but from quality.

THE PURPOSE OF THE THEATER

Primarily it is for amusement. Secondarily, it is to disseminate a certain variety of information. Lastly, it is to offer an opportunity where an audience can see a tragedy more or less closely allied to tragedies in real life performed.

The primary reason for the existence of a theater seems to be almost wholly ignored in some motion picture places. Educational films, which are the best in their place, and tragedy until you can't see anything but murders and executions fill the canvass to the exclusion to everything else. Amusement is forgotten in the attempt to arouse the emotions to the highest possible strain. It is well to have some tragedy, but too much of it has a tendency to create a feeling of depression which is not the sentiment which wins audiences and therefore nickels and dimes.

Keep your program lightened up. A dark tragedy in which more or less persons lose their lives is essential to balance a program, but there is objection to having tragedy predominate. Give the audience something lighter, a pretty light drama, a comedy, or where the tragedy is particularly heavy a roaring farce or a slapstick comedy. You will make no mistake. The average person goes to your theater to be amused, not to have the tragedies which are enacted before his eyes every day reproduced for his benefit at night. Look out for this and see that the high lights over-balance the shadows. Otherwise all your pictures will appear somber.

Exchanges are arbitrary in many instances, but they can be induced to make up these programs if the manager insists upon it. And they can distribute the characteristic funny pictures, or the others in such a way that the manager can make up an interesting program without resorting to the questionable means of all tragedy, or near tragedy.

How many love stories to include is a question which can't be easily answered. There are many localities where love stories seem to be the prime favorites, and they will be applauded when everything else is passed in silence. However, the manager can determine what is most desired by the action and the comments of his audience. He only needs to go among the people while the show is in progress to secure a good deal of information which will be helpful to him in making up his programs in the future.

The purpose of the theater should be kept in mind. Amusement first, then educational features and following that tragedy, or the illustration of real life, which under some circumstances is sufficiently dark and disagreeable to be tragedy.

Holding the mirror up to nature, as Shakespeare has it is not the only thing to be done. If the shadows can be brightened up a bit, and if the high lights can be made to appear even brighter and to overbalance the shadows, then the situation will improve and your theater will benefit by reason of its amusement features.

WILLIAM N. SELIG

ONE of the oldest and best friends we have in the industry is William N. Selig of Chicago, and it was with a feeling of horror that we read in our newspaper of Saturday morning, October 28th, that he had been shot by a Japanese employee, who was drink-crazed at the time, in his Los Angeles studio. The horror was not only felt by us but by every member of the cinematograph industry because it goes without saying that everybody respects bluff, hearty "Bill" Selig.

The story, as we learn it, is that Frank Minnimatsu, the Japanese gardener and janitor, rushed into the office, brandishing a revolver, where he saw Mr. Selig in business conference with his manager, Francis Boggs, for the production of a new pantomime play He fired the revolver at the two men and the first bullet passed through Boggs' heart, who, toppling out of his chair, died on the way to the hospital. The slayer then turned his weapon on Mr. Selig and fired four shots. Two bullets went wide over the mark, narrowly missing Santal, the leading man of the company. The third bullet hit Selig in the right arm and the fourth also went wide. Selig grappled with the man who hit him a crushing blow with his gun, knocking him senseless. This gave rise to the story that friend Selig was also killed. We are pleased to inform our readers that the latest telegram received by us in answer to our inquiries reads, "Selig is feeling good, nothing serious." We are sure that this will be a relief to all the trade and that congratulations from everybody connected therein are tendered to William N. Selig and full sympathy of all concerned are tendered to the widow and family of Francis Boggs.

BRANDENBURGH, OF PHILADELPHIA, IN THE TOILS

"It is a long lane that has no turning." The whole trade has looked upon every manufacturer as being "easy marks" for Brandenburgh, of Philadelphia. It remained for the Great Northern to bring to justice, under the copyright laws of America, the man who defied everybody heretofore. The story, simply, is this:

"The Temptation of a Great City," a special film made by the Great Northern, copyrighted by Mr. Oes, and distributed by the Monopol Film Company who have the sole American rights for it, was imported by Brandenburgh through some one in London, who have no right to sell. Mr. Oes learning these facts, went to Philadelphia and offered Brandenburgh $200 for it, which he refused, demanding $500, which Mr. Oes refused to pay. In conjunction with the authorities at Washington and the custom authorities at Philadelphia, Special Officer Jacobs, of the Department of Customs, seized the film from Brandenburgh who was taken to the lockup and released on $500 bail for hearing November 3rd (too late to give full particulars in this issue.) Two copies were also seized at the customs in New York City. The penalty for this crime is a fine of $1,000 and one year imprisonment. This will give three years imprisonment and $3,000 if convicted. In addition to this, every exhibitor who has used this film through Brandenburgh is liable to a fine of $50 for each time exhibited. Some of the exhibitors have used it for five and six shows which may make $250 or $300 fine for them. Who says the copyright laws of our country don't copyright?

OUR POLICY

WE want to take our readers into our confidence as to what they may expect in the future. The policy of the News has always been one of advancement. We don't usually say what we do, but do it and leave others to judge, and as "imitation is the sincerest flattery," we have noticed that all good points are taken up by our contemporaries; but for our future policy we can assure our readers of high-class contributors. For instance, our Mr. C. W. Long will be able to take up operatic music for moving picture shows, working in unison with some of the largest composers and music producers. Mr. William Lord Wright, who is well known as a high-class writer, who has two poems in this issue, will be a steady contributor to our pages in the future. Mary Lawton Metcalfe (Electra Sparks), whose article this week will appeal to a large number of our readers and who was so ably introduced by our Miss Margaret I. MacDonald, will also contribute regularly to the higher intelligence of our readers. Miss Virginia West, the well-known and successful scenario authoress and magazine writer, will contribute to the story page each week. Lindsay Bancroft, on educational matters, will send in an occasional article on the education and uplift movement. His articles have been read in the past with a great deal of avidity and profit by officials of the universities.

We need not introduce to our readers Mr. Charles E. Dressler. He is so very well known to them as an inventor and repairer of machines and well known as an expert on electrical and mechanical ends. He will contribute a series of high-class articles suitable for the operator. Last but not least, Mr. Horace Vinton, who is so well known in many capacities, will also contribute to the columns of the News.

Is not this a good chance now to get in line for a subscription? Look at our premium page and select which you want. Send in your contribution at once so that you may not lose these good things.

WILL MOVING PICTURES PREVENT WAR?

The Great Powers Adopt the Bioscope

From time to time within the past two years we have had pleasure in recording the many strange uses to which the bioscope has been harnessed; we have systematically done so, because we hold to the conviction that moving pictures are far and away the best method that has ever been devised for imparting knowledge of "things out of sight." When we say "out of sight" we mean things that are not obvious and visible to the man in the street.

Take as an example the common butterfly; ten years ago how many people could tell you, offhand, how a butterfly is bred and reared; why, where, and when it dies; its shape, markings, and so on? Yet, since the introduction of moving pictures, such matters are of common knowledge. Similarly, the sciences of medicine, surgery, and bacteriology are such better understood now that films of the various processes have been obtained. Even medical men and scientists are compelled to admit that moving pictures convey a better and clearer impression of the subject than practically any number of still-life photographs.

A few years ago it might be said that only people who had specially studied the subject knew anything at all about the life and habits of the great majority of insects, birds and reptiles; industrial processes, too, were incomprehensible to all except those actually engaged in them. The man who happened to live in a "pottery" town perhaps knew all about the manufacture of cups and saucers, but the brewing of beer or the making of clocks was entirely beyond him. The only knowledge he possessed was gleaned from the dry-as-dust pages of an encyclopædia.

What a different position he is in now! For a few coppers he can see those things—and many more—upon the screen at the local picture show.

Our readers will remember that, during the early part of this year, we published a series of articles upon the subject of "Education by Cinematograph," with the avowed object of inducing the Government of this country to realize, at least to some extent, the educational value of moving pictures. At that time the Government apparently did not see its way clear to adopt the cinematograph in schools—mainly on the score of expense—but it was hinted that moving pictures would be utilized in other directions.

Apparently no very great steps in the direction of adopting the cinematograph as an educational medium have been taken during the intervening months; at any rate, no public announcement has been made; but now, for the first time, we are in a position to record that the War Office is either making use of cinematograph films itself, or allowing someone to do so on its behalf.

On Monday of last week an experiment was made at Aldershot, says the Daily Mail, to discover what would happen to a dirigible compelled to make a sudden descent by means of a ripping panel. The army airship Gamma was selected, and when she was at a height of twenty feet, an aperture was made in the balloon, the gas rushed out, and the dirigible fell to the ground a shapeless wreck.

With the object of obtaining a permanent record of what actually took place, a cinematograph camera was operated nearby. It is said that the films show every detail of the "accident," and they will be projected for the benefit of airmen generally, and the staff of the army balloon factory in particular.

The German army authorities are also keenly alive to the possibilities of "Education by Cinematograph," and have ordered the purchase of five cinematograph cameras for use by air-scouts. It is intended to take moving pictures of entrenchments, forts, etc., and afterwards to give lectures to the German soldier in barracks. It is well known that the German Emperor appreciates the possibilities and probabilities of the use of moving pictures in time of war, and only a few months ago he permitted films to be taken of manœuvres which he was directing.

Several others of the Great Powers—notably Russia—are known to be experimenting with aero-cinematographs—if they may be so described—and ere long it may be taken for granted that every nation in the world will possess its own corps of cinematographers.

What is the trend of all this? Surely it will materially assist in maintaining the peace of the world, for if every nation knows all about its neighbors' fortifications, entrenchments and disposition of troops, there will be move and countermove, move and countermove, which will not lead to anything at all. Of course, until the adoption of the cinematograph is universal amongst the Powers, the ones who are best equipped will be in a practically incomparable position. But one nation does not allow the other to get far ahead nowadays.—London Bioscope.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

We learn that this company at Copenhagen have secured services much sought after by every film manufacturer abroad for their films, and as Mr. Alstrup is known as one of the foremost comedians abroad we congratulate the Great Northern upon securing his services. He will create a ripple of laughter among American audiences with his contagious smile and genuine humor. We think he has this time become one of the most popular facts in motion pictures. Our readers will be able to judge for themselves as he appears for the first time in the November 4 release, in the film "The Actor As Soldier."

Another point we want to make mention of is the beautiful lobby display of the Great Northern, giving photographs 8 x 10 in size, with the actor's name on each photograph, and advise our readers to write for circular of particulars.

ISIDOR BERNSTEIN—"BERNIE"

Mr. Bernstein has been so well known to the trade from the Paramount and the Yankee Film Company that he needs but little introduction to our readers. We learn he resigns from the Yankee Film Company, to take effect on November 4th. He has three offers for his services, two in the city and one outside, but at present he is undecided as to what to do, and as he has been working so hard plugging the Yankee Company, he thinks he needs a little relaxation and so with his good wife they have decided to take a second honeymoon, and if any of our readers meet them on the way we hope they will shower them with rice and old shoes, but please see that the shoes are soft, that they may come back to us safe and sound in wind and limb so that Bernie may be ready to take up his duties with some good go-ahead firm.

ISIDOR BERNSTEIN

SOLAX NAVAL REVIEW PICTURE

This, beyond doubt, is going to be the most interesting "special" you have ever had. Not because the newspapers all over the country have created a demand for it, nor because it will be popular for months, but because the film itself is very remarkable from start to finish. The Secretary of the Navy has very kindly allowed the Solax Co. to put a camera on his vessel, the "Dolphin," and should President Taft review the fleet, as they expect, they will not only get the Secretary of the Navy, but also the President close up into the camera on the deck of the vessel, with all prominent officials.

GREAT INDEPENDENT VICTORY

The Independent exhibitors have good cause to be elated over the fact that the Independents have won to their side one of the largest Trust manufacturers and importers. The importation of moving picture films, of the best class, has been held by the Licensed manufacturers, and as these films have been so very popular that the Licensed houses' program was not complete without one of these films being shown in the house, the people of Nickelodia looked forward with great delight to seeing this film featured.

It shows to very great advantage, with the Independents progressing to such a wonderful degree, and making such great strides toward perfection, that they can secure for their ranks so magnificent an addition as will be theirs on January 1st. We understand that another large importer is seriously considering the step of becoming Independent. "A straw shows which way the wind blows," and our readers, with all interested in the industry, would gladly welcome such a consummation which is devoutly to be wished for.

We may have more to say on this subject in our next issue.

"'NEATH ENGLISH SKIES," BY DIXIE; MAD VOGUE OF THE MOVING PICTURES

From the King, with His Special Performances, to the Lowest Classes Who Waste Needed Money, England Seems Mad Over the Whirring Films—Southdown Shepherds, Their Long Silences, and the Wool in Their Coffins

THE solemnity of the English Sunday has for long been regarded as one of the bulwarks of English civilization, but in this era of change, even the English Sunday does not remain immovable. As an institution peculiar to itself and country, it has practically disappeared, and in its stead we have a day not absolutely unlike other days, whereon you may venture to amuse and interest yourself without danger of being considered an extremely wicked person. A Frenchman once told me that when he was a young man he spent two years in Manchester and that he invariably stayed in bed on Sunday because there was nothing to do. Even in these times young men not infrequently show an undue partiality for bed on Sunday, but that is simply because they have been overdoing things on Saturday. The man who has never left these island shores, as well as the stranger within our gates, can, nowadays, find plenty of diversion on the Sabbath. Indeed, in some places there is a tendency to go to the other extreme and to crowd the day of rest out of existence. In Brighton, for instance, where so many people come just for the week-end, it has been proposed to open the picture theaters or cinemas, on the plea that such places do not interfere with churchgoers, but that they prove highly instrumental in keeping a certain class of people out of public houses. However, the municipal authorities do not seem to have been entirely convinced, and, so far, the churches are in no danger from the rivalry of the picture theater.

On whatever day of the week or whatever hour of the day you may go to a cinematograph show, you will find it crowded. Its popularity is extraordinary. It is much in little, all things in one, entertainer and educator both. You have but to sit passive as one picture succeeds another, and in a few moments you may absorb as much information as if you had spent hours in reading about things that you see at a glance. And seeing is believing, they say.

Perhaps, some day, moving pictures will be used in schools, and through their vivid instrumentality, the history class will learn of great men and stirring events, or the geography class will practically visit those far countries whose mountains and rivers, cities and forests, have hitherto been so dull to the child of no imagination. The magic of words can kindle in some of us glorious visions of delight, but to the mind, which is incapable of being touched by syllables, the cinema is a revelation.

Behind me, the other day, I heard two women talking:

"Mrs. Goble comes 'ere every week of her life," said one.

"Some folks has all the luck," remarked the other, "but who takes care o' the shop?"

"She comes of a Wednesday. She always shuts the shop up of a Wednesday, and she says she's been an 'appier woman since these 'ere picture shows was started."

I felt I should like to make Mrs. Goble's acquaintance. Imagine the things she must have seen! All the wonderful pageants and processions of the past summer, and, incidentally, no end of stories wherein good is always triumphant and the villain meets with appropriate punishment. She must be familiar with the appearance of foreign dignitaries and quite at home with American scenes. American pictures are extremely popular in England and no habitue of the cinema can fail to become acquainted with episodes of the Civil War or life in the Far West, or ingenuous romances wherein the hungry tramp who has been kindly treated in the humble log cabin, ultimately repays his benefactor by saving him from ruin.

The cinema-picture theater, electric theater, or whatever it may be called, has come to be almost a necessity to English people of the less wealthy classes, who live in the big towns. Not content, like Mrs. Goble, to visit one only once a week, they go to see them all in town, and finally become so accustomed to obtaining their knowledge from pictures, that information conveyed in any other way scarcely seems to reach them.

"Would you like to look at the paper?" I said to a young maid servant the other day, pointing to an account of something locally interesting.

"No, thank you, ma'am," she replied, "I don't care about reading. I shall see it all at the pictures."

Years ago, I knew a village where the children used to ask each other for a pin to see a peep-show. On payment of the pin, a small flat package, neatly covered with brown paper, was produced. A square of the paper was deftly moved aside and there was revealed to you a piece of glass, behind which flowers, and sometimes tiny figures had been arranged in a more or less artistic pattern.

The village children had been taught to make these little peep-shows by their mothers and grandmothers, who, in their day, had learned this simple art from mothers and grannies of an older time, when pins, doubtless, were far more precious than they are now. The child whose early youth is nourished on the cinema will never make a simple peep-show of his own. Even the Punch and Judy show would probably leave him cold.

The old peep-shows, though humble, boasted a certain originality. The modern peep-show tends to make all humanity alike. Are not the same pictures shown in Paris and Berlin, in London and New York? The cinema has made it unnecessary to find a universal language. It tells the same tale to all the world.

Here, at last, is the talisman that confounds Babel. The same laugh will echo over the inhabited globe, and the same naive sentiment link unconsciously the hearts of nations whom politics sever in vain. Emigration has lost its pathos, and of the wanderer to distant climes it will be said "Coelum non cinema mutant."

Nor is it only the illiterate who fall under the spell of the cinema's fascination. From the king on the throne to the humblest of his subjects, the moving picture makes its appeal. Lately King George commanded an exhibition of "Kinemacolor" pictures at Balmoral. This is a process that reproduces the real colors of things, and is wonderfully lifelike. It was by means of the "Kinemacolor" that Queen Alexandra was enabled to see the coronation procession. The exhibition was given at Sandringham immediately after the coronation festivities, and was the first entertainment attended by the widowed Queen since the death of King Edward. Her Majesty is said to have been wonderfully impressed. She said it was like looking into the magic mirror of the fairy tales. If, as the papers tell us, Mr. Edison has really completed his invention for combining the gramophone with the cinematograph, we shall have talking as well as moving pictures, and the effect will be more lifelike than ever.

The peep-show of these days is a wonderful entertain-

W. E. GREENE
FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

MR. EXHIBITOR:

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write—wire—or call To-Day at

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford.

ment, but it has its dangers like every other form of pleasure. The cinema habit may become almost vicious and as a temptation to spend money, more powerful than the public house. For it tempts the women and children as well as the men. And only too often money is spent on picture seeing which is sadly needed elsewhere. In a city like Brighton it is appalling to find what vast sums are spent on amusements by poor people and how the craving for amusement has penetrated the lowest sections of society. There are not many towns in England so given up to the pursuit of pleasure as Brighton is, and I think this is the more noticeable because the surrounding country has such an old world air about it. Tucked away amongst the Downs we find villages not only of patriarchal appearance, but of patriarchal customs, whose inhabitants are as far removed from the dwellers in Brighton as if they were divided by centuries. Within a few miles of this big town, where you may see the most up-to-date automobiles, and where the sight of an aeroplane in the sky is becoming almost as common as that of a ship on the sea, you will find a primitive-looking cart, drawn by oxen, and perchance, a ploughman guiding a team of the same slow, patient beasts.

The occupations of the rural districts are all pastoral, sheep-tending being one of the most important. Southdown mutton is prized in many places where nothing is known of the south downs, those beautiful uplands that extend for a distance of fifty-three miles through Sussex and Hampshire. In the churchyard of Glynde there is a memorial to the farmer who originated the Southdown breed. Of him, Mr. E. V. Lucas writes:

"Glynde's most famous inhabitant was John Ellman, the breeder of sheep. The last of the patriarchs, as he might be called. Ellman lodged all his unmarried laborers under his own roof, giving them when they married enough grass land for a pig and a cow and a little more for cultivation. He built a school for the children of his men, and permitted no licensed house to exist in Glynde. Not that he objected to beer, on the contrary, he considered it the true beverage for farm laborers, but he preferred that they should brew it at home. It was John Ellman who gave the Southdown sheep its fame and brought it to perfection.

"The descendants of Mr. Ellman's shepherds still follow the calling of their forefathers. You may meet one sometimes in rambling over the downs, his crook in his hand, his faithful dog at his heels. It is said that he sometimes pipes in true Arcadian fashion and Richard Jeffries tells us, 'There is no tune, no recognizable melody; he plays from the heart to himself. His simple notes harmonize with the open plain, the looming hills, the ruddy sunset, as if striving to express the feeling these call forth.'

"It is difficult to make him talk, he evidently prefers thought to speech, but he knows every one of his sheep, and if you express wonder at this, he will perhaps say simply, as a shepherd said to me: 'They all have different faces.' Only he said 'dimfunt' instead of different, for the Sussex peasant has a queer pronunciation of his own. The shepherd could not live in a town. There is a story of one who, being obliged to go to the city, stood with his back against a shop window and counted the people going by as though they had been sheep. 'I was weary for my sheep and the hills,' he said, 'I could not bear tramping those gray streets with never a known face to greet me.' The shepherd's work is so continuous that he can rarely take a holiday and rarely go to church. It is because of this that old custom demands that a lock of wool should be placed in a shepherd's coffin, so that at judgment day he may thus prove his vocation, which prevented him from being a regular churchgoer."

A charming series of cinema pictures might be gathered together amongst the villages of the Southdowns.—Dixie in New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Rutherford, N. J.—A very attractive motion picture and vaudeville house, to seat 750, is now under construction here. The owners are Messrs. Walker W. Vick, John T. Collins and Thomas E. Lawrence, and the house will be opened early in December. Everything will be done to promote the comfort, safety and pleasure of the patrons of the house and a high-grade policy will be maintained.

West Chester, Pa.—The Everhart Building, at Market and Church streets, will be remodeled as a moving picture house.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—New State Amusement Co.; capital, $10,000; Benn Greenwood, A. Levine and A. J. Meininger.

Rome, Ga.—Interstate Amusement Co. awarded contract to Wilken & Johnson to remodel building as moving picture theatre.

ACTORS IN MOVING PICTURE OUTFIT HAVE CLOSE CALL

Several members of a moving picture making company of Chicago had a thrilling escape from death yesterday morning in the Arkansas River, near the entrance of the Royal Gorge. In producing a moving picture film at the mouth of Grape Creek, showing the pursuit of two cattle rustlers, Tom Mix and Charles Serra, both cowboys and expert horsemen, rode their mounts at breakneck speed from the south side of the river, 500 feet above the mouth of Grape Creek, and then went with a mighty splash into the current of the river from a rock raising fully ten feet above the water. A few moments later the sheriff and posse followed and a mixed fusillade of shots completed the performance.

There is an unusually high stage of water in the creek, due to recent floods, and this volume of water pouring out of the creek produces a heavy current in the Arkansas River at this point. Serra was caught in the current and horse and rider shot into the river and were submerged in the whirling waters. Mix, although in serious danger himself, succeeded in throwing his lariat around his companion's shoulders and hauling him out on the bank.

Frank Carrow and Leon Watson, of the sheriff's posse, were both nearly drowned in the same place in a similar manner a few minutes later.

George Hook, another member of the party, was carried off his feet by the rushing waters and saved from drowning only by the heroic efforts of Charles Canterbery.

Eddy Cull, the operator of the picture machine, while wading in the water to avail himself of the most advantageous point, also was swept from his footing and landed in a bed of quicksand, from which he was extricated only with the greatest difficulty.—Denver Post.

Brooksville, Fla.—Robert Bracey awarded contract to L. B. Varn and L. S. Petteway to erect opera house.

Niles, Ohio.—Plans have been prepared by Jack Stafford for a new theater to be erected on Furnace street.

Detroit, Mich.—Otto A. Seestedt, 351 25th street, will erect a $6,000 theater at Baker and 22d streets.

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

CITY CUSTOMERS ARE ALL SATISFIED

NOW READY TO CATER TO OUT-OF-TOWN BUSINESS

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

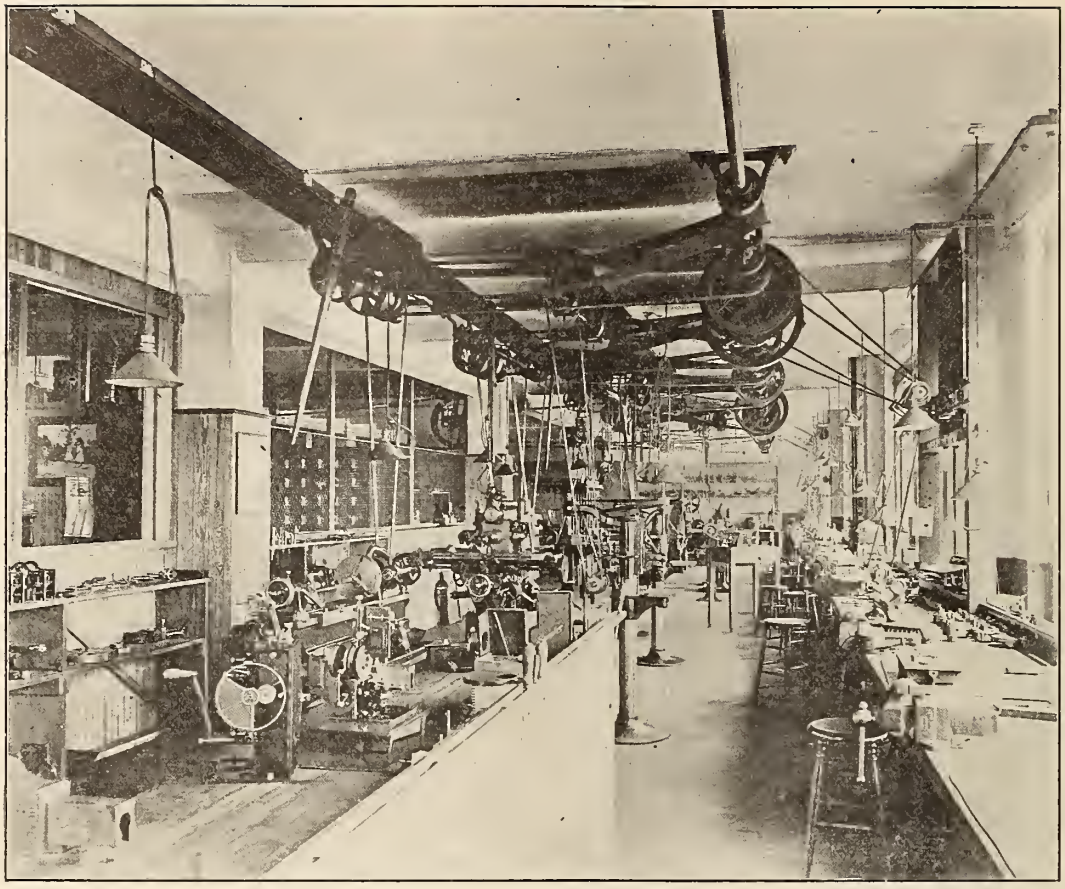
Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

PRESTO

Poster frames, the best poster frame made, $1.75 each in quantities up to five. Six or more $1.50 each, cash with order.

ELECTRA Pink Label Carbons 5/8 x 6 soft cored, $2.25 per 100. $20.00 per 1,000, cash with order.

Swaab Film Service Co.
Pioneer Film Exchange
129 N. EIGHTH STREET PHILADELPHIA
Power's and Motiograph Machines



HOME OF THE SIMPLEX

We recently remarked that the Simplex was going to take more space. We learn this week that they have a still larger floor space than they previously anticipated making the change for; that they have installed more machinery, making it possible for them to now turn out forty machines per week. Even with this at their disposal, we understand that in a week or two they will still further increase the space to another floor. The illustration above will give some little idea of the present size of the machine shop from whence the Simplex emanates.

MOVING PICTURE PREFERENCES ABROAD

Few American films are popular at the moving picture shows in Nuremberg and adjoining German cities. Consul George N. Ifft states that the only ones of interest are those depicting cowboy and Indian life.

An excellent film showing American baseball was not appreciated at San Luis Potosi, Mexico. Consul Wilbert L. Bonney states that Mexicans do not understand the humor of the United States, while French humor, based on mistake, accident, or ignorance, is easily understood. It is the same with the plots of the little dramas shown. The Mexicans understand and prefer French motives, manners and atmosphere in all matters of entertainment. However, panoramic films showing important cities and scenes are popular, as are also films showing troop and fleet movements.

Consul Charles S. Winans writes that the films shown at Seville, Spain, are of excellent quality; often they have a distinctly educative value; and invariably the French films are artistically set. Good French actors are employed and the scenic effects are in good taste. In the films of current and historical events, of course, the European field is unlimited. The burning of the Palais d'Art in Brussels; surf at Taormina, Sicily; and cavalry manœuvres in Morocco are only a few of the endless variety of interesting pictures which the European field affords.

In Barcelona, Spain, according to Vice-Consul General Harry A. McBride, there are now over seventy moving picture shows, and the number is increasing.

Lists of moving picture theaters in foreign countries may be obtained from the Bureau of Manufacturers.

To M. P. Owners, Managers and Pianists.

"MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC"

This is a book of music to fit all possible scenes, actions, characters, etc., shown in Moving Pictures. Compiled by a MOTION PICTURE PIANIST, who is a competent and experienced musician. This book is NOT a Dance collection, or copies of LATE HITS, but "THE REAL ARTICLE" for any Pianist in a Motion Picture Theatre. Very highly endorsed by all of the Amusement Journals, Theatre Managers, and Thousands of Picture Pianists, and this book is now in actual use in Thousands of M. P. Theatres. This Book sent to any address upon receipt of price, $1.00.

Send all orders to,

G. A. FRELINGER, 1012 Ferry St., Lafayette, Ind.

FREE—An eight page booklet, fully describing this Music Book, will be sent FREE to any one upon receipt of name and address.

English Syndicate Enters the Field

The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian hears that a London cinematograph syndicate has just concluded negotiations with the Chinese Government by which it will have the privilege of organizing and supplying films for an extensive system of cinematograph theaters throughout the whole of China. The capital is being provided by local mandarins, and the theaters will be entirely in Chinese hands. The other part of the arrangement is that the syndicate is to be given the right to take films in any part of China, and to have special privileges for taking records of religious and social ceremonies which hitherto were quite unattainable. During the past three years a good deal of cinematograph work of one kind or another has been done in China, and an operator who recently returned had some terrifying experiences.

Connellville, Pa.—John T. Laughrey has purchased the Nickelet Theatre, on North Pittsburgh street, from E. T. Clabaugh.

THE OSSIFIED THINKER

By Margaret I. MacDonald

A FRESH, new thought, like a tender plantling but lately sprung forth from mother earth, must have pliable, nourishing soil with which to feed the delicate roots. A brilliant butterfly quivering on the sunlit breeze, clutched at by hands of youthful destroyers, and impaled ere it has been delivered of the regenerative egg, is not unsimilar to the impaling, or crucifying of a brilliant thought, by the ossified thinker.

Nevertheless, there is a difference: and that difference is just great enough to prove the salvation of the thought. Had it been that our Creator had made thought a material thing, there had never been known such a word as "progress." As it is, the very abstraction of the thing is all that saves it from the charnel-house prepared for it by the mentally deceased. As the knife of the ossified thinker plunges madly in the darkness at the ghostly shadow, it slips subtly from his grasp, and in the twinkling of an eye becomes a great and shining light, dazzling in its brilliancy—a power so convincing, so all-forceful that either he is borne upon its wings to the great white fields of higher and more intelligent thought, or then he is left a poor ossified thing to the charnel-house of his own preparation.

MARGARET I. MACDONALD

In our issue of October 21 our editor told of the birth of the thought, from which has evolved the moving picture industry to the wonderful dimensions which its present state of development presents. From the highly respectable beginning as a form of preservation of a unit of perfected art, it fell to the seductiveness of the financial kingdom, dragged in the slime of immorality and indecency only to arise thrice purified, to take up the broken thread, and weave such a perpetuation of knowledge as has never yet been known. Evolution and revolution have worked unceasingly on that little, embryo thought—the wheel has taken a sudden quickened turn, linking at the point of severance, the result of the evolution with its slighted progenitor.

My inspiration for the present writing has come from the following letter from a highly respected member of the New York Board of Education; and with all apologies to the Board, I must say that unless this member of the most useful and important department of the city, can be persuaded to loose his mind from the grip of prejudice, and fall in line with the procession of advanced thought, a seat in the Board of Education of such a mighty metropolis as New York, with more than a million units of the future generation who are to replace us as pillars of civilization under its jurisdiction, is no place for him. The following is the letter which flaunted itself before my astonished eyes but a few days ago.

Miss Margaret I. MacDonald,
30 West 13th Street, City.

Dear Madam:—In reply to your esteemed favor of the 18th in which you ask my advice on the educational aspect of the moving picture, I beg leave to say:

Moving picture shows as they are being exploited nowa-days are not only not helpful to children, but are proving to be a serious evil.

The educational authorities are in this particular instance confronted with a situation in which careful consideration of the children's welfare is to be found on their side, and pecuniary profit on the other.

The Board of Education has already taken steps to install in the schools good specimens of what has been

SOLOMON WASN'T WISE

as the gent who asserted the fact that there's a little good in the worst of us and a little bad in the best of us. There are satans and saviours, saints and sinners—and sometimes their identities get so mixed, we don't know which is which.

EJECTED—DEJECTED

"SAINTS and SINNERS"

RELEASED THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9th

preaches a doctrine of the victory of virtue, a gentle gospel of guidance. It's a tale of sweet sadness, of pathos and primeval principle, of real romance, and warm interest in unfortunate humanity; a tale of human minds, human hearts, human nature and human recklessness—with only a suggestion of the ruin that generally follows. But in this case the disaster is averted, and bad business will be avoided and averted by running

"SAINTS AND SINNERS"

If Solomon were an exhibitor, he'd run REX. Wisdom up!

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 ELEVENTH AVENUE,
NEW YORK CITY

Sales Co. says great product of Rex SAINT to be wondered at, because SINNER.

-GRIT-

THE SLOGAN THAT PUT THE TRUST TO DEFEAT.

GRIT is one of the prime factors of the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company's success.

A little of this GRIT together with a program made up of any of our

WEEKLY RELEASES

MONDAY
IMP, COMET, AMERICAN, CHAMPION
(Nestor Starts November 21st)

TUESDAY
THANHOUSER, BISON, POWERS, (ECLAIR-AMERICAN STARTS NOVEMBER 21st)

WEDNESDAY
CHAMPION, SOLAX, RELIANCE, AMBROSIO, NESTOR

THURSDAY
REX, AMERICAN, ITALA, IMP, ECLAIR

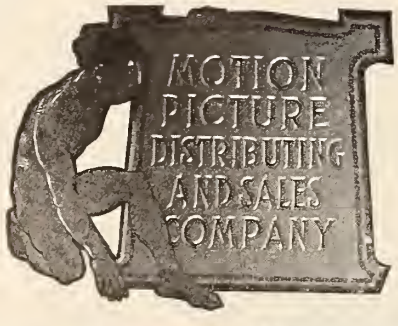
FRIDAY
BISON, LUX, THANHOUSER, SOLAX, COMET

SATURDAY
POWERS. ITALA, GREAT NORTHERN, NESTOR, RELIANCE (REPUBLIC 2 REELS STARTS NOVEMBER 25th

SUNDAY
MAJESTIC STARTS NOVEMBER 26th

IS BOUND TO BRING YOU SUCCESS

Here's to GRIT that magic quality, that daily inspiration, that compass to success.



Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

111 East 14th Street NEW YORK

found greatest in pictorial art as well as in other departments of arts.

The children are under tuitional care only five hours a day for five days in the week for about half the total number of days in the year. The present number of interruptions of the regular studies is becoming unnecessarily great; and even if there were some educational value (which I do not admit) attached to these moving picture exhibits, I could not conscientiously favor the making of further inroads upon the pupils' valuable time for the purpose of diverting their attention from their regular studies to the moving picture show.

Yours very truly,

The moving picture represents the highest form of photographic art. The still picture, whether in black and white, or in the beautiful colors copied from nature, is but a novice in the distribution of knowledge, beside its powerful brother. Again I reiterate the oft-repeated statement that what a child actually sees with his physical eye he never forgets. The pictures that remain deep seated in the cells of memory are those that the physical eye has reflected back from the material world. Why does the old man repeat over and over again the scenes of his childhood? Why does the little child running in from its play delight to tell the things that have happened on the street, or in the playground? Because these are the scenes which the eye has drunk in from the living, moving world of their environment. The things which the physical eye devours are the things that are destined more than anything else, to influence the mind and life of the individual. I have known a child not more than seven years old sit up and tell of the things which it had seen and heard at the theater with an intelligence at which I marvelled. The child was enabled to do so because of the knowledge imbibed through the conjunction of two of the senses, seeing and hearing. Had the child not been taken to see and hear the great stars, its knowledge of such matters would have been limited to a very indistinct idea of names, at the best.

At the same time an argument might be set forth on the strength of just what I have said, against the moving picture. But let me tell you, reader, the day of the unwholesome picture is over. So rapidly are improvements being accomplished in the world of the motion picture, that one must needs keep both eyes and ears open every day in order to keep abreast of the times. That certain unhealthy conditions prevailed a year ago is no criterion by which to judge the conditions of to-day without actual knowledge of them. The moving picture is without a doubt destined to become the greatest educator of modern times. Already many appeals have been sent in to our magazine for aid in selection of pictures, and advice as to the securing of films, by churches as well as schools. It has been left for the western schools to take the initiative in this respect.

A glimpse into our columns each week by the educators of our city would greatly aid them in keeping abreast of the times with regard to an industry which is producing the most powerful vehicle for the distribution of knowledge that the world has ever known.

Chicago, Ill.—T. Schuchman, 518 South 48th avenue, to cost $6 000. Moving picture theater.

Louisville, K. Y.—The Preston Amusement Co. will erect a moving picture theater, to cost $5,000.

Boone, Ia.—A new Virginia theater is to be erected on 8th street and Allen street.

Williamsport, Pa—An addition will be built to the Lyceum Theater, to cost $3,000.

Chicago Ill—The Victoria Theater Corporation will erect a new $146,000 theater at 2145-51 Sheffield avenue.

EXTRAORDINARY

WE renovate any film and make it appear as good as new. Send sample, will give demonstration free of charge ::: :::

ORTHO FILM COMPANY, 40 East 12th Street, NEW YORK

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE CINEMATOGRAPH

By Leonard Donaldson

THE INFLUENCE OF THE MOTION PICTURE ON THE PUBLIC

PERHAPS it is a little early to form a retrospect of the year's work in cinematography, and weigh in our independent balance the creditable achievements and the mistakes which have been made in the world of films during 1911, but the many truly excellent subjects it has been my pleasure to see of late have prompted me to attempt to voice the opinion of the public, and to tell of those films they have enjoyed; of those which have elevated them, and of those which they can say with truth have helped them to better things. The year 1911 has marked the rise of the "moral" film, and has incidentally witnessed an improvement in the status of cinematography. The potential influence of the motion picture on public life is no longer disputed; but on the contrary, has become a matter for careful and serious consideration. In the work of the general uplift of the community the picture theater is destined to play a great part. To this end it has ever been the object of the "News" and its editor to proffer the "candid word" to those responsible for the production and exhibition of films. If they have had any criticism to make upon the quality of the pictures offered to that exacting and impressionable public, it has been that they savour too much of the frivolous, that the comic element, in fact, forms too large a portion of the average programme, and that there still remains ample room for the introduction of the educational film. No one believes more firmly than do we in the saving grace of humor, or comprehends more keenly than do we the advantage of men and women who, like the mass of the toilers in our great cities, lead dull and sordid lives, being taken out of themselves; made to forget—if only for the nonce—their worries, troubles and anxieties, and given an opportunity to enjoy the physical and mental benefits of a real hearty laugh.

Without the comedy film, cinematography would indeed suffer badly; but the comic element, or, to be candid, the china smashing and inevitable chase picture, must not be allowed to predominate. In this case the ability of the picture theater as an educational and uplifting factor in the lives of the people will be in danger of sinking into oblivion.

The public may, and apparently still do, recognize that there is a fund of humor in one man being pursued by a crowd; but that same public are the first to applaud the moral and educational subject when presented in the form of a strong and impressionable drama, unglorified though it may be by the red and green "limes"; of the curses and wiles of the inevitable malefactor; the entreaties of a butterfly heroine, and the hundred and one attractions the passing melodramas have to offer that same public for whom we are now catering.

The picture theater must continue to strive toward that higher plane, and take itself more seriously as an ethical and educational force; playing its part in dispelling ignorance, raising the tone of the masses of the people, and providing them with a rendezvous where they can meet together to be instructed, and given a higher and healthier conception of humanity and the complex problems of life.

WRITIN' PICTUR' PLOTS

It ain't so dad-blamed easy, arter all; a-writin' these here funny pictur' plots. I seen an avertisment long last Fall, offerin' fifty dollars fer new thoughts. "Send in yer idees mebbe yew will hit th' nail square on th' head, fust thing yew know 'fore yer through, yew'll hev writ a play," th' avertisements said. I allus go tew see these pictur' plays—I don't miss nothin' good, never fear! But when I'm busy cuttin' corn, there's days an' days an' days I don't git near. But arter readin' 'bout thet easy coin, I knocked off work more'n a week, an' I spent my time visitin' shows, a-studyin' up th' subjec', so ter speak. Now all this here happened long last Fall—an' play-writin' ain't so easy arter all.

Well, several of them pieces took my eyes, an' my best gal, Sairy Jane, she liked 'em, too. I jest made up my mind thet by an' by I'd show 'em all what I could do. Some of them actors wuz quite pert; 'specially in th' scenes where they made love. But Sairy Jane said: "You're a flirt!" when I cas'ally mentioned th' above. I told her I wuz writin' pictur' plays an' needed some kissin' parts in one. "You'd better stick ter cuttin' corn these days, an' quit this here writin' you've begun!" An' this wuz all I got from Sairy Jane, when I wanted tew git some intrust stuff. An' arter thet she didn't act th' same, but peared tu be in a constant huff. An' I told my ole bay mare, Susan, in her stall, thet play-writin' ain't so easy arter all!

It ain't so dad-blamed easy arter all; a-writin' these here "simple" pictur' plots. I writ' an' writ', an' writ' all through th' Fall, an' my pieces cum back hum as quick as shots. All of these here Editurs wuz kind, an' said "Yer plays will never, never do; this here we regret tew find; an' we's try somethin' else if we wuz yew." Then I turned back tew cuttin' corn, an' doin' th' chores 'bout th' place. An' then, so sure as yew air born, Sairy Jane hed smiles upon her face! "Let someone else do th' writin'," I said, "seein' 'em is good ernough fer me"; an' Sairy Jane jest turned her purty head, an' she looked as pleased, as pleased could be. One feller only in this world I'll maul, if he sez play writin's easy arter all!

—WILLIAM LORD WRIGHT.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF LIVING PICTURES—THE MANUFACTURE OF MENTAL FILMS—HOW TO PROJECT MEMORY PICTURES

Scientific Principles of Psychology in Human Reproduction, by Mary Lawton Metcalfe, D.A.R., New Thought Evolutionist

A HEALTHY mind glories in its best asset, which is a good memory. A memory is begun by the ideas the mind receives from the impressions, voluntary and involuntary, before birth and progressively through every stage of unfolding consciousness.

It is from the riches of the memory that the successful author draws the threads of ideas, which imagination weave into fiction, drama, comedy, farce, tragedy, poem. It is to the treasury of the memory that the artist goes to get his phantom-films of former views upon which he paints the idealized picture that carries its message to souls which understand the language of art.

Yes, Psychology is the Science of that wonderful mechanism the—Mind.

In this busy workaday world, it is left to the professor and scientific student to understand the processes of the unfolding mind of man into its present state of power.

Commercial interests cry aloud on every hand: "Come on, you have no time to bother with science—it's money you want." Business men are not going to sit up nights to burn the midnight gas to get Mental Light in the abstract. Those of us who have come into the understanding of the power of every man to manufacture mental films of advanced psychology, must give deep draughts of truth in films easily read, as the first steps in the impressionable matter of the mind.

Film 1.—The Memory Box. Impressed at the Age of Three Years.

The normal child is a creature susceptible to its surroundings. It follows the call of nature.

I see with my mind's eye a hill with tall dark pines on the top.

Big black crows are flying down to the brown brook, chattering over rough rocks. Some little birds are drinking—will they swallow little stones? My birdies!

Tiny creatures are swimming around an old, long wicker basket—ah, those are new babies not grown big yet to wear clothes!

I see the big, old southern mansion with white columns, half hid in the trees. Long streamers are flying from the trees, like on my hat. Why do trees have to wear streamers?

My black nurse is running down the road. Her red and yellow headkerchief is falling off; she grabs it and drops on her knees to look under the bushes for the little runaway.

Here's Dash, our big Newfoundland, leaping ahead to help find me.

I see Mammy's godchild, "Janey," climbing over the fence to get to the brook first. Mammy boxes her ears.

Dash beats them all.

Everybody thinks I am lost. Mother has gone to town to get my new dolly.

I crept out of the crib when Mammy went to dinner in the kitchen.

Now comes Mammy, mad as a wet black hen.

I see her jerking me from the slippery rock. My feet are muddy and the socks filled with sand, "to make believe" real feet in them, while mine paddled in the cool water. There's a nasty froggy—ugh! I'm scared of him. Finally in a view dissolving, I see myself in the mahogany crib in the early afternoon. The sunbeams creep through the rose-vines over the window and I see little fairies sliding up and down, like my brother Bobby slides on the banisters.

The fat, old colored "lady"—my good Mammy, is still awfully mad and hot. Her head-cloth is on the floor and little pigtails stand up on her head, tied with old shoestrings. She won't talk, but rocks away, waving mother's feather fan to keep off the flies.

I see little water babies with my eyes shut. They are singing: "Bye-bye, little May, run away another day," and now it's only the pink roses on the wallpaper—that's all.

No. 2.—Mental Film. Taken at Six Years.

Grandma reading a story.

It is a big cloth book and it has an old woman; a fat pig, and a fire and things.

Grandma is a pretty lady with curls and she lets "Janey," the godchild, look at the pictures, too.

I see that pig with this mental eye, as if he were right up there on our Dutchess farm. He would not budge a step and I see myself so mad that I hit him with a switch; before the mouse with a mouthful of cheese, set the rope hanging the butcher; and the butcher killing the ox; and the whole lot of things helping each other to make the pig move in the picture.

The butcher has a big nose and a long pinafore. He waves a blood-red knife. Everything is plain on my picture. Yes, just as perfect as if I had seen the "release" today in a New York theater!

No. 3.—Mental Film of School Days. Taken at Nine Years.

There is the fig-tree with its dark, purple clusters of figs hanging up high. They are the forbidden-fruit of Dame Lee, who knits away with her clinking needles, as we tell the story of the Sabine ladies being stolen by the Roman soldiers.

I see myself going down into the well to get a drink. The figs are peeping through the thick leaves, inviting the little girl of nine summers to climb up and eat them.

In the top of the tree my long curls are caught in the branches, but I am having a feast of figs fit for the gods. The big boy, Jack, is ringing the dinner bell. Heavens—it is recess! Twenty boys and little girls run down in the school yard. I see myself clambering down before they spy me. Alas! the foot slips and down I am tumbling twenty feet this side of the stone wall. A stout branch catches the brand-new flannel petticoat and here I see myself hanging eight feet from the ground, making frantic efforts to tear the flannel which holds me swimming in mid-air.

Here are the vivid faces of those ten horrid boys, dancing around the hated tree and yelping like dogs after the coon in the tree.

"Oh, I hate you—I hate you—take me down," I am howling."

Each freckle stands out on Billy Green's nose as big as a wart.

I hate you—I hate you, Harry—unhitch me."

"Stop thief! Stop thief!" jeers Sam Johnson. His double row of wolf-teeth seem to need the wolf's head.

Fanny, Alice, Katy and the girls with anxious faces are begging the boys to take me down.

Dame Lee in severity comes out on the piazza and wants to know the meaning of the hullabaloo.

I see her under the tree. Her white hair is silver with the sheen of sunshine.

Al Brown is ordered off for the step-ladder. It is placed directly under the awful old branch holding me, head down. Two boys are ordered to hold fast the ladder-steps, while Al is appointed as a committee of one to "unhang" me.

The tense situation of the assembled school under the tree with the old lady is a mental-film of horror. I cry myself silly and a big girl is sent home with me.

* * * *

They could never get me back at that school, in spite of its merit. For weeks the picture of myself hanging in the tree kept me awake and the grinning faces of teasing boys was the only picture of a real—hell—that a memory-film could give me at nine years.

* * * *

No. 4—A Medley. At Twelve Years

Old Peter Parley believed in teaching history with pictures.

I "project" Hannibal crossing the Alps. I see Roman chariots crushing down armies. In Bible history, dear old Mr. Parley did not yet know how to make pictures move, but he put such illustrations of David and Goliath that I see the truthful face of the shepherd boy as he poises himself to sling his pebble—and it gives me now the inspiration to work on that it is not the avoirdupois weight of the worker that defeats apparent foes, but the spirit of the Mighty One of all men, who affirm in confidence: The God-spirit is on my side, who then can defeat me? My Father and I are one.

* * * *

The associative gift of learning facts by picture-helps is an enormous assistance to every human being.

Verily, psychology is the science of the mind.

Emerson incessantly reminds us in his philosophy that the education of children must begin a hundred years before they are born. That actually means to be able to enjoy the real essence of life that parents, grandparents and even great-grandparents must be persons who cultivate themselves by living in good, pure air; seeing pleasant things of life; taking part in the public interests of their communities as helpful workers, and not to live as dumb driven cattle. Can men and women live as beasts and expect their children

THE FINAL FORT RILEY RELEASE

MONDAY, Nov. 20th, 1911 Reel No. 3

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN AND REGULARS AT FORT RILEY, KAN.

EVERY MONDAY and EVERY WEDNESDAY

A VARIETY CHAMP APPEARS ON THE BOARDS

Champ is an old stand-by and so are THESE:

"The Redemption of a Coward"

Champion Release for Monday, Nov. 13th, 1911

Is a film designed to make of Exhibitors Staunch Champion stand-patters and getters. The picture shows how John Maynard deserts from the line of battle to his sweetheart's home. He encounters the enemy's soldiers ransacking the household, and meets with death in defending the girl's honor.

A Champion Getter is a creditable Independent.

"The Passing of Sal"

Champion Release for Wednesday, Nov. 15th, 1911

With knife in hand, Sal makes her way to deal vengeance unto Jim Brantwood, who had wedded another, in preference to her. Her hand was stayed by death which reached her heart.

We want the exhibitors to keep in touch with us!

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro' Motion Picture Distributing And Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,

12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

and grandchildren to be moving pictures of beauty, health, happiness and prosperity? No! It is a psychological impossibility.

Impressions on the mental films of unborn children are made from earliest conception. Far, far back in days of ancient Greece, so noted for the beauty and nobility of her race, women to whom came the first message of the unborn child, were induced to spend whole days in the temples and sit in peace and quiet to look upon the marble statues of gods and goddesses; that the unborn boys and girls should be started right in the race for life. The parents "mark" their children, as the saying goes, by their own thoughts.

Constant scenes of beauty cannot fail to make a brand-new mental-film on the minds of unborn children.

But you ask me how are the city's poor to get the inspiring scenes of nature; the breezy scent of early dawn from the meadows? How are expectant mothers to enjoy the flowers and fields and see young lambs frisking on the hillside and run to their mothers for milk? And I answer you:

The Moving Picture Theater Is the People's Theater

Let those whose culture began before they were born; those who have gone in the business of manufacturing films for popular demand begin now and create a desire of the masses to see such pictures projected that will impress the mental films of unborn babes, and begin thus the first steps in primary education of the unborn race.

Constant scenes of light, color, symmetry, cannot fail to provide priceless "films" in every parent's memory gallery; especially with child-bearing women. Each person by his will-power can project these pictures in his kindly countenance, in his unselfish deeds; in his words—of praise and encouragement.

Ah, me—why are we waiting to "project" the pictures from our own mental films, that splendid co-workers are making every day upon us?

Give out now all the expressions you have in your film-box of good impressions.

Many are languishing for the word of praise. It is a psychological truth that "heaven" is the state of a man's mind. At the moment when my words reach you, if they make you stop and think and affirm that each man's mind is the strongest projecting mental-battery for good, I say at that moment the moving picture industry from its commercial standpoint becomes glorified and each of the splendid army of workers will become the idealist of what he can do to establish only inspiring mental-films in memory's gallery.

Remember that the "sensitive plate" of the human mind is called the "sub-conscious self." It is the wireless receiving station. It is this invisible "second-self," that is the cold storage or conservatory of every human being.

The sub-conscious self is practically the subway to a man's happiness or misery. It leads him in his mind to heaven or to hell.

The gate of the subway is opened, as I repeat, before the child is born! No loving father, therefore, will want to manufacture a ready-made "hell" for his children to welcome them to this great wide, beautiful, wonderful world of love, beauty, truth. When men begin right now to realize that money is not all the aim of life and that religion is only good when it practices the principles of universal brotherhood, then we awaken into heaven. Every man does conceive in the mental-picture that he really wants his children to be—the very sons of God—Our Father; let him, therefore, "project" his best ideas in the expressions of his daily life.

Seattle, Wash.—Hans Peterson will erect a new theatre at 2423 Jackson street, to cost $3,500.

Urbana, Ill.—This city is to have a new vaudeville theatre to cost $12,000.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING

The first trade paper in Scandinavia.
Best advertising medium in North Europe.
Subscription 6 shillings.
Sample copy free upon request.

Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

THE COURTING OF MARY

BY VIRGINIA WEST

Majestic Film Co. Release of November 26

When John Manor received word from the United States Consul in Rio de Janeiro that his sister and brother-in-law had died there of fever, and that their little ten-year-old daughter was on her way to him and would reach him almost as soon as the Consul's letter, he had a problem on his hands that few men are called upon to solve. No doubt there have been uncles who have inherited ten-year-old nieces, but not such nieces as Mary. She was as lovely as a child could be, with her sweet, laughing face, and bright curls blowing around her head, but she was like the proverbial flea when it came to locating the whereabouts of the small possessor of these charms.

No part of the large Manor estate was unfamiliar to her long; she slid down the hay stacks, waded in the trout stream, rode all the horses, and even some of the cows, and did everything else that could possibly come into the head of a child to do. Sometimes she would get a cut or bruise, but as soon as she had gone to the house to have it attended to, away she would go again.

These days were full of anxiety and uncertainty for poor Uncle John. He was deeply attached to Mary, and she to him, but he had advanced far along the road of bachelorhood when she came to him, and she had an individuality of her own, and one which did not correspond at all with Uncle John's preconceived notion of little girls.

One hope he had: Mary was bound to grow up some day and then she would want to marry, and he could hand his troubles over to another man—if he could find the right one. For, with all her wild tomboy ways, Mary was very feminine, and some day Cupid would mark her for his own.

So the thoughts of John Manor ran, and as Mary began to develop into a beautiful girl he sighed a sigh of relief and thanked God that his days of terrible responsibility were almost over.

But when Mary reached sixteen her uncle looked anxiously for signs of awakening consciousness of womanhood, but if Mary had such consciousness she did not show it to her uncle.

He invited the young men of the neighborhood to call—those he thought fitting companions for his niece, but Mary was always anywhere but at the house when they called, and they seldom saw her.

About this time a complication arose in the life of Mr. John Manor. Into a neat little house near by his estate moved a lady of uncertain age, but charming manner. At once she captured the poor man's heart, and he felt that come what might he must have this fair lady to share with him the remainder of his years and his large estate.

The lady was almost as much affected as her suitor, but she could not bring herself to live in the same house with Mary.

"No," she said, "I greatly appreciate the honor you have done me, but I could under no condition assume the guidance of your niece, which, if I became your wife, I should feel it my duty to do."

After this speech Mr. Manor was silent. But he knew there was but one thing to be done. Mary must fall in love and then all would be plain sailing. So he redoubled his efforts with the young men of the neighborhood.

There was George Henderson, a fine looking, well built young fellow, just home from law school, and plenty of money to start in his profession. Any young girl should be glad to know him—even to marry him. Then there was Dana Rogers, the young poet—just the man to appeal to the heart of a romantic young girl. And there was young Dr. Long and Oscar Knight and James Anderson—all fine fellows. He had picked out the best in the town and countryside—all but one, Owen Mathews, his next-door neighbor, but he was no good, for he was a woman-hater, and cared only for trout fishing.

Uncle John went systematically to work. He said not a word to the young men about Mary, but he cordially invited them to his home, knowing that they knew she was there. Nor did he say anything to Mary about the young men. He would just wait for opportunities.

Mary was seventeen the summer that her uncle laid this plan, and a lovelier girl could not be found. Entirely unconscious of her beauty, she was doubly charming.

Not a day passed that some young man did not call. When they had once seen the prize they could not stay away. By the middle of the summer they were all ready to propose, although their interviews with Mary had been extremely scant. She was always just going for a run with the dogs; to walk to the other end of the estate; to inspect the stables, or anything she might think of to get away.

By the middle of September Mr. John Manor was almost in despair. He was beginning to think that his beautiful niece hid within her breast a heart of stone—also that the charming spinster would never be his.

The young men were getting desperate, too. Each was burning with the desire to tell her he loved her, and each trying to believe that she looked a little more kindly on him than on the others. And with the supreme determination of all-consuming love each swore to find an opportunity of speaking his heart.

* * * * * * * * *

The morning was perfect. The air was cool and bracing, but with that peculiar, underlying quality which promises delicious warmth later in the day.

Mary stepped out onto the front porch and threw back her head, drawing in her breath and stretching out her arms as she did so. "Oh, how good it feels, and how delicious everything smells," she said. Then with a bound she was off to the garden. The dahlias and asters nodded their gay heads and the goldfinches and chickadees called good-morning from every stalk and bough.

As Mary looked around her she was deeply conscious of the sweetness and beauty, and of the joy of just being alive to enjoy the beautiful world. But she seemed a little serious, and she did not understand herself. All the birds and flowers and the breeze and the sunshine seemed to say to her, "Be happy, Mary, always happy. Look at us, listen to us, feel us, and be happy." And she was happy; but something had stirred in her that she did not know, and she was a little serious. That beautiful, delicate flower of awakening womanhood needed but the right touch to burst into perfect bloom.

When Mary came to the arbor hanging heavy with red and blue grapes and filled with the lazy buzz of bees, she stopped very short, and in great surprise. There, upon a rustic bench, his hair tossed about and his face anxious, sat the poet. He was not embarrassed. He was too miserable to be embarrassed. "Miss Mary," he said, "I wish to speak to you. I have tried to find an opportunity, but you seemed never to give me one. I must speak to you, I must tell you——" "Wait," said Mary quickly, but as gently as she could, "wait, and I'll tell you what to do. Go home and write me a poem. Tell me what you wish to in that way." And she smiled, and of course he had to go.

With a sigh of relief she pulled a bunch of grapes and walked on as she ate them.

Suddenly she heard a noise in the elder bushes beside her and stopped to listen. Out stepped Oscar Knight.

"Oh, how you startled me! Have you been sleeping in there? You look like it." Mary was child enough to say what she thought. "No," he said, "I have not been sleeping there, nor anywhere else. I cannot sleep! I want to tell you what I seem to have had no opportunity to tell you before. I want to tell you——"

"Don't you want to do something for me?" said Mary, sweetly.

"You know I'd do anything for you."

"Then go to town and get me a spool of blue silk," she said, and before he could reply she had gently turned him 'round and started him toward town.

"What shade?" he called back, as he turned a bend in the road.

"Any shade," she replied, and he went to get it.

"Well," she thought, "two in one morning is enough." And she turned down a lane.

In the distance she saw some one on horseback approaching her. As he came nearer she recognized Dr. Long.

"Good-morning," he said, and his voice was not quite steady. "I rode this way purposely this morning to see if I could meet you. I seem never to have an opportun——" "Oh, Dr. Long," said the girl desperately, "won't you go to see the groom's children, they seemed to have fever last night; please go. I'll see you another time."

"Why, certainly," he said, "I'll do anything you ask me to, for I——" "Please go at once," broke in Mary; and she gave the horse a little sly tap on his flank.

When the Doctor was out of sight Mary sat down on a log. She wanted to cry, and she wanted to laugh, and yet she didn't really want to do either. Somehow, the morning didn't seem quite so bright. What business had these men making love to her?—and yet, for some reason, she felt sorry for them.

She leaned over and lay her cheek against the soft, cool moss that covered the log.

"I'm so glad I've found you alone," said a voice at her side. She sprang up and stood face to face with George Henderson.

"Why are you so glad?" she almost demanded.

"Because I have waited so long for an opportunity to——." But he never got any further. Mary gave a bound over the fence and sped across the fields to the house. When she reached the porch her uncle met her. "What in the world is wrong?" he asked.

Mary looked at him for a moment. "Don't you ever let any of those men come here again! Never! Never! Never! I've been proposed to four times, and I'm tired of it. I hate them all. I hate every man, and I'll never get married!"

Having given vent to her feelings, Mary flew into the house and up to her room, leaving poor Uncle John to meditate on the queer ways of women.

Once in her room Mary's mood changed. She began to think over her experience of the morning. Those young men looked so miserable and yet when they spoke to her of their love they seemed filled with a great joy. She had been angry and was a little so yet, but it seemed as though something weighed her down. A burden had been laid upon her—the knowledge that she had been the cause of suffering in others. And then there was a lack. There seemed a space that needed to be filled. A longing came, and vaguely she knew why she felt serious in the morning when there seemed nothing to make her so. She found herself wishing that she could have responded to one of the four—but it was no use.

* * * * * * * * *

The property of Mr. Manor was divided from that of young Owen Mathews by a stream, both useful and beautiful. Owen loved more than anything else to fish there.

He had come into possession of the property at his father's death about the time he finished college a year before. Few people knew him, as he was very seclusive. He hated women, and therefore made every effort to keep out of their way.

On the afternoon of the day of Mary's proposals Owen was enjoying his favorite sport. So engrossed in it was he that he did not notice Mary when she came to the stream and crossed in a shallow place on some stepping stones.

Mary knew she was on some one else's property, but she was trying to find a place where she could not be interrupted. She remembered that poem and that spool of silk, and she didn't want any more proposals that day. So she seated herself comfortably under a tree and opened a book.

Owen, gradually working his way upstream, came opposite her. He stopped and stared. A strange female had the audacity to come onto his property.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "perhaps you are not aware that you are on private property?"

Mary looked up with an annoyed expression. "Yes," she answered, "I know very well, but it is the only place I can get away from men."

"Indeed? You want to get away from them?"

"Yes, I do. I'm tired to death of them. But I'll go back to the house." However, she did not move.

"It would be best, no doubt," he said, but he threw himself down a few feet from her. "I don't like women, you know."

"I didn't know," she said quietly, and arose. He was on his feet in an instant. She walked along the bank to the stepping stones, and he in the shallow water. But they did not speak.

When they reached the stones he held out his hand and she put hers into it without a word. When they had reached the other shore he said, "If you like it here you might come. I can fish farther up the stream."

"Thank you," she said.

That night Mary sat by her window very late into the night and wondered why the moon and the soft breeze and the noises of the night made her sad.

Along the bank of the stream, near the stepping stones, Owen walked back and forth. From time to time he threw a stone into the water, sometimes softly and sometimes with an angry splash.

* * * * * * * * *

It was only a week later that Owen found her on her own side of the stream. He came straight to her and, dropping down beside her, sat silent for a moment. "It's no use," he said finally. "I love you. I've tried not to, but it's no use. Can you love me?"

"I do," and then she put her head down and cried. Perhaps you don't know why, and perhaps she didn't know why herself, and perhaps Owen didn't know, but he knew enough to find the right place for her to cry, and to let her have it out.

So absorbed were they that they did not see the shadow of Uncle John protruding from behind a hawthorn bush.

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 4th

THE ACTOR AS A SOLDIER

A real comic. One of the funniest pictures of the year, showing the ruses adopted by an actor to secure liberation from military service.

THROUGH THE SOUTH OF FRANCE

One of the finest travel subjects issued for some time.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11th

A WOMAN'S WIT

A classy comedy feature, illustrating a clever wife's display of matrimonial strategy. One of the comedy hits of the season. Don't miss it!
Our lobby display is now ready for the trade. Write for circular.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT.

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

He heard it all, and he didn't know what to do. He was afraid if he stepped out and said "Bless you, my children," that Mary, with the perversity of women, would decide she didn't want him, and so break the poor fellow's heart—incidentally preventing his marriage with the charming spinster.

He finally evolved a plan, and tip-toed off from behind the bush to consult with his lady love.

So the next day when Owen came to ask Uncle John's consent, he was met with a stern refusal.

That night the smell of gasoline might have been detected with the odor of the autumn flowers, and a slightly trembling shadow to creep down from a high window into the arms of another shadow waiting below. And then when they were gone you might have heard a chuckle and have seen a third shadow steal away down the driveway and up to the window of a little house not far away, and you might have heard a tap and then a whispered, "It's all right, dear; they're gone. Goodnight."

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Allegheny Amusement Co. will erect a new theatre at 3139-49 Frankford avenue, to cost $45,000.

St. Joseph, Mo.—T. Saxe will remodel the Schlitz Theatre into a moving picture and vaudeville theatre, to cost $20,000.

Richmond, Cal.—Ground has been broken at Fifth street and McDonald avenues, for the erection of a new theater to cost $15,000.

FILM SERVICE

FILM SERVICE

BUYING 24 REELS WEEKLY

FILM SERVICE

ANTI-TRUST FILM COMPANY

128 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

Branch Office Grand Rapids, Mich.

Branch Office Minneapolis, Minn.

SALES CO.

The following films have been released during the week of November 6 by the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.:

Monday, November 6

The Three Shell Game	American
Folks of Old Virginia	Champion
Waiting at the Church	Imp
Coward's Regeneration	Yankee
Willie Challenges Jim Jackson	Eclair
At the Bottom of the Sea	Eclair

Tuesday, November 7

A Race for a Bride	Bison
U. S. Fleet	Powers
The Missing Heir	Thanhouser

Wednesday, November 8

The Moonshiner's Trail	Champion
A True Westerner	Nestor
Marriage	Reliance
An Interrupted Elopement	Solax
Tweedledum's Motor Car	Ambrosio
Dolly's Doll	Ambrosio

Thursday, November 9

The Mexican	American
Wife's Awakening	Imp
Saints and Sinners	Rex

Friday, November 10

He Didn't Like the Tune	Yankee
Wenona's Broken Promise	Bison
The Last of the Mohicans	Thanhouser
Grandmother Love	Solax
Bill Taken for a Ghost	Lux
The Diversions of a Nursemaid	Lux

Saturday, November 11

For the Tribe	Powers
Desperate Desmond Almost Succeeds	Nestor
The Trackwalker	Reliance
A Woman's Wit	Great Northern
Victim of Competition	Itala
Effects of a Racket	Itala

LEO J. RUBENSTEIN

Leo J. Rubenstein, we understand, is the scenario editor for the Powers Picture Company. Ruby tells us that there has been so much dissatisfaction in the way some scenario editors and directors handle these articles that he guarantees to return every scenario submitted to him in three days, or its equivalent, in the shape of a check. This ought to be good news to scenario editors owing to the fact that we have on our desk complaints of scenarios that were submitted to some of the manufacturers as far back as April of this year. This is a shame and an unreasonable hold-up.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

FROM THE OBSERVATORY

By G. F. Blaisdell

TALK about applied versatility! A friend tells me an interesting story of how a popular moving picture actress broke into and entered her own apartment. The actress, it may be said, in all truth, is vivacious. Any one who has seen her on the screen or in the flesh must confess that—unless she is trying to ride a horse. But that's another story. The bit of gossip was related to the aforesaid friend by the side partner of the aforesaid vivacious one.

"L. was dining at Tankup's the other night with some rich boob. She had a fairly pleasant evening, and all went smoothly until she arrived home and discovered that she had no key to our apartment. I was out, it was late, and L. did not see fit to stick around and wait for me to turn up. She climbed the stairs to the roof; clambered down the fire escape in the pitch dark until she came to the landing opposite our ranch; then she said things. The window, of course, was locked. I had attended to that before I went out. However, a little thing like that never would stop L. She kicked the glass out, or in, reached through, and turned the catch, and climbed in.

"And she had on a mighty tight hobble skirt, too!"

* * *

President Taft enjoyed the unusual treat of a buffalo steak during his recent visit in Pierre, S. D. The animal was killed by Sioux Indians in a hunt arranged by a moving picture company.

* * *

The State Insane Asylum at Pueblo, Cal., has installed a moving picture apparatus, and will give exhibitions two days each week. One day will be set aside for the 550 women and the other for the 650 men patients.

The Western Kentucky Asylum management will resume the picture shows which were suspended during the summer.

* * *

Colonel Thomas S. Earl, of Texas, is making arrangements in Springfield, Ill. for the establishment of a moving picture plant. He plans to manufacture religious films, and also those depicting various phases of the life of Abraham Lincoln.

* * *

In Springfield, Mo., "Jack" Hutchison, prominent in local theatricals, announces the formation of a stock company for the making of pictures. The concern will be known as the Springfield Motion Picture Company. It is said the first productions of the new combination will be representations of the famous "Bald Knobbers of Missouri," a law-defying outfit. Ten local business men are said to have invested $500 apiece in the venture.

* * *

Cowboy and Indian films are blamed for the departure from their homes in Minneapolis of three boy scouts. One was twelve years old, the two others thirteen. Each was armed with a rifle, plenty of ammunition, bacon, ham and—cookies! They also had some money. They carried cooking utensils and blankets.

* * *

According to the Minneapolis Tribune, "Elk River feels the need of a good moving picture show." Here is a chance for somebody.

* * * *

Kansas City, Mo., exhibitors hereafter will have to pay an annual license of $200 if they put on vaudeville between reels. The picture license is $100 yearly. The change takes effect December 1.

* * * *

Witnessing a portrayal of a child being struck by an automobile, Mrs. Caroline Snedeker, of Jersey City, went into hysterics and had to be carried out of the show. Her screams nearly precipitated a panic. Children are not always the only ones who should attend shows under guardianship.

* * * *

In honor of the seventieth anniversary of the birth of the Brooklyn Eagle, Colonel Hester, the publisher, gave a reception and entertainment in the Academy of Music on the evening of October 26. The guests were the 600 employees and their families. A leading feature of an entertainment furnished by one of New York's leading theatrical men was Kinemacolor. Three reels were shown. One of these depicted scenes in Italy—landscape, marine and snow-clad mountain. If in all the pictures that have been made since the beginning of cinematography there has been one that for beauty and charm equals this one, this writer has not been privileged to see it. The famous Italian sea and sky in all the delicacy of their characteristic coloring were so impressively and vividly portrayed as to bring forth hearty applause.

* * * *

Dallas, Tex., is one of the latest cities to be photographed by the motion camera.

* * * *

Lewiston, Idaho, now has picture shows seven days a week.

* * * *

Referring to the introduction of motion pictures at a Sunday evening church service in Montclair, N. J., the New York Mail pertinently remarks: "What was it that Wesley said about 'letting the devil run away with all the good tunes'? Perhaps the phrase is properly quotable again, with 'modern inventions' in the place of 'tunes'."

* * * *

The congregation of the Church of Olathe, Kan., has taken up the motion picture as an adjunct of the Sunday evening service. The pastor of the church is the Rev. Walter Burr, prominent in Boy Scout work.

* * * *

Rock Island, Ill., has a new picture censor—a woman; also she officiates as police matron. Paraphrasing a somewhat ancient remark, it might be said that "Pictures don't care what censors 'em."

* * * *

The chief of police of New Haven, Conn., has appointed two policemen to act as censors of local picture shows.

Berkely, Cal., is to have the latest thing in municipal innovations—a civic moving picture show. The new civic centers committee, composed of ten representative citizens, both men and women, has voted to purchase an expensive machine and install it in the high school auditorium. Here at stated intervals far enough apart so as not to compete with the local nickelodeons educational and classic reels will be shown to the people free of charge.

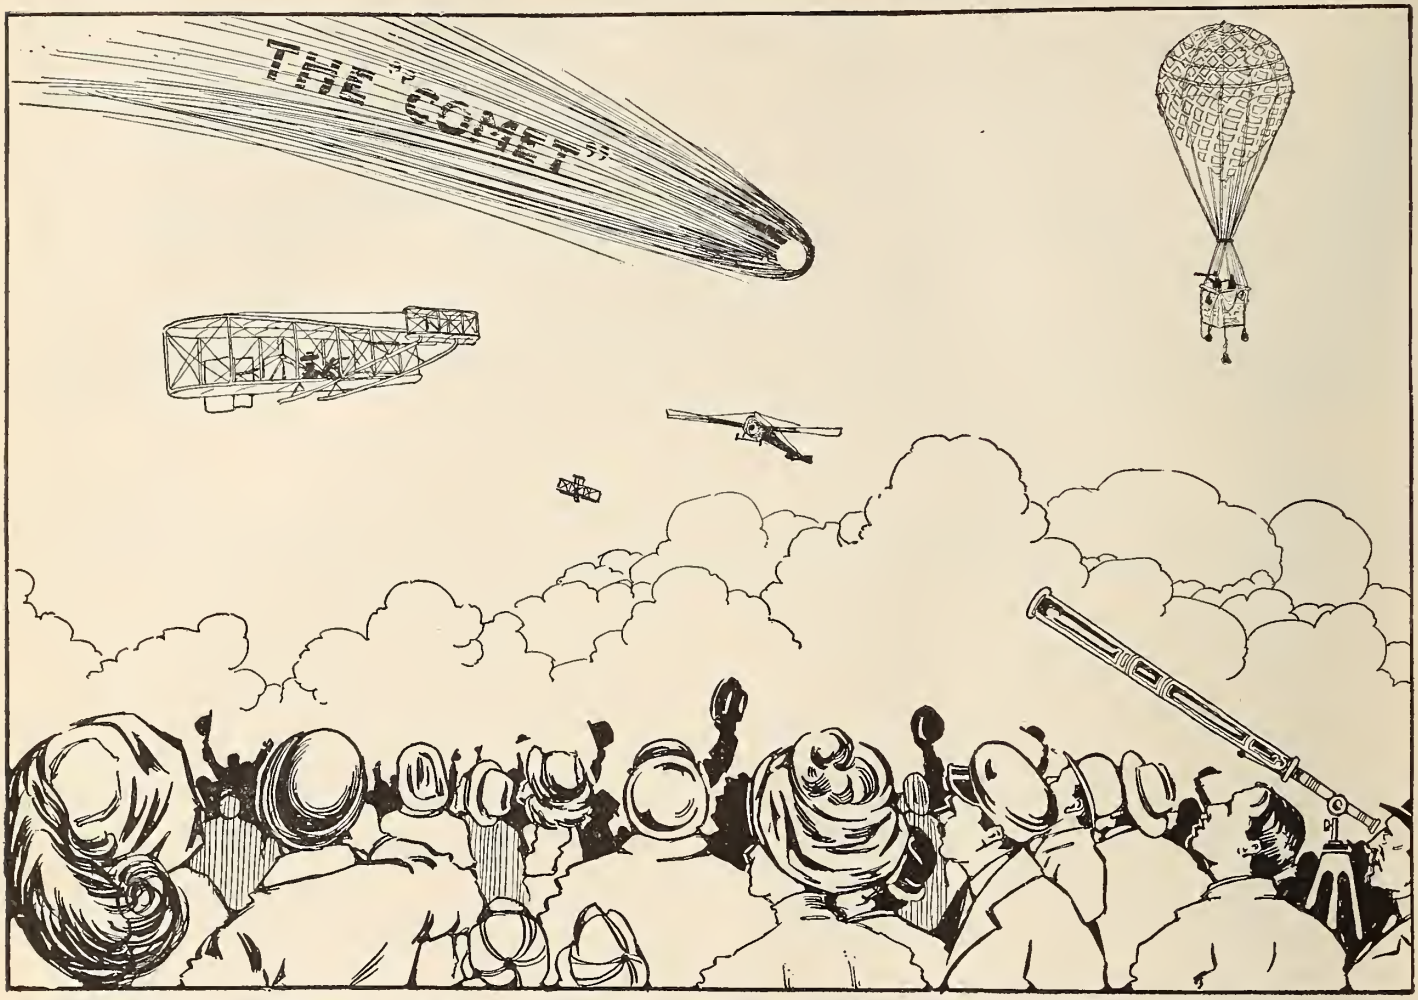
* * * *

By direction of Governor Dix there will be no moving pictures taken of any boxing exhibitions in New York State. The governor believes that pictures, as an addition to boxing, would commercialize the sport, a thing he wishes to avert.

* * * *

An interesting question, of importance to real estate

FIRST RELEASE, NOV. 20th—OFFICE BOY'S DREAM



COMET FILM CO., 344 East 32d St., New York City owners, has arisen in connection with the granting of a license for a moving picture show in Boston. A complaint has been made to the mayor's office that as a result of the granting of such a license the insurance rate on adjoining property has been materially increased. Fire insurance men generally regard the installation of a moving picture show in a building as increasing the fire hazard. If the mayor cannot require the licensee in such cases to pay, as part of the license fee, the increase in the insurance rate on adjoining buildings, the matter will undoubtedly be brought up before the next Legislature.

* * * *

When a fire started in the cellar under a picture show house in Pittsburgh and filled the hall with smoke, the piano player, Miss Maude Harvey, struck up the national air and the audience filed out in good order. Peter Hicks, the operator, escaped through a window. Plucky, cool-headed Miss Harvey! The show place was damaged to the extent of $1,000.

* * * *

Fire that is supposed to have started from crossed wires in the operating booth of the Lyric Motion Picture Theater in Louisville did $2,500 damage. This was in the afternoon. In the evening there was a blaze in the Grand Theater, in Market street, but the damage was confined to the operating booth. Carl Shaffer, the operator, and Morris Reno, the stage manager, were burned slightly.

* * * *

The motion pictures being used by the Kentucky Republicans in their state campaign are making a great hit. People from miles around are coming into towns to see the shows—and incidentally being compelled to listen to campaign speeches.

* * * *

The city commissioners of Montgomery, Ala., have refused permission to applicants for a proposed negro amusement house.

* * * *

An ordinance designed to prohibit unaccompanied children under fourteen years of age from attending picture shows caused a lively discussion in a hearing before a committee of the council of Richmond, Va. The vote was 4 to 4, leaving the question as it was.

* * * *

The Schlitz cafe, in St. Joseph, Mo., will be remodeled for a picture theater at an expense of $20,000.

* * * *

The Princess Theater Circuit Company will spend $12,000 on a new theater in St. Cloud, Minn.

* * * *

The well-known Garden Theater, of New York City, has been transformed into a picture and vaudeville house.

* * * *

David J. Borun will erect a $10,000 picture theater in Milwaukee.

* * * *

Dorchester, Mass., is to have a new $15,000 picture house. John Williams is building it.

* * * *

Among new picture theaters planned and building are a hundred-thousand-dollar structure in the West End of St. Louis with a seating capacity of 3,000; a brick structure in Preston street, Louisville, costing $10,000; a theater at Twenth-eighth and National avenues, Milwaukee, costing $10,000; the Oakland Foto Play Theater, seating 1,700; a $20,000 structure in Colorado Springs, seating 1,000; the Arcadia of Savannah, seating 750; a $7,500 building at 308 Grand street, New York City, and a one-story theater at 2221 Crystal Lake avenue, Chicago, costing $2,500.

* * * *

Representatives of a moving picture concern recently endeavored to induce Mrs. Gertrude Patterson, of Denver, who killed her husband, to pose in pictures. Mrs. Patterson refused, saying she had had all the notoriety she wanted.

* * * *

President Neff, of the National Exhibitors, was robbed of a film recently. The thief attempted to sell the reel, but when the prospective buyer telephoned for the police the robber took to his heels.

FROM OUR WESTERN CORRESPONDENT

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 1.—It isn't often that this old burg gets considerably wrought up over things that the Governor of the State pulls off for the reason that his excellency is not thought very much of in this locality, but he handed Hot Springs a "package" this week that has made us all sit up and talk.

For some months the Supreme Court of the State has had under consideration the case of the former sheriff of this county, Sid Houpt, who was removed from office for the technical escape of a prisoner under indictment for murder. The decision upheld every contention of the State and the removal was "O. K." by the Supreme Court. When Houpt was removed, Charles C. Webb, one of the most popular men in the city, was made sheriff, and has been serving in that capacity, giving the people a good administration, and things were going along great. Every one thought that Governor Donaghey would reappoint Webb, but Prosecuting Attorney Wood went to Little Rock and succeeded in getting the appointment of Hugh L. Hale, deacon in the Baptist church, a strong Prohibition Democrat, a reformer of the most radical type, and a man who, it is said of him, drew the original plans and specifications for the first municipal "lid." Was there a howl? Oh, me; oh, my; what a yelp of protest went up. At first people could not believe it, but, by golly, it's so, and Hale is sheriff.

Things were progressing so nicely, and the town was on a liberal footing. The "palaces of chance" were open and well regulated, a "square game" was assured all who cared to play, and word was being sent out all over the country that "Hot Springs had come into its own," when the Governor goes and spoils it all. And the worst of it is that Hale's appointment runs for a year, and there promises to be, unless the citizens can mandamus the Governor and force him to call a special election, which the law states he must do, one year of strife and contention. It seems that they won't let this old town alone. The "lid," it was said by the new sheriff, would be clamped down, and Judge Wood opined that it would go down to stay, too. Every man by the name of Hale was subjected to more or less good natured jest the past week, and in this respect Harry Hale, proprietor of the Lyric, did not escape. Whether or not Harry is any "kin" to the new sheriff I know not. I hope he isn't, and if he is he isn't saying anything to any one along these lines. A friend stepped up to him the past week and said:

"Mr. Hale, I understand that your uncle, Sheriff Hale, is going to make you chief deputy. Is that correct?"

And then some one touched off the fuse, and the pyrotechnic display started. If this was asbestos paper that I am writing on I might faithfully record what Harry said in reply, but as it is not I'll leave it to the vivid imagination of ye readers to figure it out, the only stipulation I make being that ladies are not admitted to the guessing contest. Harry Hale has been one of the few men who have put up his good hard cash and fought the fanatical policy of closing only the picture shows and letting everything else run on Sunday. When the arrests were being made, Harry generally stood for the test case. He has a dandy little theater in this town, where at all times they give a good show and first run pictures, and when he realized what he had gone through in fighting such men as Hale and Prosecuting Attorney Wood, to have some one accuse him of taking the chief deputyship in the sheriff's office—wow. The "blow almost killed father." The town has gone "daffy" over this crusade, and Joe Hunt, manager of the stage at the Lyric, threw a fit and sent me the following daffy, with a request to publish it:

"If Sheriff Hale will not resign, do you think Judge Wood?"

Now, you know the case is serious.

Fred Pernell has returned to the "valley of vapors," and is now in charge of the Auditorium Theater, the largest house in the city. He is one of the most experienced theatrical men in the South, as well as one of the most popular. Fred had a strike on his hands the first week he was here, but managed to settle it with that diplomacy that should win him a place in the Diplomatic Corps. There

(Continued on page 26)

Powers
Weekly Corner

FOR TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 14th
A SPLIT REEL OF GOOD VARIETY

"When First We Met"
A Brilliant Burst of Serio-Smilefulness and

"The Tell-Tale Parasol"
REAL REEL COMEDY
FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18th

"FOR THE TRIBE"
A drama of the barrier between the Redman and YOU.

POWERS MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
511 West 42d Street NEW YORK CITY

SPECIAL NOTICE

NON-BREAKABLE

Lantern Slides

ANNOUNCEMENT
ADVERTISING
LECTURE
MICROSCOPIC
NATURAL HISTORY

We make slides of all kinds

SLIDES

Artistic and beautifully colored

Don't be faked by would-be Original Inventors who claim, and are trying to manufacture, non-breakable slides.

SEND FOR CATALOG.

MICA NON-BREAKABLE SLIDE CO.
2737 N. Croskey St. PHILADELPHIA, PA

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

Our Western Trip

TWO weeks ago we took one of our periodical trips out to Chicago to ascertain how matters were working in the West. We had quite an enjoyable run in among the exchanges and manufacturers of Chicago, who report progress all along the line, and while so far out we thought extending the trip to St. Louis would be a good move so that we might look over what the St. Louis Motion Picture Company were doing, and to our surprise we found they had the most completely equipped plant that has been our lot to examine for some considerable time, but under the management of Bert Hamilton we ought not to have been surprised, knowing of his experience and products in the past. We were more than glad to shake Horace Vinton by the hand, and have a good long chat with him, and to meet Mr. Goebel, the president, and his worthy lieutenant, Mr. Reno. We were met with a reception that will linger long in our memory.

The St. Louis Motion Picture Company, which has been operative now since midsummer, has finally arranged for the release of the first picture that will bear the trade-mark Shamrock.

Much has been written and spoken, and various opinions expressed as to the outcome of this new company, and its advance has been watched with more than ordinary interest,

O. E. GOEBEL
President St. Louis Motion Picture Co.

HORACE VINTON
Scenario Editor and Dramatic Producer

HERMAN SCHLICKER
Superintendent of Plant

G. P. HAMILTON
General Manager St. Louis Motion Picture Co.

ALOIS HEIMERL
Head of Camera Department

LUCELLA POTTER
Grande Dames and Characters

DOT FARLEY
As "Lelia" in "A Gypsy's Love"

BENITA VILLEREAL
Heavies and Characters

for it was the first of the recently heralded companies in the field, and its advent seems to have given an impetus to others, for since the Shamrock's inception several new manufacturers have announced their intention of joining out with the Independents.

We do not wish to stultify ourselves, or in any manner give offense to others, but will tell a true, unvarnished tale without bias, for we feel great credit is due the St. Louis Company for the modest and unpretentious manner in which they announced their coming.

We had occasion, on a mission of investigation recently made to the West, to visit the plant of the St. Louis Company, and while there, it became the privilege of the executives of the company to entertain us.

Our approach was fraught with skepticism, for "So many have been called," and "So few chosen," in the Cinematographic industry, we were in a measure doubtful as to the outcome.

But, in the hands of "Bert" (as he is familiarly called) Hamilton, we melted, for his suave, gentle, and modest bearing, while showing us through the plant, soon won our confidence, and when shown into the projecting room we began to "sit up and take notice," for we at once recognized the hand of an expert in every detail.

The room itself, was a revelation. Large, clean, and well ventilated, with an operating booth that would do credit to a more pretentious manufacturer; two of the latest projecting machines, a screen of clearness, speaking tubes, so arranged as to instruct the operator, without the annoyance of yelling instructions, from the spectator's point of view, and other recent innovations of value.

As the introductory exposure of the first picture was shown upon the screen, its sharpness and detail for a moment staggered us, for we were entirely unprepared for anything quite so clearly defined, but as foot after foot of the picture was reeled off, the same artistic clearness, ex-

JOSEPH ARONS
Characters and Heavies

E. B. BONNER
Characters and Heavies

RANDOLPH GREY Leading Man

celient portraiture, and beautiful environment were disclosed.

Every foot of the one thousand was identical, in clearness and precision, with the earlier exposures.

When the whir of the machine ceased, deep silence prevailed for an interim, until Mr. Hamilton modestly inquired:

DOROTHEA GREY
Ingenue and Soubrette

DOT FARLEY
Leading Lady

"How do you like it?"

Not wishing to appear too enthusiastic, we replied:

"A very beautiful subject, and splendidly handled in every way."

But, we will, without hesitation, go further now and pronounce it "great."

Ten other themes, all widely different in treatment and handling, were shown, and a consensus of opinion asked of the several persons present, as to their choice for the vital, first release, and after a vote was taken, the decision centered upon a drama called "A Gypsy's Love."

It is a pastoral theme, written around the love of a beautiful gypsy maiden for a handsome youth who came to her rescue when she was attacked by a couple of ruffians, whom she met on a lonely country road when returning from a jaunt to the city, where she went to dispose of her wares.

An innocent flirtation follows, and the ardent blood of the gypsy became inflamed; she takes the attentions of the youth seriously.

He subsequently breaks off with her, and marries a young woman of his choice, and after an interval of a few years, their beautiful child is shown. This little one, left in charge of a careless maid, wanders away across the fields, and is soon lost to view in a meadow of golden rod.

Becoming weary, the child seats itself in the midst of the flowers, and is idly plucking them, all unconscious of the fact that the almost frantic maid is searching for her to no purpose.

It so transpires that the band of gypsies were returning from a distant camp to their old quarters. Leila, the gypsy maiden, is among them.

As the caravan passes, the child, without an attendant, is seen by them, and they think it is lost.

With a hope of reward, they carry the little girl away.

The distracted parents, after a vain search, believe their darling is dead, yet continue the search heartbroken, with hope abandoned.

As time wanes, the mother of the little one, hearing of the presence of a band of gypsies in their vicinity, expresses a desire to visit their camp.

In company with her husband they do so. Chance leads them to Leila's tent, where she is disclosed toying with their baby girl.

They accost her. She recognizes her former sweetheart, and through a newspaper, inadvertently dropped, she learns the identity of the child, and in a spirit of vengeance she concludes to keep it.

She places the little girl in a fashionable seminary, and toils for years for its maintenance and education.

When next seen, the little one has grown to girlhood, under the care and tutelage of the attendant sisters.

Leila later visits her child (by adoption), and repentantly confesses her treachery to the good sisters, in whose care she was reared and is advised by the Mother Superior to return the little girl to its parents.

SCENES FROM "A GYPSY'S LOVE," SHAMROCK'S FIRST RELEASE

Accompanied by one of the sisters, she visits the home of her sweetheart of years before, and makes a full and complete confession, restores the child now grown to young girlhood to its overjoyed parents and disappears in a maze of memories, friendless, abandoned, and alone.

One of the features of this picture is a panoramic view of a gypsy camp, in which are centered three tribes, numbering nearly a hundred persons.

It has been pronounced by all who have seen it a masterpiece of cinematographic effort, and is, we think, destined to make a record for the Shamrock Company.

A comedy of high class, entitled, "How He Won Her," it is thought will be their second release.

These two will be followed by a breezy Western comedy called "A Petticoat Ranch Boss," which contains all of the environment obtainable, to picture the surroundings which will place it in the front rank of Western comedies.

"White Fawn," an Indian picture, written along original and novel lines, entirely free from conventionalism, will follow the "Petticoat Ranch Boss."

"Ben Saunders' Redemption," "Discontent," and "The Kissing Germ," will doubtless follow in the order named.

The above subjects are only a preliminary to others already finished, and ready for the market, with several more in preparation.

The executive heads of the several departments of the factory and studio were selected after very careful consideration.

At the helm will be found G. P. Hamilton, a name known, recognized, and respected in the motion picture industry wherever pictures are shown.

Mr. Hamilton as an organizer stands alone.

To his efforts, the formation and successful issue of more than one extensive plant in the moving picture industry is due.

His faculty for selecting heads for departmental work is little short of marvelous, and the results with the Shamrock Company, under his able administration, thus far, prove his sterling worth.

To him has fallen the strenuous duties of installing the machines, the arrangement of the studio and factory, the engagement of the stock company, the supervising and producing of the several themes already handled, and a general surveillance over every department.

Keen, observant, quick, and alert, he seems impervious to fatigue.

One of Mr. Hamilton's first selections was Horace Vinton, an actor widely known for some years back, who has filled many important theatrical engagements in this country and abroad.

Mr. Vinton's occupation with the Shamrock Company has been indeed varied. To his efforts the publicity department has been entirely entrusted; the press matter and advertising work, with an occasional invasion into the production department.

Mr. Vinton is not a stranger in the world of motion pictures, having been a contributor of scenarios, and producer with various companies for the past five years.

Herman Schlicker, is in charge of the technical and mechanical department.

Mr. Schlicker was nurtured in the severe technical schools of Germany and Continental Europe, pursuing his scientific and mechanical studies in Die Technical Gewerbe Schule in Berlin, and Die Technicum Ilmenau, graduating with high honors. He has served with distinction with the leading manufacturers in America and Europe.

Alois Heimerl is a prominent figure in the camera department.

Mr. Heimerl recently came from California, where he was known as one of the foremost artists in the photographic world.

Uranus Hord, for some years the head of the photographic department of the Pettibone Company, of Cincinnati, has charge of the developing.

Of the Shamrock Stock Company too much cannot be said in praise. Miss Dot Farley is the leading woman.

Miss Farley's experience as an actress dates from the cradle, when as a baby in arms she was carried into the theater to represent the petted, pampered first-born of fond and loving parents.

Since young girlhood her marvelous aptitude and stage versatility has been marked, noted, and commended by critics in every part of this country.

She entered the field of motion pictures nearly five years ago, and since her advent has been prominently identified with the leading studios of the United States.

Miss Farley has been pronounced by critics the most versatile woman in the entire field of the Photo-play, with a knowledge of technique, ranging from broad farce to heavy emotional roles.

She will be recognized as Leila, the gypsy, in the first release, "A Gypsy's Love," the scenario of which was prepared by her.

Miss Benita Villareal, the second woman, has had a wide and varied stage experience, and a personality of expression which adapts her for the requirements of the prominence she occupies with the company.

The ingenue parts are entrusted to Miss Dorothea Grey, a petite, smiling, vivacious brunette.

For some years past Miss Grey has occupied a prominent position in the theatrical world.

The St. Louis Company were fortunate in securing the services of Miss Lucelia Potter, a well-known actress of grand dames and characters.

The other minor female characters will be entrusted to Miss Erminie Evans and Miss Anna Lowry.

The male contingent consists of Mr. Randolph Grey, a leading man of sterling worth, who has for years occupied an enviable position among the best actors of the period.

Mr. Grey is a handsome type of vigorous manhood, tall, and splendidly proportioned.

He is a native of Texas, and equally at home in the saddle with "guns" and "chaps," or in a fashionable salon, attired in evening clothes.

He is ably seconded by Mr. E. B. Bonner, to whose care and discretion the heavy roles are entrusted.

Mr. Bonner is a matured and mellowed actor, with a wide range of experience, both on the stage and in the field of motion pictures.

Mr. Joseph Arons plays characters and second heavies.

The most recent addition to the Stock Company is Gilbert P. Hamilton, Jr.

Young Mr. Hamilton, scarcely out of his teens, has been a member of Troop "A," Eleventh U. S. Cavalry, in which he served with distinction for the past three years.

He was recognized by his comrades in arms as one of the most fearless and daring riders among "Uncle Sam's" enlisted men.

Mr. Charles Huber and Mr. Robert Coffey are a few of the minor members of the organization who are ever ready to ride a bucking broncho or don the habilaments of courtier and gentleman.

O. E. Goebel, the executive head, "the man behind the gun," so to speak, representing the stockholders, is a young man of astuteness, and great business acumen.

Mr. Goebel is largely interested in many of the St. Louis industrial enterprises in whose directorates his name is ever prominent.

He has handled the business and financial end of the company's affairs in a most liberal manner, and has spared no expense in his endeavor to make the Shamrock's future success a certainty.

Ada, Okla.—Several citizens here are organizing a company with a capital of $7,500 to erect an opera house.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—The Fairy Theater has been sold by J. P. Mollett to Charles Clark.

Butte, Mont.—The Montana Amusement Co. will erect a new $50,000 theater on W. Park street.

AMUSEMENT MANAGERS

Learn of our AERIAL ATTRACTIONS, TOY RUBBER GAS BALLOONS, ELECTRIC SPARKLERS and Parade Torches. Illustration shows our COMET BALLOON in action. TWO complete large outfits $1. Write to-day and learn to-morrow of our many unique but effective AERIAL ADV. STUNTS that will arouse public interest and gather the crowds and shekels.

BRAZEL NOV. CO., Northside, Cincinnati, O.

EVERY EXHIBITOR reads the Moving Picture News. ADVERTISEMENTS BRING RESULTS

You'll Be Delighted

With American Releases for November 20th and November 23rd. You will find in

THE TEST

RELEASE NOVEMBER 20th. (Approx. Length 1000 ft.)

A Really Brilliant, Sparkling, Western Comedy—new in thought, Beautifully Portrayed, with that Spicy, Zip and Snap so Characteristic of all AMERICAN films.

She couldn't decide between two Lovers; so she consulted her old friend, the Orange Grower. He advised her to cut an orange in half, give a half to each suitor, the one returning both halves to be her choice. Then Jack departed on a mission into the mountains, and Dick, the other suitor, determined to obtain that other half. He did—but he lost the Girl—How it all happened makes one of the most Interesting Pictures Ever Produced. It's Distinctly Western.

THE MASTER OF THE VINEYARD

RELEASE NOVEMBER 23rd. (Approx. Length 1000 ft.)

Is One of Those Genuine, Dyed-in-the-Wool AMERICAN films that has made the "Flying A" Production Synonymous with All That IS Best in WESTERN DRAMA—pictured in Beautiful, Historic El Cajon Valley, Southern California.

Through the thrift of wife and daughter, Jim Bradley acquires a home. Kirk Winters wants to marry Mildred and to force his suit obtains control of the Bradley home while the father is intoxicated. The family seek refuge with George McLean, a kind-hearted vineyardman. Kirk makes trouble among McLean's employés, and while drinking in a saloon, Jim Bradley overhears Kirk and his followers planning an attack on the vineyard. He warns McLean. A thrilling fight between the factions headed by McLean and Kirk takes place during which Jim Bradley is shot by Kirk. A wonderfully well told tale that will grip with its intense dramatic action and perfect interpretation. Approx. Length 1000 feet.

AMERICAN FILM MFG. CO.

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

FROM OUR WESTERN CORRESPONDENT

(Continued from page 21)

are several good shows booked at the Auditorium, and unless I am very much mistaken, the "College Boys' Minstrels," which made such a hit a few weeks ago at Whittington Park, will again be given, this time bigger and better than ever before.

The Moose, the largest fraternal society in the city, are also very seriously considering putting on a drama or entertainment of some kind. Being a member of that organization, I have been "elected" to take charge of the same. It is the intention of the Moose to have a military company of the members of their order, not for any "scrapping" purposes, mind you, but just to show the town that they can do it, so if the play goes through the Order will offer for the critical approbation of the public the four-act military drama, "A Peculiar Coward," which I have played successfully throughout the East a few seasons ago.

All Hot Springs turned out to welcome Miss Eaulia Wylie, former music teacher in the public schools, who came to the Princess as one of the principal members of an opera company. It seemed that her friends could not do enough for her. She was entertained from the time she arrived until she left, and demonstrated by the manner in which she handled several important solos entrusted to her that she is "there," and has a very bright future in front of her. Miss Wylie is getting her first vaudeville experience. The company was the best singing feature that has ever been at the Princess. I asked the little lady if she found the stage to be as bad as reformers would make it. She laughed, and said she had not, and, still laughing, admitted that nature had never intended her for a "school ma'rm."

Our correspondent in Houston, Tex., sent me the following the past week. I did not use it in the New Era, believing that it would be more appropriate for the Moving Picture News, and is submitted without comment:

"Society and high school work do not mix in the belief of P. W. Horn, superintendent of the Houston High School. Also picture shows and dancing should not enter the life of the high school student, according to the superintendent, who, in a recent issue of the official school paper gives a frank talk to the parents.

"The superintendent adds that should the outside attractions, such as picture shows, dancing, society, music and elocution, be worth more to the boy or girl, they should be withdrawn from high school. The two cannot go hand in hand, says he.

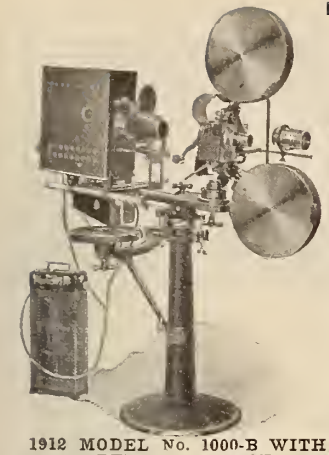
In reference to picture shows the superintendent says:

"I do not believe it possible for a fourteen-year-old boy who goes to moving picture shows from five to seven nights a week to do well in his school work."

The superintendent concludes that the children should be kept at home and entertained by either their school books or books of the right kind from the library of the Y. M. C. A. or the public library.

The News Scimitar, of Memphis, carried a special dispatch from Los Angeles the past week, telling of the probable fatal shooting of William Selig, of the Selig Co., and his manager. The news was freely commented on in this city among the picture show managers, and universal regret was heard. Although I have scanned the exchanges carefully I have been unable to learn whether this is true, or, if true, whether the shot was fatal. Possibly I am behind the time in this respect, but the fault is not mine, believe me. I hope that it is not true, to begin with, but, if so, that Mr. Selig's wounds are not fatal. His pictures are great favorites here, and to lose him would be a distinct loss, a heavy blow, not alone to the Trust, but to all interested in the continued progress of the world's greatest industry—motion pictures.

Ambrosio deserves a great deal of credit for their reel, "The Conversion of St. Anthony," which was heavily featured here this week at the Photo Play and the Scenic Theaters. It was a masterpiece and deserved all the great praise it received. "The Cowboy and the Outlaw" was the last American reel I saw, and like it very much. Leave the scenic and Western product to American and there would be nothing more desired. Great Northern weighed in with "The Secret of the Underground Passage," and while it was not a local mine story so far as the good old "U. S. A." is concerned, it was interesting, just the same. "Foolshead" as a "Model Guest" kept us laughing while he demolished the apartments of his host, and Bison gave us one of their usual good Western subjects in "The Indian Rustlers." One can always expect some great riding in the Bison pictures. "The Yarn From Baby's Shirt" was the greatest laugh producer of the week. I thought the bunch in the Photo Play would have to have medical assistance when



1912 MODEL No. 1000-B WITH OPERATOR'S SEAT

The Final Word in M. P. Machines
Always in the Lead

1912 MODELS READY—SEND FOR ADVANCE SUPPLEMENT

OVER ONE HUNDRED SALES OF THE 1912 MODEL IN THREE WEEKS attest the fast growing demand for THE MOTIOGRAPH—Deliveries are being made in the fastest possible time consistent with THE HIGH QUALITY of THE MOTIOGRAPH.

The Motiograph is the last word in Motion Picture Machines and always wins out, in the best Theaters, after all other makes have failed—for instance—Keith's Bijou, Bijou Dream and National in Boston—Cameraphone in Pittsburgh and Cleveland—Starland, Ltd., Circuit in Canada and hundreds more for which we have no space.

ONCE A USER ALWAYS A USER.

NECESSITY IN M. P. MACHINE QUALITY IS THE MOTHER OF THE MOTIOGRAPH.

THE ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564 W. Randolph St., CHICAGO

For Sale by Reputable Dealers Everywhere.

that was being run off. It was the best comedy for many moons, Powers, and thanks for the hearty laughter, for we sure had to hand out the loud giggles when this came down the line. The split reel, "Too Many Burglars" and "Mr. Bragg" were also interesting and caused much joy from the Biograph factory, and Edison showed in his usual realistic manner "How Mrs. Murphy Saved the American Army," a very good picture, indeed. Lubin fell down in the "Gambler's Influence," which was silly and without interest, but Selig made up for it with "The Indian Vestal."

Business all over town is picking up. All the houses are doing nicely, notwithstanding the reform sheriff and prosecuting attorney won't let them open on Sunday. The Rock Island and the Iron Mountain railroads have both decided to contribute $9,000 as an advertising fund to help boost the city, and the local citizens will also add a few thousand of their own. The advertising campaign starts immediately, two months earlier than before, so the prospects for a banner season in every respect are very bright.

In conclusion, will state that I have made a note of Brother Blaisdell's "threat," and I hope that the fact there is a reform regime sitting on the "lid" won't keep him away. Fact of the matter is this:

I know where that municipal covering is cracked the least bit, and I'll guarantee that his education won't be neglected while "romancin'" with us, and as the old cattleman would say—"that's whatever."

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

CHICAGO LETTER

There are many signs that the David Copperfield pictures will be a large drawing attraction. The coming celebration of Dickens' hundredth anniversary will have the whole world aroused and talking about Dickens, which makes this feature a timely and opportune one. It is being booked throughout the surrounding states by the Anti-Trust Film Company, who are fully prepared to help the exhibitors with advance advertising, as they have on hand one and three-sheet posters, heralds and other advertising matter.

* * * *

The Buffalo Theater, 1355 West Division street, is now using Independent service, supplied by the Standard. This theater is owned and managed by Mr. Charles Andrews, who puts on an excellent program, considering the seating capacity of 200. A Motiograph machine is used which throws a clear and bright picture. Two reels and an illustrated song make up the evening's program, which seems to please the audience, as he has a crowded house every evening.

* * * *

Mr. Tom H. Quill, general manager of the World's Best Film Company, who has Mr. R. E. Lacey out handling Wisconsin state rights of the "Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered" for his own company, played a seating capacity of 1,485 for three days, October 22 23 and 24, at the Racine Opera House, Racine, Wis. Also played big business in Kenosha, Wis., as well as in Madison, Wis., where same was played to a seating capacity of 1,600 at the Fuller Opera House, for nine shows, October 28 and 29. The theatrical managers state that Mr Quill got in more money for "Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered," than any of the other theatrical shows for the past six months. He plays "Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered," at the Columbia Theater, Milwaukee, Wis., October 30, 31, and November 1, a seating capacity of 1,800 seats.

Mr. Tom Quill, general manager of the World's Best Film Company, is making trips throughout Canada.

* * * *

Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the Imp Company, New York, is getting out three releases with Imp. Thousands of exhibitors all over the country are congratulating Mr. Laemmle for bringing out extra Imp releases. Mr. Laemmle showed the Chicago representative of the Moving Picture News hundreds of inquiries, stating that since using the Imp their receipts have doubled.

* * * *

Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the Imp Company, New York, has been spending the past week in Chicago, calling on old friends. He left for New York on the Twentieth Century on the 28th.

* * * *

Two new theaters will be erected on the North Side, one at 3819 Evanston avenue and the other on Evanston avenue between Dakin street and Irving Park Boulevard. The latter will be built by Mr. Stevens, who is the pioneer of the moving picture theaters in this locality, having built the Buena and Sheridan theaters several years ago, when there was not a moving picture theater within a radius of several miles from his first theater. The Sheridan Theater has a seating capacity of 300; a Motiograph machine in used, which Mr. Stevens is very well pleased with. The floor has a gradual incline, the side lights are placed in a position where they do not interfere with the brightness of the picture. The theater is well planned and excellently laid out. Mr. Stevens can be congratulated upon his idea of a model theater.

* * * *

Mr. William H. Swanson was in Chicago last week attending to the removal of his Chicago office, and in the future he will have no Chicago holdings but will give his entire time to his business in and around Denver, Col. He stated that business is great out there, and much better than he expected.

* * * *

Mr. E. E. Fulton, Western agent for The Lubin Company, has taken the lease at the old exchange of William Swanson on Lake street. He will be located at both his new and old office until May 1st.

* * * *

The George Hoke Supply Company are doing much larger and better business than ever before. Mr. Hoke stated that if business keeps up reports will show a wonderful increase over last year's business. The Hoke Supply Company is well known for the quality and high class of goods which they carry.

Seattle, Wash.—C. Allen will erect a moving picture theatre at 1327 East Madison street, to cost $3,500.

The Bioscope The Leading Journal of the Moving Picture Business in Europe. Has the largest circulation and is the best Advertising Medium, bar none.

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 A YEAR. SAMPLE COPY MAILED FREE.

85, Shaftesbury Ave., London, W., England

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

SHAMROCK FILM

Scenes from

"A GYPSY'S LOVE"

Will Be Released at an Early Date

WATCH FOR OUR ANNOUNCEMENT

Following which in order named will be

"HOW HE WON HER"
HIGH CLASS COMEDY

"ON THE VERGE"
TENSE PROBLEM DRAMA

"A PETTICOAT RANCH BOSS"
BREEZY WESTERN COMEDY

"WHITE FAWN"
ROMANTIC INDIAN STORY

And TEN OTHERS Ready to Announce

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO., St. Louis, U. S. A.

LUX FILMS THE CROWN OF PERFECTION

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1911

Bill Taken for a Ghost

COMEDY . . . Length, 426 Feet

A laughable comedy in which Bill fools his friends by proving to be the ghost.

The Diversions of a Nursemaid

COMEDY . . . Length, 495 Feet

A film brimful of laughable situations

R. PRIEUR, 10 East 15th Street, NEW YORK CITY

TELEPHONE 3427 STUYVESANT

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED.

OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT

London Office of the News,
8 Sherwood St., W.

I hear that the series of films recently secured by Mr. Dufresne, one of the cleverest of the clever band of "Kinemacolor" photographers, during an extended foreign tour, beats anything that the process has so far produced. More I am not at present permitted to say, but it is sure that holders of "Kinemacolor" licenses will soon receive a batch of film which should prove great business pullers, and which will deepen the favor with which the natural color pictures are already regarded by the public. It is hardly necessary to add that "Kinemacolor" has made all the necessary arrangements for filming the Durbar. Here is a subject offering possibilities in the way of color which Mr. Urban will rarely find equalled; one which the ordinary film can only reproduce in a very inadequate way, but which should make a new "Kinemacolor" record and pack the "Scala" in a more pronounced manner than ever. By the way, Mr. Bruce London is now manager for Mr. Urban at this theater and finds receipts still more than a little gratifying.

* * * *

Mr. Mackenzie, the veteran of Mr. Urban's camera staff, indeed one of the old guard of the trade, who was taking and showing his own pictures all over Scotland while most of us were gasping at the novelty of the just introduced form of entertainment—is at present putting in one of his rare stays in London. Mr. Mackenzie has probably done more globe trotting than any other kinematograph man in this country. Canada, India, China, the Balkan States, are only a few of the places at which his trusty camera has been operated, and it is only at rare intervals that one finds him at headquarters. He has braved revolutionaries in the Balkans, superstitious natives in China—he once had to abandon his camera to save his skin—and fever in India and is as wiry and cool as ever and prepared to proceed at a moment's notice to any spot on the earth's surface where a picture is to be obtained.

* * * *

Mr. A. E. Manwaring has taken the place of Mr. Scott as manager of the Western Import & Film Co. Mr. Scott, as already reported, having gone with "Flying A's" to Wardour street. Mr. Manwaring will be known to many members of the American trade from his travels there in the interests of the Warwick Trading Company, with whom he was associated until he migrated to Rupert Court at the beginning of the present week. Mr. Manwaring had previously had charge of the film department for the Palais de Luxe Cinema in Windmill street, and earlier still was a member of Mr. R. W. Paul's staff. He has also had considerable theatrical experience.

* * * *

I regret to hear of the recent indisposition of Mr. W. F. Jury, who, however, was at his desk again on Tuesday after a few days' absence. One of these members of the trade who gets good work out of a staff by himself working harder than any, Mr. Jury is at St. Martin's Lane early in the morning until very late at night and takes few holidays, and he has been busier than ever since his new premises were opened. Just lately, Jury's Pictures, Ltd. have been scoring heavily with exclusive pictures. They have had sole rights in "Captain Midnight" (the first Australian production and a real thriller), "Victim of the Mormons," "Voyage to the North Pole" and many others, not the least of which is a film showing an ascent of Mount Etna during an eruption—really startling picture which takes one within twelve feet of the seething crater and shows the river of lava flowing across country. This is at present running exclusively at the Alhambra, where it has secured remarkable press notices, and I believe it will continue there for at least three more weeks, after which it is booked all over the country.

* * * *

The methods of film salesmanship in this country have been gradually altering during the last few years. It is curious to remember that the uniform release day is after all quite a modern development, and that not so long ago manufacturers printed off as many copies of a subject as their judgment led them to think would be required, taking the risk of being "left." Some very fine bargains were at that time to be picked up in the subjects of a leading continental maker, who not unfrequently overstocked and was generally supposed to sell off at 2½d a foot—a proceeding which naturally excited the resentment of his competitors. As I remember it, Cricks & Martin were one of the first to start the present system of showing in advance of release, which is to the advantage of seller and buyer alike, though the latter would be better pleased if all makers were showing subjects for the same release day. At present you can see on the same day an English film scheduled for next week, a Continental subject for a fortnight to a month later, and an American picture which may not be marketed for six or more weeks. No wonder we sometimes have to think whether we are in December or October.

* * * *

Apart from the institution of "display ahead of release" methods have changed a lot. The film trade in its early days was one of the most conservative in the world in regard to advertising. If you got a Ten Dollar ad. out of a manufacturer you had done pretty well. Now the "Kinematograph Weekly," which started with twelve pages, carries something like 50 to 70 ad. pages alone per week—a fact which is eloquent alike of the amazing growth of the trade and of the much more liberal view taken by manufacturers of the value of advertising. There are still firms only half converted, but it is a significant fact that the most extensive advertisers are the firms who have come forward most rapidly. Selig, for instance, advertises as widely as he does well, and I don't think Mr. Montague regards the money as wasted. Anyway "Selig's" have gained immensely in prestige since the new offices were opened, and a strong advertising and publicity campaign launched. Film advertising, too, is being more and more divided and the showman is getting a say as to the films which compose his program. Many see all the releases and choose for themselves; and advertising has done its share in bringing about this, to the manufacturer, desirable state of affairs.

* * * *

Just on the point of closing, I notice that publicity is being given to the fact, of which I previously had private information, that "Kinemacolor" have taken action for infringement of patents against "Biocolour." Very few people have seen the examples of the latter process, and as I was not one of them I cannot say how the result on the screen compares with "Kinemacolor." Presumably, it depends upon the result of the action whether "Biocolour" is placed on the market. I know for a fact that the "Kinemacolor" patents cover a pretty wide field, and it is possible that others beside "Biocolour" will be affected if Mr. Urban wins his case. B. A.

NOTES OF INTEREST

By Our Roving Commissioner

The new Rex poster is causing a good deal of interesting comment. They have established a precedent in the way of posters that it takes some nerve and hard cash to be able to follow; hence the hue and cry that they have in this instance exceeded the bounds of publicity. However, we will all agree that money is the creator of more money, and the best thing to do is to follow up the lead and beat 'em to it next time.

* * *

Champion's new studio adjacent to the plant proper is making rapid strides toward completion. It is to be built entirely of steel and glass, with cement flooring, and will be one of the best studios anywhere about the country.

* * *

The natives of Petersburg, Va., were seized with a severe malady of curiosity and excitement when the Ortho Film Co.'s stock company took possession of the town. Indian chiefs traversed the streets, and the usual motley assortment of fantastic characters that go to compose a series of moving picture films have been playing a very important part in the entertainment of the citizens.

* * *

Within a few days a member of the Board of Health, along with a member of the Board of Education, and a representative of the Board of Underwriters, will meet at the Ortho Co.'s office to investigate their new method for making moving picture films explosion proof.

* * *

The Kinemacolor Theater is doing great business. The interest in the Coronation pictures does not seem to lag. Kinemacolor has established a precedent for the opening of more regular moving picture theaters.

* * *

Mr. Isadore Bernstein has resigned his position with the Comet Film Co.

* * *

Mr. Bertram Adler returned to the Thanhouser Co., on Monday, October 30, in his former capacity, after a ten weeks' sojourn in the hospital.

* * *

William F. Milliken, president of the Film Co. of America, was arrested at his offices, No. 145 West 45th street, on Tuesday, October 31, at 7 P. M., charged with grand larceny in the first degree.

* * *

The Majestic have been busy on their production of "Little Red Ridinghood." Most of the scenes are being taken on and in the vicinity of the estate of the famous writer of animal stories, Ernest Seton Thompson. The company will in a very few days proceed westward for their winter sojourn in California.

* * *

Mr. Mendlebaum, of Lake Shore Film Co., Cleveland, Ohio, has been in the city during the past week.

* * *

The exchange men of Canada are feeling sore on account of the injustice which they feel is being shown them with regard to the showing of moving pictures containing even the faintest suggestion of an American flag. They do not see why the Stars and Stripes are allowed to be used on the stage and not in the moving picture theater.

* * *

Mr. Aitken, of the Majestic Film Co., sailed for England aboard the Mauretania, on November 1. Mr. Aitken, who has with him quite a collection of films, remains in London five days, and will return to the city on the 17th.

* * *

William Crawford has leased to the National Film Co. for a term of years the entire second floor in the twelve-story building in Nos. 141 to 145 West 45th street.

Mr. Horsley, of the Nestor Film Co., is still with his stock company at Hollywood, Cal., near Los Angeles.

* * *

It was the pleasure of a member of the staff of the Moving Picture News to view, at the invitation of Mr. Charles Simone, the first release of the "Desperate Desmond" series, one of which will be released each week from now on by the Nestor Film Co. It is intensely amusing, and it is expected that it will meet with the same splendid success as the "Mutt and Jeff" series.

"Desperate Desmond Almost Succeeds," is the title under which "Desperate Desmond" makes his debut in motion pictures. Release date, November 11.

* * *

The route list of Clyde Martin, "Playing the Pictures" (Ronk and Pyle, mgrs.), is: Princess, Blue Island, Ill., October 31 to November 1; Fashion Theater, Chicago Heights, Ill., November 2-3; Lyric, Gibson City, Ill., November 4; Dreamland, Streator, Ill., November 6-7; Court Theater, Kankakee, Ill., November 8-9; Lyric, Champaign, Ill., November 10-11.

National Film brokers announce the opening of an office located at 186 North La Salle street. Mr. A. G. Spencer, formerly connected with the Standard, General, and Anti-Trust Film Co., of this city, has been appointed manager. Mr. Spencer says that the company will be in a position to handle any class of film service, as they have one of the largest stocks of Independent films in the city. They will also handle many of the special releases. Mr. Spencer's ability as a business getter in the past speaks well for the future of the National Film Brokers.

"THE WATER WAR"

An Educational Film

Responding occasionally to that insistent call, ever increasing, for the film that educates, manufacturers find their efforts appreciated by exchange and exhibitor. There is no denying this better tendency in subjects and the fact that the public never fails to cordially receive those pictures which both amuse and uplift. This happy combination is the ultimate aim of all manufacturers, but it is hard to attain and seldom realized.

The American will release on November 2d an exceptionally good specimen of the sort of film in question. "The Water War" presents a really delightful story with a good bit of instruction in dam building, and shows some very fine views of the world-famous dams of San Diego. There is so much discussion nowadays of Western lands, irrigation projects, and the big West generally, that this film should be received with more than ordinary attention.

The story itself is charming. A young engineer with a corps of assistants surveys for the great dams when he is interrupted by ranchmen of the neighborhood. Spirited opposition on both sides results in an interesting situation, and to further complicate matters the engineer and the ranchman's daughter succumb to the universal disease and hold a number of clandestine meetings. It is during one of these that the young engineer, heart and soul in his great building project, takes her for a trip over the mammoth dams. The gigantic scope of these operations is then revealed in all their grandeur to the uninitiated mind. The huge tower, climbing hundreds of feet into the air, great walks of concrete surrounding the top of the tremendous dams, the "heavy" man, hauling himself up by means of a rope, hand over hand for apparently an interminable distance to plant a stick of dynamite in the completed work, all finish an unusual combination of interesting story and instructive photography.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Halton Powell Co., capital $5,000, to operate theaters: F. C. Overton, K. K. Stokes and H. C. Overton.

Provo, Utah.—The Rex Theater Co. will erect a new theater here, to be called the Princess.

DER KINEMATOGRAPH, DUSSELDORF

The leading Organ for the Motion Picture Trade in Germany.

Special Supplement for Talking Machines, &c.
Published every Wednesday. Annual Subscription 11/- Post Free.
Advertisements (4 columns to page); 2s. 6d. per inch. Situations Wanted, 1½d. per line.
Reduced Price for a Series of Insertions.
Publisher—Ed. LINTZ. Chief Editor—EMIL PERLMANN.

FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA

Imp's Remarkable Release

Time was when the workings of internal machinery of the nation's fleet was clothed in mystery; the interior of the submarine was known to but a favored few. Not so to-day. Moving picture photography has come to the rescue. Because of her inimitable powers of distribution of knowledge she has been granted admission to the cloisters of almost every science known to humanity, and we are proud, indeed, of the steps being taken by some of our foremost manufacturers toward the filming of the up-to-date subjects and progressive arts.

The Imp Moving Picture Co. have come to the front with a very remarkable story cleverly woven around a submarine war vessel, and the intensity with which the attention of the spectators is held is remarkable. The "in'ards" of the vessel are displayed to view in such a manner that even a child could gather sufficient knowledge to enable it to understand something of what a "submarine" really is. The story runs thus: A young ensign of the navy has fallen in love with and proposes to the sweet young daughter of his superior officer. The superior officer upon being asked for his consent to the union promises the young man that upon his securing a promotion which will put him on equal footing with her father he may then marry the daughter. An attache of the French navy appears upon the scene, and having an eye for the pretty daughter himself, plans the destruction of the young officer's hopes. The two men first mentioned are called away on a cruise. Before starting, the French officer is invited aboard the submarine, all parts of which are viewed by him. An incident occurs which creates a necessity for his being left alone. Taking advantage of his opportunity to work harm, he steals one of the component parts of the compressed air valve. As the vessel proceeds on its way out of the harbor gradually it dawns upon all hands that something is radically wrong. The depth gauge goes off on a mad carecr of inconstancy, until to the consternation of all, the hand of the indicator is seen to move slowly but surely indications of greater and greater depth—60, 70, 80, 90, are passed by the merciless hand until the sad tale is but too plainly told of the total submersion of the vessel beneath the cruel waters. The young ensign comes to the rescue, however, by making an escape by being shot by the torpedo tube and swimming ashore. In the twinkling of an eye the rescue corps are out and at work pumping air into the submerged vessel. The picture is very intense where the scenes of the alienated distress of those within knowing that aid has come, is alternated with the scenes of the slowly arising vessel, until it is entirely righted and all are saved.

Needless to say, the young hero, who is given the ovation which is due to his display of presence of mind, and who has won the confidence and admiration of the father, is given the promised consent to wed the daughter. The picture closes with the father placing the girl in the young lieutenant's arms.

The uplifting of the submarine from the water seemed to us emblematic of the rise of progress in connection with the moving picture. It is very suggestive of the present condition of the trade, for it is upward and onward for the moving picture trade.

November 20 will be the release date of this excellent film of the Imp Co.

INDEPENDENT FILM SERVICE

that's RIGHT at a price that's RIGHT from the house that's RIGHT

NATIONAL FILM BROKERS
186 N. LaSalle St. Chicago, Ill.

A CHATTY LETTER FROM AN OPERATOR

Port Jervis, N. Y., Oct. 28, 1911.

Mr. Saunders:

Dear Friend—I can't let this opportunity slip of telling you what a grand show we had here to-day and how well the people liked it. They simply went wild over the "Three Daughters of the West," and "Foolshead's Last Roguery." I will now tell why we had to put our "Standing Room Only" card out afternoon and evening, and also put the kibosh on the theater across the way with their "Trust" pictures.

Here is a list of the pictures: 1st, An Italian's Gratitude (Solax); 2d, Redfeather's Friendship (Powers); 3d, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde (Feature); 4th, Three Daughters of the West, Caves of La Jolla (American); 5th, Foolshead's Last Roguery (Itala), and two illustrated songs. Now, can you beat that for a good show? Well, I should say not! Before I forget I must tell you how well the Flying A goes here. First thing in the morning when the manager puts out the posters there are a lot of boys on the watch, and if they don't see the "A" they are somewhat disappointed, and ask the manager why he has no Big A cowboy pictures. The grown-ups are just the same. "Mutt and Jeff" is going better than ever here. To-morrow we have M. and J. and the Dog Catchers. Quite a number of the people who attend regularly flatter me by telling me that I run the best of any operator that has been here in a long time, and they say that goes for both houses. I always get there about two or three hours before starting time and examine all film to see that it is in good shape. Clean lenses, condensers, machine and lamp house, so that everything goes along like a song. Have just been wondering if any of the Canadian boys could be coaxed to give us a little news in the "News" from the "Land of the Maple." I would like very much to start a "Chat Column" in the "News" with the operators from Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, Sherbrooke, in fact, from all over the Dominion. I am sure we could swap some pretty good yarns. (Canadian boys come out of your shell and let us know what you are doing, and how you do it. Do you ever read the "News"? I do, and always have, and wouldn't be without it.) The new opera house here opens about the 4th of November, and will run dramatic shows on Mondays and Saturdays only; during the week pictures and vaudeville. Mr. James Sweeney and Mr. Kinsler, who are to run this house have never been in the show business before (so I have been told), but they positively assert that they will make good. I wonder if I would be considered too inquisitive if I were to ask if Margaret I. MacDonald is Scotch or Canadian. "The Man in the Baths" must be a "Happy Guy" from the weekly news he gives us. Is he in the baths all the time or just once in a while. The Observer said something about the "water wagon" in last week's "News" and I kinda thought that too much water might spoil it all. Hoping I have not taken up too much of your valuable time with my wandering prattle I will now apologize for coming in unannounced, and make my exit.

Best regards from "Canuck" in the Catskills.

MUST HAVE MOTION PICTURES

Town Dark in Order to Give Power to the Shows.

The inability of the Newton, N. J., lighting plant to furnish power to run the moving picture places and at the same time keep the streets of the place lighted has resulted in a partly darkened town and it is not an uncommon sight to see the rural residents coming to the post-office carrying lighted lanterns.

Hundreds of the villagers find their only amusement in the moving picture houses, and the officials of the company reasoned that it would be better to let the streets remain dark than deprive them of their pleasure.—New York Tribune.

GET OUR FILM SERVICE
It's low in price and solves the problem of how
LOW PRICED FILM SERVICE CAN GET THE CROWDS
Many exhibitors using our service are getting more receipts than their competitors who use the highest priced service. There is a reason for this, and we will explain it to you. Write today for particulars and prices.
Reliable Film Exchange, 442 S. DEARBORN ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

Gary, Ind.—The A. B. Marcus Building will be remodeled into a moving picture theater.

Gary, Ind.—C. C. Cronin will establish a moving picture theater in the H. B. Jones Theater Building, Broadway and 10th streets.

Baltimore, Md.—Lyceum Theater & Amusement Co., capital $25,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Philip Gleichmaire, of the Cadillac Film Co., will erect a new theater at Broadway and Gratiot avenue, to cost $200,000.

Pomona, Cal.—The Congregational Church at Third and Thomas streets, will be replaced by a new opera house.

Pineville, Ky.—Commercial Club is promoting erection of opera house.

St. Edward, Neb.—The R. E. Case building on Third street is being torn down to make room for a new opera house.

Denver, Colo.—A new $100,000 theater is to be erected on Curtis street, near 18th, to replace the Bijou Theater.

Brainerd, Ill.—The Princess Theater Circuit Co. have purchased the Grand Theater.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Plans have been made by T. F. Kelley for a moving picture theater to be built on Jane street for M. W. Leighton.

We give a copy of HAVILAND'S MOVING PICTURE PIANIST'S ALBUM free with a year's subscription to MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

F. B.
HAVILAND'S
MOVING PICTURE
PIANIST'S ALBUM
CONTAINING AN ASSORTMENT OF MELODIES ADAPTED TO EVERY CLASS AND STYLE OF PICTURES AND DUMB ACTS BRILLIANTLY YET SIMPLY ARRANGED FOR PIANO
By
EUGENE PLATZMAN
PRICE FIFTY CENTS
F. B. HAVILAND
NEW YORK

$2.00 PER YEAR

MOVING PICTURE NEWS,
30 West 13th Street, New York City

The Art of Scenario Writing

By Wm. Lord Wright

Endorsed by the best scenario editors in the trade

$1.00 each

A year's subscription to MOVING PICTURE NEWS including this valuable book for $2.00 :: :: ::

Only a few on hand
First come, first served

BARGAINS $35 UP, BARGAINS.
Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Cineograph complete $65. Powers Cameragraph No. 5 only $110 as new. $225 Standard for $175. Model B Gas Outfit $25. Electric Lamps, Calcium Jets, Rheostats, etc. NEW Edison Model B, Powers No. 6 and Standard are Specialties.
Send for Sup. No. 33 Bargain List.
Motion Picture Machines Wanted.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Moving Picture Theater Pianists and Musical Directors should not forget that we give a copy of the F. B. HAVILAND MOVING PICTURE PIANISTS' ALBUM free with a year's subscription to the MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR
Sanitary, Space-Saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.
HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

FREE
CHRISTMAS DINNERS
FOR
300,000 POOR PEOPLE
Will be supplied by The Salvation Army
Throughout the United States

Will you help by sending a donation, no matter how small
TO COMMANDER MISS BOOTH
118 W. 14th Street, New York City
Western States, Commissioner Estill, 669 S. State St., Chicago

Theatre Sales Co.
211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341
Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call.
Make Known your Wants

When Writing Advertisers Please Mention Moving Picture News

JUST OFF THE PRESS—THE NEW
MADISON'S BUDGET No. 14
By far the best book of comedy material I have ever written. Contents include 20 sure-fire parodies, 11 great monologues, 10 fine acts for two males, 6 acts for male and female, a splendid minstrel first part, an original one-act comedy, also brand-new acts for quartettes and sister teams, besides an almost endless assortment of newest gags, jokes, sidewalk patter, etc., etc.
PRICE, ONE DOLLAR
MADISON'S BUDGET No. 14 is sold with the guarantee of being absolutely satisfactory in every way or money instantly refunded. Send orders to
JAMES MADISON
1404 Third Avenue, New York

TWO COMING CHAMPION RELEASES

"THE PASSING OF SAL"
Released November 15th

"THE MOONSHINE TRAIL"
Released November 8th

"SUNLIGHT" PROGRESS

Our Chicago representative, calling on Mr. Wylie, of the Sunlight Metallic Cloth Curtain Company, gathered from him the following particulars:

Mr. Roy Keppel has opened up a new moving picture theater in Chicago Heights. He is a young, but progressive exhibitor who first opened a house which he still operates at Blue Island, Ill. (The Princess Theater) and conducted his business along progressive lines and made it successful. He has now opened the Fashion Theater, located at 14-16 Illinois street, Chicago Heights, Ill., with up-to-date features, including a "Sunlight" Metallic Cloth Curtain and patent "standard" frame with tightening device.

We have also just received an order by wire from Crute & Ragland, of the Lyric Theater at Huntsville, Ala. They are making extensive alterations and improvements in their theater and are to open about November 1. Having seen one of our "Sunlight" screens installed upon our special "Standard" frame with tightening device in use elsewhere they immediately determined to purchase, and wired us in their order. Messrs. Crute & Ragland are interested in other public amusements in Huntsville, and are considered Huntsville's most progressive moving picture exhibitors.

Other shipments of this week are for the Cosmos Theater Company at Washington, D. C. Mr. Brylawsky, president of the company, controls seven of Washington's most attractive theaters, including the Cosmos, which is probably a theater as well known as any theater in the East.

We are also shipping Pearce & Scheck at Baltimore, Md., for installation in their Victoria Theater a "Sunlight" screen, size 12′ x 16′ with patent standard frame, with tightening device to be used as a drop curtain. The Victoria Theater is one of the most attractive theaters in Baltimore, and one of the best known theaters in that section of the country. Pearce & Scheck are the leading exhibitors in Baltimore, and control six or eight other houses.

The screen in this instance, is to be used in connection with a mixed vaudeville and photoplay program, and the purchase was made after Mr. Pearce had looked thoroughly into the matter and found a "Sunlight" screen was the only screen that could be used as a drop curtain to secure a high-class picture result in connection with his vaudeville program.

We have also recently installed at the Royal Theater in Brooklyn, one of Marcus Loew's enterprises, a screen 14′ x 18′ with patent "Standard" frame with tightening device as a drop curtain. However, at the present time the Royal Theater is being exploited as an exclusive picture house.

We might make special mention of another shipment this week to W. T. Horne, of Los Angeles, Cal. This shipment is for "Horne's Big Show," 423 Spring street, Los Angeles, owned and managed by Mr. W. T. Horne. This is a particularly attractive playhouse, pretentious in design and architecture, catering to highest class trade and showing licensed films and operating as an exclusive picture house. It is one of Los Angeles' recognized amusement places. Mr. Horne ordered a "Sunlight" screen with our patent "Standard" frame and tightening device.

THE CARL BARCKHOFF CO.
BUILDERS OF PIPE ORGANS
With or Without Self Playing Attachment
POMEROY, OHIO, U. S. A.
Established 1819

Over 3000 Barckhoff Organs in use, which testify to their superiority and durability in construction, workmanship and sweetness of tone.

We make a specialty of Organ Chimes, made by no other builder.

You are dealing with the Manufacturer, no commission.

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

SAINTS AND SINNERS

Rex Release, November 9

Solomon was a wise old gink, but he was a hopeless fool compared to the man who asserted the fact that there's a little good in the worst of us, and a little bad in the best of us. The only really bad transgressors are those who take up sin as a business, of which dastardly number there are few—for which reason we are said to be civilized. There are as many forms of sin as there are recipes for cooking rice in Charlestown, S. C. But the most nefarious, ruthless, the most devastating, depraved, is the black transgression which makes perdition of purity, vice of virtue, infection of innocence.

This is a story of the sons of Adam and the daughters of Eve, of the wanton wolves of the earth and the weak women that are their prey, of sanctity and sin, of saints and sinners.

Mr. Burton leaves his bride of a few weeks to go off on a business trip. In the same boarding house at which Mrs. Burton is stopping are living an adventuress and a "sport," a man-about-town, one of the smooth-tongued gentry ready to make money or marplot, as the case may be. He sets evil designs on the young matron; the adventuress divines his intention—and the sinner becomes a saint. The adventuress realizes he will have as easy a time in working destruction with the unsophisticated, unwary girl as Roosevelt killing a grizzly with both hands, and she determines to prevent the murder of a soul. She warns the young woman—but advice seldom justifies itself; the wise need it not, and fools don't take it anyhow.

She appeals to the man, but she might as well petition Satan to become a reformer. At last, in despair, she asks them both to come to her room to talk the matter over. They agree. An unseen observer, a serious person, sedate and sober, one of the clan of humans that long to make the world better—and invariably make it worse—informs the landlady that "a man has entered Miss Winthrop's room." The irate landlady, right in her element at the suggestion of scandal, makes a formidable entrance upon the three. Miss Winthrop conceals the other woman behind a curtain, insinuating by her act that she alone is the wrongdoer, sacrificing the dearest possession of woman, her reputation, for a weak sister. They are both told to leave the house. The man departs at once, and the next morning the "adventuress"—a "bad" woman—goes out into an evil world with the sweet consciousness of having done a real good in it.

The husband returns. He takes the little woman in his arms, and neither knows the misery and heartache to which they both were doomed and from which they were spared by—a "bad" woman.

And we hope when the final record is weighed and judged by One Who Understands, the "bad" woman will take her place among the good and pure and clean—and we're sure you do, too.

THE EASTERN COWBOY

American Release, November 13

Jack Richards and Belle Bruce have been engaged for some little time and are very happy, but one day—after a visit to the lotus pond, a little misunderstanding grows into a lover's quarrel of large dimensions, and Belle runs away from him in an angry pout. Jack, quick-tempered and hasty, writes a note telling her that he is going out West and will never return. When Belle returns to coax him into good humor she finds her lover gone and the note informing her of his intention.

Jack arrives in the West and is fortunate in obtaining employment on the ranch of Frank Morlin. The ranch owner's daughters, Kate and Jean, are pleased with the new Eastern cowboy and both try to win his favor. They are with him on all possible occasions and make his life a burden with their attentions. They are both winsome girls but Jack's temper has had time to cool, and, although too proud to write to Belle and ask her pardon, his thoughts are constantly of her.

Belle misses Jack more than she cares to admit even to herself, and when she receives a letter from her cousins in the West she decides to accept, and, in the new environment, forget her grief.

When Belle arrives, Kate and Jean treat her royally and the first topic of conversation she hears from her cousin is about their new Eastern cowboy. They insist that she must meet him right away. Belle, whose thoughts are all with Jack, refuses pointblank. Kate remains to plead with her and Jean hurries to the barn to ask Jack to come to the ranch-house and meet Belle. Jack has had so much attention from the sisters since his arrival at the ranch, that he decides to forego the pleasure of adding a third admirer to his conquests and takes refuge in flight, and Jean—not to be denied—starts in pursuit.

At the ranch-house Belle has decided not to wait for Jean to bring the Eastern cowboy to her for an introduction and also runs away with Kate hotly pursuing her. Both parties of hunter and hunted head for the orchard and Jack and Belle, looking back at their tormenters, run blindly into each other. Turning, they come face to face and with a little cry of happiness Belle runs into Jack's willing arms, while the sisters look on in astonishment.

There is no striving after great effects in this picture, but the tale is as sweet as the first dreams of young love, light as a cream puff, and sparkling as a brook, with a strong current of fun that is irresistibly delightful.

Approximate length, 1,000 feet.

THE WAY OF THE WEST

American Release, November 16

Hi Newton meets his old school friend, Zeb Barker, after many years. A good old-fashioned rejoicing takes place and both find that they are prosperous ranchmen. Zeb learns that Hi has a daughter and Zeb a son, so what more natural than that they should decide to further cement their friendship by the marriage of their children. Theoretically O.K. but—

Newton introduces his daughter to Zeb, who mistakes the ranch cook for the young miss in question. Newton explains the mistake, and, after meeting his charming daughter, Barker returns to his ranch fully determined to bring about a marriage.

Enter here Young America. Young Barker entertains some strong opinions on the subject but, after his father has submitted a picture for his inspection, his antagonism lessens and he determines to investigate for himself. So he bids good-bye to his home and is seen soon after applying at the Newton ranch for work. He is given a chance. So is Cupid. Horseback rides and a charming panorama of mountain scenery bring about something more than platonic affection. Young Barker declares himself, is accepted, and then explains a clever plan to teach the two old men a lesson. After being thoroughly repulsed by Newton, young Barker hires a "bad man" to call at the Newton ranch and introduce himself as young Barker. There is some corking good comedy here. Naturally, Newton is seriously alarmed at the possibility of his daughter marrying such a beast, and, naturally also, he is immediately reconciled to young Barker, who arrives in time to throw the villain into the road.

Approximate length, 1000 feet.

INTO THE LIGHT

Comet Release, November 13

Cupid has played many mischievous pranks and has sent his darts into many strange beings, but the strangest prank of all was when he sent his love dart into Bud Tucker, the burglar and all-around bad man. Bud never knew the tender passion until he met Anne, the Salvation lassie. While seeking to escape from the police he enters her room, and she, recognizing him as the man who had returned her prayer-book and one for whom she held out great hopes as a convert, decides to protect him from the law's clutches. She orders him to jump into bed and when the police call she tells them that he is her sick brother.

Through her influence he in time reforms and obtains a position as butler in the home of Anne's friends. Surrounded by good influences, trusted and respected, his cup of joy is full to overflowing. With the tenacity that characterizes him as a successful bad man, he adheres to his new principles in life and when his death occurs, he is deeply mourned by his new friends.

THE TWO ROOMS

Yankee Release, November 17

The life of a settlement worker means a series of self-sacrifices which none but the bravest in spirit dare undertake. When the Rev. Horace Thomson signified his intentions of entering this neglected field of spiritual work his friends were greatly surprised, but all persuasion could not turn him from his path.

Renting a room in a typical tenement, he began his charitable work with "love to all and malice toward none." He became acquainted with his next room neighbor, a young matron in poor circumstances whose husband was in jail, through her little girl who, with childish candor, made friends with the handsome young minister and made his room her playroom during the absence of her mother. The minister learns that his neighbor is to be evicted for non-payment of rent. Eager to assist but fearing to offend her, he hits upon a novel method. He volunteers to care for the child during the mother's absence, and when the little one falls asleep he hides a sum of money in her clothes, which the mother later finds, and, appreciating the deed, accepts the help.

An eventful day arrives when her husband, who has escaped from jail, comes and demands help. He brutally attacks her and leaves her unconscious. The little girl runs next door for assistance and the minister is in time to meet the escaping convict, but being unarmed, is unable to stop him, so turns his attention to the unconscious woman and the frightened child.

The ex-convict is shot by the police in trying to make good his escape, and when the minister learns the identity of the man, he takes the mother and child to the home of his mother while he returns to his settlement work with the picture of the woman and babe ever before him.

Love cannot remain silent forever, and although reluctant to confess his love for his former neighbor, he shows it by every action and deed. Brave under all circumstances, he is compelled to rely upon his mother when it comes to declaring his love; but all ends happily when she assures the mother of her willingness to became her daughter.

THE REDEMPTION OF A COWARD

Champion Release, November 13

John Maynard kisses his sweetheart good-bye and goes bravely to war. John is a Confederate and his sweetheart is of the same faith, and before his departure she makes, with her own little hands, a beautiful flag—the stars and bars. John places it in his bosom and swears fealty to it. But alas! the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak, and one sad day John flees like a coward in the face of the foe. His comrades being forced to retreat, start in hot pursuit after the fleeing man, and God help him if they catch him.

The home of John's sweetheart has been invaded by Yankee soldiers, who rough-house it in that dastardly fashion peculiar to soldiers—more like brutes than men. Everything is knocked topsy-turvy and Mary herself is grossly insulted. Just here, John the coward, comes on the scene, for he has sought the home of his sweetheart as a refuge in his hour of distress.

Then we witness a singular state of affairs. The deserter—the coward—suddenly becomes a raging lion. John lays about him right and left, dealing death at every blow; but he himself is laid low—shot through the brain, and his Mary throws herself on his body, heart-broken, but glorying in the wonderful prowess and courage of her sweetheart.

John's comrades, in search of him, arrive on the scene and make short work of what the fallen hero had left of the enemy, and seeing how he had redeemed his honor, they cover his body with the folds of the flag they find on his breast—the flag she gave him. With respectful and sympathetic mien, they uncover and swear never to reveal the one blot on his escutcheon, for they rightly judged that his last great act was truly a deed of redemption.

THE PASSING OF SAL

Champion Release, November 15

Sal is a character as imperious and wild as her Western upbringing could make her. She loves Jim Brantwood with a strength that is wholly reciprocated. But Sal is also whimsical as well as imperious—two bad traits—and the upshot of one of her moods is that she turns Jim down, good and proper. Jim is at once troubled, but gladdens later on. With Jim out of the way, Bill Grant, who hankered after Sal, tried to win her good graces, while Jim turned to a girl who was more worthy of him, Lucy Phillips.

Sal learns from Bill that Jim is going to take Lucy to a ball, that she had long since made arrangements to attend herself, dressed in a gorgeous gown which Jim had presented to her before his "throw-down." Beside herself with jealous rage, she tears the dress from her shoulders. After this, the news that

WANTED!

For the third "Imp"

A Stage Director A Camera Expert and Scenarios

—The "Imp" Company wants one more stage director for its third release. He must be capable of producing the highest class comedies ever known to the moving picture business. All applications will be considered strictly confidential.

—The "Imp" Company wants one more moving picture camera expert for its third release. None but the very highest class men in the profession need apply. Must be one of the best studio and outdoor photographers in the business. Applications confidential.

$285 in Cash Prizes for Scenarios

—The "Imp" Company wants the best 500-foot comedy scenarios it can buy for its third release. To stimulate the interest of the best writers, we offer special prizes for the four best comedies received at the "Imp" office before the first of the year. Names of winners will be used on title of prize films as well as advertised in the papers. Address scenarios to Carl Laemmle, "Personal," care of IMP Company, 102 West 101st Street, New York City.

1st Prize	$100.00
2nd Prize	75.00
3rd Prize	60.00
4th Prize	50.00

—The "Imp" Company will unhesitatingly pay the highest prices for all other scenarios submitted during this contest and found available by Mr. Laemmle. We want to be known as the company that makes the best comedy films on earth—and we are willing to pay for it! Let's have the best you've got—and quickly!

THE IMP COMPANY
102 W. 101st St., New York, N. Y.
Carl Laemmle, President

Jim is going to marry Lucy tears her very heart out. Her fury is now intense, and she borrows Bill's knife to deal death to Jim, telling Bill she has a purpose and will return it to him when it is accomplished.

High up were the cliffs that lay between Sal and the object of her dire vengeance. Deep, impassable gorges intervened, but she was not to be deterred—this wild girl of the plains. So we see going hand over hand along the sides of rocky crags, revengeful Sal. The sight is blood-curdling to the beholder, but it meant nothing to the wild pursuer.

But now her goal is reached, and it is only a question of a few moments until her knife would reach Jim's body. He little knows the impending danger and is oblivious of all but his beautiful Lucy. However, a higher power intervened, for so it seemed, and stayed the hand of Sal, by reaching her heart. They called it "heart disease," but Bill thought differently when he found she didn't come back. He had divined her plan of revenge and her purpose in borrowing his knife.

But if none else seemed to care, Bill did, and he wasn't ashamed to drop a tear o'er the passing of Sal.

THE HIGHER THE FEWER

Thanhouser Release, November 14

"The Yorkshire Kid" is a clever little bantam weight prizefighter, who is blissfully unaware of his antecedents. All he knows is that when he was very young he had "folks" who came from England, but they all died so long ago he does not even remember them. He is perfectly contented with his lot, and knocks out his man joyfully every time he gets a chance.

Love, however, deals him an uppercut. He meets while out on the road training, the daughter of a wealthy merchant, whom he worships from afar. He is in the depths of despair, realizing that a prizefighter can never meet a "swell dame who has her own benzine buggy."

Suddenly he is confronted with the news that through the death of an old man in England he is now a belted earl, instead of a belted prizefighter, with an independent fortune on the side.

With wealth and a title, he easily obtains an introduction to the lady he adores. With most girls, his title would have been enough to make a conquest easy, but this particular young woman is not at all dazzled by his high position. She is rather inclined to like him, if it were not for the fact that he is decidedly undersize, and she thinks him a typical, anaemic little lord.

The secret of his former profession, the "Kid" guards jealously. He discovers that he can look the part of an earl if he does not give himself away often by opening his mouth. The effect upon others being that they think him a timid little man, unduly silent.

He woes the American girl persistently, but she refuses to take him seriously. Not until he forcibly carries her off in an airship, and knocks out his brawny rival in a fistic encounter does she even deign to notice him.

When, however, he proves himself a man of action and resource, to say nothing of an exceedingly strong right arm, she decides that the British peerage is not as puny as it has been painted, and determines to join the ranks of the aristocracy.

A MOTHER'S FAITH

Thanhouser Release, November 17

The spoiled son of a wealthy man is expelled from college. He regards it as rather a good joke, but his father warns him that he will have but one more chance to make good. The "chance" is in a broker's office, where the young man airily neglects business, and is finally discharged. He rather welcomes it, however, has an enjoyable evening with some college chums, and returns late at night in exuberant spirits.

Angry words are exchanged between father and son, which end in the younger man being ordered out of the house. His mother and sister plead in vain. They might have gained pardon for him had it not been for the drunken bravado displayed by the youth.

The son has no special training, nor ambition. He rapidly degenerates into a common tramp. In a city park one day he picks up a newspaper. One item that strikes his eye tells of the death of his father, and he realizes that his way is clear if he wants to return home. He returns with all speed to the residence of his parents. He arrives there, a shabby, drunken outcast.

At the gateway of his home he meets his sister. She is shocked when she sees him, and more shocked when he tells her that he means to return. She leads him around to a window of the house, and bids him look inside. There he sees his mother, weeping, and clasping his picture in her hands.

"Mother's prayer by day and by night has been for your return," the girl explains. "She believes that you are somewhere out in the great world, manfully fighting to make a name for yourself; that the faults of your boyhood have taught you a lesson, and that you are a man of whom your family can be proud. Will you spoil her belief by showing yourself for what you are, a dissipated and worthless tramp?"

For the first time, the young man realizes to what low condition he has sunk. The scales of selfishness drop from his eyes. He determines to be worthy of the faith of his mother. Then and there he promises to drop his idle ways.

The struggle was a hard one, but he found that it paid. For a day came when he could go to his old home, neatly dressed, clear eyed, and respected by his associates, and clasp his mother in his arms. And he could hear her say, "I knew that my boy would prove that he was a worthy man, and I am glad he is home again."

MARRIAGE

Reliance Release, November 8

A young doctor marries an extravagant society girl. His profession interferes with her pleasures, he being called away as they are leaving for a reception, and another time having to leave a gay dinner, etc. Diphtheria breaks out in the poor districts and he volunteers his services. His wife strenuously objects, as she fears he will bring the disease home. He stands firm in his duty, but his child becomes infected and dies.

The mother is very bitter and becomes wildly extravagant, finally ruining him. She then goes back to her mother. The old-fashioned mother takes her to task and succeeds in showing her that her place is by her husband's side, and that she has been a very unsuccessful wife. Repentant, she decides to make up for the past and goes to his bare little office, arriving in his absence.

A poor, distracted woman comes in seeking the doctor for her sick child. The doctor's wife sees a chance to redeem herself, and leaves a note for the doctor to call at once at the home of the poor woman. She goes there herself, cleans up the squalid place, buys necessary things, etc.

The doctor gets the message and hurries to the sick child, whose life he saves. Over its bedside the estranged husband and wife are reunited, and start life anew with perfect understanding to light the way. The lines of the marriage service are used as sub-titles, viz.: "To have and to hold," "to love and to cherish," "for better or for worse," "in sickness and in health," "for richer or for poorer," and "till death do us part."

THE FALLING OUT

Imp Release, November 13

A beautiful and satisfying story of rural life.

Andrew Stebbins, an aged farmer, who has grown peevish and irritable, abuses his kind old wife over a trifling incident and, being in his dotage, decides to try and obtain a divorce. Mrs. Stubbins tries to placate him to no avail and he hitches up his old horse and drives to the village, bent on a legal separation. Alighting at the office of the village lawyer, he enters and states his errand. The disciple of Blackstone has known Farmer Stebbins for years, and he tries to dissuade him from the step, telling him he has no cause for separation and that Aunt Betsey is the most indulgent of wives, but the old man is stubborn, and to humor him the lawyer prepares the preliminary papers.

Andrew then climbs into his buggy and starts for home with the legal document tucked in his pocket. Becoming drowsy, he falls asleep and the old family horse jogs along at will, stopping to crop the grass from the roadside, and finally halting at the watering trough at the forks of the road.

The occupant of the buggy dreams, and in his fancy his boyhood days are recalled. How as a barefoot boy he was the sweetheart of Betsey at school; their first quarrel and the final consummation of their love; their walk out of the churchyard, married and happy at the bright prospect of life. He sees Betsey with silvered hair ministering to his wants when he is ill—the kind companion. He sees her in his fancy doing the chores while he is sick—always the same sweet, kind, considerate woman, forgiving and indulgent.

Andrew awakes from the sleep, and slowly picks up the reins and heads the horse homeward. The dream has impressed him. He sees himself in his true colors and the injustice of his recent action is made all too plain.

Arriving at the farm, he sees the candle gleaming in the window, a beacon light to welcome him home. The candle has been placed there for years whenever he has been driving to town.

He enters the kitchen and finds a steaming supper on the table awaiting him. Betsey is all kindness and he feels remorse. She heaps his plate with food and for the first time in years, he does not complain. The food is cooked to his taste. He smiles on Betsey, and she is happy. After supper she brings him his pipe and he pulls the document out of his pocket and bids her light it by the blaze of the lamp. He lights his pipe with the paper and takes the old lady in his arms, eminently satisfied and contrite.

BREAKING THE SEVENTH COMMANDMENT

Imp Release, November 16

Andrew Standish, although poor, is a satisfied carpenter. He has a wife and daughter, Gladys, whom he loves dearly. The latter has a dog of which she is very fond. They are inseparable companions, and the little girl derives much pleasure from her associations with the dog.

John Mortimer, the contractor, who employs Standish, is wealthy, and has a daughter whose every wish is gratified. One day she and her father pass the humble residence of Standish, and the child sees the dog and immediately induces her father to try and buy it. Gladys is approached, but declines to part with her pet. She tells her father of the flattering offer for the dog, and he commends her for not wishing to part with it.

Standish is growing old, and is discharged from Mortimer's employ. Deprived of his weekly wage, the family is almost destitute. To make matters worse Gladys becomes ill, and the father has no money to secure medical attention or buy the necessaries of life. He debates with himself for a time, and then decides to sell the dog to Mortimer, which he does. Overjoyed, he returns home with a physician and some delicacies, but finds the child disconsolate by the absence of the dog, which is not explained to her satisfaction. The girl refuses to take medicine and moans and calls for her pet.

In his desperation Standish steals the dog and brings it home. Gladys is delighted and immediately shows signs of recovering. The theft has been discovered, and Mortimer, accompanied by an officer, visits the cottage, and the carpenter is charged with the crime, which he does not deny. The dog is on the bed of the sick child and the father contritely confesses the motive that caused him to steal.

At heart Mortimer is a kind man, and the pathetic scene causes a revulsion of feeling. He gives the dog to the little girl and reinstates Standish in his old position in the carpenter shop.

WHEN FIRST WE MET

Powers Release, November 14

Old man, do you remember the day you first met the little girl who has now gone through half a century, by your side? Just as if it was yesterday—you went out to steal some apples, and that stingy old farmer chased you with the rest of the boys, you ran for dear life, over the orchard wall, across the meadow, pell-mell down the hill, and across the old stubble ground. Then you got a nail in your foot—the rest of the boys outdistanced you, but you limped along, with the apples banging and jungling in your blouse. And just as it seemed that the old skin-flint was going to get you, you took that sharp turn in the road, and came upon little blue-eyed her . . . standing by the dog-kennel; how quick she was to help you stuff yourself into that kennel, and when your pursuer came along she told him innocently that you had just run by, up that way. That act earned her the biggest, reddest and juciest apple of all that you stole—say, old man, just dry that tear, now; fifty years have passed since then!

On the same reel as

THE TELL-TALE PARASOL

Hiram Perkins is not a flirt, but that isn't because he's so fond of his stern old wife. On the contrary, he's exceptionally obliging to those of the fair sex who cross his path, and so it is not surprising when he gives Minerva Smith (quite unmarried, if you please), a lift in his one-horse shay as he meets her on the dusty road. And she discreetly keeps her fancily-decorated parasol over their heads all the way to the village. Both enter the general store, and it just so happens that the horse considers this his cue to take a walk unguided; and he does. Hiram's chagrin is intense, to say the least, but instead of starting quietly on the scent he starts a hullabaloo and gets the whole town out searching for his team. Mrs. Cynthia Perkins hears of it, of course, and arrives on the scene just as the strayed quadruped is being walked back by the finder. But Hiram's joy is changed to dismay, and finally panic, as he sees that Miss Minerva Smith's parasol is still lying on the seat!

P. S.—Mrs. Perkins is averse to explanations, and has a fine muscular development.

THE OLD LEADER

Powers Release, November 18

Pretty tough going when a man gets the hand of Father Time pressing heavily on him. And even though Frank Engel is a genius in music, it's a little hard for him to get along. But his aged, sweet-souled old wife is an incentive to him, and he struggles bravely on as the conductor of the orchestra at the opera.

One day he meets with an accident, and it interferes seriously with the quality of his work. So much so, in fact, that it led to his discharge. And did he bring his sorrow home, to add to the gray hairs of his loving old life-partner, to cause her anguish and worriment? No, he was of too noble and sacrificing a nature for that, so he just went out to seek other work, and finally found it—with a gang on a building construction job. He worked faithfully and every day, during the noon hour, he thrilled his fellow laborers with the sweet notes from his violin. And he might have spent the rest of his days at this work if it had not been that he was one day "discovered,"—yes, twice discovered. For at the same time that his wife discovered what a sacrifice he was making to keep a roof above her head, the great impresario of the Royal Opera sent him word that his opera has been accepted—that his crowning success is to divorce him from the construction gang, and he is to take his place among the bright constellations of the musical firmament. And thus it happens that we finally read in the newspapers of the riotous enthusiasm that greeted the first performance of his masterpiece at the opera.

AN INTERRUPTED ELOPEMENT

Solax Release, November 8

Ruth Morton's love affair with Tom is much opposed by her parents, so she and Tom decide to elope. Tom puts a ladder up to her window, but hearing a noise he hides. Along comes a young fellow in evening clothes. He is intoxicated, and seeing the ladder, decides to investigate. He manages to crawl up to Ruth's window, and she, thinking it is Tom, throws her arms around his neck. Tom sees the drunk crawling into Ruth's room and rushes up to help

China to the Front

EXCHANGES

If you wish to draw the crowds order a selection of our new Chinese slides, all from direct photographs. We have over 2500 to select from at $4.00 per dozen. High-class coloring. Send for list of this and other subjects. 30,000 slides always in stock.

Riley Optical Institute Co.

3 EAST 14th ST., NEW YORK CITY

INDEPENDENT FILM SERVICE

2000 Ft. 6 times a week—$14.00
2000 Ft. 7 times a week— 15.00
3000 Ft. 6 times a week— 17.00
3000 Ft. 7 times a week— 18.00

Lithographs and Songs Free.
Express charges one way.
Send for list.
Have a couple of Motiograph and Powers used machines on hand— Low Price.

HEADQUARTERS FOR REPAIRS AND SUPPLIES.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO.
109 N. DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Just one of our beautiful stock slides, of which we have 200 more. If you are in the market for the best slides at the right price, always send your orders to

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY,
Lockport, N. Y.

Catalogue and new supplement free. Just ask.

her. Drunk puts on Ruth's night clothes and goes to bed, while Ruth and Tom speed away in an auto. They are held up and robbed by tramps who take auto. Ruth and Tom get lost and go to a house to inquire. An old maid lives in the house, and hearing them at the door thinks it is burglars. She calls the police, who take Ruth and Tom to the station house. Soon after, a policeman brings in the tramps, arrested for speeding, Tom gets back his money and marriage license, and he and Ruth are married. As the ceremony is finished in rushes an officer with the drunk, followed by Ruth's parents. An explanation follows and all ends merrily.

GRANDMOTHER LOVE

Solax Release, November 10

Willie, a cute but mischievous little boy of eight, comes home with the seat of his pants torn out and his pockets full of green apples. His parents look him over sternly and papa applies the slipper, to grandma's sorrow. Mamma says Willie must go to bed without any supper. At the supper table Granny tucks away some of the good things and takes them to Willie's room, where clouds change to sunshine.

In the meantime, father is taken with a violent attack of remorse and decides to take his little boy something to eat. Mother is also unable to sleep with her darling child hungry, so she also decides to take him some goodies. Mother and father meet on the stairs, both with their hands full of good things for little Willie. They go to Willie's room, where a general happy explanation follows, with Grandma having the goods on papa and mamma.

A WOMAN'S WIT

Great Northern Release, November 11

Mrs. Brandel has just received a new hat, and also a large bill from her milliner. She goes into her husband's room, where he is at work, and after showing the hat, gives him the bill, and prevails upon him to read it. The amount is very uncomfortable in size, and hubby, tired of paying these everlasting bills, at once refuses to settle up. Mrs. Brandel, finding her arguments are of no avail, now simulates a fainting fit, but her husband is not to be caught napping, so, picking up a glass of water, he throws it over her. This has the desired effect, and she departs in a rage. Mr. Brandel sends for the doctor to ask his advice concerning this continual extravagance of his wife. The doctor, however, first sees Mrs. Brandel, and arranges a plan with her whereby she can fool her husband. Mr. Brandel, acting on his doctor's advice, buys a box of tablets, which his wife is to take, and which will cure her of her extravagance. At home, he tells his wife that she looks unwell, and persuades her to help herself to the tablets. This she does, and with the most surprising results. Gone, apparently, are her desires for costly clothes and hats; she arranges herself in the oldest rags she can find. But even now hubby is not contented, for his wife economizes in everything. A newspaper has to do duty for a tablecloth, and his meals are cut down to the lowest possible cost. But it was the last straw that broke the camel's back, and so it is with hubby. He has arranged to meet his wife at the station on his return from a journey, but on descending from the train, he has the greatest shock of his life, for in place of his usual spick and span wife, there is a most bedraggled looking female. The worst has still to come, for while in the street, several of his friends seeing such a woman with him, absolutely refuse to recognize him. At home, he calls in the doctor, who prescribes another description of tablet, which soon brings Mrs. Brandel back to her former self, and after his lesson, hubby pays the bills like a lamb.

BILL TAKEN FOR A GHOST

Lux Release, November 10

Bill goes bathing in the River Dee. With usual light-heartedness, he wraps himself in his bath towel and taking his umbrella, a white one, wanders down the stream in search of pure enjoyment. Shortly after he comes to the dismantled Chateau of Spookeybrook, where he plays the part of the Ghost of Benjamin Binks for the benefit of some globe trotters who are exploring the ruins. Upon beholding this apparition, they trot off as fast as their legs can carry them. But it's only little Willie after all, and, of course, all's well that ends well. On the same reel is—

THE DIVERSIONS OF A NURSE-MAID

This is a funny film, dealing with the adventures of a smart young man, a charming young lady, a nice little baby, and a very old gent. The smart young man and the sweet young miss desert their charges, and go in search of nourishment at an adjoining cafe. The exchange of their charges leads to results of the most humorous order. Just fancy what a fright you would have if you sent your baby out in charge of the maid, and by the time she brought it back it had grown into a man old enough to be your great grandfather.

A TRUE WESTERNER

Nestor Release, November 8

At last Bob Bonner had saved enough money to buy the little home out West, which Uncle Bill had selected for their mother. So, with his younger brother, Jack, he set out to look the place over, and in due time arrived at their small Western station. Here, seeing no conveyance in sight, the young men decided to walk.

They had gotten scarcely half way to the ranch, when, fortunately, they sat down to rest in the shade, where they overheard the plans of two hold-up men planning to waylay a ranchman and his foreman at that spot. Getting their new guns in readiness, the boys crept stealthily after the hold-up men, surprising them as much as they did the ranchman. But, although the bandits managed to get away, they were forced to leave Uncle Bill's (for it proved to be he), nice bag of gold behind.

Acting upon his uncle's advice, Bob decided to look around before buying, so it was a couple of months later ere he wrote to Mrs. Bonner that he considered the first place the best, and for her to come on at once. In the meanwhile, however, Jack had fallen into bad company at the gambling house, and had already "borrowed," unknown to his brother, half of the money for their little home—so that when Bob advised him that their mother would arrive the next day, Jack slipped the rest of the money from his brother's wallet, and hastened to the gambling house—determined to win what he had lost. But this went like the first, and the young man staggered blindly from the room—not noticing that Uncle Bill had been observing their play—indeed, observing it so closely that he promptly accused Jack's partner of cheating, and insisted upon the money being given him.

From there he hurried home to find Jack, who, almost frantic from the loss of his brother's money, was in the act of opening the ranch safe. Suddenly the young man paused—from the next room came the strains of his mother's evening hymn. Shamed and remorseful, Jack replaced the money in the safe, and rose to confess all to his mother. Then Uncle Bill stepped forward, returned the money from the gambling house, and loaned the boy the balance, and Jack met his mother a thoroughly repentant and wiser young man.

DESPERATE DESMOND ALMOST SUCCEEDS

Nestor Release, November 11

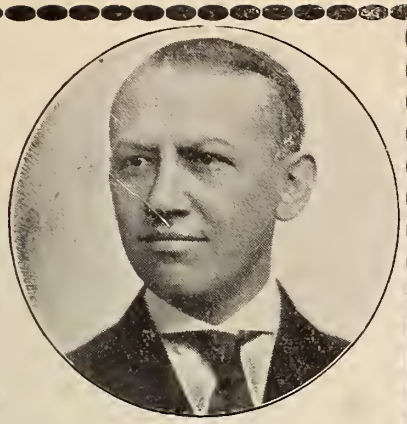
Desperate Desmond wants Beautiful Rosamond, and wants her at any cost. He's desperately in love with her, which fact causes him to do desperate deeds. At the psychological moment he abducts her with the aid of two minions.

Claude Eclaire, Rosamond's hero and sweetheart, manages to trail the villain, and, after some thrilling adventures, saves the girl, and with her bravely plunges into the sea to escape Desmond and his myrmidons.

The Desperate Fellow, however, pauses just long enough to curse the luck, and then starts in pursuit with Gomgotz and another Wild Man from Borneo. Despite the brave efforts of both Claude and Rosamond, the hunters gain ground, or rather, water, for the scene is laid over the briny wavelets. The fugitives soon repair to a semi-submerged, friendly house. There, from the chimney top, they hold the fort. Unable to make any headway, Desperate Desmond conceives and executes a diabolical plan. He puts a bomb in a box, lights the fuse and sends it by the water route on its errand of destruction.

Luck does not relish being cursed, and smiles upon the lovers. The faucet is open and the sink running over. The box with its smoking burden tries to navigate under the sink, but the falling water holds it there, and renders the bomb harmless. Claude captures the bomb, relights it, and, thus armed, turns the tables on his pursuers. With his beloved Rosamond, he leaves the enemy stranded and boards the ship to freedom and happiness. Desperate Desmond, defeated and crestfallen, swims back to the ship, but the anchor is as far as he can go—curse the luck!

When Writing Advertisers Please Mention Moving Picture News



ALL RECORDS SMASHED TO SMITHEREENS

At the present writing (Tuesday, October 31st) the offices of the Laemmle Film Service are doing a business far beyond all comparison with any previous record. I haven't seen such a sudden landslide toward Independence in any month for a year. About six weeks ago there was a slight lull in the gaining of recruits but as soon as exhibitors began to note the glorious improvement in the quality of Independent films, they began to come into the Independent fold in droves and flocks.

DIGEST THIS:

Last week in my Chicago office I gave three different demonstrations of Independent films (all brands) to three crowds of exhibitors who were NOT using Independent films. They were simply thunderstruck! They admitted openly they had no idea the Independent manufacturers were turning out any such features as I showed them. Not a man in the lot had a single word of criticism to utter. It was an absolute cinch to win some of these exhibitors then and there—and I'll bet I'll land the rest of them within a month. If you haven't seen any Independent films lately, wake up. Go somewhere and look them over. Note their stories, acting, photography, stage settings. See what a crackerjack program I can arrange for you. You owe it to yourself to find out what has caused this upheaval, this sudden and swift landslide of new converts to the Laemmle Film Service. Tell all your troubles to

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
New number 204 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1517 Farnam St., Omaha, Neb.
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa.

The biggest and best film renter in the world.

(My Free Employment Bureau is yours to command, whoever you are.)

25c IN STAMPS GIVES YOU ONE COPY OF

HALLBERG'S

1912 MOTION PICTURE CATALOGUE AND REFERENCE BOOK

I, HALLBERG, "The Economizer Man," have advanced several thousand dollars to secure an edition of 10,000 copies of the above mentioned book, and guarantee the book to be the most complete and reliable information on the subjects of electrical equipment for theatres of all kinds; motion picture machine and opera chair installations, together with all specialties required for up-to-date motion picture theatres.

MANAGERS AND OPERATORS SEND 25c TODAY, TO SECURE A COPY from the first edition, with the understanding that I will give you credit for the 25c on your first order for any kind of goods amounting to $2.00 or more.

NEW MACHINES FOR OLD

YOU Know Your Old Machine Projects a Poor Picture.
I Know My Exchange Proposition Will Overcome Your Trouble.
I Am Jobber of Powers and Motiograph Machines, and will Exchange for Either, or Any Other Make You Desire.
Write At Once, Giving Make, Style, Manufacturer's Number, Age and Condition of Your Machine. I WILL DO THE REST. State Make of Current Saver, and I Will Make Exchange Proposition for HALLBERG ECONOMIZER.
Complete Line of OPERA CHAIRS and All Supplies for M. P. Theatre.
I Equip Your Theatre Completely

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Free Catalogue No. 2.

When Writing Advertisers Please Mention Moving Picture News

QUICK—CHEAP—GOOD

OPERA CHAIRS

Ask for Catalog 306

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.,
218 So. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 13th

INTO THE LIGHT

A Story of a Crook's Conversion

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17th

THE TWO ROOMS

A Settlement Worker's Romance

YANKEE FILM CO., New York City

NOW READY, OUR NEW 1912

MIRROROIDE CURTAINS AND SCREENS

PERFECTION IN EVERY DETAIL

The 20th Century Wonder in PICTURE PROJECTION

There is no reason on earth why you should hesitate another moment in placing this, the world's greatest and best curtain and screen, in your theater.

We issued a challenge to every screen and curtain manufacturer in the world for a competitive test. We named the date, time and place. They all feared

MIRROROIDE

Why? Because users of mirroroide proved they had the best screen and curtain in the world.

MIRROROIDE

Brings an increase of 100 per cent in patronage; saves 30 per cent in your juice bill.

We have shown pictures on the streets between 10 and 12 a.m., sun brightly shining.

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

Our 1912 curtain and screen will be the talk of the world.

Genuine Mirroroide is stamped on margin of goods.

500

Sold since August 3, 1911

NEW PATENTS PENDING ON

MIRROROIDE

Get samples—⅓ yard, 50 cents, including testimonials, circulars, etc. Repeat orders talk. We are getting them.

Drop us a line. Get the cheapest and best the world affords.

DO IT NOW

MIRROROIDE

Lasts and is guaranteed

A LIFETIME

1912 curtains have our new invisible seam; no limit to size; we can make it.

MIRROROIDE

Is not aluminum; orders shipped in three days.

BENJAMIN GENTER COMPANY

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

		Feet
Sept. 23	The Hornet (Com.)
Sept. 27	Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)
Oct. 4	Wrestlers and Wrestling
Oct. 11	The Little Chimney Sweeper
Oct. 14	Tweedledum's Monkey
Oct. 14	One of Tweedledum's Tricks (Com.)
Oct. 18	The Conversion of St. Anthony
Oct. 25	Salamho
Nov. 1	Judas (Dr.)
Nov. 8	Dolly's Doll
Nov. 8	Tweedledum's Motor Car

AMERICAN

		Feet
Sept. 21	The Claim Jumper
Sept. 25	The Circular Fence (Com. Dr.)	1000
Sept. 28	The Rustler Sheriff (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	The Love of the West (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 5	The Miner's Wife (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct. 9	The Land Thieves (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 12	The Cowhoy and the Outlaw (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 16	Three Daughters of the West (Dr.)	850
Oct. 16	The Caves of LaJolla (Sc.)	150
Oct. 19	The Lonely Range (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 23	The Horse Thief's Bigamy (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 26	The Trail of the Eucalyptus (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 30	The Stronger Man (W. Dr.)	1000
Nov. 2	The Water War (W. Dr.)	1000
Nov. 6	The Three Shell Game (W. Dr.)	1000
Nov. 9	The Mexican (W. Dr.)	1000
Nov. 13	The Eastern Cowhoy (W. Com.)	1000

CHAMPION

		Feet
Sept. 27	The Cook of the Ranch	950
Oct. 2	Barbara Frietchie	950
Oct. 4	As Things Used to Be	950
Oct. 9	The National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley	950
Oct. 11	What the Indians Did	950
Oct. 16	A Girl and a Spy (Dr.)	950
Oct. 18	Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.)	950
Oct. 23	The Copperhead	950
Oct. 25	Law or the Lady	950
Oct. 30	Field Day Sports at Ft. Riley, Kansas	950
Nov. 1	The Cowhoy's Pies	950
Nov. 6	Folks of Old Virginia	950
Nov. 8	The Moonshiner's Trail	950

ECLAIR

		Feet
Sept. 11	How Poor Babies Are Reared in Paris	630
Sept. 11	How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.)	335
Sept. 18	Magic Music	330
Sept. 18	When the Leaves Fall	665
Sept. 25	A Just General (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	Hearts and Eyes	630
Oct. 2	For Your Hats, Ladies	370
Oct. 9	Better to Have Remained Blind (Dr.)	740
Oct. 9	The Motor Chair (Com.)	260
Oct. 16	A Lucky Change (Com.)	805
Oct. 16	Lake Garda (Scenic)	185
Oct. 23	Youth! Queen of Hearts" (Com.)	740
Oct. 23	Percy Gets Tired of the Theater (Com.)	260
Oct. 30	A Father's Heart (Dr.)	920
Nov. 7	Hands Across the Sea

GREAT NORTHERN

		Feet
Aug. 12	The Mother's Mark (Dr.)
Aug. 12	Teddy Trained hy His Mother (Com.)
Aug. 19	The Victory of Love (Dr.)	950
Aug. 26	A Traitor to His Country (Dr.)
Sept. 2	The Foundling (Dr.)
Sept. 9	A Dream with a Lesson
Sept. 16	The Conspirators (Dr.)
Sept. 23	Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)
Sept. 30	The Conspirators (Dr.)
Oct. 7	The White Tulip (Com.)
Oct. 7	Barcelona (Scenic)
Oct. 14	Secret of the Underground Passage (Dr.)
Oct. 21	His Fidelity Investigated (Com.)
Oct. 28	The Vicissitudes of Fate (Dr.)
Nov. 4	The Actor as Soldier (Com.)

IMP

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

		Feet
Sept. 7	Duty (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 11	By the House that Jack Built (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 14	The Brothers (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 18	The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood
Sept. 18	The Bicycle Bug's Dream
Sept. 21	By Registered Mail
Sept. 25	The Co-Ed. Professor (Com.)	750
Sept. 25	Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.)	250
Sept. 28	'Tween Two Loves (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 2	The Rose's Story (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 5	Through the Air (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 9	The Sentinel Asleep
Oct. 12	The Better Way
Oct. 16	Uncle Pete's Ruse
Oct. 19	The Aggressor
Oct. 23	The Biting Business
Oct. 26	The Waif
Oct. 30	His Dress Shirt
Oct. 30	A Few Minutes with Steeplejack Lindholm
Nov. 2	King, the Detective
Nov. 6	Waiting at the Church (Com.)	1000
Nov. 9	The Wife's Awakening (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 13	The Fallin' Out
Nov. 16	Breaking the Seventh Commandment

ITALA

		Feet
Aug. 3	The Evening Bell
Aug. 5	Foolshead's Last Roguery
Aug. 12	Sport Restores Youth
Aug. 17	Toto's Little Cart
Aug. 17	In the Valley of Viege
Aug. 19	Foolshead—Manikin
Aug. 19	The Blunt Sword
Aug. 24	Modern School of Italian Cavalry
Aug. 26	Foolshead—Chauffeur
Aug. 26	For a Straw
Sept. 2	Clio and Phyletes
Sept. 7	The Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dr.)
Sept. 9	Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.)
Sept. 9	Toto Has a Purse
Sept. 16	The Horse of the Regiment (Com.)
Sept. 16	Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.)
Sept. 23	The Mask of the Red Death
Sept. 23	The Hornet
Oct. 7	Foolshead a Model Guest
Oct. 21	Foolshead Quarrels With His Sweetheart
Oct. 28	Toto and the Dummy (Com.)
Oct. 28	The Rearing of Pheasants (Dr.)
Nov. 4	Foolshead's Holiday (Com.)

LUX.

By Prieur.

		Feet
Sept. 8	A Romance of a Wager (Dr.)	642
Sept. 15	Bill as a Billposter (Com.)	573
Sept. 15	His Mania for Collecting Antiques (Com.)	357
Sept. 22	Bill as an Express Messenger (Com.)	344
Sept. 22	The Stolen Diamond (Dr.)	629
Sept. 29	Bill and His Friend (Com.)	491
Sept. 29	The Little Goatherd (Dr.)	386
Oct. 6	Bill Has a Bath (Com.)	452
Oct. 6	Neighhors (Com.)	488
Oct. 13	A Dog in a Coiner's Den (Dr.)	593
Oct. 13	Bill, Police Cyclist (Com.)	390
Oct. 20	Bill Pays His Dehts (Com.)	442
Oct. 20	Henpecked Bertie Goes Fishing (Com.)	514
Oct. 27	Bill, His Wife and the Water (Com.)	455
Oct. 27	Bertie and His Rivals (Com.)	472
Nov. 3	Bill and the Bear (Com.)	554
Nov. 3	Tommy's Camera (Com.)	393

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

		Feet
Sept. 30	Getting Even (Com.)
Oct. 4	Those Jersey Cowpunchers (Dr.)
Oct. 7	Mutt and Jeff Spend a Quiet Day in the Country (Com.)
Oct. 7	The Meddling Parson (Com.)
Oct. 11	Let Us Smooth the Way (Dr.)
Oct. 14	Mutt and Jeff and the Blackhand (Com.)
Oct. 14	Romance and Uppercuts (Com.)
Oct. 18	The Town Marshal (Com. Dr.)
Oct. 21	Mutt and Jeff Join the Opera Co.
Oct. 21	The Blessed Baby (Com.)
Oct. 25	Lone Bill's Last Ride (Dr.)
Oct. 28	Mutt and Jeff Discover a Wonderful Remedy (Com.)
Oct. 28	Dippy Advertises for a Pup (Com.)
Nov. 1	Big Noise Hank (W. Com.)
Nov. 4	Mutt and Jeff and the Lady Stenographer (Com.)
Nov. 4	The Suit Case Mystery (Com.)
Nov. 8	A True Westerner (Dr.)
Nov. 11	Desperate Desmond Almost Succeeds

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

("Bison")

		Feet
Sept. 12	The Lost Letter
Sept. 15	Lone Star's Return
Sept. 19	The Sheriff's Brother
Sept. 22	The Missionary's Gratitude
Sept. 26	Lucky Boh
Sept. 29	White Fawn's Peril
Oct. 3	The Red Man's Penalty
Oct. 6	Range Justice
Oct. 10	The Pioneer's Mistake
Oct. 13	The Indian Rustlers
Oct. 17	A Western Bride
Oct. 20	A Warrior's Treachery
Oct. 24	A Nohle Red Man
Oct. 27	An Indian Hero
Oct. 31	The Cattlemen's War
Nov. 3	A Young Squaw's Bravery
Nov. 7	A Race for a Bride
Nov. 10	Wenona's Broken Promise

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

		Feet
Sept. 19	An Old Time Nightmare (Dr.)
Sept. 23	Red Man's Honor (Dr.)
Sept. 26	The Falls of Bohemia (Sc.)	300
Sept. 26	Imaginative Willie (Com.)	670
Sept. 30	The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.)	970
Oct. 3	The Call from the Hills (Com.)
Oct. 3	A Matrimonial Idyl (Dr.)
Oct. 7	The Branded Indian (Dr.)
Oct. 10	Large Lakes of Italy (Scenic)	285
Oct. 10	Thou Shalt Not Steal (Com.)	700
Oct. 14	Running Fawn's Chief (Dr.)	990
Oct. 17	Yarn of a Bahy's Shirt (Com.)
Oct. 17	First Mail hy Aeroplane (Topical)
Oct. 17	Headline Acrohats (Com.)
Oct. 21	The Awakening of John Clark (Dr.)
Oct. 24	John Baxter's Ward (Dr.)
Oct. 24	The Little Brown Calf (Dr.)
Oct. 28	The Revenue Officer's Last Case (Dr.)
Oct. 31	Apples and Destiny (Com.)
Oct. 31	The Progressive Book Agent (Com.)
Nov. 4	The Pride of the West (Dr.)
Nov. 7	Mohilization of the American Fleet
Nov. 11	For the Trihe (Dr.)

RELIANCE

		Feet
Oct. 21	Divorce
Oct. 25	The Empty Crih
Oct. 28	The Test of a Man
Nov. 1	A Mix-up in Suitcases
Nov. 4	The Greater Love
Nov. 8	Marriage
Nov. 11	The Track Walker
Nov. 15	The Moonshiners
Nov. 18	The Injustice of Man

REX

		Feet
Sept. 14	Faith (Dr.)
Sept. 21	The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.)
Sept. 28	The Derelict (Dr.)
Oct. 5	Lost Illusions (Dr.)
Oct. 12	Chasing a Rainhow
Oct. 19	Her Sister
Oct. 26	A Breach of Faith (Dr.)
Nov. 2	The Tale of a Cat
Nov. 9	Saints and Sinners

SOLAX COMPANY

		Feet
Oct. 11	He Was a Millionaire (Com.)
Oct. 13	His Mother's Hymn (Dr.)
Oct. 18	A Corner in Criminals (Com.)
Oct. 18	A Lover's Ruse (Com.)
Oct. 20	His Better Self (Mil. Dr.)
Oct. 25	Percy and His Squaw (Com.)
Oct. 27	For Big Brother's Sake (Dr.)
Nov. 1	Following Cousin's Footsteps (Com.)
Nov. 3	A Heroine of the Revolution (Dr.)
Nov. 8	An Interrupted Elopement (Com.)
Nov. 10	Grandmother Love (Dr.)

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

		Feet
Aug. 29	The Moth
Sept. 1	Romeo and Juliet, Part I.
Sept. 5	Count Ivan and the Waitress
Sept. 8	Romeo and Juliet, Part 2
Sept. 12	The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.)
Sept. 15	In the Chorus (Dr.)
Sept. 19	The Lie (Dr.)
Sept. 22	The Honeymooners (Dr.)
Sept. 26	Lochinvar (Dr.)
Sept. 29	Love's Sacrifice (Dr.)
Oct. 3	The Five Rose Sisters (Dr.)
Oct. 6	The East and the West (Dr.)
Oct. 9	The Higher Law (Dr.)
Oct. 13	The Tempter and Dan Cupid (Dr.)
Oct. 17	The Early Life of David Copperfield
Oct. 24	Little Em'ly and David Copperfield
Oct. 31	The Loves of David Copperfield
Oct. 20	The Satyr and the Lady (Dr.)
Oct. 27	The Jewels of Allah (Dr.)
Nov. 3	Their Burglar
Nov. 7	The Missing Heir (Dr.)
Nov. 10	The Last of the Mohicans (Dr.)
Nov. 14	The Higher—the Fewer (Com.)
Nov. 17	A Mother's Faith (Dr.)

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

		Feet
Aug. 28	The Power of Devotion (Dr.)
Sept. 1	A Great Wrong Righted (Dr.)
Sept. 4	Inshavogue (Dr.)
Sept. 8	Mesmerizing Moe (Com.)
Sept. 8	Faded Roses (Dr.)
Sept. 11	Tangled Heartstrings
Sept. 15	Woman
Sept. 18	The Star Reporter
Sept. 22	The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)
Sept. 25	For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.)
Sept. 29	Man (Dr.)
Oct. 2	She Never Knew (Dr.)
Oct. 6	The Goose Girl (Dr.)
Oct. 9	His Second Wife
Oct. 13	Society Hohos
Oct. 16	The Lost Handkerchief (Com.)
Oct. 20	The Man Who Came Back (Dr.)
Oct. 23	The Drummer Boy of Shiloh (Dr.)
Oct. 27	Flower of the Forest (Dr.)
Oct. 30	The Van Osten Jewels (Dr.)
Nov. 3	At Daisy Farm (Dr.)
Nov. 6	A Coward's Regeneration (Dr.)
Nov. 10	He Didn't Like the Tune (Com.)

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

		Feet
Sept.	18—Dan, the Dandy (Com.)	998
Sept.	21—When Wifey Holds the Purse Strings (Com.)	463
Sept.	21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.	534
Sept.	25—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.)	999
Sept.	28—Her Awakening (Dr.)	997
Oct.	2—Too Many Burglars (Com.)	499
Oct.	2—Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Com.)	497
Oct.	5—The Making of a Man (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—Italian Blood (Dr.)	999
Oct.	12—Trailing the Counterfeiter (Com.)	529
Oct.	12—Josh's Suicide (Com.)	469
Oct.	16—The Unveiling (Dr.)	998
Oct.	19—The Adventures of Billy (Dr.)	999
Oct.	23—Through His Wife's Picture (Com.)	530
Oct.	23—The Inventor's Secret (Com.)	468
Oct.	26—The Long Road (Dr.)	999
Oct	30—Love in the Hills (Dr.)	998
Nov.	2—A Victim of Circumstances (Com.)	382
Nov.	2—Their First Divorce Case (Com.)	616
Nov.	6—The Battle (Dr.)	1084
Nov.	9—The Trail of Books (Dr.)	994

EDISON

Oct.	17—An Old Sweetheart of Mine (Dr.)	945
Oct.	18—Mike's Hero (Com.)	650
Oct.	18—Launching of the Battleship Rivadavia	350
Oct.	20—A Conspiracy Against the King (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	21—Three of a Kind (Com.)	1000
Oct.	24—A Day at West Point Military Academy, N. Y.	1000
Oct.	25—The Fairies' Banquet (Com.)	400
Oct.	25—How the Telephone Came to Town (Com.)	600
Oct.	28—An Island Comedy (Com.)	1000
Oct.	28—The Kid from the Klondyke (Com.)	1000
Oct.	31—The Reform Candidate (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	1—The Rise and Fall of Weary Willie (Com.)	1000
Nov.	3—The Girl and the Motor Boat (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	4—Love and Hatred (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	7—A Modern Cinderella (Com.)	1000
Nov.	8—Logan's Babies (Com.)	1000
Nov.	10—The Black Arrow (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	11—Willie Wise and His Motor Boat (Com.)	650
Nov.	11—Icehergs Off the Coast of Labrador	340
Nov.	14—Ludwig from Germany (Com.)	1000
Nov.	15—The Living Peach (Com.)	600
Nov.	15—The Young Men's Christian Association	400

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Oct.	19—'Tis Better to Have Loved and Lost (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—Dr. Bill's Patient (Com.)	1000
Oct.	21—A Western Redemption (W. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	24—The Tricked Trickster (Com.)
Oct.	24—The Family Pet Revenge (Com.)	1000
Oct.	25—Athletics vs. Giants in the World's Championship Basehall Series of 1911 (Topical)	1000
Oct.	26—Too Many Engagements (Com.)	1000
Oct.	27—Pals (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	28—The Forester's Plea (W. Dr.)
Oct.	31—Outwitting Papa (Com.)	1000
Nov.	2—The Right John Smith (Com.)	364
Nov.	2—Hi Feather at the Fair (Com.)	636
Nov.	3—Bill Bumper's Bargain (Com.)	1000
Nov.	4—The Outlaw Deputy (W. Dr.)	1000
Nov.	7—He Fought for the U. S. A. (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	9—Showing Uncle (Com.)	400
Nov.	9—Gee Whiz (Com.)	600
Nov.	10—The Empty Saddle (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	11—The Girl Back East (W. Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Oct.	3—Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Trav.	325
Oct.	7—The Upward Way (Dr.)	726
Oct.	7—Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal	269
Oct.	10—The Missing Bracelet (Dr.)	1150
Oct.	14—Rejected (Dr.)	845
Oct.	14—Pansies (Botanical)	155
Oct.	17—Done Brown (Com.)	837
Oct.	17—A Fairyland of Frost and Snow (Scenic)	163
Oct.	21—The Masked Huntsman (Dr.)	784
Oct.	21—Opening Flowers (Botanical)	216
Oct.	24—Jimmie in Love (Com.)	555
Oct.	24—The Ostrich Plume Industry, France (Ind.)	428
Oct.	28—Fridolin	578
Oct.	28—The Principality of Monaco	400
Oct.	31—The Widower	1020
Nov.	4—The Jesting Princess (Com. Dr.)	787
Nov.	4—Belgian Cavalry at Exercise (Mil.)	200
Nov.	7—The Vagahond (Dr.)	623
Nov.	7—A Trip on a Dirigible Balloon (Topical)	331
Nov.	11—The Hour of Execution (Dr.)	787
Nov.	11—Manresa, a Spanish Town (Travel)	200
Nov.	14—Jimmie and His Country Uncle (Com.)	820
Nov.	14—The Outskirts of Paris (Scenic)	164
Nov.	18—The Reckoning (Dr.)	875
Nov.	18—A Trip to Saxony	150
Nov.	21—The Sealed Confession (Dr.)	900
Nov.	21—A Stone Quarry in Saxony	75
Nov.	25—The Escape from the Dungeon (Dr.)	825
Nov.	25—Cave Homes in the Canary Isles	180
Nov.	28—A Busy Cupid	758
Nov.	28—Review of the Austrian Army	232
Dec.	2—The Promoter (Dr.)	1140

KALEM CO.

Sept.	27—Hal Chase's Home Run (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	29—The Blackfoot Halfbreed (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	2—The Phoney Strike Breakers (C.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Saving Sign (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	9—The Mistress of Hacienda Del Cerro (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	11—For the Flag of France (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	13—The Smugglers (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	16—The Colleen Bawn (3 reels)	3000
Oct.	18—Daniel Boone's Bravery (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	20—The Mesquite's Gratitude (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	23—A Prisoner of Mexico (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	25—The Lost Freight Car (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	27—The Peril of the Plains (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	30—For Her Brother's Sake (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	1—The Greatest of Engineering Feats.
Nov.	1—The Plot Against Bertie (Com.)
Nov.	3—The Price of Ambition (Dr.)
Nov.	6—The Luck of Reckless Reddy (Com.)	1000
Nov.	8—White Brave's Heritage (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	10—The Engineer's Daughter (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Oct.	9—What Will Be, Will Be (Com.)	1000
Oct.	11—The Slavey's Affinity (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—The Gambler's Influence (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	14—A Hot Time in Atlantic City	1000
Oct.	16—The Maniac (Com.)	1000
Oct.	18—The Cure of John Douglas (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—Git a Hoss (Com.)	1000
Oct.	21—Tobacco Industry (Edu.)
Oct.	21—Her Exclusive Hat (Com.)
Oct.	21—Willie's Conscience (Com.)	1000
Oct.	23—The Scandal Mongers (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	25—The Tars Ashore (Com.)	1000
Oct.	26—A Rural Conqueror (Com.)	1000
Oct.	28—Love's Victory (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	30—Somebody's Mother (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	1—A Gay Time in Atlantic City (Com.)	1000
Nov.	2—One on Reno (Com. Dr.)	1000
Nov.	4—The Mexican (Com.)	1000
Nov.	6—Aunt Jane's Legacy (Com.)	1000
Nov.	8—Who Owns the Baby (Com.)	1000
Nov.	9—Jack's Umbrella (Com.)	1000
Nov.	11—The House that Jack Built (Dr.)	1000

G. MELIES.

Aug.	31—The Call of the Wilderness (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	7—The Hobo Cowhoy (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	21—$200.00 (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	28—The Mission Waif (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	5—The Stolen Grey (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Tommy's Rocking Horse (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—The Cross of Pearls (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	26—The Gypsy Bride (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	2—Right or Wrong (Dr.)	360
Nov.	2—Mexican as It Is Spoken (Com.)	590
Nov.	9—The Spur of Necessity (Dr.)	1000

PATHE FRERES

Oct.	13—Raffles Caught (Dr.)
Oct.	13—Guerrero Troup
Oct.	14—Marooned (Dr.)
Oct.	16—The Gamhler's Dream (Dr.)
Oct.	17—Pathe's Weekly No. 42
Oct.	18—The Ranch Girl's Terrible Mistake (Dr.)
Oct.	19—The Renegade Brother (Dr.)
Oct.	20—A Trip Down the Magdapis River (Scenic)
Oct.	20—Eva Moves In (Com.)
Oct.	20—Up the Flue (Com.)
Oct.	21—A Puritan Courtship (Dr.)
Oct.	23—The Traitor (Dr.)
Oct.	23—Nomadic Tribes in El Kantara Gorges (Algeria) (Sc.)
Oct.	24—Pathe's Weekly No. 43
Oct.	25—Revolution in a Bachelor's Club (Com.)
Oct.	26—In Frontier Days (Dr.)
Oct.	26—The Island of St. Kilda, Scotland (Sc.)
Oct.	27—Mother is Strong on Hypnotism (Com.)
Oct.	27—Funeral in Annam (Sc.)
Oct.	27—Logging and Milling in Sweden (Sc.)
Oct.	—Saved by the Flag (Dr.)
Oct.	3x —Grandfather's Violin (Dr.)	754
Oct.	30—A Burlesque Bullfight (Com.)	210
Nov.	1—Love Moulds Lahor (Dr.)	941
Nov.	2—A Sioux Lover's Strategy	899
Nov.	3—An Episode Under Henri III.	968
Nov.	4—The Coward (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	6—Pathe's Weekly (No. 45)
Nov.	7—Uncle's Money (Com.)	321
Nov.	8—The Story of the Typewriter	960
Nov.	10—The Bandit's Bride (Dr.)	236
Nov.	9—The Terms of the Will (Dr.)
Nov.	9—Review of the Paris Garrison
Nov.	10—The Astis Colored
Nov.	11—Love's Renunciation (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	13—Pathe's Weekly No. 46
Nov.	14—The Birth of a Flower (Educ.)
Nov.	14—Vendetta (Dr.)
Nov.	15—A Brother in Arms (Dr.)
Nov.	16—A Western Postmistress (Dr.)
Nov.	17—The Daughter of the Clown (Dr.)
Nov.	18—The Reporter (Dr.)

SELIG

Oct.	9—An Indian Vestal (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	10—Told in Colorado (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	12—Out-generaled (Com.)	1000
Oct.	13—Making a Six-Ton Cheese (Edu.)	425
Oct.	13—Seeing Washington (Sc.)	575
Oct.	16—Making a Man of Him (Com. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	17—On Separate Paths (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	19—The Run on the Bank (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—His Better Self (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	23—Coals of Fire (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	24—Why the Sheriff is a Bachelor (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	26—Lost in the Jungle	1070
Oct.	27—A Painter's Idyl	1000
Oct.	30—Little Injin (Dr. Com.)	1000
Oct.	31—Captain Brand's Wife	1000
Nov.	2—The Inner Mind	1000
Nov.	3—His First Long Trousers (Com.)	500
Nov.	6—The Coquette	1000
Nov.	7—Western Hearts (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	9—Old Billy	1000
Nov.	10—Lieutenant Grey	1000

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

July	19—The Tie That Binds (Dr.)	760
July	19—A Round-Up In Chili	240
July	26—An Amateur Skater	440
July	26—Satan on a Rampage	660
Aug.	2—The Struggle for Life	650
Aug.	2—On the Coast of Bengal	326
Aug.	9—The Heiress	705
Aug.	9—Lyons, the Second City of France	295
Aug.	16—For the Honor of the Name (Dr.)	790
Aug.	16—Moss-Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight	245
Aug.	23—Condemned for Treason (Dr.)	845
Aug.	23—Wool Industry of Hungary	135
Aug.	30—A King for an Hour (Com.)	572
Aug.	30—Sights of Berlin	423
Sept.	6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)	675
Sept.	6—Lake Thun in Switzerland (Scenic)	325
Sept.	13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.)	665
Sept.	13—Norwich and Vicinity, England (Travel)	330
Sept.	20—In Ancient Days (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	27—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.)	458
Sept.	27—Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)	542
Oct.	4—A Jealous Wife (Com.)	338
Oct.	4—The Grand Chartreuse (Trav.)	292
Oct.	4—Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Com.)	348
Oct.	11—Pardoned hy the Governor (Dr.)	646
Oct.	11—Making Cheddar Cheese (Ind.)	342
Oct.	18—Ordered to Move On (Dr.)	605
Oct.	18—Madeira, Portugal (Travel)	385
Oct.	25—A Woman's Slave (Dr.)	950
Nov.	1—Trapped (Dr.)	975
Nov.	8—An Eye for an Eye (His. Dr.)	1000
Nov.	15—The Hindu Jewel Mystery (Dr.)	1015
Nov.	22—Guy Fawkes (Dr.)	1010
Nov.	29—The Mysterious Stranger (Dr.)	610
Nov.	29—Salt Industry in Sicily	372

VITAGRAPH

Sept.	13—Beyond the Law	1000
Sept.	15—Vitagraph Monthly (Sc.)	1000
Sept.	16—By Woman's Wit (Com.)	1000
Sept.	18—One Flag at Last (Mil. Dr.)	1000
Sept.	19—How Millie Became an Actress (Com.)	1000
Sept.	20—Beyond the Law (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	22—Forgotten (Dr.)	1000
Sept.	23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.)
Sept.	23—The Tired, Absent-Minded Man (Com.)	1000
Sept.	25—By the Camp Fire's Flicker	1000
Sept.	26—His Sister's Children	1000
Sept.	27—A Western Heroine	1000
Sept.	29—The Ninety and Nine	1000
Sept.	30—Her Hero	1000
Oct.	2—Our Navy	1000
Oct.	3—The Wager (Com.)	1000
Oct.	4—The Mate of the John M. (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	6—Carr's Regeneration (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	7—Ups and Downs (Com.)	1000
Oct.	9—Daddy's Boy and Mammy	1000
Oct.	10—The Missing Will	1000
Oct.	11—The Indian Flute	1000
Oct.	13—Answer of the Roses	1000
Oct.	14—By Way of Mrs. Browning	1000
Oct.	16—The Fighting Schoolmaster	1000
Oct.	17—Vitagraph Monthly	1000
Oct.	18—Selecting His Heiress (Com.)	1000
Oct.	20—The Cabin Boy (Dr.)	1000
Oct.	21—Lady Godiva (His. Dr.)	1000
Oct.	23—The Foolishness of Jealousy	1000
Oct.	24—Wig Wag	1000
Oct.	25—Aunt Huldah, the Matchmaker	1000
Oct.	27—Kitty and the Cowhoys	1000
Oct.	28—Regeneration	1000
Oct.	30—Captain Barnacle, Diplomat	1000
Oct.	31—Madge of the Mountains	1000
Nov.	1—Southern Soldier's Sacrifice (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	3—The Gossip (Com.)	1000
Nov.	4—A Message from Beyond (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	7—Auld Lang Syne (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	8—Arhutus (Dr.)	1000
Nov.	10—Who's Who (Com.)	1000
Nov	11—An Aeroplane Elopement (Com. Dr.)	1000

Solax

WEDNESDAY—COMEDY

"AN INTERRUPTED ELOPEMENT"

(COMEDY)

RELEASE OF NOVEMBER 5th

A clever comedy. Held up by thieves and arrested. This couple, however, escape and love triumphs.

"BABY NEEDS MEDICINE"

(COMEDY)

RELEASE OF NOVEMBER 8th

FRIDAY—MILITARY AND DRAMA

"GRANDMOTHER LOVE"

(DRAMA)

RELEASE OF NOVEMBER 10th

A beautiful, simple little drama of intense heart interest. An especially good picture.

"ONLY A SQUAW"

(INDIAN DRAMA)

RELEASE OF NOVEMBER 17th

Wonderful Indian pictures, beautiful photography and well acted.

Naval Review

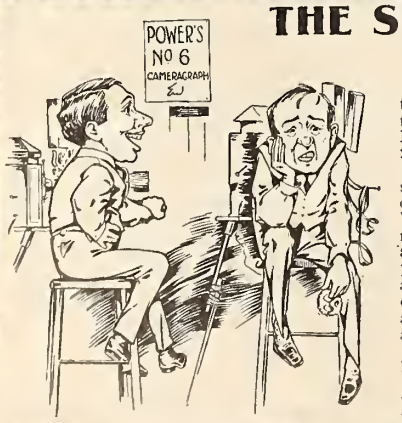
Get our Special Release of the big Naval Review---102 War Vessels---Reviewed by PRESIDENT TAFT in New York Harbor, Nov. 1st and 2nd

Special and Beautiful 2 Sheet Posters

Solax Company CONGRESS AVENUE FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED
Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

THE SMILE THAT WON'T COME OFF



Always worn by owners and operators of
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

Users of POWER'S machines are the best advertisement of Power's products. They not only know they have the best machine made but they have the POWER'S guarantee and the POWER'S policy of making good behind it.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6 was built to suit the user. How well it has succeeded is told by our sales record and by what the users say about it. We will be glad to show you our sales record on request—it shows that the sales of POWER'S No. 6 are today greater than those of all other moving picture machines in America. What the users say about it is told in "The Proof of the Pudding"—a collection of letters from every state in the Union and some foreign countries. Write now for Catalog D and The Proof of the Pudding.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
115-117 Nassau Street, New York

N. P.—We have a way of making it easy for you to buy a Power's No. 6. Ask for our special proposition.

Breaks the Record for nation-wide enthusiasm and heavy sales. An undeniable victory for the Independent cause and a mighty testimonial to the universal popularity of Eclair films.

AMERICA'S GREATEST OF ALL HISTORICAL PRODUCTIONS

Hands Across the Sea in '76

(Released in Two Reels, Tuesday, November 21st)

THE NATION AROUSED OVER A GREAT FILM

Exhibitors are advertising heavily as never before. Schools and colleges are arranging special exhibitions of the films. Exchanges are responding nobly, even to doubling their orders. Posters are being sold in large quantities to individual buyers who appreciate their exclusiveness and pulling power.

DON'T FAIL IN YOUR DUTY TO THE CAUSE

The Eclair Co., with its vast resources and magnificent American establishment, means to make itself the most talked of and best advertised enterprise in any land or clime. Quality alone will carry this great campaign onward. Expense will not be considered that a wide circulation of Eclair films may be gained. You must benefit through the Eclair effort; there can be no other result, so protect your interests as a business man and place Eclair on your program instanter.

COMING VICTORIOUS ACQUISITIONS!

IMPORTANT misleading announcements by irresponsible parties must be construed only as glowing compliments to the power of ECLAIR

WE WILL PRESENT SHORTLY, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN FILM HISTORY, THE INCOMPARABLE, JUSTLY RENOWNED, DIVINE

SARAH BERNHARDT

In a sumptuous, all-impressive revival in motion Tableau of Dumas' masterpiece,

CAMILLE

with the most notable supporting cast yet assembled. SUBSEQUENTLY WE WILL OFFER THE TRULY CELEBRATED FRENCH ARTISTE:

REJANE IN SARDOU'S GREAT COMEDY MADAME SANS GENE

(By exclusive permission the author's heirs.)

WATCH FOR FURTHER ANNOUNCEMENTS OF GREAT ECLAIR FEATURES.

In the first instance address

ECLAIR FILM CO., STUDIO AND OFFICES FORT LEE, N. J.

BRANCHES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

GET A REP | GET A REP | GET A REP

GET A "REP"

Saturday or Sunday "REP" Features

We have selected SATURDAY as our release day so that you can use the BEST FILM MADE on either SATURDAY or SUNDAY.

DANIEL BOONE
BEFORE YORKTOWN
BATTLE OF TIPPECANOE

KIT CARSON
IVANHOE
ROBIN HOOD

Are the forerunners of a series of TWO REEL FEATURES that will pack your theatre.

Events in history known to every man, woman and child will be portrayed with an eye to accuracy that will render these productions an aid to education besides being masterfully entertaining.

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE MAN IF HE HAS ARRANGED HIS PROGRAM TO ADD A "REP"

POSITIVE RELEASE DATE---DECEMBER 9

REMEMBER—A 2-REEL FEATURE EVERY SATURDAY—REMEMBER

REPUBLIC FILM CO., 145 W. 45th St., NEW YORK
SUITE 804-810

GET A REP | GET A REP | GET A REP

NOV 16 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No.45

November 11
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
NOV 16 1911
COPYRIGHT ENTRY

"Hush-a-Bye Baby, on the Tree Top,
When the Wind Blows, the Cradle Will Rock"
From Champion Film Co. Mother Goose Series to be released November 27th

PRICE
TEN CENTS

The MAJESTIC

FIRST RELEASE DAY

Sunday, November 26th

"THE COURTING OF MARY"

A HIGH-CLASS COMEDY

Sunday, December 3rd

"LOVE HEEDS NOT SHOWERS"

A HIGH-CLASS COMEDY

Sunday, December 10th

"THE ULTIMATE END"

A STRONG NEWSPAPER DRAMA

BY SPECIAL REQUEST

Sunday, December 17th

LITTLE MARY PICKFORD in "LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD"

In which "Mary" embodies the many graces of happy, carefree childhood. We make this our Christmas picture because Christmas more than any other is the children's holiday. Almost every child old enough to read knows this famous Nursery Rhyme by heart.

EVERY EXHIBITOR SHOULD BOOK THIS SUBJECT AT ONCE AND ADVERTISE IT WELL, thereby inducing thousands of parents to give their children, at small cost,

A LARGE CHRISTMAS TREAT

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.

145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Sold through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

A Personal Letter from Mr. HERBERT MILES General Manager of the REPUBLIC FILM COMPANY

November 8, 1911.

Bowing to the will of the majority of the exhibitors of this country, we have decided to change our methods of releasing two-reel feature films on the same day and have REPUBLIC FILM COMPANY will therefore release one reel of its two-reel features on Saturday and the second reel on Sunday; thus giving the exhibitor an opportunity of featuring a master subject on the two best days of the week.

Eager to show some appreciation of the value of these splendid suggestions coming from the exhibitors of the country, unsolicited, and desiring to show deference to the opinion of the Executive Committee of the Exhibitors League of America, it is our intention hereafter to let the exhibitor dictate the policy of the REPUBLIC FILM COMPANY in every way possible.

We want every exhibitor to write us suggesting which one of our big two-reel features shall be released first, and we also want you to write an advertisement that will appeal to all exhibitors advertising that particular subject.

Every successful exhibitor knows how to advertise to reach the public. He should also be able to tell us how to advertise so as to reach the exhibitors. You may submit an ad for each of the subjects on terms mentioned below and win more than one prize. The judges will be the New York advertising managers of the Billboard, Telegraph and Moving Picture News. The contest will close for the first prize November 25th, for the second prize December 9th, and next fifteen January 1st.

With thanks for the many kind expressions and promises of co-operation, we remain, yours for quality,

REPUBLIC FILM CO.

Herbert Miles

PRIZE COMPETITION

To the one sending in the best advertisement we will send $10.00, for the next best advertisement, $5.00, and $1.00 each for the next fifteen advertisements. Read Mr. Miles' letter for full particulars.

DANIEL BOONE, IN THE DAYS OF THE SIX NATIONS, ROBIN HOOD, BRIAN BORU, PRIDE OF LEXINGTON, KIT CARSON, BEFORE YORKTOWN, OLD SETTLER'S STORY, WAR CORRESPONDENT'S LAST RIDE, BATTLE OF TIPPECANOE, IVANHOE, OLIVER TWIST, AMID FIRE AND FLAME, DANIEL IN THE LIONS' DEN, RETRIBUTION, THE WOMAN IN WHITE, "VENGEANCE IS MINE." SAITH THE LORD, REFORMATION OF DICK NOBLE.

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

Out Friday, Nov. 24 (Regular Release) The Big Thanhouser Baseball Scoop

"THE BASEBALL BUG"

A Rattling Comedy Featuring

BIG CHIEF BENDER
JACK COOMBS

CY MORGAN
RUBE OLDRING

STARS OF THE PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS
CHAMPIONS OF THE WORLD

RELEASED TUESDAY, NOV. 21
An Inspiring Sermonette

A Master of Millions

though he was, the chief figure in this fine story came to be mastered by an humble mountaineer. The millionaire's position in society had brought all men bowing before him, but here was a rude hillsman who proved more than the great man's equal—his BETTER! And his fear of the one who had character and no wealth impelled the one who had wealth and no character to do a deed that resurrected his manhood and changed his outlook.

BENDER COOMBS MORGAN OLDRING

Now let the hearts of all fans rejoice, for the four stars of the Philadelphia Athletics will be with them once more. And it will be a diversion to see them as actors—to see if they face the camera as confidently as they did the Giants.

FREE Descriptive DAVID COPPERFIELD POSTERS and free sample copies of DAVID COPPERFIELD four-page Illustrated Herald

THANHOUSER COMPANY NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK	LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP	LIRE 5,750,000

THE FIRST SHIPMENT OF GENUINE WAR FILMS TAKEN AT TRIPOLI EXPECTED IN A FEW DAYS. EXHIBITORS GET NEXT TO THIS—IT MEANS MONEY TO YOU. EXCHANGES SEND FOR PARTICULARS

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Agent and Correspondent for advertisements in Great Britain
B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W., London

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy.
844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV | November 11, 1911 | Number 45

Announcement!

Future Policy of the Moving Picture News

THE policy of the Moving Picture News from its inception has been progression and education, with a fair field and no favor. We have hundreds of letters on file thanking us for our advocacy of the right, combined with an open market for the best and the elimination of the worst features of cinematography. The time has arrived when another forward step should be taken, and following the Psychology of Evolution, we advance that step for the benefit of our readers, who, we are sure, will hail with delight our

New Venture

Nothing more, nothing less than the production of a monthly magazine of

Moving Picture Tales

We have felt for some time past that the independent cause is not having so fair a field as it deserves. In publishing "Stories" or "Tales" of the best films of the months so that in handling the vast population of Nickelodia, a monthly story magazine to read at home, we feel we are supplying a long-felt want. We have made arrangements with popular scenario and magazine story writers to undertake the task of writing a tale from the synopsis of one or two manufacturers each week, and at the end of the month publish four, six or eight tales—fully illustrated with half tones—in a popular monthly with the above title, retailing at the popular nickel per copy. Does not this appeal to you, Mr. Exchangeman, Mr. Exhibitor and Mr. Manufacturer. A popular monthly moving picture magazine for five cents? A magazine giving the tales of the best films which will be read in many households. We shall aim to rehearse only those film tales which have an uplifting, educational theme attached to them, murders, blase films, and western holdups will be rigidly tabooed. We want the boys and girls to learn a moral from every film the tale of which is told in Moving Picture Tales. Of course, it is fully understood the authoress will have free latitude to tell the tale in her own style, keeping as near as possible to the story as told in the synopsis of the manufacturer, and if the film does not come up to the standard of the tale, so much the worse for the film. As an illustration we selected "The Courting of Mary," a Majestic comedy; "From the Bottom of the Sea," an Imp drama; a third is "A Gypsy's Love," a St. Louis (Shamrock) release. If our readers will help us with their suggestions and criticism, we will endeavor to make our new venture "second to none." For our first issue we are aiming at a twenty thousand circulation which we will increase every month. We hope to reach a quarter of a million copies in six months.

Remember, Messrs. Exhibitor, Exchangeman and Manufacturer, this is to be a popular monthly magazine for five cents, and write for particulars of distribution. Every exchangeman will need 500 copies each month to distribute to his customers. Finally, we want the cooperation of the whole trade to make this venture a success.

MOTION PICTURE LEAGUE OF AMERICA

By M. A. Neff

THE Ohio State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America met at the Southern Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, November 1, 1911, in annual convention, elected new officers, and transacted a large amount of business. Previous to the meeting M. A. Neff sent out notices to all of the members, asking them to please consider some one else to be elected as president, but when the time for electing officers arrived they insisted that Mr. Neff serve one more year, and persuaded him to reconsider and accept the nomination; there was no one nominated except Mr. Neff, and he was unanimously elected.

Mr. W. A. Pettis, of Conneaut, Ohio, was re-elected first vice-president; J. H. Broomhall, Hamilton, Ohio, second vice-president; J. J. Huss, Cincinnati, Ohio, secretary, and Max Stearn, Columbus, Ohio, treasurer.

There was a large number of new members that came in, and especially from Columbus. A new local is to be organized in Columbus at once, and the State organizer will be put to work in Ohio. The State organization, financially, is in splendid shape, all bills having been paid, and a nice large balance in the treasury.

All of the important matters that came before the convention were thoroughly discussed in a business way and definite action taken. The slides that are now being exhibited on the curtains of picture shows frightening and intimidating the patrons by reason of a long explanation telling them what to do in case of a fire, these slides are shown to the detriment of the moving picture business, and cannot possibly be of any benefit to the public or the proprietor. There are comparatively no fires in picture shows. They have a State inspector, a city inspector and a fire insurance inspector; every picture theater has to undergo a strict examination, the booth is strictly fireproof, and the wiring perfectly safe.

Of all the fires that have occurred there has never been a fire in a real picture show where there was a competent operator. In nearly every case some ignorant man or hysterical woman has been the cause of the disturbance, and probably without cause the people have been frightened into believing that picture theaters are dangerous simply because many churches and schoolhouses have used pictures for the purpose of advertising or entertaining their members, the public receiving no protection whatsoever.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America requests and insists upon the officials of every State and every city, before allowing a picture to be shown, seeing that every church, every schoolhouse and all places where pictures are shown are fully inspected by the authorities, and that they be made to comply strictly with the law. The public has been and is being misled in regard to the danger of fire in the picture theater by reason of the temporary showing of pictures where the proper electric machinery is not placed and through political and social pull pictures are allowed to be shown at great risk to the public.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America requests that every official strictly adheres to the law and enforces it in regard to the protection of life and property.

The president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, Mr. M. A. Neff, will be pleased to visit any State from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Gulf to the Lakes, to assist the States in organizing a thorough, vigorous organization. For full information and particulars the president requests that each State write direct to him, and he will be glad to assist the States in perfecting an organization.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America states that at the call meeting at Columbus they perfected plans for carrying out a vigorous campaign, and will soon have every State in the union organized. It is to the interest and benefit of every exhibitor throughout America to become interested in the movement, and to start a State organization by calling a meeting of the State exhibitors for the purpose of forming a permanent State organization.

THE MOTION PICTURE LEAGUE OF AMERICA

A meeting of the executive committee of The Moving Picture League of America was held at the Southern Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, November 1 and 2, 1911, pursuant to a call by the president, M. A. Neff.

Those present were: M. A. Neff, Cincinnati, O., president; Fred J. Herrington, Pittsburgh, Pa.; S. E. Morris, Cleveland, O.; William Ullman, Detroit, Mich.; William U. Sweeney, Chicago, Ill.; C. H. Phillips, Milwaukee, Wis.; H. S. Dickson, Winchester, Ind., vice-presidents; C. M. Christenson, Cleveland, O., secretary, and J. J. Rieder, Jackson, Mich., treasurer. Vice-presidents H. C. Farley, of Montgomery, Ala., and F. H. B. McLain, of Wheeling, W. Va., were represented by proxy.

The Executive Committee deemed it advisable to change the name of the league from "The Moving Picture League of America" to "The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America," for the reason that the former name was not specific.

The league was incorporated under the laws of the State of Ohio by M. A. Neff, Cincinnati, O.; William J. Sweeney, Chicago, Ill.; Fred J. Herrington, Pittsburgh, Pa.; S. E. Morris, Cleveland, O., and C. M. Christenson, Cleveland, O.

At this meeting the following resolutions were passed:

1. That the authorities of every city and town in the United States and Canada be requested to enforce, strictly, the law in safeguarding the public by refusing to allow films to be projected in any moving picture theater, or any other place, which does not comply with the law requiring the machine to be located in a fireproof booth, and with such other regulations as are covered by State laws and city ordinances.

2. That a law be enacted making it an offense equally on the part of any corporation, company or individual furnishing films to a theater, or any other place, not complying with the law as above stated, as well as the corporation, company or individual receiving such films and showing them.

3. That we condemn the practice of film manufacturers in releasing what are known as "Special Films," for which they charge the exhibitors, through the film exchanges, extra film rental.

4. That no single reel of film shall exceed a maximum length of ten hundred and seventy-five (1,075) feet; and that in the case of certain story subjects, as, for instance, "Colleen Bawn," or "A Tale of Two Cities," the length of which would greatly exceed the above named limit, the subject be so divided that one reel of it may come out on the regular release day of its manufacturer, the remainder to follow on the next succeeding release day, to the extent of one reel of film, proceeding in this manner until the subject is finished.

5. That the league members take notice of the action of Mr. William N. Selig, of the Selig Polyscope Co., Chicago, Ill., who recently manufactured and released the film known as "The Two Orphans," consisting of two reels of film. These were known as Special Films, and Mr. Selig personally notified The General Film Company that no extra charges should be made for these films to exhibitors, and that the exhibitor should get the film in the regular course of his service the same as any other film.

C. M. CHRISTENSON, Secretary.

The annual convention of the Ohio branch of The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America was held at the Southern Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, November 1 and 2, 1911. About 150 members were present at this meeting. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President—M. A. Neff, Cincinnati, O.
First Vice-president—W. A. Pettis, Conneaut, O.
Second Vice-president—J. H. Broomhall, Hamilton, O.
Secretary—John J. Huss, Cincinnati, O.
Treasurer—Max Stearns, Columbus, O.

Forty-nine exhibitors made application, and were admitted into the league, giving a total membership, in the State of Ohio, of three hundred members.

Resolutions were passed favoring the regulation of length of program; it being recommended that two reels of film should be the maximum number of films to be shown for five cents, and that any excess should be charged for at the rate of ten cents or more.

Resolutions were also passed recommending the discontinuance of vaudeville in connection with moving pictures, for the following reasons:

First—That large vaudeville theaters are not regular moving picture theaters, and should, therefore, have a separate classification.

Second—That most cities in the State of Ohio do not allow vaudeville performances on Sunday, and, in order to keep their houses open on that day, it is the custom, with most vaudeville theaters, to run an old film after the regular evening's performance during the week, in order to secure films on Sunday, thereby keeping their vaudeville theater open on Sunday to the great detriment of the regular moving picture theater, as a greater number of films are shown in the vaudeville theater than in the moving picture theater. C. M. CHRISTENSON, Secretary pro tem.

NEW YORK CITY AND MOVING PICTURES

Result of Saturday's Meeting to Discuss Draft of Proposed Ordinance Regulating Motion Picture Theaters

At a meeting of the special commission on moving pictures held at the Mayor's office at 2 p.m., Saturday, November 4th, to discuss the proposed ordinance regulating motion picture theaters, the following representatives of different societies and also of the motion picture trade expressed views as given below:

The first to speak was Dr. Moscowvitz of the Downtown Ethical Society. Dr. Moscowvitz objected to the matron clause. His idea is that the children needing special restraint should have guardians and sit among the regular audience. He wanted, however, a separate place from that apportioned to adults whether accompanied by a guardian or not. Also he suggested that should a matron be employed she should be from thirty to forty years old.

Second came Mr. Montague for the Woman's Municipal League. Mr. Montague wanted a municipal board of censorship of pictures. According to Mr. Montague, Boston rejects fifty per cent of the pictures passed by the New York Board of Censorship. He had no objections to the rest of the draft.

A representative from the Neighborhood League wanted to take the children from the parents and put them in isolated seats. Also he would separate the boys from the girls.

Mr. Lloyd Fisher from the Peoples' Recreation Company thought the matron idea good from a business standpoint. He also thought that the employment of a matron would tend to elevate the tone of the place.

Mr. Marcus, from the Society for the Prevention of Crime, was in favor of the general scheme of the draft, but was against admitting children without a guardian. However, he would withdraw that objection if some official censorship of pictures was provided. He thought it advisable to have a paid board of censorship if children were to be admitted. He also wanted inspection by the Fire Department to be final on question of license. Instead of being obliged to consult so many different authorities on the question of license, he proposed that there be one head of the Bureau of Licenses which would be at liberty to consult with other municipal authorities if necessary.

Mr. McClintock, also from the Society for the Prevention of Crime, wanted to put out of business the present 300-seat shows, and would have all provisions at present applying to 600-seat shows apply also to the 300-seat shows. He also wanted a paid official Board of Censorship.

Mr. Keppler, from the Association of Exhibitors, thought the $100 license fee too high. He suggested a $25 fee for 300 seats and an extra fee of $25 to be imposed for each additional 100 seats. He also thought a $25 fee instead of $50 ample taxation for open air shows. Mr. Keppler thought a court review should be granted in case of withdrawal of license.

Dr. Slicer, chairman of the National Board of Censorship, thought the ordinance in general was good, and stated that he was not opposed to an official censorship.

Mr. Ashe, a motion picture exhibitor, thought fees were fair, and that the chief of the License Bureau should be required to call for these reports from the different other municipal offices, but should no reply be received within ten days, then power should be given to issue license. He would prohibit motion picture shows above or below the ground floor. Mr. Ashe also thought that specifications regarding booths should be made more definite—the State law should be more definite. He stated that there is considerable conflict between boroughs as to what a booth should be. Mr. Ashe has a matron in his place and believes in them. He also wanted a small percentage of leeway granted on height of fire court.

Mrs. Betts, of the Social Workers' League, thought children should not be admitted to the picture show during school hours. She thought the hours for children should be from four to nine in the evening. Also it was her opinion that the boys should be separated from the girls.

Mr. Richardson, of the Moving Picture World, wanted specifications for booths more definite. He said there has been no provision made for size of vent flue in top of booth. In his opinion, from 150 to 350 square inches should be insisted upon—this provision being left out of the State law. There should be more certainty as to what was to be fireproof in walls, also more definite provisions about fire shutters.

Mr. Lamberger, exhibitor, thought gas stoves should be allowed with proper escape flue, so as to prevent the lodging in the building of any combustible substance. He also wanted provision made for the rewinding of reels in an adjacent fireproof room.

Mr. Lloyd Fisher rose again to say that provision should be made in the ordinance to give the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity the power to pass without a booth the small parlor machine intended for use in private houses and clubs, which calls only for a very low current.

The above represents only a discussion of the draft of the ordinance, the final decision will not be given until later.

There was also a suggestion advanced at this meeting regarding the raising of prices in the moving picture theater to enable the exhibitor to more easily carry out the requirements of the law.

PSYCHOLOGICAL POWER OF MOVING PICTURES

Constructive Rather Than Destructive Ideas to Be Impressed—Fear Is an Emotion to Be Eliminated From All Education

By Mary Lawton Metcalfe

(Electra Sparks)

FEAR paralyzes the mind. No man can think in mental paralysis. The paralyzed mind is worse than the dead body.

We dwell on the scientific aspects of Truth and of principles and laws which produce effects. Our New Thought leaders are taking live minds up to the very pinnacle of Spiritual Sinai. Each man can see himself to-day, as the ideal man in the transfiguration of his individual-consciousness from ashes and corruption to the grandest work of the Creator's mind. Each man then has the key to the puzzle of his own life. He is by his own power, I will, the master of his condition.

What then retards human progress?

There is only one answer—Human Ignorance voiced in Fear. Says Charles Fillimore (Leo Virgo):

"Before man can enter into his rightful place in the universe, he must know the character of his ideas. He must know them as he knows his spelling book and the rules of arithmetic.

"He must know what idea to bring forth to obtain definite results. There is dynamic power back of every idea and man must estimate the power of his ideas, as he does the voltage of his dynamo."

It is our privilege to focus our dynamic ideas in presenting the moving picture manufacturing and releasing industry to great audiences of intelligent readers, who as yet consider the invention only as a new form of public amusement.

Far deeper than simply legitimate, cheap diversion for the masses, moving picture men direct attention to its possibilities for distributing knowledge.

Editors and owners are united in their desire to turn on the calcium light of Truth, as to the possibilities of their work beyond mere commercial enterprise.

They are in the mental attitude to co-operate and develop the suggestions of progressive authors, teachers, preachers, lecturers, librarians, parents and guardians of the great trust of childhood. The illustrated lecture is the direct road to public enlightenment.

We know that the eye learns more rapidly than the ear.

Who would not accept stone-ears rather than glass eyes?

Light travels faster than sound.

The vivid flash in the angry cloud foretells the storm before the low growl of thunder vibrates on the ear-drum.

The first steps in all education must be constructive.

The baby that fears takes longer to stand alone.

Mothers tell of the inborn fear. It seems to be the first emotion which inspires the bare "life-study" to yell.

Really, who knows why the new son and heir shouts with terror before he knows where he is at?

Is it a question of psychology?

The doctor discusses the subject with the college-bred young mother. But nobody actually knows why the healthy young gentleman of a few hours clenches his fist to ward off blows; why he shivers and shudders and seems to be a moving picture of fear from the beginning of his "mortal coil."

One thing is certain, that the live mind of a new-born babe does give ideas of fear.

I am thinking that perhaps old Mother Eve was frightened at the moving picture of a big snake-in-the-grass and passed on the idea with dynamic force to young Cain. His inglorious career does not excite courage.

If this be true, dynamic power in woman has made a lasting impression on timid men from the first period of Adamic era.

The time has come then for moving picture men to help eliminate fear from the human race.

Thousands of unborn children could be numbered in the audiences of all nations where moving picture theaters are established.

Shall scenes be released which inspire depressing emotions—those of anger, fear, jealousy, pain, sorrow, horror?

The pictures are very real; I have seen studies which make men shudder and children put their heads in the lap of mothers from sheer fear.

Shall women pregnant with "future hopes" of nations for universal peace be impressed for war?

Shall unborn boys thirst for the blood of human brothers through the mental picture of the mother?

Shall the popular films excite fear that unborn daughters lead the life of the merrymakers of the Bowery?

It is a practical age; who has time to consider the psychological results as long as the pictures pass the city's censors? As long as no children are admitted without adults?

Gentlemen, it is to elevate the public demand for the best; it is to increase the international popularity of moving picture theaters and stereopticon teaching that we are concentrating our own fearless private opinions and express them publicly in the columns of the press.

We must affirm incessantly "Excelsior."

Only manufacture the best. Let us realize the summit of a practical realization of the knowledge that moving pictures are invaluable to teach and to entertain.

One hears men say:

"Sure, it is our business to make and sell to the trade."

Truly, but if the civic societies, women's clubs, preachers, teachers, and the rest adopt resolutions to serve you, the trade in that town is put out of business.

Right here we could go into a long debate as to what is after all moral and immoral?

But it seems to us new thought persons, poor, short-sighted policy to excite fear in the minds of any community.

We know that this industry has come to stay, and it is engaging the attention of psychologists in their investigations as to how to improve the human race.

We cannot emphasize too enthusiastically the successes of the American manufacturers at providing amusement for the masses, especially in the winter season.

As one notes the millions of people who swarm like flies on the beaches, in the parks in summer for amusement, the thought occurs, what do they do with themselves through the frigid months to get amusement?

The human mind demands diversion, that actual leading away of itself from the monotony of day's work.

Give your audiences clean fun. Make them laugh at the funny adventures of a French count when he comes to America to find millionairesses to cast themselves at his feet.

Let tired women forget the dishpan and scrub pail when they go to your shows.

No hard work drives a woman to gas; it is the humdrum cleaning of fishes and dishes; it is fighting dirt in all phases.

Moving pictures can color gray lives.

Very rosy views can turn to gray when one is condemned to take out ashes three times a day for twenty-five years.

Gentle reader, what must be the muddy pictures in minds of scrubwomen, who, on their knees, wash up men's tracks year in and out.

Oh, give them passes to your show once in a while.

Forget it! Forget it, old ladies, go to these people's theaters at night and forget that mop while you pin on the puffs. You will see blooming apple trees and sheep and cows and pretty sights. Without ever the sign of pail and darning needle.

Gentlemen, let us give them in the press and on canvass releases of beauty, courage, health, peace, plenty, prosperity, restfulness, fun, fancy.

Let us give the public pictures of live men and women, living right here in New York; in the United States; in the world. Pictures of persons who are leaders as citizens, to be admired for what they are doing to improve conditions of the one great human family.

Give us scenario that will prompt us to love and praise our fellow men.

We need all such films which will only paint in action life as inspiration, without fear and without reproach. Let the giants in this splendid industry get more active than ever to give visible scenes of moving pictures to the good.

TRIPOLI WAR FILMS BY THE CINES CO.

THE Cines Co., of Rome, announce that the first shipment of genuine war films taken at Tripoli are expected in a few days. This fact should interest all exchange men and exhibitors, and induce them to get in communication with the New York branch of this firm, at 445 Broome street. This is important and timely, and should not be overlooked, as films of this nature are sure to interest all patrons of motion picture houses.

IMPORTANT TO OPERATORS

Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity City of New York

13-21 Park Row, Nov. 3, 1911.

Editor, Moving Picture News,
30 West 13th Street, City.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly make announcement of the fact that in a recent decision by the Supreme Court in the case of People ex rel. Lewis Gibelman against Henry S. Thompson, as Commissioner, etc., it has been held that "the condition precedent to an examination contained in Section 18, Chapter 252 of the Laws of 1911 is unreasonable and unnecessary to protect the health, morals or general welfare of the State." This ruling has the effect of nullifying the requirement that an applicant for license to operate moving picture apparatus shall serve an apprenticeship for a period of not less than six months under a licensed operator.

The Department is at present receiving applications, as formerly, for examination and is conducting these examinations as rapidly as practicable. The applicant must be twenty-one years of age, but need not be a citizen and need not have served an apprenticeship.

Respectfully,
(Signed) HENRY S. THOMPSON, Commissioner.

CADILLAC FILM COMPANY

On another page will be found an advertisement from the above company in the form of a night letter which practically speaks for itself. "A straw shows which way the wind blows," is a saying that we have used so frequently it has been almost worn thread-bare, and until we can invent another to express the same meaning we must still use it. It shows that General Flimco is getting defeated in every engagement he enters, his forces are getting routed and dispersed. As we have often said before, if the Independents would only deliver the goods, they could very soon monopolize seventy-five per cent of the business of the country, and it looks as though this is coming.

The fact of the Cadillac taking four first-run films from downtown theaters in Detroit, is exceedingly good; we commend them for their enterprise and success. We have the entry in many theaters and we have tried over and over again to view the first-run films of the Trust. Taking Fourteenth street in New York, Mr. Rosenquest always showed the first-runs of the Independents, but the exhibition now given there is very, very old and commercial.

A few more enterprising exchanges like the Cadillac are urgently needed, and then—a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together—away goes General Flimco into the mud and mire of oblivion. So mote it be.

If the Devil Joined the Church

you'd be no more surprised than at the picture we're going to talk about just now. Nor does this mean that it won't be talked about again—only you'll do the talking, and what you'll say will be stronger than this poor, little, humble ad can ever hope to be. But to return—

"The Return"

Released Thursday (how well you know it), November 16th, will make your patrons return for another look. It really overthrows the common belief that they never come back—and you'll feel an uncommon relief at the first glance.

It's a picture with the prettiest outdoor scenes that Nature or Rand & McNally ever turned out; a story with the voice of New York and the whisper of the country; an epic of the wilderness of mortar and steel, yet close to the hills—and your heart.

NURSE YOUR BOX OFFICE! NOURISH YOUR RECEIPTS!
IF YOUR BUSINESS IS ROCKY, COME BACK WITH

"THE RETURN"

REX

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO., 573 ELEVENTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

Sales Co. says Rex will arrive with "The Return"

BUREAU OF BUILDINGS, BOROUGH OF MANHATTAN

No. 220 Fourth Avenue

Booths Enclosing Cinematograph or Similar Apparatus
Bulletin No. 32—1911

Attention is called to the provisions of Chapter 756, Laws of 1911, which goes into effect this month:

1. No cinematograph or other apparatus for projecting moving pictures, shall be set up for use or used in any building, place of public assemblage or entertainment, unless such apparatus shall be inclosed in a booth or enclosure constructed of iron frame-work covered or lined with asbestos board, or with some equally strong and fire-resisting material.

2. The booths shall be constructed according to plans and specifications which shall have been approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, and must comply substantially with the following requirements.

3. Such booths shall be at least seven feet in height. If one machine is to be operated in such booth the floor space shall be not less than forty-eight square feet. If more than one machine is to be operated therein, an additional twenty-four square feet shall be provided for each such additional machine. Such booths shall be constructed with a frame-work of iron angles not less than one and one-quarter inches by one and one-quarter inches by three-sixteenths of an inch thick, the adjacent iron members being joined firmly with angle plates of iron. The iron members of the frame-work shall be spaced not more than four feet apart on the sides and not more than three feet apart on the front and back and top of such booth. The asbestos board shall completely cover the sides, top and all joints, of such booth. The sheets shall be at least one-quarter of an inch in thickness and shall be securely attached to the iron frame-work by means of iron bolts or rivets. The floor space occupied by the booth shall also be covered with asbestos board not less than three-eighths of an inch in thickness. There shall be provided for the booth a door not less than two feet wire and six feet high, consisting of an angle iron frame covered with sheets of asbestos board one-quarter of an inch thick, and attached to the frame-work of the booth by hinges, in such a manner that the door shall be kept closed at all times, when not used for ingress or egress. The operating windows, one for each machine to be operated therein and one for the operator thereof, shall be no larger than reasonably necessary to secure the desired service, and shutters of asbestos board shall be provided for each window. When the windows are open, the shutters shall be so suspended, and arranged that they will automatically close the window openings, upon the operating of some suitable fusible or mechanical releasing device.

4. No apparatus for projecting moving pictures shall be operated until a certificate has been obtained from the Superintendent of Buildings stating that the booth enclosing the same is in accordance with the law.

A violation of this law is a misdemeanor.

Applications for the erection of such booths, and certificates, should be made at once to the Superintendent of Buildings.

Dated August 17, 1911.

RUDOLPH P. MILLER,
Superintendent of Buildings.

The few lines I wrote about operators' booths seem to have caused quite a stir. Most operators would like to shake my hand. While there are a few exhibitors who wish I had never been born. Then followed an editorial the next week. They did not like that either. So much for the people who own the booths and those who have to work in them, but I find the law as laid down by the Bureau of Buildings with regard to "Booths enclosing Cinematograph apparatus," while very strictly describing the nature of material and size, say not a word about ventilation. An official of the above department said he would not reject a booth where ventilation was provided in Manhattan. But what about Brooklyn? The borough president, however, adheres strictly to the law, and says there shall be no ventilation except what air can get through the machine and spy holes. The W. G. and E. inspectors, as well as the firemen want the door closed, so how is that poor devil, the operator, going to live when he has used up all the air—hot or otherwise—that got in when he did? This matter could very soon be put right, I should think, if the W. G. and E. Bureau had all the say instead of only half.

CHAMPION'S MOTHER GOOSE SERIES

By Our "Roving" Commissioner

A VISIT FROM MOTHER GOOSE

OUR FAIRY GODMOTHER.
DEAR OLD MOTHER GOOSE

JACK AND JILL WENT UP THE HILL,
TO FETCH A PAIL OF WATER.

AGAIN we feel a pride in the presentation to our readers of another novel theme which has been carefully thought out and filmed by one of our Independent brothers. And it is with great gladness that we hail the "Mother Goose" series of moving pictures from the Champion Film Co. These pictures will be wholesome food for the eye of both child and adult. There is a freshness and innocence, and also a sweet reminiscence for most of us in the atmosphere of the old "Mother Goose" tales. We really

RIDE A COCK-HORSE TO BANBURY CROSS TO SEE AN OLD LADY UPON A WHITE HORSE

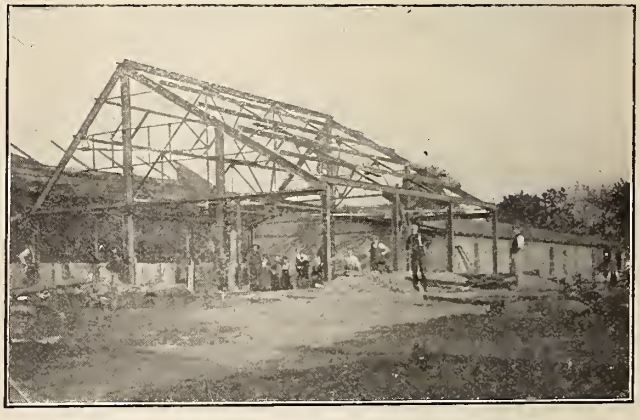
are not certain whether it is to Mr. Dintenfass or to Mr. Davis, the able director of the "Champion," that we are indebted for this departure from the beaten path, but to whichever of them it is due, the public should feel deeply grateful, and be glad that at last the children have been remembered, for the mysterious dream people of their nursery rhymes have suddenly developed from just a mere colored picture on the page of a book of nursery rhymes into real live beings.



CHAMPION'S NEW STUDIO NEARING COMPLETION

The first edition of the "Mother Goose" series will be released on November 27, just in time to greet the Thanks-

CHAMPION'S ORIGINAL STUDIO BUILDING—NEW ADDITION TO THE LEFT

giving public and to awaken in the busy, bustling public heart a chord not lost, but slumbering—a chord whose harmonies are sweet melody as they echo again from the retreating memory land. The older people will love these pictures just as much as the children will—mother and father, grandpa and grandma, will feel just the same pleasant anticipation in view of greeting upon the screen their old nursery chums, as the little children.

The release of November 27 will be a split-reel comprising "Jack and Jill," "Rock-a-bye-baby," and "Ride a Cock Horse to Banbury Cross." These nursery rhymes are treated in a most original way by the Champion Co., and are applied to conditions in real life. The accompanying illustrations will give some idea of their application, as well as showing the beautifully artistic, and interesting manner in which they are presented.

We are growing very proud of our Independent rank and file. The recent developments among them in photography, artistic presentation and choice of theme, are marvelous, and every encouragement should be given those who are striving honestly and sincerely to do not only better work than heretofore, but to do the best that can be done. There is but one way to win the praises of the more intelligent and appreciative portion of the public, and that is to aim high—to hold steadily to a purpose which has for its object the higher development of the art.

We are also showing some cuts of the new Champion studio, which will be ready for occupancy in a couple of weeks or so. This studio will be one of the finest studios in the country. It is built entirely of steel and glass, with a portable flooring and stage, and its lighting capacity is excellent.

Rest assured, manufacturers, that each new step taken by you toward doing things that are worth while will be lauded by us, and the message of our approval scattered broadcast from ocean to ocean and over seas.

We also show above the facsimile of the front cover of the booklet which the Champion is sending out, which will give some idea of the high-class work employed in the preparation of their advertising literature.

BREAKING THE SEVENTH COMMANDMENT

An Imp Story That Is Full of Pathos and Genuine Heart Interest

No one who sees the Imp drama, Breaking the Seventh Commandment, will regard the hard-working and disappointed father as a criminal. Thou Shalt Not Steal is one of the divine commandments that is broken, but the temptation invests the act with mitigating circumstances. An aged mechanic, who is striving to support his wife and little daughter, is summarily discharged for no other reason than his age, and young blood and sinew is wanted in the shop of the wealthy contractor. He returns home broken-hearted and discouraged. The one bright thing in his life is his little girl and her dog. The canine is the constant companion of the girl, an intelligent and handsome specimen of a dog. The dog is noticed by the daughter of the contractor and she covets it. To ask is to have her wish gratified under ordinary circumstances, as nothing is denied her. Her father tries to purchase the dog, offering a price far in excess of its worth, but the child, while poor, loves her dog and will not part with it. The father is unable to obtain work, and the child falls ill. The family purse is depleted and they have no money with which to secure the services of a physician or purchase medicines. The father secretly sells the dog to his former employer and returns home with money and a doctor, happy and relieved. The child is disconsolate over the loss of her dog and refuses to take the medicine. She moans and begs for her dog and the father is grief stricken. He returns to the home of the rich man and steals the dog. The child is happy at its return and improves in health instantly. There can be but one result—the theft is discovered—and the owner of the dog brings an officer to arrest the father. It is all explained to the contractor, and his heart is touched. The little girl is made happy by a present of the dog, and the father is reinstated in his old position.

Bristol, Pa.—Efforts are being made to form a stock company here and erect a new theater.

Porterville, Cal.—Walter Godley, of the Novelty Theater in Mill street, has approved plans for the complete reconstruction of the theater.

New York, N. Y.—Harrison & Sackheim, architects, have plans for an addition and the enlargement of the new theater at Second avenue and 79th street, to cost $1,500.

"The Flying 'A' and Quality Are Synonymous"

We SPECIALIZE on Western Life—and, being Specialists, Think We Know a Little More About It Than the Other Fellow!

All AMERICAN FILMS spell "QUALITY" if BRAINS, HUSTLE and COLD CASH Can Make Them So.

Our Stock Company Represents the HIGHEST FORM of Pantomime Talent Obtainable Anywhere.

The Western Studio—in Beautiful Historic El Cajon Valley, Southern California, With Its Mighty, Rolling Prairies, Tropical Vegetation and Mountain Grandeur, Gives To Each Picture a Background of Fairy Beauty.

"Jolly Bill of the Rollicking R"

RELEASE NOV. 27

"Jolly Bill" couldn't he tidy—so the "hoys" bundled him off to Miranda. He proposed and she—wonder of wonders—just happened to need a man. They eloped to 'Frisco. On their return the "cowhoys" met them and promptly fainted away at the sight! Lo! Here was untidy Bill togged out in the very latest—and all through the efforts of Miranda. How long did it last? The film itself can best answer that question. Don't miss one of the Livest, Jolliest and All-Around Funniest Films of the Season. Approximate Length, 1,000 Feet.

"The Sheriff's Sisters"

RELEASE NOV. 30

A powerful Western tale of fierce passions—the story of a wonderful love, heginning in jealousy and ending in nohle sacrifice, carrying a plot of many cross currents to an easy and logical conclusion. A Master Story of the Unusual Kind. Approximate Length, 1,000 Feet.

American Film Mfg. Co.

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK CHICAGO

A NOTABLE CAST IN ECLAIR COMING RELEASE

It has been left to the Eclair Co. to coerce the world's greatest actress, Madame Sarah Bernhardt, into lending her divine art to the furtherance of the moving picture industry. Subsequently, they will present the celebrated French artiste, Rejane, in Sardou's great comedy, "Madame Sans Gene." The winning over of such great artists to service in the industry represents not only an advancement in the industry, but also a tremendous step in the general advancement of the dramatic art.

In "Hands Across the Sea in '76," the American branch of the Eclair Co. are following the tactics of the mother company, and have employed some of the finest actors and actresses in the country in the preparation of this excellent film. The following are some of those who have lent their services to the preparation of this production:

MR. TOM IRWIN
Formerly with James K. Hackett, Henrietta Crossman, the Edison Co. and others.

C. NORMAN HAMMOND
With Klaw & Erlanger's "Prince of India," Nance O'Neill, Bertha Kalish and the Edison Company.

CARSON DAVENPORT
Popular stock actor, with Cecil Spooner, also Chestnut Street Theater, Philadelphia.

WILLIAM SLIDER
Late of Mrs. Leslie Carter's company, also "The Wolf."

WM. D. CORBETT
Formerly leading man for Blanche Walsh; also with the Lieblers; also the Lubin Co.

JOHN ADOLFI
Many years with Broadway productions; also with Vitagraph and other companies.

DARWIN KARR
Versatile stock leading man; also prominent with the Edison Co. in historical films.

GUY OLIVER
From the Lubin Co.

MASTER CLARENCE ROCKEFELLER
From "Jimmie Valentine"; also Mrs. Fiske's company and many prominent picture engagements.

WM. S. RISING
Late of the Bostonians; famous for years at head of his own companies; also Edison, Vitagraph, Pathe and others.

FRANK C. GRIFFIN
Four years with Lubin; also other companies.

ERNEST JOY
With Pathe and Vitagraph; also with Eleanor Robson and "Dawn of To-morrow."

FRED BERNARD
Formerly with the Vitagraph Co.

ROY APPLEGATE
Late of the Edison and Pathe companies.

GRACE SCOTT
A prominent stock leading woman of wide experience.

DOROTHY GIBSON
Late Harrison Fisher model and identified with leading New York companies; also Lubin and Imp.

HELEN MARTIN
Famous "Gibson Girl;" formerly with Biograph, Pathe, and others.

The release date of this remarkable film will be November 21. Its appearance on the market is looked forward to with a great deal of interest by exchange men, exhibitors and the general public—at least those of the latter who are up-to-date enough to following the developments of a great industry.

Chicago, Ill.—A. L. Katz will erect a new moving picture theater at 5619 South Center avenue, to cost $3,500.

Portland, Ore.—Rudolph Christman will repair moving picture theater at 1092 Hawthorne, at a cost of $800.

Reading, Pa.—James Graul will erect a new moving picture theater at 1643 Moss street, to cost $3,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Silber City Amusement Co. will erect a $14,000 show house at 28th and National avenues.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Crystal Theater will be extensively remodeled. William Wassman, manager.

PURSUIT OF A MOVING PICTURE JOB

Experiences of an Art Student Who Heard of an Easy Way to Earn $5 a Day

A GIRL student was riding in a Broadway car when she overheard a plump woman who sat beside her say enthusiastically:

"It's $5 a day and all you have to do is run. If I were out of work I'd try it myself."

Five dollars a day for almost any kind of pot boiling work sounded good to the art student just then. She did not have to listen hard to catch most of the information which the plump woman proceeded to pour forth to the young woman who sat on her other side, and the consequence was that in a few minutes she had determined to act for moving pictures for one month and earn $120 before the autumn course began.

Two blocks before she reached her corner she screwed up courage to ask the plump woman where such work might be obtained.

"I couldn't help overhearing a part of what you've been saying," she explained, "and $5 a day for this next month would mean so much toward my studies."

The plump woman was cordial to the point of enthusiasm.

"Your studies? Oh, you're an art student. I love to hear of girls who are striving for the great things of life being willing to turn an honest penny any way they can. Now this piece of high mightiness," indicating her friend, "thinks it's beneath her to earn $5 a day in a way that's as easy as rolling off a log; she'd rather starve. And I went to the trouble of procuring these addresses for her. You're welcome to copy them if you want to."

The art student did so, thanked the plump woman warmly, and alighted seven blocks beyond her stopping place, filled with hope and determination.

"Why not?" she said in response to her chum's horrified exclamation that evening.

"Think of having your picture shown in cheap theaters all over the city," gasped the chum.

"You don't suppose I would be recognizable!" she retorted. "At college I was noted for my make-ups; my own mother couldn't have recognized me in some of the comic ones. And, of course, I shall ask for character work."

The next morning, selecting the address nearest to her, the art student made her way thither. In the outside office a clerk inscribed her name and address in a large book.

"Experience?" he inquired.

"I have never acted for moving pictures before."

"I mean your theatrical experience," he returned patiently, pen still poised.

"I am an art student, not an actress," she began.

The clerk promptly drew a line through her name, and put down his pen.

"We use none but professionals," he said, in a tone of finality.

"But I have acted in college theatricals, always in prominent parts," she protested.

The clerk smiled and turned back through the pages of the book, so that she could see that they were filled with names, addresses and descriptions.

"So many dozens of professionals out of work register with us that it would scarcely pay us to try amateurs," he said.

The art student was not to be discouraged by one setback.

"All companies cannot be so particular," she argued to herself, "or the plump woman would have known."

One of the addresses on her list was so far from the center of things that she had to consult both guide book and map to locate it. It was not likely they could get real actors away out there, she thought hopefully, and that afternoon she boarded an elevated train for the long trip.

The girl in the office told her that the manager was out on a run, and invited her to await his return, so she went into the hall and took a seat beside a smartly dressed young woman with light hair worn in an elaborate coiffure, who was also waiting. The latter at once entered into a friendly conversation and the art student learned with amazement that this elegant creature was on the same errand as herself, to ask for work at $5 a day.

"You don't look a bit like an actress," the light haired one remarked, as she glanced at the student's modest attire.

"I'm not. Do they require professionals even away out here?" the art student asked in despairing tones.

The other regarded her with amazement, and explained that this was one of the most important concerns of the kind in the city; that the studio was located far out because it did a great deal of outside work, and the country around afforded appropriate scenery.

"I might as well go home at once, for I'm only an art student without a scrap of experience," said the girl starting to rise.

"Oh, don't give up so easily; fake some experience," laughed the fair haired woman. "Say you have been with Williams and Kelly of Chicago; they keep a number of stock companies traveling in the Middle West. And say you took such parts as—— I'll tell you what. Let me talk for you this time, and I'll show you how to sling it off."

The art student expressed her gratitude and the actress offered the information that she had been with Williams and Kelly herself, that this was her first trip East, that she was going to work for the pictures while securing her first Broadway booking and that she had put on her "glad rags" for this interview, as moving picture actors had to supply their own costumes, and it went far with a manager if a woman looked as though she possessed a lot of pretty clothes.

The heart of the art student sank. Nothing in her wardrobe could deserve the title of glad rags when compared

Marion Leonard Engaged

DER KINEMATOGRAPH, DUSSELDORF
The leading Organ for the Motion Picture Trade in Germany.
Special Supplement for Talking Machines, &c.
Published every Wednesday. Annual Subscription 11/- Post Free.
Advertisements (4 columns to page); 2s. 6d. per inch. Situations Wanted, 1½d. per line.
Reduced Price for a Series of Insertions.
Publisher—Ed. LINTZ. Chief Editor—EMIL PERLMANN.

NORDISK FILM TIDNING
The first trade paper in Scandinavia.
Best advertising medium in North Europe.
Subscription 6 shillings.
Sample copy free upon request.
Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

with the smart attire of her companion. When the manager arrived she sat silent while the actress talked, generously introducing her as a friend and giving an account of her histrionic abilities that made the art student nervous.

"And she has a lot of glad rags at home, though she's too sensible to wear them on elevated trains," the actress ended.

The manager glanced at the art student and nodded assent.

"Come to-morrow morning at 8:30 o'clock sharp," he said, "and wear the gladdest rags you have."

Then he looked regretfully at the smart appearing little actress.

"It's a big lawn party scene we have on; you'd fit into it splendidly if you were only dark," he remarked.

"Would one more blonde spoil your picture?" she asked.

"One more? But my dear lady, we never use a blonde. I'm sorry you did not understand that. Blondes don't photograph well enough for our work. I'm afraid you won't be able to get employment in this line anywhere."

Thus the actress learned an important point in moving picture work which her friends had failed to mention, and the art student found herself accepted, while the woman who had seemed to outshine her was discarded as hopeless.

That evening she and her chum worked feverishly trying to fashion something resembling glad rags out of the best their joint wardrobes afforded, and she was rather proud of her appearance when she reached the studio the next morning carrying her make-up materials in a silver chatelaine bag. A large auto coach stood before the door and the manager called to her from a window to climb right in. The coach was already half filled with passengers—all of them dark, she noted—who greeted her cordially. Other dark haired men and women in gala array arrived and a little before the appointed hour the coach rolled away with the manager on the front seat.

On the lawn of an old-fashioned estate which the firm had hired for the day the art student found herself forming one of the ensemble of a lawn fete scene.

"Remember to keep talking," the manager called to them, "and when you shake hands with a friend say something appropriate. Don't say 'I'm tired to death; I wonder if we'll have to rehearse all morning.' What you say shows in the pictures more than you might imagine."

The art student marvelled at the ease with which the actors invented light talk among themselves and repeated trivialities with renewed sprightliness as the rehearsal was repeated time and again. Finally the scene was acted twice over while the films were exposed, and before noon the coach was rolling back to the studio, where each received a full day's pay for the morning's work.

"If you have anything which resembles to-day's finery, but which will stand a bit of rough usage, wear it to-morrow," the manager said. "The lawn party gets into a chase and, I believe, splashes through a stream."

The art student went home excited.

"What was your make-up?" asked her chum.

The art student stood aghast.

"I forgot all about it," she confessed. "Why, none of them were made up," she added as she thought the matter over.

"Perhaps they consider it an honor to have their pictures shown all over the city," her chum remarked, "but if I were you I'd disguise myself a bit for that chase to-morrow."

The art student kept the matter in mind. When she met one of the other women on the elevated train the next morning she spoke to her about it at once.

"Make up? Where did you ever make up for picture work?" exclaimed the other.

"I have never done this work before," the student began.

"I guess you haven't if you talk of making up." returned the other. "Why, child, just consider how hard the lines of the face take in any photograph, and these moving pictures are magnified 500 times when thrown upon the screen. Any make-up on the face would stand out in lumps and patches. It couldn't be put on skilfully enough to hide it."

"But how do they get their character parts?" asked the student.

"By using persons that look the parts; an old man for picture work must be a real old man, a fat woman a real fat woman. Oh, there are lots to choose from," she added with a sigh.

Evidently one must pocket one's pride if one would pocket $5 a day. The art student did so. That morning she ran madly down a quiet country road, climbed over a stone wall and splashed through a stream with the rest of the company, while the photographer, his machine mounted upon an auto, kept abreast of them and immortalized the event.

"What shall we wear to-morrow?" she asked as, dishevelled but happy, she accepted another $5 bill.

"There won't be any more group work this week," the manager replied. "We have only indoor scenes for two or three persons on. But phone on Saturday and we'll let you know about next week."

She rode home with some of the other women and heard a great deal about the uncertainty of extra work.

In the first office at which the girl applied the next morning a tall, handsome woman was protesting almost tearfully to a mild mannered man who looked more like an artist than a manager.

"I have always been considered a very fine emotional actress," she said.

"But, my dear madam, can't you see?" he replied. "That was on the stage, where your voice and the lights and colors and music all help out with the effect. It is quite another thing to be emotional under the green light of the moving picture studio. You have not even the help of a sympathetic audience, but must act to an utterly unresponsive machine."

When she had gone he turned to the girl with a weary smile.

"Just as though we were not searching everywhere for a fine emotional actress," he said. "Have you ever taken strong, emotional parts?"

The art student could not fake to that extent, and the manager showed his disappointment at her reply.

"Character work? Oh, the market is overrun in that line. Every vaudeville actor out of a job wants to do a funny stunt. The great demand is for good emotional actors, persons who can make their faces express anything and everything in the gamut of human joy and tragedy. Now the woman that just went out relies a great deal on her voice in producing effects on the stage, so she failed utterly with us."

Then the manager explained that his was a stock company and there was no vacancy except for a leading lady with an expressive face.

"Last month the woman who has been taking our strong parts for two years married," he said. "There's $85 a week for one who can fill her place."

Eighty-five dollars a week! The art student decided to devote her evenings to practising facial expression before her mirror.

That afternoon she walked a long distance west to another studio. At the door she met one of the women of the garden party, and was led by her past the clerks in the office, through a little gate and up broad stairs at the rear of the building. In a room on one floor they beheld a group of women singing into a phonograph, making records, and one flight further up they came to the door of a large bare hall with a stage at one end. The scenery representing a woodland, was all in black and white, and a dozen black-haired girls in fancy costumes were dancing and singing to the strains of another phonograph.

"A song and dance act," groaned the actress. "Nothing doing for us, apparently."

She led the way past the group of girls of the soubrette type who stood in the hall to a little office.

"Nothing to-day. Come to-morrow, early," the manager said pleasantly, before she could speak.

"Me too?" laughed the student.

"Sure," he replied genially. "Eight-thirty sharp."

"That's work for to-morrow, anyhow," the student said happily as they turned away.

"You're innocent, dearie," replied her companion. "I heard that yesterday, and this morning he even told me to come this afternoon. But if you have nothing else to do you might as well run around every morning early," she added. "There's always a chance that they will have a big scene on and be able to use you."

The art student lingered with the soubrettes to watch the rehearsal, and learned that this firm devoted itself principally to reproducing scenes from popular musical comedies and spectacular plays, and provided all its own costumes. For the first time she saw the ghastly green light in which moving pictures are taken, and she realized what the manager of the stock company meant when he spoke of the difficulty of rising to emotional heights on the moving picture stage.

"Nothing to-day. Come to-morrow, early," the manager said in the same cordial tone when she appeared the next morning at 8:30.

After she had heard it every morning for a week she grew to expect nothing else. It was a shock to her when one day the manager eyed her critically, as though he saw her for the first time, and said he would give her a trial. His tone suggested something important, and for the next half hour she

All Hail to MOTHER GOOSE who held us all spellbound in childhood days,

AND WIDENED OUR IMAGINATIVE WORLD WITH HER RHYMES

Mother Goose will again enthrall us, but this time by her very appearance in a Champion Picture, entitled,

"The First Edition of MOTHER GOOSE RHYMES."

The date of release, dear readers, is NOVEMBER 27TH.

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN AND REGULARS AT FORT RILEY, KAN.

REEL 3, RELEASED NOV. 20

This is the third and last reel of THE FORT RILEY MANOEUVRES, which you have partially witnessed with glowing countenances, in the two reels already released.

EXHIBITORS SHOULD WATCH CHAMPS.

When the Sheriff Got His Man

RELEASED NOVEMBER 22nd

Is a powerfully exciting and neck-stretching subject. In fact, if not for sweetheart, Alice, the Sheriff would have succumbed to the tightening fingers of outlaw, Jack London.

FORGET NOT. IT'S A WESTERN

DELIGHTFUL FEATURES COMING ALONG

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,

12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

had rosy visions of herself in some emotional rôle, winning approval by her newly acquired wealth of facial expression. The dreams increased in rosiness while she donned an old-time garb in the women's dressing room.

In the end she found herself one of a street mob in a scene of the French Revolution, and after hours of careful drilling she ran and shouted, part of a throng made ghastly by the green light.

In the meantime she had 'phoned regularly to the studio where she was first employed, and had traveled as far as Brooklyn to visit other studios. She had watched where the scenery was painted in black and white, and acquired a speaking acquaintance with many of the women who sought to shine in picture dramas.

"It's about the same as getting on the real stage," one of them told her. "If your type strikes a manager as just what he needs for a certain part and you make good in it you'll become one of his standbys, and when you have made a hit in one set of pictures other managers will want to engage you. But until such a good time comes you have to be content with any little extra work you can pick up."

By the end of the month, when the art class was about to open, the student had earned $20 as a return for all her exertions.

"And there were my carfares," she counted up, "and I spoiled one pair of shoes splashing through that stream."

"And your face is spoiled with wrinkles from practising that wretched facial expression," her chum added.

The art student went to the mirror and made a critical survey.

"I suppose it will take at least the remainder of the $20 to purchase enough cold cream and massage to take them out," she sighed finally. "But what I should like to know is where did that plump woman get her information?"—N. Y. Sun.

CINES WAR POSTERS

We understand from Mr. Barry, the manager of the American office that they have had made some special posters of the war in Tripoli, and these posters are available for exhibitors or exchanges who may need them. These have been gotten up in the best and highest style of lithographic art, which is a credit to both the Cines and the lithographers.

CHICAGO LETTER

Mr. Joseph Hopp, president of the Standard Film Exchange, stated that the Independents are getting stronger every day. During the past week six exhibitors formerly using licensed service have joined the Independent ranks at the Standard Film Exchange.

Mr. Simone, of the Wolverine Theater Company, of Saginaw, Mich., was a visitor to the Anti-Trust Company's Exchange last week and purchased a complete moving picture outfit, and also arranged for Independent service.

Mr. E. Mandelbaum, president of the Feature and Educational Film Company, of Cleveland, O., has closed a deal with the Eclair Company to handle the American rights of "Zigomar," a French romance in three reels.

Mr. W. J. Sweeney, vice-president of the Exhibitors' Association of Illinois, has returned to Chicago from Cleveland, O.

In addition to the twenty-four reels now being bought by the Anti-Trust Film Company, of Chicago, they have placed orders for Majestic, American and Eclair outfits.

FILM SERVICE

FILM SERVICE

BUYING 24 REELS WEEKLY

FILM SERVICE

ANTI-TRUST FILM COMPANY

128 LAKE ST., CHICAGO

Branch Office Grand Rapids, Mich.

Branch Office Minneapolis, Minn.

FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA

BY VIRGINIA WEST

(Imp Release, November 16, 1911)

WAS there ever a girl who did not know when a man was going to propose? Marguerite Dalton knew, as she came down the stairs and into the parlor, but if you had asked her, she could not for the life of her have told how she knew—nor can most women.

As she went to the young man standing in the shadows of the low window there was an encouragement in the firm clasp of her hand and in the tone of her voice, although it was entirely unconscious, and added to —rather than took from—her maidenly sweetness.

"We must have some light," she said, as she slowly withdrew her hand, "what is Marie thinking of to leave you in the dark?"

"I told her not to make a light," Tom Burns replied. "Marguerite, I didn't want a light because I have something to say better in the dark. I have the audacity to think you love me, or I should never have the courage to tell you how much I love you, and to ask you to marry me. Will you, dear?"

There was silence in the darkness for a moment, and then a whispered "Yes," and he held her in his arms.

Of course, he thought he was unworthy of her, as every good man thinks of every good woman when he loves her, and, of course, he told her so. But her hand was laid upon his mouth and she reproached him for slandering himself, as does every woman reproach the man she loves when he speaks the least ill of himself.

A step sounded in the room, and the lights were switched on.

"Daughter, did I hear your voice?" asked Lieutenant Dalton.

"Yes, father," and she shyly came from the alcove, followed by Burns.

"Oh, Ensign Burns is with you," said Marguerite's father, a little coldly. "How are you, Ensign?"

"Very well, thank you, Lieutenant Dalton," said the young man, "and now that you have come, I'll speak at once. I love your daughter, Lieutenant Dalton, and have just asked her to be my wife."

The older man looked grave. "Marguerite," he said, "do you love this young man?"

"Yes, father," she answered softly.

Her father took her head gently between his hands and looked deep into her eyes. "Are you very, very sure?" he asked.

"Yes, father, very, very sure," and her eyes did not waver, and her father knew that the girl was sure of herself.

"Well," he said, "I'll not say 'No,' but neither will I say 'Yes.' I consider you a fine young man, Ensign Burns—and I think I know, for I have watched you closely, as I have watched all of Marguerite's young men friends. But, to be frank with you, I had greater ambition for my daughter; I expected her to marry a man of much higher rank."

"I have been in the Navy a very short while, Lieutenant Dalton," said the young man, with a touch of wounded pride. "I expect to advance."

"I hope you will, my boy, and I expect you will, but I cannot give you my little girl until you have done so," replied the superior officer.

Young Burns determined in that moment that he would find some means to rapid advancement, if he had to start a war to do it. To Lieutenant Dalton he said, "Very well, since you do not object to me personally, it can be only a matter of time, and I assure you the time shall be very short if I have it in my power to make it so."

Lieutenant Dalton could not keep away the feeling that he could not find a manlier son-in-law anywhere, and he might have said more than he wished to say if the maid had not at that moment announced Monsieur Valois.

The Frenchman bowed low over Marguerite's hand. As he greeted her father he cast a sharp glance at Burns, who, however, did not catch it, as he was too much occupied with his own thoughts.

Lieutenant Dalton turned to the Ensign, "Ensign Burns, this is Monsieur Valois. He is an attache of the French Embassy," and, turning to Valois, he said, "Ensign Burns has charge of the submarine Plunger."

"And, by the way, Burns, that reminds me, I have a letter here I almost forgot. I am to take charge of the Plunger on a trial trip, the last of the week."

"Very well, Lieutenant, I'll have everything in readiness," replied Burns. The two men drew to one side and talked over the matter of the submarine and left Valois to talk to Marguerite.

Nothing could have pleased the Frenchman more. He had been in love with Marguerite since their first meeting almost, and the few things his quick eyes took in, enlarged by his jealous lover's heart, were causing him torture of uncertainty.

"Ah, Mademoiselle," he said, when they had seated themselves in a far corner of the room, "Ah, if you only knew how I love you! Can I not hope, then, a little bit for something in return? Is it that there is no hope?"

"No, Monsieur Valois, I do not, and cannot love you," the girl told him gently; "you must not speak to me on this subject again."

"Ah, it is indeed, then, as I suspected, you love another, and I have not far to seek him. Is it not true, Mademoiselle, is it not true, that you love the man who has just left this room?" In his excitement he had sprung to his feet.

"You have not the right to ask me that question," she said, in a low voice, but he needed no other answer to tell him the truth.

* * * * * *

By Friday the Plunger was in perfect condition for making the trial trip.

As Burns was on his way to the dock off which the boat was lying he met Valois. Never for one moment did he suspect that in him he had a rival. Nor did he suspect that under the polished exterior of the dapper little Frenchman beat a heart less honest and frank than his own. And being happy and in love with all the world that morning for the simple reason that Marguerite loved him, he asked Valois if he wouldn't like to go aboard the Plunger and have a look around.

The invitation was readily accepted, and in a very short time Burns was explaining to Valois the delicate mechanism.

"This controls the compressed air tanks," said the Ensign, placing his hand on a small wheel. "If anything happened to this wheel the air would become exhausted in a short while."

A light, almost diabolical, gleamed in the Frenchman's eyes. "The wheel is well attached?" he said. "It cannot come off; it is safe?"

"Oh, no," replied Burns, "it comes off, but is perfectly safe unless tampered with," and they moved on to look at the torpedo tube.

At a call from another officer, Burns excused himself for a moment, and left the boat. Valois soon followed him, but not until he had carried out the plan which had been working in his mind.

When he reached the dock he saw that Marguerite Dalton and her father had just arrived. Marguerite was clinging to the hand of her lover, entirely oblivious to the other officers and sailors around her. Valois walked quietly to a vacated part of the dock and, stooping down, quietly dropped the valve wheel into the water.

The command was given, and all those who were to make the trip went on board the little boat. Marguerite was a little nervous, but smiling as her father and her lover left her standing with several officers.

The Plunger steamed a short distance, went a short way under water, and then appeared again, and finally disappeared entirely. In a short while it appeared again, and the crowd of watchers cheered. Not the least enthusiastic in his demonstrations was Valois. He had come up to Marguerite as close as he could, but she did not see him.

Again the boat disappeared.

"Everything seems fine, Ensign; we are going down steadily," said Lieutenant Dalton. He kept his eyes on the indicator. Down, down, down they went, and then suddenly began to rise very slowly. To rise, but only for a few feet. The indicator stopped. The Lieutenant did not move his eyes for a few seconds, then he looked 'round the boat and back again at the indicator. Burns came quickly to his side. "What is it, Lieutenant?" he said, in a low voice.

"We aren't rising," answered the Lieutenant, and Ensign Burns hastens to discover the cause. In a moment he saw what had happened and, seizing a wrench, tried to regulate the valve, but it was no use. One after the other, the men all tried, but it would not turn. They looked at one another in silence. Then Lieutenant Dalton spoke. "There is one thing, my men, that may bring us aid. We can shoot a man through the torpedo tube. Will any one volunteer?" Without hesitation, Burns stepped forward. It was the work of but a moment for him to remove his outer clothing, and in another moment he was shooting, a living torpedo, toward the surface of the sea.

The blood beat in his temples until it seemed his head must burst. He never knew how he ever reached the surface alive. But he did reach it, and with a few strong strokes reached the dock.

"Quick, men," he gasped, "the pumps—the emergency tube—a diver, quick!" He worked as only a man racing with Death can work.

The diver, ready in case of an emergency, sprang into a boat, and taking the end of the tube, stood ready to dive. The oarsmen were strong, and soon he had dived, and was carrying help to the doomed men under the water.

"Pump, men; work as you have never worked before! Eight lives depend upon you! They cannot breathe without you," and so Burns urged them on, never thinking of his own exhausted state; never thinking of his sweetheart, who stood pale and trembling.

When Ensign Burns left the torpedo tube Lieutenant Dalton tried to instill into his men hope and cour-

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 20

The Office Boy's Dream

A Typical American Comedy

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 24

The Diamond Locket

How an Unjust Accusation Brought About Happy Results

THROUGH MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES CO.

COMET FILM CO., 344 E. 32nd St., N. Y. City

age. But he had no easy task. Rapidly the air was becoming exhausted. One by one the men were beginning to gasp for breath, and they were losing their nerve. "Be men," he cried, "for God's sake—be men. If we must—die—let us—die—like men."

Suddenly one man sprang up and with a scream that was scarcely human sprang at the lieutenant's throat. "Give me—air—give me—— You—got it all—give me—— And with a choking laugh of a maniac, he tried to bury his teeth in the commander's throat.

Dalton's strength was fast ebbing, but, by an almost superhuman effort of will he threw the man to the bottom of the boat, where he lay quiet.

The minutes dragged like hours. Lieutenant Dalton closed his eyes, and with his failing strength prayed aloud.

"God—watch over my—little girl—and carry—her lover—to—her—in safe—ty. Thy—will—be—done."

Suddenly it seemed to the weakened men that the air was becoming a little fresher. Lieutenant Dalton gathered strength to look at the indicator. Yes, they were rising! With a gasping, husky voice, he told his men so. Fresher and fresher the air grew. Life! Life! Beautiful, throbbing life was to be theirs again! And the commander prayed again: "Thank Thee, Great Father, that we may be permitted to see our loved ones again. For myself and these, my men, I thank Thee."

When the boat reached the air there was no sound from the dock. The watchers stood in an agony of suspense. Had they been too late? That was the question in every mind. No! There was a head appearing in the conning tower—then another and another. They were safe!

When Lieutenant Dalton stepped onto the dock Marguerite fell into his arms with an hysterical sob. He soothed her gently, as he watched Tom Burns assisting the men to get the injured sailor into an ambulance. Then he called the young fellow to him:

"Ensign Burns," he said, with a suspicion of a tremble in his voice, "you deserve the greatest reward a man can have. I give you the best in my possession," and he placed his daughter in the young man's arms. "As for the promotion, you may be very sure that will follow very speedily. God bless you both." He pressed the ensign's hand tightly as he kissed his daughter's hair.

Those around saw and understood, and they shouted as people can shout when they have suddenly been relieved of a great nervous tension.

All but Valois. He did not shout, but came to Burns and held out his hand, "I congratulate you on both your heroism and your reward," he said.

Burns took not the slightest notice of his hand, but looked straight into his eyes as he answered, "Monsieur Valois, some of the things we are the surest of we cannot prove. Good-day."

"It is so funny—the English language—I do not understand," said Valois, with a shrug, as he turned to go.

The Bioscope The Leading Journal of the Moving Picture Business in Europe. Has the largest circulation and is the best Advertising Medium, bar none.

SUBSCRIPTION, $2.00 A YEAR. SAMPLE COPY MAILED FREE.

85, Shaftesbury Ave., London, W., England

Philadelphia, Pa.—George Hogg is figuring on plans for a one story moving picture theater at 2516-20 West Lehigh avenue, for W. J. Stewart.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

FROM THE OBSERVATORY

By G. F. Blaisdell

MONTCLAIR, N. J., has a rival. This town has been considered to be in a class by itself by reason of the fact that all applications for moving picture show permits were uniformly denied. Brookline, a suburb of Bosting (ing, Mr. Compositor, please), and in many respects resembling Montclair, has for the third time refused to permit the location of a moving picture theater within the town limits.

The remonstrants were led by four ministers, two Catholic and two Protestant. The former declared that such shows would have an unwholesome influence. The latter coincided with them. One of the applicants was Ralph Flanders, business manager of the New England Conservatory of Music, and formerly identified with the Boston Opera House.

* * *

How fortunate it is for the moving picture industry that the clergymen who think as these reverend gentlemen think they think are few and far between! How fortunate it is for the millions of people who love to watch moving pictures that there are so few town authorities who can be "buffaloed" by a few impractical and misguided sky pilots!

* * *

Too bad that the Brookline clergymen have not cool heads and warm feet. A hot head and cold feet are not conducive to right thinking.

* * *

The Atlantic City Underwriters' Association have asked for the immediate enactment of laws looking to the erection of fireproof projection booths.

* * *

On Sunday, October 22, five theaters in Dallas, Texas, were closed. Under a new law, actors are held equally responsible with show managers. As a result, the performers refused to perform. The "movies" were the only shows doing business. The local authorities announce their intention of going after these.

* * *

Some of the New York National League players labored under the delusion that the National Commission was to receive $20,000 for the pictures of the series. It developed, however, that $3.500 was the amount received for the privilege; which is probably enough.

* * *

Hutchinson, Kan., has declared itself. Never more shall it be lawful "for any person or persons to exhibit or show within the corporate limits of Hutchinson any motion picture of prize fights, bull fights, train robberies or any other immoral or obscene pictures. To carry this ordinance into effect a board of censors has been created. Violators of the law may be fined up to $100 or sent to jail for thirty days—or may receive both punishments. The first swing of the new ax got "The James Boys."

* * *

The officers of the Los Angeles (Cal.) Censorship Board are composed of two women and one minister.

* * *

The Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court has declared unconstitutional the law requiring applicants for operators' licenses to have served a six months' apprenticeship. The decision has the merit, not necessarily usual, of having common sense on its side. The Legislature this year attempted to rectify this obvious inequity, but Governor Dix vetoed the bill.

* * *

The question was before the court on the application of Lewis Gibelman for a writ of mandamus to compel Commissioner Thompson, of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, to permit him to take an examination. Gibelman came here from Scranton, where he had operated a machine for three years, and asserted that the law is unconstitutional because it deprives him of his means of earning a livelihood without just cause.

* * *

Licensed operators of Atlanta motion picture shows are in an embarrassing position through the workings of the ordinance covering the operation of picture machines, and will probably ask council for relief.

The restrictions on the machines forbid operators to use "side-patched" films, under penalty of losing their license, but there is no ordinance preventing film manufacturers or agents from unloading patched films on the picture houses, and the operators say they must use what the proprietor hands them or lose their jobs.

"Side-patched" films, or films in which the cog-wheel holes have been torn out and replaced by patches, are dangerous, the patches tearing off and catching fire. A blaze in a Whitehall street theater Tuesday night is said to have been caused by such a film.

They are not found on the "first-runs" but only on "commercial" films several months old.

* * *

Trenton, N. J., is enforcing the law barring from picture shows unaccompanied children under sixteen.

* * *

Kinemacolor is introducing a novelty in its theater in New York City. By a new process of natural color photography, "still" photographs of the fleet recently assembled at New York are being displayed.

* * *

Under the auspices of the White Rats and the Associated Actresses, steps are being taken in Boston to establish a minimum wage scale. Employes of picture houses will be included. The scale established in Detroit and Chicago is $25.50. It is estimated that 350 actors play Boston each week, and it is said that many of these work for less than $25 a week. It is to be hoped all of them are worth more.

* * *

Policeman John Nelligan is a credit to the Chicago force. When a fire started in a barn in the rear of a picture show the policeman stepped into the theater and announced:

"Ladies and gentlemen, if you want to see one of the greatest fires in years go outside and look to the south, half a mile away. Don't knock over anyone, as there is plenty of time. Then you can come back."

There was no panic.

* * *

A tongue of flame curling up a side partition of a Harlem (New York) picture theater inspired a man in the audience to yell "Fire!" There was a panic, as might be expected. Men and women fell over each other in the rush to the street. Buckets of water extinguished the blaze before the firemen arrived. The crowd came back.

* * *

When an operator in a moving picture theater at Second and Main streets, Anoka, Minn., threw a blazing film out of the booth into the theater, very naturally there was a scramble by the 200 persons present. No one was injured, for which fortunate circumstance there would appear to be no credit due to the operator.

* * *

"Billie" Shafer, an operator in Huntington, W. Va., did nothing like the act described in the foregoing paragraph. Under similar circumstances he stuck to his post, and although severely burned, succeeded in putting out the fire before the flames spread to the building. In the meantime several people were seriously injured, in spite of the fact there were easy exits.

* * * *

Mayor Hanna, of Des Moines, Ia., is on the right track. The Mayor has been quietly investigating the picture and vaudeville houses in his town. He did not, in the first place, send a platoon of police for the Cornet Band; nor did he follow this with a public letter to the Federation of Women's Clubs, the Sons of Temperance and the W. C. T. U., urging them in the name of the city to attend a great mass meeting, the object of which should be the elimination of those things the people most earnestly craved. In the course of Mayor Hanna's tour he found material for the writing of a letter to a manager—just one letter to one manager. Instead of denouncing all managers and all houses, instead of tossing them all in one blanket and calling them all menaces to the city's morals, he put his finger on the spot needing attention; then he put his foot on it. This is what the Mayor said:

"While the act of which I am complaining was ridiculously funny in a large measure, in several places it grew suggestive, coarse and repulsive, and it was of such character that no conscientious parent or self-respecting girl or young man could think for a moment it was a proper act for any decent young man or woman to witness, let alone boys and girls."

* * * *

An executive of good intentions, who also is blessed with sound judgment, is a protection to the exhibitor who is seeking the right.

* * * *

The Pennsylvania Legislature this year passed a bill providing for the creation of two State censors, who were to issue a license for each individual film intended for display in the State. As the Solons failed to make provision for an appropriation to pay the salaries and expenses of the censors, the Governor declines to appoint.

Thus do censorship boards die a-borning.

* * * *

John C. Hemment, the famous photographer, has just returned to this country from a nine months' African trip with Paul Rainey. He has been operating a motion camera, intending to use the pictures for scientific purposes. If one of the experiences he describes may be taken as a criterion for others, there can be no question as to the entertaining qualities of the films.

Mr. Hemment has nerve. He showed that during the Spanish-American war. He also has modesty. He ascribes his return to his home country to the coolness and sure aim of Aaron Black, a mighty African hunter, who, on two occasions saved his life. Mr. Hemment, however, is entitled to share the honors for coolness. Hearken to this, ye film fans:

"One morning about 9 o'clock," said Hemment, "the natives had herded eighteen lions down the mountain side and had killed eight. I had carried my camera down within forty yards. A lioness whose two cubs had been killed, and who was slightly wounded, came towards me with great leaps. Black shouted warning and fired, sending a bullet between her shoulders. She kept on, but just as she sprang in the air, about five yards away, his second shot struck her in the head and she fell ten feet away from my machine. I think this is the most sensational picture ever taken.

"On another occasion a charging rhinoceros came at me and was shot three times by Black, who sent his bullets within a few inches of each other, all striking the neck, which is one of the few vital parts."

* * * *

The Rev. George J. Becker, the militant pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, of Montclair, N. J., in deference to the wishes of some of the older members of his congregation, announces that he will discontinue his programme of moving pictures on alternate Sunday evenings. The more conservative of his flock feel that the step is too radical an advance. The exhibitions on stated evenings of week-days will be continued, however. It may be unnecessary to relate that the younger members of Grace Church were in hearty accord with the pastor on the Sunday evening question. There is no ill-feeling over the issue.

OUR WESTERN CORRESPONDENT

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 8.—Some one in this city is going to win a five dollar gold piece. Who that lucky individual is no one as yet can say, and the reason the "fiver" is going to be given away is because George Walker and Sidney Nutt, who are building the new picture house here, are stuck for a name for their new theater, and they are willing to give a five dollar gold piece to the person who selects the name for the new home for motion photography.

George met me a few days ago on the street and asked me if I wanted to earn five dollars. I told him that I might consider it, provided what he wished done wouldn't get me before the grand jury, so he said:

"Give me a nice name for our new theater and the money is yours."

"Nothing doing—just yet," I told George.

"Well, I am going to let the public take a crack at it, if that's the case. Five dollars to the one who furnishes the name the judges we select decides on. Contest closes November 10, and the name must not contain more than eight letters."

The reason the limit is put on the letters, I think, is because of the big electric sign feature, although he did not intimate that to me, and the more letters, you know, the more "juice" is burned, and the more "juice" the greater the bill, and "juice" in this man's town is some high, believe me.

Already, George has received any number of replies to his offer, and the judges should have no trouble in getting a name that is novel and pleasing and will make the proper "flash" in the electrical display at night.

The new house will seat 600 persons. He has not as yet decided whether the price is to be five cents or a dime, but I think he will maintain the usual standard. Also, they are considering vaudeville, and are building the theater now, so that in case they want to put vaudeville on later they will have all the stage facilities necessary. I told George that if he is going to build a "real shop" to please consider the question of dressing rooms, and not reach the conclusion that so many managers have that the actors can dress any old place. I have played some houses in my time where dressing rooms were not known, and in others where a store box would have answered the same purpose, yet the other part of the theater was all to the good. Managers seem to think that it's a crime for men and women not to always wear their best wardrobe, even if they have to dress without any accommodation. Some years ago, while playing through the New England States, we had a night out and jumped into a little Vermont town. The manager showed us one large room, where, he said, the "show folks got ready in." I asked him where the ladies dressed.

"Why, ye all dress in this room," he said.

"What, the ladies and the gentlemen dress together?" I asked.

"Why, certainly," he said. "Ye be show folks, and it don't make no difference with them kind, does it? What's the matter, don't ye speak to one another?"

It cost that gentleman something to build a partition in that room before the show went on that night.

Scenic Closes

There is one less theater in Hot Springs since my last letter. The lease on the Scenic Theater ran out and the management was unable to renew the same. The Scenic was located in the upper Central avenue section, near the big Arlington Hotel, and in the Ohio Club building, and was considered one of the prettiest and most comfortable in the city. Manager Morrison has not stated whether he will secure another location or not, but it would cause no surprise to see him get back in the game. He is very popular in Hot Springs and is recognized as one of its most progressive and valuable citizens. Morrison, also, is some "scrapper," especially when it comes to being made the recipient of trust dictation. He was the only man in the city, who, when running license pictures, dared take a chance and use the Imp series of "Hot Springs Views," and he was informed that if he did he could expect official notification that he was "canned" from the good graces of the "General." What he said on getting this information is not fit for publication, but the fact remains that he ran the Independent reel and HE WASN'T CANNED, EITHER. Get that? Why? Oh, well, perhaps the "General" needed the "two per."

Enter "Robert, the Bold"

While seated in the photo play one day this week with my better half at my side, a gentleman took the seat be-

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

SHAMROCK FILM

Scenes from

"A GYPSY'S LOVE"

Will Be Released at an Early Date
WATCH FOR OUR ANNOUNCEMENT

Following which in order named will be

"HOW HE WON HER"
HIGH CLASS COMEDY

"ON THE VERGE"
TENSE PROBLEM DRAMA

"A PETTICOAT RANCH BOSS"
BREEZY WESTERN COMEDY

"WHITE FAWN"
ROMANTIC INDIAN STORY

And TEN OTHERS Ready to Announce

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO., St. Louis, U. S. A.

GREAT INDEPENDENT VICTORY

REFERRING to the past two issues of the News, in which we first announced a letter from Mr. L. Gaumont, and following that, the announcement we made last week regarding the great Independent victory, we want to supplement to-day some idea of what the Gaumont people have in view, and so that we could give this to our readers first hand, we asked Mr. Herbert Blache to tell us the plans they were going to adopt. We first asked Mr. Blache to outline the policy in general, of their methods of release, and when the Independents could expect to see these Gaumont films on the Independent market.

Mr. Blache replied, "The first release will be during the first few days following the 15th of January. A large quantity of samples are now on their way from Paris, and these will be in due course exhibited in advance to the various Independent exchanges. They will include a considerable number of feature films of two reels, or more, in length, amongst the first will be a magnificent picture of the Delhi Durbar, that is, the crowning of King George IV. of England, Emperor of India, which takes place at Delhi on December 10th. This ceremony is of the greatest splendor. All the princes of India, numbering over two hundred, with their followers, accompanied by one thousand elephants in their gorgeous trappings of gold and precious stones, will be present; this picture will therefore far outshine the Coronation film both in topical and general interest, instructiveness and splendor. One release every week will be entirely of the hand-colored variety, for which the Gaumont Company has such a great reputation, and there will also be included the Gaumont Graphic, the weekly moving picture newspaper with which the Gaumont people have had very great success in Europe. Owing to their having branches in all parts of the world, they have obtained the utmost variety of subjects in this newspaper film, which will include such items of interest as the progress of the war of Tripoli, the revolution in China, etc."

We asked Mr. Blache if it was his intention, or the intention of the company, to make an American film to go with these timely topics. "Yes, this will include the views of various scenes taken in the United States so that it will become of universal interest to the public." We also asked the question, if they were going to make American subjects in addition to what they were already doing. He replied, this question can not be answered definitely at present, as they were undecided as to their plans of future American releases. Asking information as to the distribution of films, we understand they will be sold through the Gaumont Company of Flushing, which company has the exclusive sale rights to the United States for the French Company.

Does not the above statement bear out what we said regarding the great Independent victory? We can assure our readers that any fresh developments that are of interest to them will be given in the columns of the News. In conclusion we may say that Mr. Gaumont during his stay in America made arrangements to his full and complete satisfaction, and has returned to Paris on the Lusitania, sailing November 8th from New York. We wish him bon voyage and success.

REPUBLIC FILM CO.

Men of splendid record in the theatrical and moving picture business make up the producing staff of the Republic Film Company.

* * * *

T. Hayes Hunter is one of the latest theatrical producers to enter the moving picture field. Mr. Hunter has been connected with Belasco, Klaw & Erlanger, Cohen & Harris and the Shuberts. His dramatic ability is shown in his recent successes: "The Sign of the Rose," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "The Aviator."

E. H. Curtis F. McGlynn Wm. Davis T. Hayes Hunter

THE FORMIDABLE PRODUCING FORCE OF THE "GET A REP" FILMS

* * * *

F. McGlynn is one of the new school producers. His successful productions with the Edison Company, viz: "Mid the Cannon's Roar," "Sandy's Substitute," "The Big Scoop," "Ononka's Vow," and many others, classes him as one of the best producers of heroic pictures.

* * * *

E. H. Curtis is another one to desert the ranks of stage productions in favor of moving pictures. Mr. Curtis has had over fifteen years' experience as stage director.

* * * *

William Davis, although one of the youngest producers, has made a splendid record for himself with the Yankee Film Company, for whom he directed many successful productions. "The Star Reporter," "Man," "Woman," "Retaliation" and "Power of Devotion" are among the many pictures produced by Mr. Davis which have won popular approval.

* * * *

The New York State Boxing Commission will prohibit the filming of any boxing contests held in this State. 'Tis well. Boxing is one thing. Most emphatically pictures are of a thing apart. Pictures without the assistance of boxing are getting along first rate, thank you. If boxing cannot exist on its own legs, then let it cease to exist. Healthy it may be of itself, but to the moving picture industry it can bring no real, enduring benefit. Joining the two factors would simply mean furnishing the irreconciliables with a tangible club with which to bang an industry that with profit may be spared the blows of its enemies.

OUR MUSIC COLUMN
By C. W. Long

A. B. D., Tusla, writes:—"I know I should not write you for information as to how to play for the 'trust' pictures, but I have been reading your hints on picture playing, and they are all so practical that I am taking the liberty of asking you how and what to play for Vitagraph's 'One Flag at Last,' which we are to have soon, etc."

Answer.—We are indeed glad to have you write us for the information desired, and we will say for your information that we are not against the trust pictures, so far as the pictures are concerned, only the manner and method that "Gen Flimco" has of doing business. The following is only a suggestion as to what could be played for "One Flag at Last":

1. At title, "War time in the South"—"Dixie," until
2. "Fred leaves to join his regiment"—one or two trumpet calls, then fife and drum playing "The Girl I Left Behind Me," as soldiers pass, until
3. "Captain Jack Meyers has escaped from a Southern prison," Valse Anto until
4. "Betty hears her brother Fred is a prisoner in the North." "In a Prison Cell I Sit" until
5. "Betty finds an enemy," "Love's Awakening," until
6. "I want you to go to the cave," "Old Black Joe" until Betty starts throwing things out of the window, then segue "You Tell Me Your Dream" until Mose enters cave, then waltz until Betty enters cave, then "Forgotten" until
7. "Bad news," "My Old Kentucky Home," until
8. "Betty sends the news," segue until Mose leaves the cave, then segue "Marching Thro' Georgia" until
9. "You coward, I'll go myself," waltz until, "Betty delivered the note to Gen. Sherman," then "There's No North or South To-day," until Betty and soldiers enter the cave, then the chorus of "Can't You See I Love You" until
10. "Back in the North, out of gratitude Jack tries to save Betty's brother," "America," until
11. "Freed," "I Want to Live and Die in Dixie," till
12. "Jack sends his picture to Betty," then "Forgotten" till
13. "Home," "Home, Sweet Home," segue "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," until
14. "After the war—memories," chorus of "All That I Ask Is Love" and "You Are the Ideal of My Dreams" till
15. "One Flag at Last." "You're a Grand Old Flag," then segue "Annie Laurie" until finish.

Alabama writes:—"I seem to have a great deal of trouble with the pictures, but playing for a comedy bothers me the most. At times there seems to be absolutely nothing to work up, and as I don't like to play ragtime all of the time, can you offer me any suggestions?"

Answer.—I could hardly offer any practical suggestions unless I could see the picture and had a chance to study it, for you know yourself that one cannot remember a picture even that he has played well enough to lay out a good practical synopsis for another's guidance. There are many little musical numbers published that would serve well to break the monotony of ragtime with such as "The Mouse and the Clock," "A Donkey Laugh," "Jumping Jack's Jubilee," "Frog Puddles," "Bugville Parade," all of which could be used to advantage at times.

C. E. J. writes:—"I am the drummer in the Star Theater here, and I have read the Moving Picture News with much interest, especially the music department. We have the finest theater in town, and our pictures are as good as you will find anywhere, but I have had a little difference with my employer as to how certain effects should be worked, and we have both agreed to write to you and to abide by your decision in the matter. Our difficulty is this—in a picture where a man uses field glasses or a telescope and brings the object he is looking at close up, such as horses running, etc., the manager maintains I should use the effects so as not to allow interest in the picture to lag, and I say it should not be done—which of us is right?"

Answer.—There can be only one answer to the question, and that is that you are correct in the matter; it would be just as plausible to suppose that if there was a battle going on and a party was to hear the noise through a telephone that you would keep your effects of the battle going while the only thing in sight would be the party and the phone—the instances are the same. Your manager may mean all right, only he has not used his reasoning power quite as much as he should.

We are very glad to know that our music column is being appreciated. "Music hath charms" when appropriately applied to the pictures. Noise is not music, sound is not sense. Music is always acceptable, and the mere fact that the musicians of moving picture shows are willing to delve into the subject and to inquire and try to improve their knowledge by asking for suggestions, whereby they can improve the atmosphere of the picture, only goes to show that there is a great movement going on among the picture show musicians which will eventually result in a great improvement in the musical part of the photoplay.

I have just recently taken up the matter of special music for the better class of film with the different manufacturers, and a few have in a half-hearted way been in favor of it. Why must such beautiful pictures as "Romeo and Juliet," "The Human Sacrifice," etc., be ruined nine times out of ten for the simple fact that the manufacturers are too indifferent in regard to the music rendered for such pictures. One of the leading manufacturers wrote that special music was not necessary as the different pianists were able to handle it.

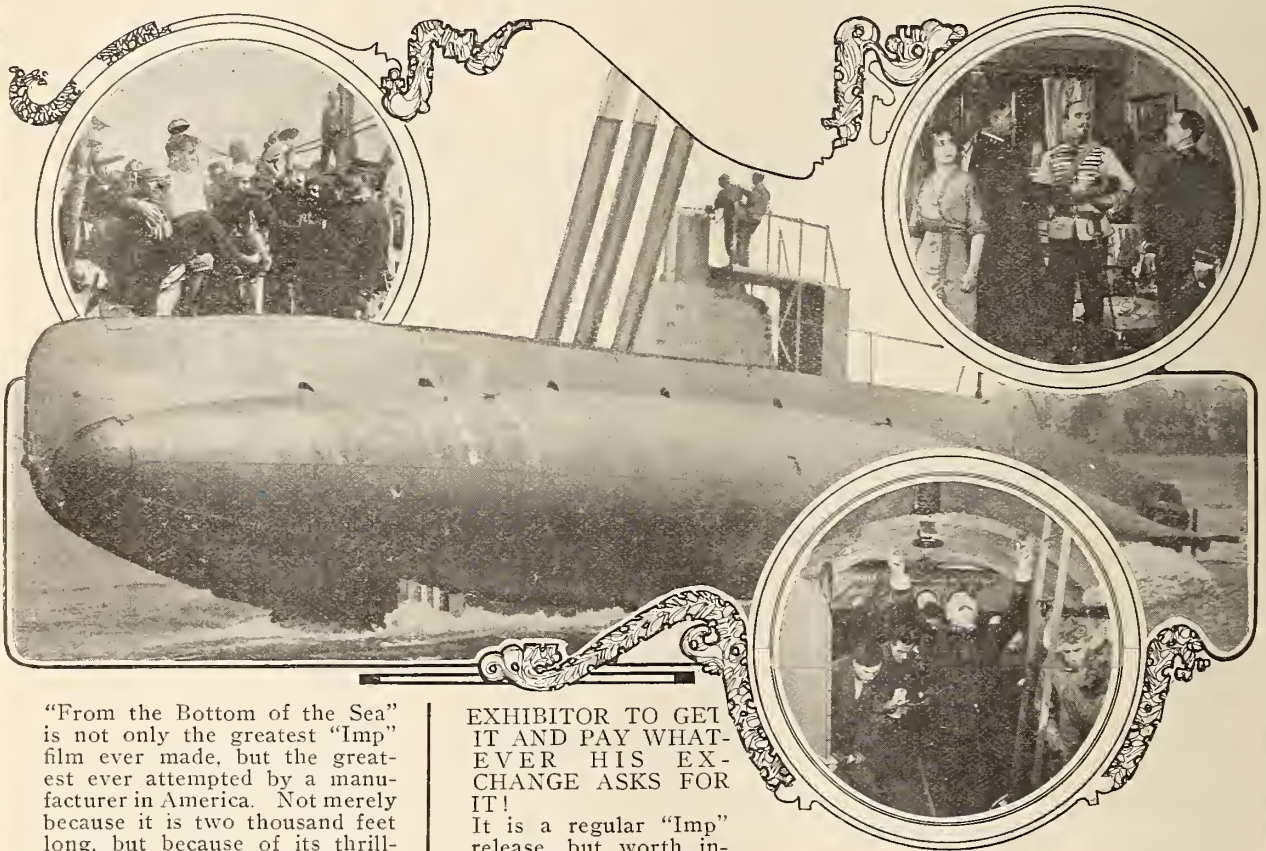
How much better it is to issue special music and to fit each and every scene and make the audience feel the atmosphere of the picture just as Pathe Freres did for their production of "Faust,"—do the Independent manufacturers mean to concede the fact that they are not as wide awake to the needs of the pictures as are the licensed manufacturers. It is not our object to try and tell them what they should or should not do, but the sooner they wake up to the fact and realize that special music to the better classes of pictures is an absolute necessity, just that soon will the special productions be appreciated to the extent that they are entitled, and no sooner. Every attempt made to reproduce a great subject is the herald of something better yet to come, and why is it not possible to better the better things with better music. It is entirely up to the manufacturers. It is true, where the picture is shown in a city where the musician has several large music stores to draw on for music he has a slight advantage over the musician who is not so fortunate, but even then it is not what it should be; for instance, the usual order of the manager to the musician is "play to the pictures"—all well and good. The change day comes and I will relate how "The Human Sacrifice" in one particular spot was played for. It has taken weeks of preparation and hours of thought previous to the actual final taking of the picture. One can plainly picture the poor brain-fagged director, pouring over the piles of books containing the lives, customs, etc., of the early Egyptians; delving into books, mythology, conceiving designs for costumes, etc., not to mention the vast amount of money spent to put out such a splendid production. The story runs along these lines:—The Egyptians are clamoring for water, and the overflow of the Nile. Prayer is offered; the image of the goddess Isis is carried through the streets. After conferences in the temple it is decided to tell the people that Isis has demanded as a sacrifice the most beautiful maiden of the land; the virgins are all called together, from amongst whom is chosen the beautiful Amebi (now look out, here is where the music in question comes in). The beautiful maiden and her lover, Rameses, are separated and Amebi is thrown into the Nile a sa sacrifice to appease the god's wrath—and while this last portion of the picture was going on there was "Maggie Flathead" at the piano grinding out "Oceana Roll." Ye gods and little fishes, for the love of Mike wake up to the fact that all of the musicians over the country are not as versatile as some, and that special music can be issued at such a very small expense compared with the fact of the good it will do toward the betterment of the picture, for the proper music to a picture is just as important as the accompaniment to a singer. Without the proper music the atmosphere is lacking, one of its most important constituents. To properly play the correct music for a picture is a very difficult task. The musician must become absorbed in the color which he is creating around the picture. The position, on account of the versatility of the subject, requires an intelligent musician who has the temperament to feel each and every emotion that is depicted in each and every picture, from the ridiculous to the sublime, and in many cases the management cannot secure a musician who has all of the requirements necessary to properly play for the pictures or the experience to properly interpret each and every picture, so it is plain to be seen how easy it would be to overcome some of this if the producers would only open their eyes long enough and wide enough to see the absolute necessity of special music for every classic picture that is produced. There is an inborn taste in every one in regard to suitable music. The field is an endless chain and the position a thankless one. The music as an art is swallowed at one gulp—and can you be surprised as to the cause of the lack of interest among

Released Monday, Nov. 20th

"FROM the BOTTOM of the SEA"

Copyright 1911, by I. M. P. Co.

United States Government Helps the "Imp" Produce a Mighty 2000-foot Educational Drama



"From the Bottom of the Sea" is not only the greatest "Imp" film ever made, but the greatest ever attempted by a manufacturer in America. Not merely because it is two thousand feet long, but because of its thrilling plot, its masterly handling and its inestimable educational value. WE ADVISE EVERY EXHIBITOR TO GET IT AND PAY WHATEVER HIS EXCHANGE ASKS FOR IT!

It is a regular "Imp" release, but worth infinitely more than many so-called "features." Don't be satisfied with a short booking. Repeat it and jam your house time after time! The plot deals with the treacherous sinking of a United States submarine torpedo boat. A young officer volunteers to save the crew by letting himself be shot through the torpedo tube while the boat is at the bottom of the sea. ALL THIS YOU SEE—and more. There's a love story weaving in and out to add to the heart interest. You see the submarine sink, rise and sink. You see the rescue and all the details just as though you were on the boat. Nothing like it has ever been attempted in moving pictures. GET IT AT ANY COST AND ANY EFFORT! Released Monday, November 20. Two thousand feet long. SPECIAL POSTERS in keeping with the special nature of the film. Mark our word, "From the Bottom of the Sea" opens a new era in moving pictures made in America. You'll agree the instant you see the film. GET BUSY!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP OF AMERICA

Imp. Films Co.
102 W. 101st Street, New York.
Carl Laemmle, Pres.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

The "IMP'S" Splendid Thanksgiving Release

"Executive Clemency"

(Copyright, 1911, by I. M. P. Co.)

King Baggott takes the leading rôle in our Thanksgiving film, to be released Thursday, November 23d. Not only is it one of the strongest stories we have ever been fortunate enough to secure, but it has a happy ending in keeping with the holiday spirit of the occasion. The remarkable scenes in the prison yard, the exciting escape, the governor's pardon and the Thanksgiving dinner scene at the finale are all indescribably good. We told you Imp quality would be better than ever. AND WE'RE MAKING GOOD!

Watch! Wait! Listen!

More news about "THREE IMPS A WEEK" to come in our next announcement. We'll tell you about "A-SPLIT-IMP-EVERY-SATURDAY" and some other things of interest to every moving picture man. Don't forget to send us suggestions for novelty split reels. Tell us what your people want and WE'LL GET IT!

Imp Films Co.
102 West 101st Street, New York.
Carl Laemmle, Pres.

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP OF AMERICA

some of the musicians. Other fields offer far more recompense. Is it right or justice to bill and adveritse the pictures and the vocalist and forget the musician? The latter sits where he cannot be seen and is unknown. Musicians ask for and need all of the glory they can acquire. What would the vocalist sound like if it were not for the musician who sits enshrouded in the pit; would not the song be a great drawing card without the harmony and accompaniment necessary to the singer. Musicians ask for glory just the same as other artists—they are not in the business for the coin of the realm. Good pianos, good lights, a warm pit when it's cold, and a cool one when it's hot and a little publicity at times means something. If you are wise, Mr. Manager, try it and see if the effect on the musician doesn't stimulate him (or her) to better efforts—try it once, the cost is trivial to the result you will obtain. Remember, musicians are human just the same as you.

SAY MOTION PICTURE CENSORSHIP IS LAX

Board Which Passes on Films Paid by Manufacturers, Women Investigators Declare—Want Municipal Censors—Board's Verdict on Objectionable Films Cannot Be Enforced—Secretary Storey Denies the Charge

The New York Times says:

Declaring that moving picture films are by no means all censored by the National Board of Censorship, that suggestions for the elimination of objectionable films are not always obeyed, and cannot be enforced, and, finally, that the secretaries of the Board of Censors are paid in part, at least, by the very corporation whose products they must pass, the Motion Picture Committee of the Woman's Municipal League has recommended that the league withdraw from membership and representation in the board.

The report of the Woman's League committee, written by its chairman, Mrs. Gilbert H. Montague, is a severe criticism of what it describes as the inefficiency of the Censorship Board, and says the time has come when a board, which is not subsidized by the film manufacturers, should be named to pass on the films to be exhibited in this city, one which can require the manufacturers to destroy the films which it condemns.

The charge that the Motion Picture Patents Company, usually called the Film Trust, through its treasurer, J. J. Kennedy, does contribute to the support of the Censorship Board, is now admitted and defended by the secretaries of that body, whose salaries are in part paid from that contribution, according to Mrs. Montague's report, but it was learned yesterday that there was a time when earnest efforts were made to keep this connection between the censors and the film-makers a secret.

Gilbert H. Montague, a lawyer of 55 Liberty street, who has been counsel for the Woman's League, has in his possession a letter signed by the late Charles Sprague Smith, then secretary of the People's Institute, which was instrumental in the organization of the Censorship Board, in which he not only admitted the fact of contributions from the film manufacturers, and advised that that fact should be kept secret, but intimated that the soft pedal should be used in reviewing films for use in this city. After describing the failure of another organization to censor the films, Mr. Smith wrote:

> Speedily thereafter at an interview held by Mr. Collier, John Collier, now secretary of the Censorship Board, and myself, with representatives of the manufacturers, an agreement was entered into whereby the People's Institute, on the one side, promised to reorganize the work, placing behind it a body of men who would command the confidence of the entire country, and the manufacturers, on their part, agreed to submit for a period their films to our censorship, and also to contribute to the institute for this purpose a definite sum, the fact of the contribution, however, to be kept secret.

In the same letter Mr. Smith intimated that the censors had better not deal harshly with the manufacturers, or the arrangement would fall through. This is his language:

> But this very relationship to the manufacturers limits in the nature of things the action of the Board of Censors within the local field. We cannot play the part of police and prosecutor and still maintain our cordial, cooperative relations with the manufacturers.
>
> That lies with the very nature of trade relations. Just so soon as the Censorship Board, as such, or individual members of the board proceed to police and prosecute, just so soon complaints will go up from showmen to manufacturers, and in self-defence they will be compelled to abrogate the censorship. This condition has been recognized clearly by those who are in the most responsible active relations in the work, and has been affirmed in so many words by Mr. Kennedy, as representative of the manufacturers.

This Mr. Kennedy was then, and still is, treasurer of the Motion Picture Patents Company, and in his name the money for the Censorship Board is given. Mrs. Montague finds that between June 8, 1909, and April 1, 1911, Mr. Kennedy gave the board $9,900, and she adds:

> Throughout this period this has been the only contribution for the expenses of the board and for the salaries of its paid secretaries for their services to the board, excepting that the People's Institute has contributed part of the time of several of its staff for administrative service to the board. What are the practical results? We find that:
>
> 1. Not all films come before the National Board of Censorship.
>
> (a) The "special release" films, which are not submitted to censorship, and which, it is insisted, comprise only travels, historical, and Biblical pictures, or prizefights, are pretty generally understood to include a number of other subjects which should be amenable to censorship.
>
> (b) While imported films normally come before the board through their authorized New York agents, it appears there is nothing to prevent an exhibitor from privately importing films, objectionable or otherwise, which he may wish to show.
>
> (c) As the agreement between the board and the manufacturers is purely oral, and not legally enforcible, nothing prevents a manufacturer from submitting some, but not all, of his films or withdrawing at any time when he dislikes the rulings of the board. Such a case recently occurred.
>
> 2. Not all censored films are amended before being shown in public.
>
> Owing perhaps to the fact that films are often advertised in trade journals before being censored and that trouble and expense are involved in cutting out objectionable parts of films, the decisions of the boards are not always carried out, since the films are often not seen again by the committee after correction. One of the secretaries is, in fact, supposed to keep track of the films when released, but this is an almost hopeless task, particularly in a city like New York. A certain film, very properly censored last season, was subsequently shown in its original form in several places.
>
> 3. Catering to trade interests is a constant temptation to the board, which meets in rooms provided by the trade, whose expenses are chiefly met by the trade, and which is frequently reminded of the heavy loss entailed in case of adverse censoring. This makes lenient judgment easy.
>
> The situation just described confirms your committee in the feeling that the time has come for New York to have a censorship with authority. The magnitude of the task confronting any board trying to be National in its scope is one outside the capability of any voluntary and informal committee. The fact that whenever the other members happen to be absent, and generally throughout the summer months the paid secretaries, whose salaries are paid in the manner above described, are compelled to do the censoring, is in itself enough to condemn the present arrangement. Moreover, no oral agreement is adequate in any manner involving such moral interests as the motion picture business at the present time.

Replying to Mrs. Montague's report yesterday Walter Storey, general secretary of the Censorship Board, characterized all the charges contained therein as either false or misrepresentations.

"The report of the Woman's Municipal League," said he, "greatly misrepresents the work and status of the National Board of Censorship. Taking up their statements specifically, let me say:

"Their report gives the impression of unknown numbers of 'special release' pictures being put upon the market without being censored. As a matter of fact, in addition to over 4,500 regular films viewed by the board during the last eighteen months, there have been three or four 'special release' films issued, most of them being submitted to the board. Such pictures do not get into the small show houses with which the board is mainly concerned, but are generally shown in regular theaters.

"As the motion picture amusement at large is greatly benefited by the work of the censorship, there seems no sensible reason why the manufacturers should not be allowed to contribute toward the clerical and office expenses. The censoring of the pictures is done by the members of the board, who volunteer their time to this work, receiving no compensation, the two secretaries, who have no vote, alone being paid.

"In regard to a municipal censorship, the board has at no time opposed such a plan. It should be remembered that the work the board is doing is national in its scope and could not be legally constituted except by an act of Congress, which action is hardly possible. The board would heartily co-operate with any municipal censorship that would be appointed."

MOVING PICTURES OF THE RAISING OF THE BATTLESHIP "MAINE"

On Wednesday, November 8th, an exhibition of Mr. Jack Read's, Jr., moving pictures of the raising of the "Maine" was given for the benefit of the Maine Memorial Committee at Hammerstein's Victoria Theater. These pictures are a wonderful study in modern engineering. It is an impressive sight to see the stately vessel which has been submerged for thirteen years rising again to view, covered with barnacles and sea-weed. There is shown the scene of the pumping out of 750,000 cubic feet of water inside the cofferdam, the port hole of the officer's cabins which are still open, and the barnacle covered upper deck and hull. When the cofferdam, composed of twenty steel caissons, each fifty feet in diameter and driven seventy-two feet in the water and mud of the harbor, was found to be weakening under the terrific pressure of the water, it was found necessary to strengthen these caissons by banking against them from the inside more than 70,000 tons of crushed rock. This is also shown in the moving picture.

The work of raising the "Maine" was begun December 1, 1910, for the purpose—first of removing dangerous obstruction of the harbor of Havana, also to determine the cause of the calamity which even at this moment is still a mystery, and also to give proper burial to the dead heroes whose bones had known no other resting place for the last thirteen years except the interior of this ill-fated battleship. Mr. Read was in New York at the time this work began, and it occurred to him that it would make a picture of wonderful interest to the American public and also serve as a record of this daring feat of engineering for the archives of the U. S. Government. He then went to Havana and took the matter up of securing a special permit from the Government to do this work under their auspices. This permission was granted nim by the Department of War of the U. S. Government through Capt. H. B. Ferguson, the chief engineer in charge of the work.

Mr. Read will turn over to the War Department two complete records and copies of his work. The pictures that he has secured have taken a period of eight months to secure, during all of which time he has had a camera operator stationed at Havana taking every important step in the work. "It was quite a serious sensation to be taking pictures on the deck of the "Maine," and looking some thirty feet above you over the edge of the cofferdam to see trans-Atlantic liners and other vessels passing over you," said Mr. Read. Mr. Read secured not only all the general views of the work, but took his moving picture camera inside Captain Sigsbee's cabin, taking pictures of the washstand, bathtub and general interior. The plumbing of the washstand, after thirteen years' submerging, was found to be in perfect condition with water running from the facets when turned on.

These pictures will be controlled by the Raising the Maine Film Company, 145 West Forty-fifth street, room 804, which company will sell exclusive State rights throughout the United States.

It is estimated that $250,000 more will be required to complete the work of raising the "Maine"—a work which was so shamefully neglected by our Government for such a period of years.

Grundy Center, Ia.—Boyd & Wesp are figuring on the erection of a new brick building here.

Clinton, Ia.—E. L. Rowland and Bruce Quick will erect a new moving picture theater at 1008 South Fourth street.

FREE TO MANAGERS AND OPERATORS ONLY
100 Pointers on Machine Head Adjusting, Repairing, Etc.
Intermittent Sprockets for one week on trial
LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS
2940 Herndon Street CHICAGO

SPECIAL NOTICE
NON-BREAKABLE
Lantern Slides

ANNOUNCEMENT
ADVERTISING
LECTURE
MICROSCOPIC
NATURAL HISTORY

We make slides of all kinds
SLIDES
Artistic and beautifully colored

Don't be faked by would-be Original Inventors who claim, and are trying to manufacture, non-breakable slides.

SEND FOR CATALOG.

MICA NON-BREAKABLE SLIDE CO.
2737 N. Croskey St. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Art of Scenario Writing

By Wm. Lord Wright

Endorsed by the best scenario editors in the trade

$1.00 each

A year's subscription to MOVING PICTURE NEWS including this valuable book for $2.00 :: :: ::

Only a few on hand
First come, first served

side me and spoke most pleasantly. I turned and was mightily pleased to see Robert L. Young, of Columbus, my old "Boss." To state that I was truly "de-light-ed" would be putting it mildly, indeed, and my joy was equally shared by "The Lady in the Baths," too. It hasn't been so long that we have forgotten our administration at the pretty Princess Theater, Columbus, Ohio. I speak of him as "Robert, the Bold," for the reason that there wasn't anything in the amusement line that Mr. Young was afraid to take a try at. Money was no object, and without doubt he possesses the most artistic taste where pretty decorations, novel effects, exquisite stage settings and the acme of refinement and courtesy are concerned of any man I have ever been associated with. His theater in Columbus was a picture of beauty, inside and out. His partner in the theatrical game is Proctor Sease, of Cleveland, O., who, like Mr. Young, believes in getting the best at all times. Mr. Sease at present has the Priscilla with Mr. Young, and from Cleveland visitors here I hear it is the prettiest and most successful theater in that city. They are "live wires," both of them, and deserve the great success they have attained.

While here, Mr. Young offered to buy the Lyceum, but Eddie Gavrel declined to sell. Neither would Eddie part with half interest. This did not stop the Columbus promoter, however, and he made a quiet little investigation of his own, which may bring forth some important news later.

The Shows

The theatrical event of the week was "Alma, Where Do You Live?" and it was a great show. The audience at the Auditorium appreciated every moment of the play. The Auditorium, under the management of Fred Pernell, promises to experience one of the most successful seasons of its history. The theater has been beautifully decorated, and Mr. Pernell is one of the most popular and progressive men who ever handled the theatrical reins in the city. He's the kind of a man who never overlooks a bet, and is on the job every minute of the day. He has announced a list of shows that include many of the big New York successes and each succeeding attraction is playing to excellent business. Nat Goodwin was here the past week in "The Captain," and society turned out to do the much married star due honors. The play and "Nat" made a big hit.

Good Pictures

I didn't get a squint at many pictures during the week, but what I did see I enjoyed immensely. Ambrosio's reel, "Salambo," seemed to meet with popular favor, and American gave us a scenic beauty in "The Caves of La Jolla." "Mutt and Jeff in the Opera Company" was, as usual, a knockout, and Bison came across with its usual thriller in "A Race for a Bride." Thanhouser sent us "David Copperfield," which, believe me, packed the photo play and received the honors of the week, and Biograph told a very pretty story in "Love In the Hills," staging this production with all their usual care as to details. Edison, see that we get your "Reform Candidate," for we have nothing but reformation here now, with a reform sheriff and a reform prosecuting attorney, and this reel is awaited with much interest. Gaumont, I congratulate you on going Independent, and your reel, on "Monaco" was a scenic treat. Pathe's picture, "Logging and Milling in Sweden," was very interesting and the Vitagraph monthly was also a delight, as was their "Lady Godiva," which drew a packed house at the Lyceum.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

PRESTO

Poster frames, the best poster frame made, $1.75 each in quantities up to five. Six or more $1.50 each, cash with order.

ELECTRA Pink Label Carbons 5/8 x 6 soft cored, $2.00 per 100. $19.00 per 1,000, cash with order.

Swaab Film Service Co.

Pioneer Film Exchange

129 N. EIGHTH STREET PHILADELPHIA

Power's and Motiograph Machines

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

The Virginia gave its patrons another glimpse into the classic recently in the presentation of "Hamlet." From the posters in the lobby of a skull, under which was the line, "Alas, poor Yorrick!" and of a ghost, those unfamiliar with the Shakespearian play might have taken "Hamlet" to be something on the melodramatic order.

* * * *

The Empress, which makes a weekly showing of a Rex picture, does considerable to popularize this particular manufacture by posters and announcements. By an unusually large poster, Manager Notes succeeded in interesting the public in the reel of Pheasant Life, which was both educational and interesting.

* * * *

Dora Thorne had a successful run at the Alhambra. Manager Airey is still keeping abreast of the times in promoting his proposed slide service, and shortly we shall expect to see the product in our local houses. Mr. Airey is using a special light of his own design in his machine. This possesses both the property of brilliancy over other lights, as well as an extraordinary brightness on the screen that is not affected by the illumination of the hall. "Are you going to let the other houses have the privilege of this discovery?" I asked.

"If they can do the same, let them do it," he answered simply.

"You can patent it and make something off it," I urged.

"To improve my own house and assist my patrons is my chief aim. That's profit enough for me. The public has come to discover that the Alhambra has things different."

* * * *

Stanley James, stage director of the Feature Film Co., has taken very seriously to aeroplaning. He is a frequent visitor at the Government station at College Park, where he will shortly receive his pilot license. It is expected that he will be instrumental in taking some motion pictures of the surrounding country from an aeroplane. This will demonstrate what use can be made of such a view in time of war. There is a movement afoot to take the interior of one of our Government forts near Washington for this same purpose. For a while such work will be experimental, but its practical use is sure to come.

* * * *

An exceptionally good series of motion pictures were obtained recently in Washington of the working of a monster for cutting the asphalt, preparatory to making excavations for the laying of pipes for various purposes. The demonstration was made for the city's officials at the time the film was secured. Several long, even slits in the streets show the use of such a machine, while it is claimed that it will do away with a large part of the laborers now necessary for street cleaning.

SURFACE OF ROAD AFTER AUTO DUST TEST, SHOWING ROUGHNESS AND MISPLACEMENT OF ROCK MATERIAL, NEAR WASHINGTON

* * * *

The popularity of the motion pictures at the various houses using vaudeville is increasing. The Cosmos gives an entire picture show between 5 and 7 o'clock, for which the public is willing to pay the matinee price of this house—ten cents. These are changed frequently. The Casino mingles photo-plays among its acts discriminately, making an entire change of bill twice a week, and using first runs. Though expensive, this is found advantageous. The Sunday afternoon and evening concerts at the Gaiety and the Academy inserts as many as five or six reels of scenic, top-

"The Mystery of the Maine"

A two-reel motion picture spectacle taken by special permission of the United States Government, and controlled exclusively for the United States and all foreign countries by the

RAISING-THE-MAINE FILM COMPANY

TO STATE

"REMEMBER THE MAINE"

RIGHT BUYERS!

We offer you this wonderful and awe-inspiring historical feature film, which reveals for the first time the mysteries surrounding this national calamity, and in which the interest of every man, woman and child in every city, town and hamlet of America, can well be imagined when we remember that famous slogan which rang throughout our land.

Aside from showing every important step in the work, scenes have been taken inside Capt. Sigsbie's cabin, showing his washstand (from the faucets of which the water still runs, the plumbing having been found in perfect condition after being thirteen years under the waters of Havana Harbor), and a washstand set of three pieces with the monogram of the Maine still visible on each piece, and many other views of wonderful interest.

WIRE OR WRITE ALL BIDS AT ONCE TO

RAISING-THE-MAINE FILM CO., 145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK CITY

ical and dramatic and comedy variety into their shows. The "gallery gods" at the Academy take the photoplays as serious affairs, applauding the hero and heroines for their deeds, and heartily laughing at the comedy. Even impressive scenery is given approval. It is real drama to them, and I often wish the real actors and actresses could hear some of this open praise. Even Chase's, our most expensive home of polite vaudeville, opens and closes its performances with a motion picture which is enjoyed as much as many of the acts. This is usually of an educational nature.

* * * *

The Metropolitan Quartette has been making a big hit at the Plaza during the past week, using ballad and ragtime selections. The reception that this group of men received at the Academy on Sunday last would have been envied by great celebrities.

* * * *

The championship baseball series has been drawing large crowds during its round at the various theaters. The David Copperfield reels have been well received.

* * * *

It is interesting to note that the various reels of the demonstration work of the United States Office of Good Roads

DUST TEST, 35 MILES AN HOUR, NEAR WASHINGTON

have been making a circuit in various parts of the country with the result that the part that the national government is playing in making better roads is being understood. It is also making the States look to their own highways and giving them ideas of improvements. The motion picture industry is doing a good work here, and the Selig company is the manufacturer. Other works of the Government will be filmed shortly.

* * *

Nat Braham, who has been giving an exhibition with trained fleas in this city, has a motion picture made of his performers by a local firm. The reel is said to be remarkable, and the tricks of the tiny creatures wonderful. This will enable Mr. Braham to exhibit the wonderful stunts of his fleas to a larger audience with a lecture of explanation.

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

CITY CUSTOMERS ARE ALL SATISFIED

NOW READY TO CATER TO OUT-OF-TOWN BUSINESS

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

LOOKING OVER THE FIELD

Mrs. George Rubenstein, assistant to Giles R. Warren, editor of the Lubin Manufacturing Company, is complimented in a recent issue of the Ohio State Journal, of Columbus, O. Mrs. Rubenstein was formerly Miss Lillian Spellman, of Columbus. A photograph of the lady is published with the account of her versatile work.

* * * *

The "Funny Fellow" of the Boston American, like Silas Wegg, drops into poetry while paying his respects to the "Moving Picture Craze." Following is his idea of the situation:

The moving-picture craze has spread like measles through the land, and every town and village has its own peculiar brand. The cities like the rural scenes, with pumpkins, corn and hay; the country wants the city scenes, the Bowery and Broadway.

The vivid views of "Western life" the small boy greets with glee are only meant for Eastern States and Eastern eyes to see. The Southern views of "darky life" the pictures claim to show would get a cool reception where the cotton blossoms grow.

The great, immortal Washington can nowadays be seen to cross a local Delaware with ice cakes painted green. Napoleon, too, is pictured on the field of Waterloo; the fields looks quite familiar with its peaceful Squantum hue.

The fiery steed Napoleon rides would not be known to-day as one that drew a milkman's cart for years along the way. But moving-picture scenes are set in most peculiar ways to fit the public's latest fad—the moving picture craze.

* * * *

The Cleveland, O., Sunday Leader devotes a page in each issue to the latest news of the moving picture field. We predict that all the leading newspapers of this country will be devoting a large amount of space to animated picture gossip before many moons. The critic of the moving picture play will have an equal standing with the theatrical critic and his department will be accorded equal position and prominence.

* * * *

Hysterical Canadians have been displaying some ridiculous and silly animosity toward the United States, although it was hoped on this side of the boundary line that when the reciprocity question was settled our cousins of the Dominion would compose themselves and permit us to forget the late unpleasantness. Apparently this is not to be. The brain storm is raging in one notable quarter.

Among its social organizations, the city of Ottawa rejoices in the possession of the Over-Seas Club. The suspicion just cannot be avoided that this high-sounding title has something to do with "half-seas over"; it is not clear what else the name could imply. The Over-Seas Club is in the throes of a valiant anti-American campaign. Sagely and impressively it announces that the Stars and Stripes should be eliminated from all moving pictures shown in Canada. Scenes supposed to have been taken from the Civil and Spanish-American wars should not be flashed upon Canadian screens until the Stars and Stripes are eliminated from the picture and the British Union Jack substituted. According to the Over-Seas Club, this should be done in order that the "Patriotism" of the Canadian youth shall not be contaminated. Just what the Union Jack has to do with historical playlets having the Spanish-American or Civil wars as backgrounds, is not divulged. Possibly the same action will be recommended in the Fall of Troy, the Crusaders and other historic films. Maybe the Over-Seas Club will next recommend some action by which the waters of Lake Erie can be shoved back from Canadian shores because they are "contaminated" by caressing the boundary line of Uncle Sam.

* * * *

The members of the Exhibitors' League of Ohio, at their meeting on November 1 in Columbus, expressed themselves as being favorable to limiting the five-cent performance to two reels of films and an illustrated song. No action was taken, but it was the sentiment that too long a performance is detrimental to the audience, as well as to the business. Objections were made against the large theaters and vaudeville houses becoming moving picture theaters in the summer months. A resolution to this effect was tabled. Officers elected for the ensuing year: President, M. A. Neff, Cincinnati; first vice-president, W. A. Pittis, Conneaut; second vice-president, J. W. Bloomenhall, Cincinnati; treasurer, Max Stearn, Columbus.

* * * *

Articles of incorporation have been filed under Ohio laws for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. The

MICHIGAN—OHIO—INDIANA—ILLINOIS—EXHIBITORS

LOOK

DAY LETTER

Form 2382

THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY
INCORPORATED

25,000 OFFICES IN AMERICA CABLE SERVICE TO ALL THE WORLD

THEO. N. VAIL, PRESIDENT BELVIDERE BROOKS, GENERAL MANAGER

RECEIVER'S No. TIME FILED CHECK

SEND the following DAY LETTER subject to the terms on back hereof which are hereby agreed to

Nov. 7, 1911.

Motion Pioture Dist. & Sales Co.,

111 East 14th St., New York, N.Y.

Hooray for the Independents. Hooray, Hooray, for the Cadillac Film Co., Have just taken from the trust four more first run down town Theatres, making six during the last three weeks, at an annual rental of about Forty-Thousand Dollars.

Increase our standing order commencing Week of Nov. 13th, to twenty-one reels as per schedule mailed today. This makes thirty-five independent reels per week coming into this city whereas seven months ago there were six. Out of seventeen down town theatres here twelve are independent. The wonderful improvement in the product of the Independent Manufacturers is responsible for this condition and to them is the credit due.

CADILLAC FILM COMPANY.
PHIL. GLEICHMAN. PRES.

THE ABOVE TELLS THE STORY

A 21 REEL EXCHANGE IN YOUR TERRITORY

BUYING THE CREAM OF THE INDEPENDENT OUTPUT

The quality of our service is proven by the rapid growth of our business.

Commercial business, April 10, 1911, buying 6 Reels—7 months later buying 21 REELS.

The only exchange between New York and Chicago buying this quantity.

We are prepared to supply several houses with service from one to thirty days old.

A trial will convince you that Cadillac Service means better selection of subjects, films in better condition, prompter shipments, more attention paid to details, in fact, better satisfaction all around. Give us a trial and see for yourself.

CADILLAC FILM COMPANY

92 GRISWOLD STREET DETROIT, MICHIGAN

EXTRAORDINARY

WE renovate any film and make it appear as good as new. Send sample, will give demonstration free of charge ::: :::

ORTHO FILM COMPANY, 40 East 12th Street, NEW YORK

incorporators are: M. A. Neff, Cincinnati; S. E. Morris, Cleveland; W. J. Sweeny, Chicago; Fred J. Harrington, Pittsburgh; C. M. Christensen, Cleveland. Fourteen State organizations are at present affiliated.

* * * *

M. A. Neff, of Cincinnati, president of the Ohio Exhibitors' League, is the chairman of the executive committee of the Abraham Lincoln Independent party of his home city.

* * * *

Superintendent John Davisson, of Lima, Ohio, has gone on record as being opposed to the use of moving picture films in the public schools as an aid to teaching the children. In a signed interview he says they might be interesting in connection with history and geography, but he is inclined to think that the cultivation of the habits of sitting still and being amused by moving pictures is a bad thing for the pupils. Davisson's assertion was brought forth by the recent energy displayed by a New York newspaper of the theatrical type. The superintendent has been given considerable newspaper space throughout the Central States in consequence. Opponents to everything good or bad in picturedom have seized upon the item with avidity. Newspaper enterprise is to be commended, but in this particular case it is doubtful if the end justified the means. A large number of comparatively obscure pedagogues and others have been given a fine opportunity to air their opinions. The comments, when detrimental, have been heralded far and wide by the enemies of the cinematograph.

* * * *

Dr. William M. Davidson, the new superintendent of the Washington, D. C., public schools is to install moving picture machines in several of the schools having large assembly halls, as an adjunct to education. This fact is not given the publicity, however, accorded to the sentiments of the superintendent of schools in a town of about 20,000 people.

* * * *

The following bit of fun appeared recently in the Chicago Record-Herald:

(Orders have been issued in Toronto forbidding the exhibition of the United States flag in moving pictures.)

Oh, say, can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?
Are the broad stripes still there, are the bright stars all right.
Despite the bad dreams the Canucks have been dreaming?
Is our flag waving where whiffs of frost-laden air
Are blown from Canadian woods—does it dare?
Oh, say, does our Star Spangled Banner yet float
In spite of Toronto's conservative vote?

Oh, say, what a flood would spread over our land
If streams that flow north from within our own borders,
No longer might wet a Canadian strand
Without running foul of Canadian orders!
What a shame it would seem if each pure tinkling stream
Were dammed to let Canada peacefully dream,

—William Lord Wright.

THIS CAT HAS TWO TALES

On November 2d, the Rex Motion Picture Masterpiece Company released "The Tale of a Cat." This doesn't mean, however, that the picture was in any way related to sausage. It was a pleasant yet pathetic tale of pride and poverty, of wealth and woe, of a poor, blind little girl and a wealthy little boy who quarrel over the ownership of a cat. It preached the moral that even a thing as scruffy and unimportant in the cosmic scheme of things as a cat may be the agent Providence selects to secure his ultimate purpose, and bring peace and content that before were not.

While the picture was being taken, an unusual difficulty arose which made it look for a while as though the picture never would be finished. It was a calamity dire enough to cause the strongest lip to tremble. Marsalane, the feline actress who played the title rôle in the release quoted, strolled away from the Rex studio. Consternation, chagrin, dismay, desperation and desolation were the result of the discovery that this talented member of the stock company was missing. As one of the bunch tritely and eloquently said, "Rats!"

A searching party was at once organized, and started out on the trail they believed most likely to have been taken by the wayward adventurer—Broadway. The pavements of the Great Blight Way are cold enough for a stray waif, as a rule, but on this particular Friday—a cold day, you'll shiveringly recollect—every cobblestone was an ice-brick. Marsalane must have thought she had joined an Uncle Tom's Cabin company, and was playing Eliza crossing the ice. Phillips Smalley, of the Rex Company, finally rescued her on the corner of Broadway and Forty-first street, and towed her back to the studio to finish her scenes for the completion of the reel. The recalcitrant leading lady returned to her duties, after being effectively chastised for her self-invited absence by the director.

Later, in an interview, Marsalane said she had thought New York was a warm proposition, but playing the reason in "Why Girls Leave Home" didn't particularly appeal to her. After which she went for a high-ball—a spool of cotton suspended on the wall of the studio for her particular diversion.

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

The Majestic Motion Picture Company certainly is trying to give such pictures as will please the public. Their first few releases are clean, high-class comedies. By special request they have produced "Little Red Riding Hood," the well-known nursery rhyme, with Mary Pickford in the title rôle. They will release this for the Christmas picture, and it is one well adapted to the season, for it makes a special appeal to childish hearts and brings back to older people the memories of happy childhood hours. No one could be more pleasing in this rôle than "Little Mary," for she enters so entirely into the spirit of it all that she must necessarily carry her audience along with her and take all hearts by storm.

The two stock companies, headed by Owen Moore and David Miles, have left for the West and we may expect excellent pictures from this company, which includes Mary Pickford, Mabel Prunnelle, Herbert Prior and others well known to the moving picture public.

LUX FILMS THE ACME OF EXCELLENCE

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1911

Faas Grund, a Village in the Alps

SCENIC—Approx. Length, 295 Feet

A charming little Alpine Scenic of good quality and great interest.

The Mystery of Beaufort Grange

DRAMA—Approx. Length, 695 Feet A unique photoplay.

R. PRIEUR, 10 East 15th Street, NEW YORK CITY

TELEPHONE 3427 STUYVESANT

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATIONAL FILMS

Madison Square Garden has been for the past week a dazzling display of the produce of the soil. The spirit of Agriculture which lives and works, bringing forth the most marvelous developments—that spirit which breathes free out under the blue, away from the stifling brick walls of the city—appears to have disgorged itself into our midst, displaying to our astonished eyes the most luscious fruits, the most beautifully developed grain, the most startling scientific experiments, as a result of the careful study and attention of the different plant wizards of our Union. The display of fruits and vegetables is very gorgeous, from the rich yellow pumpkin and the mellow apple to the soft-cheeked peach and luscious grape from more Southern climes. But the great revelation to Easterners is the Alaskan exhibit, where, from that supposedly frozen-up country, where we learn there are almost 2,000,000 acres of arable land, we are shown the most beautifully developed vegetables, fine specimens of grain, and different specimens of its natural vegetation. Alaska's mineral and foremost resources are well represented, one of the most interesting exhibits being the great slabs of copper just as they were cut away from the mother lode, or picked in stray fragments from the débris of the ages.

As an introduction to our subject of the moving picture and its use at the Farm Show, we could not help adding the few interesting details above mentioned; we love our country, and we love to see the produce of her soil, as was evidenced by the crowds of people who each day attended the exhibition. In the old concert hall in the upper portion of the building lectures were given illustrated by lantern slides and moving pictures. Crowds flocked to the darkened hall at each announcement. The pictures illustrating the wonderful transformation of formerly dried-out, waste regions, by the irrigation process, are a fine lesson in national economics and industrial enterprise, and again it remained for the picture, and especially the moving picture, to distribute a knowledge of the usefulness of the irrigation method of reclaiming waste lands, and making them blossom forth, producing fruit, grain, vegetables, second to none. Illustrated lectures were given during the week in different parts of the country with their respective products, in which the moving picture figured largely.

Chicago, Ill.—O. Landowsky will erect a one-story theater at 3819 Clarendon avenue, to cost $6.000.

Chicago, Ill.—Gottschalk & Kussell will erect a one story theater at 2801-13 Sheffield avenue, to cost $1,000.

Minneapolis, Minn.—W. M. Koon, 1347 Nicollet avenue, will erect moving picture theater, to cost $4,000.

Atlanta, Ga.—The moving picture theater at 98 Whitehall street was damaged by fire to the amount of $200.

St. Louis, Mo.—A new moving picture theater will be erected at 818 North Kings Highway, to cost $30,000.

Hastings, Neb.—The Electric Theater has been sold by Messrs. Gerlach & Tremayne to J. E. Newhoter, of this city.

A VALUABLE INVENTION UNITING TWO GREAT INDUSTRIES—AUTOMOBILES AND MOVING PICTURES

The Motion Poster Company of America recently incorporated at one million dollars, has acquired the auto-projecting device invented and formerly owned by the Peerless Motiograph Company of Philadelphia. Offices have been opened in the Real Estate Trust Building, Broad and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, and a vigorous campaign is being planned by the new company, which is amply financed and is not offering any of its stock for sale to the general public. The auto-projecting device makes it now possible to have a high-grade moving picture show wherever an automobile can travel, as by this epoch-making invention a powerful, compact, cheap and safe, electric arc light plant, is at the service of every car owner, and can be put in action instantly with brilliant and dependable results.

The projecting machines used are also of special design and original invention, superiority and simplicity being claimed for them and successfully demonstrated. The stage of experimentation has been passed, and finished products are now offered to the public. More than a hundred private and public exhibitions have proved the great value of the inventions and many excellent testimonials have been received by the company from leading and influential newspapers, technical experts and national advertisers. No company ever started with fairer prospects, the definite orders now in hand being sufficient to warrant a splendid continuing business.

While the commercial and advertising world will at first engage the attention of The Motion Poster Company, it has been seen from the beginning that they have the ideal outfits for traveling exhibitors, who can now move about independently and give moving picture shows anywhere that will be equal to the best in the largest cities, and excel the great majority of projected pictures anywhere. Itinerant exhibitors should get in touch with The Motion Poster Company at once, and find out the full details of their various offers, as with their outfits traveling service will be revolutionized just as fast as the country can be covered and advertisers will not be slow to show their preference for the new idea.

The Motion Poster Company will also manufacture moving pictures of the better kind, and make a specialty of pictures to special order for National and other advertisers. The prices and terms are attractive and reasonable, taking into consideration the novelty and the quality of the work. Successful business and technical men are at the head of The Motion Poster Company of America, and we predict they will become an important factor in moving picture, automobile, educational, entertainment, and advertising circles.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—Plans have been prepared for the new Lyric Theater to be erected here.

Decatur, Ill.—Charles G. Powers will establish a new moving picture theater in the building to be erected at Water and North streets, by J. J. Moran.

Powers Weekly Corner

FOR TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21st
Still Generous With the Split Reels

"RIVALS"

A Little Comedy of Big Laugh Producing Quality
"VIEWS OF MONTSERRAT, ITALY"
A Sweet and Refreshing Bit of Education

SATURDAY FEATURE, AS USUAL
NOVEMBER 25th

"JUG O' RUM"

A Reel of Real Rural, Ripping, Resounding Roars—Rights!

POWERS MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
511 West 42d Street NEW YORK CITY

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

THE OLDEST AND LARGEST INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE IN NEW ENGLAND

MR. EXHIBITOR:

Start the Season right by using an Independent Service from a Reliable House. We are buying the Output of the Sales Co. and have some choice services open. Write—wire—or call To-Day at

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 TREMONT ST., BOSTON, MASS.
Telephone: 2187-3790 Oxford.

OUR ROVING COMMISSIONER'S COLUMN

A Word About Mr. George D. MacIntyre, the Newly Installed Manager of The Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

SUCCEEDING Mr. Herbert Miles, the recently resigned manager of the Motion Picture Dustributing and Sales Co., comes Mr. George D. MacIntyre to fill in the gap. Mr. MacIntyre hails from a long and wide experience in the dramatic profession, where he has been actor, producer, and manager. He is a man of most sincere intent, and intelligent foresight. That he is kindly and tactful in his relations with his employes is imminent by the expressions of satisfaction heard among the employes of whom he has so recently become the supervisor. It is no easy matter to fill shoes that were so satisfactorily filled by his predecessor, but Mr. MacIntyre is proving himself quite equal to the occasion.

Says Mr. MacIntyre, "At first I was rather hard to convince, but since then I have recognized to the full the wide usefulness of the moving picture—I believe that in the future it will be used for news publication. It is going to be of invaluable usefulness in the schools for the education of children, and in fact, there seems no end to its adaptability as a vehicle of education."

Mr. MacIntyre was the principal spirit in planning and organizing the Actors' Society of America, and it was under his direction, which extended over a period of eight years, that the Actors' Society achieved its greatest prosperity .

The moving picture industry should welcome with the greatest satisfaction the incorporation in their ranks of such men as Mr. MacIntyre, who are artistic, sincere, and who enter the business with the intention of giving their very best services for the benefit and furtherance of the trade.

Since resigning from his position in the Actors' Society, Mr. MacIntyre has been engaged in business positions with Henry W. Savage, S. S. and Lee Schubert, and William A. Brady, having just resigned from the latter's business staff to accept his present position.

IMP COMPANY

The scenario department of the Imp Company has been hitherto held at the studio on Fifty-sixth street. This has now moved and is located at the plant, 102 West 101st street. Any readers sending scenarios to the Imp Company will please note the change.

Mr. Hochstetter and Dr. Gamble, of the Ortho Film Company, are in town attending to business pertaining to the firm. During Mr. Hochstetter's absence from Petersburg some final arrangements in their studio there are being attended to.

* * * *

Harry Raver has been absent from the city for a few days. He found his way back to the skyscrapers the latter part of the week.

* * * *

Charles J. Gorman, of the Boston Film Rental Company, has been honeymooning in the city during the past week.

* * * *

Max Lewis, of the Chicago Film Exchange, is in town on a pleasure trip.

* * * *

J. J. Carrick, of the Philadelphia Projecting Company, was in town during the week.

* * * *

William Sacksemmair, Jr., of the Eagle Film Exchange, paid a visit to the city this week.

Mr. Jack Read, Jr., will leave very shortly on a trip to Japan for the purpose of exhibiting to the Japanese public the excellent moving pictures which he secured of the American sojourn of their beloved Admiral Togo.

* * * *

Mr. Isidor Bernstein has been engaged as assistant manager of the Republic Film Company. "Bernie" assures us that great things are in store for the exhibitor who will use Republic films. All who know "Bernie" are aware of that energy and enthusiasm with which he is constantly bubbling over, and we therefore feel assured that the Republic with Mr. Herbert Miles and Mr. Isidor Bernstein at the head of affairs cannot fail to push forward to a great success.

* * * *

Mr. Marvin, of the Biograph Company, has given moving picture circles something interesting to talk about, by having filmed the rehearsal of the wedding ceremony of his daughter. This is a novelty and will doubtless serve as a precedent for many others.

BENDER MORGAN COOMBS OLDRING

INDEPENDENTS CAPTURE CHAMPION BALL PLAYERS—BENDER, COOMBS, MORGAN AND OLDRING APPEAR IN THANHOUSER FILM

Stars of the Athletics Are Seen as Actors in "The Baseball Bug" Comedy Reel

BENDER, Coombs! Morgan! Oldring!
They're picture players!

Now let the hearts of all fans rejoice, for the four stars of the star Philadelphia Athletics will be with them once more, though the season is over. And it will be a diversion to see them as actors—to see if they face the camera as confidently as they did Mathewson.

In advance, let it be said that they did.

They enacted their rôles at the Thanhouser studio with the precision of veteran photoplayers, and they even played a "stage" game of ball with all the enthusiasm they manifested in their battles on the genuine diamond.

With characteristic film-maker's enterprise, the Thanhouser people set to capturing the Athletic cracks as soon as it became evident that the Athletics would win the World's Championship. As soon as the ball players were "cinched," work was begun on a scenario that would permit them to show both their acting and baseball talents. Here is the way the story was finally made to read:

A little frog who splashes into a tiny puddle sometimes thinks that he has created a commotion in the Atlantic Ocean. A young clerk in a small town was like the little frog, and local triumphs on an amateur baseball team convinced him that he was really a wonderful player, and far superior to the men in the big leagues.

Glory came to him—that is to say, his name was a household word in the small village where he lived, but he got no money for it. More than that, he neglected his regular work in a store, and was in danger of being discharged. For he thought baseball, drank baseball and dreamed baseball. He was a nuisance to his friends and a trial to his family, and his wife worried greatly as to what the future would bring.

The wife had a distant cousin, Big Chief Bender, the noted twirler of the World's Champions, the Philadelphia Athletics, and she decided to confide her troubles to him. She figured that a man who could pitch three out of the six post-season games against the Giants, win two of them, and lose the third by a fluke, must be resourceful enough to help her. She judged correctly and her appeal was not in vain.

To the conceited counter jumper came a letter purporting to be signed by Connie Mack, explaining that his fame had reached Philadelphia, and that Bender, Coombs (the pitchers who beat Mathewson), Morgan, the wonderful spitball expert, and "Rube" Oldring (the heavy hitting outfielder who broke up a world's series game with a home run), were coming to the country to learn from the village champion how to play baseball.

By this time the little frog had swollen to such a size that he really believed that the plea for help was genuine. So he gladly welcomed the seasoned champions of the world and they studied baseball together.

There was only one lesson. Then the little frog went sadly home. He burned up his uniform, his bat and the baseballs he had. He returned to his regular work behind the counter, and the wife finds that he is cured of his infatuation.

For if anyone can make a little frog realize that he is not stirring up the baseball ocean, it is "Big Chief" Bender and the other men who work with him.

The picture has been titled "The Baseball Bug," a name which seemed to best suit the diamond stars who appeared in it and which is well adapted for public advertising purposes. The Thanhouser release schedule gives the day that Bender, Coombs, Morgan and Oldring make their bow as film stars as Friday, November 24. The picture is a full reel one, and issues as a regular release of the company producing it.

WHO THEY ARE

Some Handy Data on the Champion Ball Players Who Became Picture Players

The four cracks of the World's Champion Athletics who were engaged by the Thanhouser Company to appear in "The Baseball Bug," a comedy released Friday, November 24th, have had stirring baseball careers and have figured strongly in the headlines for the past few years. To the dyed-in-the-wool fan, their diamond records are gospel. But for the So-So fan who likes to have his baseball memory jogged up, we have gathered the following:

* * * *

Jack Coombs, christened John Wesley Coombs, was born in Iowa twenty-nine years ago. At the age of two he moved to Maine and has since lived there. He graduated from Colby College in 1906 and went direct from college to the American League, his first noteworthy game being with the Athletics against Boston, when he pitched one of the longest games in the history of baseball, lasting twenty-four innings. Coombs' arm went back on him the next year, but he gamely stuck to the game, playing in the outfield. The next year his arm came back in good style, and since then he has been known as one of the headiest pitchers in baseball, doing his best work on joining the Athletics. His record this year is 31 games won, 11 lost. In last year's World's Series against the Chicago Cubs, Coombs won three straight games, equalling Mathewson's famous record for 1905. In the World's Series this year he clashed with Mathewson for the first time, neither ever having lost a World's Series game, and Coombs won. Mr. Coombs will be in vaudeville this winter, appearing with Bender and Morgan and the Misses Katherine and Violet Pearl.

* * * *

"Big Chief" Bender is a full-blooded Chippewa Indian, twenty-nine years of age, born in Oklahoma. He attended Carlisle Indian Institute. A highly educated man, he is known in baseball as one of the cleverest pitchers and batsmen. He went direct from Carlisle to the Philadelphia Athletics nine years ago, and has been one of Mack's mainstays for the past three years, being virtually the best in the American League. His pitching record this year is 19 games won and 5 lost. Bender, besides being a wonderful baseball batter, is one of the best trap shooters, golf players and billiard players in the country. Aside from baseball, he has a flourishing diamond and jewelry business, owns his own home in Philadelphia, and is reputed to be very well-to-do.

* * * *

Henry Richard Morgan, known as "Cy," is a native of Martin's Ferry, Ohio, right across from the West Virginia line. He is known as the minstrel of baseball players—putting in his winters on the stage. He broke into professional baseball ten years ago in the New England League at the age of twenty-one, and pitched such sensational ball that he was signed by the St. Louis Nationals. Next year he went to the American Association for more seasoning and then to Boston three years ago, where his work was so excellent that Connie Mack paid $3,500 and two crack players for him. He is one of the best spitball pitchers in the business. His record for the year is 17 games won and 7 lost.

* * * *

Robert E. Oldring, known as "Rube," is a native of Mount Vernon, N. Y. He is twenty-seven years old and broke into the game around the lots of Harlem and the Bronx, New York City, six years ago. He was with Memphis down South when Connie Mack selected him for the Athletics. He has been the regular center-fielder of the Athletics for the last four years, and is ranked as one of the speediest men on the diamond. His batting average is the high one of .300, and he has few equals as a sure hitter. He appears to be getting better every year, with this past his most successful season to date in big league baseball.

The picture is issued as a regular release.

FIRST OF NESTOR—THREE A WEEK

On Monday, November 20, the first of the Nestor three a week will be released. This release will be entitled, "His Vacation," and is a high-class comedy and an A1 feature.

On the 22d, the "Cowboy Pugilist" will appear, and on the 25th, "Desperate Desmond Pursued by Claude Eclair."

It will be interesting to readers to know that the Nestor Studio at Hollywood, Cal., is now finished, and two pictures have already been completed.

Mr. Horsley is expected back among us again by November 18. The Nestor is certainly doing things. Hurrah for the Independents! Things are certainly moving along with them.

"The Cowboy Pugilist," which is after the same style as "The Parson and the Bully," is expected to meet with the same success as the latter excellent and popular film.

Waterproof Films

Washed with soapy water, can be kept

FREE FROM OIL SPOTS, RAIN and DIRT.

Besides this, periodical washing keeps them

SOFT AND PLIABLE

as long as the sprocket holes will last.

Either old or new films can be treated by this process.

National Waterproof Film Co.

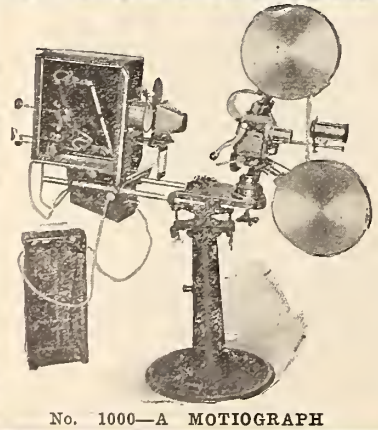
Sole Owners of Patented Waterproof Process and Machinery.

4200 W. ADAMS STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

KINEMACOLOR THEATER

The feature introduced during the week at the Kinemacolor Theater is the exact reproduction of the words and music of the actual crowning ceremony in Westminster Abbey has proved so popular that it will be continued throughout the season. J. Strickland King and his choir from the Southwark Cathedral, London, who took part in the coronation service in the function of singing the responses, give the "Vivats" which were such a prominent part of that memorable occasion, while the principal figures are personated by members of the company as to their spoken words.

Of special interest to New York this week because of the great naval mobilization in New York is the film showing the coronation naval review at Spithead, England, when the greatest British fleet ever assembled was reviewed by his Majesty King George V; the Kinemacolor process shows the exact coloring of each scene without resort to artificial methods of coloring.



No. 1000—A MOTIOGRAPH

Pictures De Luxe

EXTRACT FROM PROGRAM OF LYRIC THEATRE—MINNEAPOLIS

"NOTE—Please note the wonderful clearness of these pictures, the perspectives obtained and the Absence of all eyestrain, etc."

THE MOTIOGRAPH MAKES IT POSSIBLE for you to call the attention of your patrons to your picture—you no longer need be ashamed to meet them.

STAND OUT IN FRONT just like THE PICTURE projected by THE MOTIOGRAPH—STANDS OUT IN FRONT OF ALL OTHERS.

Mr. S. L. Rothapfel, the originator of the DeLuxe picture performance and inventor of Daylight Pictures, has installed THE MOTIOGRAPH in the Lyric, of Minneapolis; Alhambra, of Milwaukee, and Empress, of St. Paul—the three largest and best theaters in Central West—"NUF SED."

1912 MODELS NOW BEING SHIPPED

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564 W. Randolph St., CHICAGO

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere.

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11th

A WOMAN'S WIT

A classy comedy feature, illustrating a clever wife's display of matrimonial strategy. One of the comedy hits of the season. Don't miss it!

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18th

A RENDEZVOUS IN HYDE PARK

A case of mistaken identity, in which the lovers of two sisters play prominent parts.

HIGH SCOTLAND

A film everyone will want to see. Charming scenery, beautiful water effects, national dances. The best scenic published for many a day.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT.

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

NURSERY JINGLES

Little Jack Horner, sat in a corner,
Eating a Christmas pie.
He wanted another, but his wise mother
Mentioned the pictures, close by.

EXTRA! EXTRA!

An urchin, eight years of age, self-confessed horse thief, was recently sentenced to the Indiana State Reformatory. He blamed his misdeeds on the penny dreadful.

TOO MUCH OF IT

Our good friends in the Dominion,
In a clean, straightforward manner.
Have expressed their late opinion
As against the starry banner.
But your Uncle Sam won't worry
Very much about these strictures,
But will hump himself and hurry
On the best in moving pictures.

The operator says: "Life is reel."

5c

POPULAR FILM STORIES BY POPULAR AUTHORS

5c

BUYS A COPY OF

MOVING PICTURE TALES

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE OF FILM STORIES

Edited by ALFRED H. SAUNDERS

EXCHANGES WILL HANDLE IT

EXHIBITORS WILL SELL IT

ON SALE AT NEWS STANDS

FIRST ISSUE—25,000 COPIES—DECEMBER 1st

WRITE FOR PARTICULARS AND SPECIAL PROPOSITION TO EXCHANGES AND EXHIBITORS

ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION

5c

CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY

30 WEST 13th STREET, NEW YORK

5c

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

NATIONAL GUARDSMEN AND REGULARS AT FT. RILEY, KAN.

Champion Release, November 20

The third of the series of the Fort Riley pictures presents a visualization of the Army Manœuvres on a more extensive scale. The first and second regiments of Kansas Militia are noted throughout the West as the crack regiments of that section, besides being distinguished for their splendid and robust physique The evolutions of this military body are carried out with a vim and dash at times that are truly amazing.

Very few people imagine, indeed, how much enters into the soldiers' education, and when a picture like this is on view, no wonder that surprise is the principal manifestation exhibited by the spectator. But surprise after surprise is in store for those who will have the good fortune to witness the photo reproduction of these Kansas troops in action

To see their wonderful marksmanship in their target practice, practice drills, is to receive information at first hand, which astounds us when even we read of it in cold print. But, of course, the marching and counter-marching; the brilliant formations and drills which an occasion of this kind shows forth, is what must have the greatest appeal to the masses. To add to the effectiveness of the grand ensemble of this mobilization, if indeed anything was wanting to make effective the work of these sturdy Western soldiers, we have several companies of United States troops; these latter taking part in all the military manipulations of field and barracks.

Nowhere could be seen, and at no time could a better representation of Uncle Sam's military prowess be shown, than is here in this last Fort Riley release.

WHEN THE SHERIFF GOT HIS MAN

Champion Release, November 22

Music may have charms to soothe the savage breast, but the melting glance of a woman's eye hath charms to do the rest; that is, all the rest necessary to the capture of the savage, his enslavement and so on; and so it happened that Alice, the ranchman's daughter, caught and held in durance vile the heart of the new sheriff, Ben Humphries.

The parents of Alice liked Ben and were pleased that he showed a preference for their daughter, but Ben's desperate efforts at love-making caused them the greatest amusement in the world. The girl wasn't a flirt, but she certainly did lead Ben a pace, and he danced to her every whim like a trained bear in a circus ring. Finally he sends her a note by a Chink telling her he must get an answer from her to his numerous proposals, and he fixes the place where, next day, she must meet him with the precious assurance. Alice decides to give in at last to Ben, for she loves him dearly, so she repairs to the trysting place. But, alas! he is not there. Can you imagine how this girl felt?

At a dance given by her parents in her honor, she flirts desperately with a handsome rascal, out of spite, and this man was Jack London, an outlaw, on whose account Ben Humphries did not show up at the trysting place. He had received hurried word to get after this fellow at the last moment, and he followed his duty. He had, however, sent her an explanatory note by the Chink, but the Oriental had carelessly thrown it in the fire.

Ben had got to his man, but the bad man had gotten the "drop" on Ben good and proper, wounding and tying him to a tree. Thus it was that Jack London was at the dance, and Ben was not. But Ben came in "unexpected like" to the bad man in the midst of the flirting, and to the girl's surprise, the outlaw dove through a window, and the sheriff after him. Then what a chase, with Ben and the motley crowd in pursuit! He gave them all the slip but Ben who got after Jack London hot foot, and got him for fair this time, after a thrilling fight, which would have proved disastrous for Ben had not Alice come up and helped things a bit by putting a gun to the outlaw's head.

Still, she was angry with Ben, and no explanations would go either, but Mr. John Chinaman came along with the remnants of the note, which cleared Ben and gladdened both in a bear-like hug, they were nothing loath.

"THE DIAMOND LOCKET"

Comet Release, November 24

Kate Starr, a young girl, finds a position as governess in the family of the Vans, who belong to New York's exclusive social set. She is loved by Tim Hogan, an honest inspector in the employ of the street cleaning department in New York. They are to be married and the wedding day is set for the immediate future. One night on the way to a reception Mrs. Van loses a valuable diamond locket. Search is made for it high and low, but without avail.

While on duty, Tim picks up the locket and shows it to a friend of his, a New York detective, whom he aided one day in arresting three crooks caught in the act of robbing a drunken man. The detective suggests that in lieu of not being able to locate the real owner it would not be a bad idea to present the locket to Kate, which Tim promptly does.

Kate is happy over the gift and wears it around her neck, little dreaming that its rightful owner is her very mistress. When Mrs. Van sees the necklace on Kate, without an undue explanation or theory she promptly accuses the girl of having stolen it and has her arrested. Humiliated and disgraced Kate is thrust into a cell. The day of the trial arrives and Tim produces the detective to whom he showed the necklace when he found it. The evidence is conclusive and Kate's innocence is forthwith established. The judge is furious over the Vans' hasty procedure and tells them what he thinks of the idle rich. Approximate length, 1,000 feet.

It is an engrossing story which is developed with consummate skill and plenty of dramatic action.

THE OFFICE BOY'S DREAM

Comet Release, November 20

This picture contains a clever blending of comedy and situation telling in its entirety a story out of the usual run of moving picture films. A youth leaves his home in the country and comes to New York to seek his fortune. He secures a position as office boy with a man who is not as amiable and jovial as ordinary humans should be. On the first day of his new job the "boss" plans to go to the ball game and witness the initial contest between the Giants and Athletics. There is a longing in the heart of the youngster to see the game, but he has to be content by watching the throngs on their way to the grounds from a position through the office window. Disappointed, he seeks solace in smoking a cigar which he has taken from a private box belonging to his employer. Whether the cigar was bad or whether the fumes were too much for the lad is not here nor there. The boy falls asleep and dreams.

Fancy carries him to the game. He is in the grandstand alongside the "Boss." They are rooting and cheering in unison. The "boss" takes a liking to him and invites him to his home. There the new office boy is monarch of all he surveys. He meets the boss's beautiful daughter and the rest of the family, who immediately dance attendance and make the hireling feel completely at ease. There are other incidents. The girl falls in love with him, they are engaged to be married and the wedding day arrives. The palatial home of his employer is all aglow with life and animation. The guests gather, lights are burning, music is playing and all is happiness and serenity. Automobiles are there to take the young couple on their honeymoon. It is all fine and dandy. But the "boss" has forgotten the tickets and returns unexpectedly. He finds his employees enjoying a game of cards and his office boy asleep with his legs strewn across the desk. There is an awakening—a cruel and heartless one—and the office boy finds himself on the highways again looking for another position.

THE LEGEND OF THE EAGLE

Eclair Release, November 13

This film, enhanced by beautiful landscape where the action runs, is of a remarkable quality. It shows with perfection an emotional episode of the wars of the First Empire, showing what strict discipline was imposed upon the army by Napoleon I. He never pardoned a disobedience to his orders; also whoever was caught in a state of intoxication or lacked respect for women in the enemy's country was shot instantly.

The army has been going for a long while through Austrian country. The sun was hot, the soldiers tired. Grenadier Gridart is resting in the garden of an inn. The wine was cool and nice. He drinks more than necessary. Wine and sun have intoxicated the grenadier, who goes to his camp wobbling. Going through a field, Gridart meets a young peasant woman who was coming from the village. The wine makes him lose his head and forget his orders. He wants to embrace the woman. She defends herself. He is obstinate and brutal. The husband arrives and hits the grenadier a blow on the head which sends him to the ground.

It is there that he was found by a canteen woman. She picks him up, and tries by supporting him to bring him to camp. The task is difficult. He can hardly stand on his feet. Arriving by a small bridge they stop. Unfortunately the Emperor passes there and sees the bleeding grenadier, whom he questions. The soldier says he was hit by a peasant, without cause. The Emperor commands that the peasant be caught and put to death.

Gridart, brought to camp, is taken care of at the ambulance. He is sober. He reflects. A man is going to die unjustly by his fault. He has remorse for his cowardice. His conscience of an honest man revolts. He arises, has himself brought before the Emperor, avows that he disobeyed his orders, got intoxicated and that the peasant had hit him in defense of his wife. Discipline is inflexible. The grenadier is shot.

In the woods in a green road the grenadied lies, his breast pierced by bullets. In a supreme moment of admiration for his heroic loyalty the Austrian peasant and his wife cover the unlucky grenadier's body with flowers.

THE PORTUGUESE CENTAURS

Eclair Release, November 23

For a long time the portrayal in motion pictures of wonderful feats of horsemanship has aroused a world-wide interest. The Portuguese Cavalry depicted in the Eclair release surpasses in dash and execution the crack regiments of sunny Italy. The spectator is held in suspense at the sight of these Centaurs of old, riding down steep declivities, bounding over hill and dale; and again, after a precipitous flight down a stone staircase, they speed away, climbing mountains with the ease of antelopes, surmounting, with apparent ease and little effort, all obstacles that lie in their path. One admires equally horse and rider for sure-footed agility, strength and graceful equestrian ability. On the same reel is:

CHARLEY BUYS AN AUTOMATIC LIGHTER

Delightful comedy is here revealed, dealing with the troubles of the smoker in France. Matches are very expensive in Europe, and especially in France, and are controlled by the government. Someone invented an automatic lighter to do away with matches, and they became very popular. Charley decides to buy one. He soon discovers that the government, quick to realize the danger of the new invention, insists that all these devices shall be stamped with the official seal before being used. Failing to comply with the law, he is followed by detectives and finally captured after a series of ludicrous situations and hairbreadth escapes, the most sensational of which is scaling the Eiffel Tower, where his troubles end through a clever ruse.

THE WHITE MEDICINE MAN

Nestor Release, November 15

Chief Mad Bull was well pleased, for was not Kottona, his daughter, sought by Morning Plume, only son of the powerful Chief Big Moon, and had not that chief, accompanied by Morning Plume, arrived with many presents to ask that their children's marriage be celebrated within two moons?

The old chief's peace of mind was soon cut short. Spotted Eagle, his favorite son, was taken ill with fever, and although the medicine man had done his best the young brave grew steadily worse and would have died, but for Dr. Roy Wallace and Ben Allen, who had stopped to inquire the way to the Rankin Mine. There the half breed, who acted as interpreter, prevailed upon Mad Bull to have the white medicine man treat his son. So skeptical was the old chief, that Roy and Ben were obliged to remain at the camp until Spotted Eagle had entirely recovered. Then they would have departed, had not Chief Mad Bull been stricken with the same disease. Roy agreed to remain until he, too, had recovered.

Once more the two friends prepared to leave, when the half breed appeared to say that the old chief required their presence. Hurrying to the council, Roy was dumbfounded to have the Eagle Feather bestowed upon him, and to hear Chief Mad Bull declare that he was now entitled to marry a chief's daughter, as they needed his skill as a white medicine man, and Kottona should be his squaw to keep him among them. At last, prompted by Ben, poor Roy managed to stammer his thanks, and, the young doctor handed Mad Bull a picture of Mary, his little wife. To wed the chief's daughter would be impossible!

Fairly beside himself, the Indian tore Mary's picture to bits, and had Ben not interfered the conflict between Roy and old Mad Bull would certainly have proven fatal. As it was, the two friends were thrown into their tepees to await the morning sun, when Roy would be sacrificed to their Getchie Manitou, for after receiving the Eagle Feather the pale face had repaid their great chief by not only refusing his daughter, but attacking him as well.

Ere night, however, Onesta, the girl's mother, had apprised Morning Plume of the intended sacrifice, and he, by sending a messenger to Mad Bull, saying the whites were preparing to attack them, drew the chief and his braves from their camp. Instantly Morning Plume rushed in, released the two friends; then with Kottona and Onesta hurried to Big Moon's camp, where, after sending the white men safely on their way, the marriage of the lovers was celebrated.

MUTT AND JEFF AND THE UNLUCKY STAR

Nestor Release, November 18

Without the necessary coin to pay their rent, Mutt and Jeff take up their abode in a garret littered with antique furniture. Being practiced hunters, they start looking things over and under. In a washstand reposes a sheriff's badge. Jeff gets a sudden and brilliant inspiration. Why not use the old badge to satisfy the inner man. They cannot eat the badge, but—

Jeff blows into a swell restaurant, orders a fine dinner, relishes it with great gusto; the garcon brings him a fragrant cigar, and between puffs he gently waves his handkerchief. Mutt answers the signal—he is a Pinkerton detective and wants Jeff. Jeff is pinched and yanked out of the restaurant, the proprietor of which fails to collect.

After going some distance, the badge passes into Jeff's possession, and Mutt enters a beanery to get his "fill." He does not get the same delicious spread as Jeff's, and beef stew or pork and beans is all he may feast upon. He chooses the stew and soon finds himself pretty well stewed.

Jeff wanders slowly away and, being somewhat sleepy, sits down in a convenient corner and journeys to the land of Nod. Mutt gives the signal, but the "Pinkerton detective" does not respond. Growing uneasy, he mounts the table and waves his handkerchief most energetically. This brings forth the 'boss" and a few tough-looking waiters, who, deaf to Mutt's explanations as to how and when the meal is to be paid, escort him into the kitchen to wash dishes until his bill is settled. On the same reel is:

THAT KID FROM THE EAST

Jim Collins had decided to try his fortunes on a ranch, so when he alighted from his private coach, which by the railroad would have been termed an empty freight car, the young man made straight for a group of cowboys. Here, however, his appearance created no end of amusement, and when he resented some particularly insulting remark of Allen Blair's, his chum, Big Pete Kelly, the bully of the ranch, stepped forward and was using Jim as a punching bag, until their foreman, Fred Ainsley, appeared, and not only put a stop to the unfair proceedings, but admiring Jim's pluck at once employed him for the ranch.

Here he soon became a favorite with the ranchman's daughter, Kitty, and as a consequence Allen and his chum lost no opportunity to make the new cowboy's life as miserable as possible. Allen, having the support of Kitty's father, was determined to marry the girl himself.

It was thus that matters stood when father and daughter, accompanied by Allen and Pete, set out for the village, and, although they had disregarded Jim's warning that the Indians were now hostile, the young man decided to follow at a distance and see that no harm came to his sweetheart.

From an adjoining peak, the redskins had spied the buckboard, and had so obstructed the trail with brush that the entire party alighted to assist in its removal. Then no sooner were their backs turned than an Indian seized the horse's bridle, while the others opened fire. At the first shot, the ranchman fell, and Allen and Pete, deaf to Kitty's entreaties, turned and ran for their lives. Fortunately at this instant Jim dashed up to assist the father and daughter behind a high boulder—from whence, as long as ammunition held out, he could keep the Indians at a safe distance. However, Jim's riderless horse, which had returned to the ranch, together with the knowledge that the redskins were on the warpath, and the shots which could be distinctly heard caused the foreman and his men to put spurs to their horses and ride as they had never ridden before, coming up just as Jim's last cartridge was fired.

While his boys drove off the Indians, the foreman hastened to the old ranchman, who, although quite severely wounded, was still loud in praise of his daughter's wisdom in selecting Jim as her future husband.

SAAS GRUND, A VILLAGE IN THE ALPS

Lux Release, November 17

This is a charming little Alpine scenic of good quality and great interest. One the same reel is:

THE MYSTERY OF BEAUFORT GRANGE

Mid the charming grounds of Beaufort Grange, Helen and a party of friends engage in the childish game of hide-and-seek. The game is exciting and Helen seeks to hide herself in the old castle. She hides in an old fireplace of the customary massive proportions, when suddenly,—as if by some unseen hand—a secret door springs open and a flight of stone steps are revealed. Thinking this is to be a fine hiding place, the young lady goes down the steps. Immediately the door closes after her, and she is entrapped in a dismal dungeon. Time wears on, and exhausted in her efforts to attract attention Helen falls into a stupor. Meanwhile her friends have searched high and low, and found no trace of her. The affair develops into a serious mystery. The Duke of Beaufort, owner of the Grange, becomes interested and alarmed. With the aid of some old maps of the Grange, he searches for the lost girl. By some chance, he happens to also place his hand upon the hidden spring—the door flies open, and he penetrates into the gloomy dungeon, where he finds the imprisoned Helen. Thus two people are entrapped, for the door closes and defies all efforts to burst it open. Things now become so serious that a detective is engaged to unravel the puzzle. He goes into the Grange and finds the Duke's papers where he left them. By this manner he is able to locate the secret trap, for he reads in the plans that there once existed a secret entrance to the dungeon. The secret is discovered, and the Duke and Helen are released from their prison. The Duke is much impressed by the fortitude of the brave girl, and the affair ends up in an interesting romance.

BILL AND BERTIE GET MARRIED

Lux Release, November 24

This is a funny story of how Bill and Bertie went into double harness on the same day. Their respective bridal parties met at the church door and quarreled and the quarrel continued with disastrous results. When a man's married his troubles begin. On the same reel is:

A PASSING CLOUD

Edward Bunthorne and his sweetheart Grace came down to the river to pass away an afternoon in luxurious idleness and sweet content. Their courtship could well be compared to a blithe spring morning. The sun shone, the birds sang, and all the world went merrily. Then came a tiny speck upon the distant horizon; it grew and soon loomed overhead, blocking out the light of the morning sun, hushing the song of the bird and making the world a dismal place indeed. The cloud was Madeline Martin, a young lady who came to the river with her little sister. The lovers made friends with her, and very soon they formed a pleasant party. Edward became infatuated with his new acquaintance, and some time afterward was observed by Grace carrying on a desperate flirtation. Alas, the cloud must break, and Grace's little world will be clad in somber hue, but —no, there proves to be no rain, for Grace bravely rescues Miss Martin's little sister from death. The unselfish bravery of this action reveals to Miss Martin the selfishness of her own actions, and she retired, leaving the lovers to make their peace. The sunshine comes again after a hard struggle, and Grace and Edward are finally forced to agree that Miss Martin was but—A Passing Cloud.

A MASTER OF MILLIONS

Thanhouser Release, November 21

A man of dominating personality, by exceptional ability rose from the humble position of foreman of a railroad section gang to that of a millionaire, before whom most men bowed. He owed his early start in life to the kindly favor of a railroad president, and when he became a master of millions he graciously consented to keep this official in his position.

At a reception in the president's house the millionaire met the daughter of his host, and decided to marry her. Accustomed to the power of wealth, he did not bother to court the girl. He sent for the father and bluntly announced his decision. When the perturbed father hesitated, the millionaire, furious, threatened to ruin his one time benefactor unless the marriage was arranged without delay. The girl, to save her father, consented to the loveless match, and again the millionaire was convinced that nothing could withstand his will.

Later, at his country estate, the millionaire gave a house party. With others of his guests he went hunting, became separated, and finally lost. When completely exhausted he saw a light shining in the woods; he dragged himself to it and found refuge in the humble home of a poor hunter.

The hunter had a beautiful wife, to whom the millionaire let his fancy lightly run. He told her of his wealth, promised to provide for her and was much astonished when she rejected his overtures. Roughly he grabbed and kissed her, and when the hunter returned he found his wife struggling in the arms of the man whose life he had saved.

The hunter, aiming a gun at the millionaire's heart, ordered him to leave the house. Then, with his gun still leveled, he followed him through the woods, the millionaire pleading cravenly for his life. They traversed the forest, and at the edge the hunter pointed out the home of the millionaire in the distance. Whereupon the man who tried to wrong him plucked up heart, thanked his guide and offered him money.

The hunter looked at him somberly and in silence, then knocked him down and the last words the millionaire heard as he staggered through the woods were the farewell ones of the hunter—"You cur."

It was the first rebuff he had experienced since wealth came to him. He realized that there was one thing and one man he could not buy. And the grim face of the hunter and his words haunted him.

The girl came to him at last and asked for her freedom. He tried to tell her that she must keep her promise or her father would be ruined, but the face of the one man who had beaten him appeared to him, and he found that he was powerless.

He gave her the freedom she asked and tried to forget his humiliation in hard work. His associates found the he was more lenient and less arrogant, and they wondered. For no one knew the story of the poverty-stricken hunter who had mastered the master of millions.

THE BASEBALL BUG

Thanhouser Release, November 24

A little frog who splashes into a tiny puddle sometimes thinks he has created a commotion in the Atlantic Ocean. A young clerk in a small town was like the little frog, and local triumphs on an amateur baseball team convinced him that he was really a wonderful player, and far superior to the men in the big leagues.

Glory came to him, that is to say, his name was a household word in the small village where he lived, but he got no money for it. More than that, he neglected his regular work in a store, and was in danger of being discharged. For he thought baseball, drank baseball, and dreamed baseball. He was a nuisance to his friends and a trial to his family, and his wife worried greatly as to what the future would bring.

The wife had a distant cousin, Big Chief Bender, the noted twirler of the World Champions, the Philadelphia Athletics, and she decided to confide her troubles to him. She figured that a man who could pitch three out of the six post season games against the Giants, win two of them, and lost the third by a fluke, must be resourceful enough to help her. She judged correctly, and her appeal was not in vain.

To the conceited counter jumper came a letter purporting to be signed by Connie Mack, explaining that his fame had reached Philadelphia and that Bender, Coombs (the pitcher who beat Mathewson), Morgan, the wonderful spit-ball expert, and "Rube" Oldring (the heavy hitting outfielder who broke up a world's series game with a home run), were coming to the country to learn from the village champion how to play baseball.

By this time the little frog had swollen to such a size that he really believed that the plea for help was genuine. So he gladly welcomed the seasoned champions of the world and they studied baseball together.

There was only one lesson. Then the little frog went sadly home. He burned up his uniform, his bat and the baseballs he had. He returned to his regular work behind the counter, and the wife finds that he is cured of his infatuation.

For if anyone can make a little frog realize that he is not stirring up the baseball ocean, it is "Big Chief" Bender and the other men who work with him.

THE TEST
American Release, November 20

When Ethel Dawson found herself much sought by two lovers and quite unable to decide her choice, she asked advice of her old friend the orange grower. Plucking an orange from the tree, he advises her to cut it in half, give one half to each admirer, and chose the one who, in a certain length of time, should return both parts.

The boys accept. Shortly after, Jack departs on a mission into the mountain and Dick determines on foul play to secure that other half orange. So he hires a band of "bad men" to hold up Dick in a lonely mountain pass. This is just what occurs and Jack is left, bound and helpless, while the victor returns to claim his sweetheart. Round the bend in the road come a party of ranchers. They release Jack and promise their aid in capturing Dick. The two factions meet just at the entrance to the orchard of Ethel's home, where a wonderfully entertaining battle takes place. Jack arrives in time to meet his rival pleading his cause with Ethel. A desperate fight ensues in which Jack finally masters his antagonist. Ethel has by this time learned to know her feelings and quickly goes to the arms of her waiting admirer. An engaging tale, full of life and action.

THE MASTER OF THE VINEYARD
American Release, November 23

Through the thrift of his wife and daughters, rather than by his own efforts, Jim Bradly has acquired a little home. Always shiftless and improvident, his weakness is intensified by a fondness for drink.

Kirk Winters has long admired Mildred Bradly and knowing her father's weakness, works his way into his good graces by giving him money from time to time, which the old man spends in drunken carousal.

Mildred distrusts Kirk Winters and in order to gain his ends he purchases their home from the father at a time when the old man is irresponsible for his actions. Highly elated at the success of his plan he hastens to the house and informs the women that unless Mildred becomes his wife they will be homeless. He shows them the deed and rather than concede to his demands they leave the house and seek employment in the vineyard owned by George McLean.

Here they meet with every courtesy and the genial owner extends to them the courtesy of his home. Learning of their trouble he seeks the father, but meets with failure in his kindly advances.

Learning from the father where his wife and daughters are located Kirk Winters determines to make them trouble, but they are protected by George McLean. He discharges those among his employees who assisted Winters. The men visit the saloon where Winters finds them and soon has them inflamed by drink and easily incites them to revolt.

Their plans are overheard by the father, who is now sober and realizes the consequences of his folly. He hurries to the vineyard with his warning, but McLean determines to stay and protect the women from the mob. When they arrive Winters attempts to shoot McLean, but Jim Bradly steps forward in time to save the master of the vineyard but received the bullet himself. The murderer is led away by the now sobered mob and the grief stricken wife kneels by the body of her husband.

A strong, virile drama of the West, full of heart interest that grips the attention with its intense dramatic action and perfect interpretation.

THE RETURN
Rex Release, November 16

The years tell their secrets. Men may fold their tents like Arabs, and silently steal away; vice and crime may leer at justice and mock the right of things; mystery elude discovery. But as the months join the dead aeons of the past, and the voices and vices of the living to-day become silent and dead with the vanished yesterdays, the solution, the realization, the final answer, cry their truth to a startled world. So has it been through the centuries; so must it be till the world closes shop.

Betty Blair is to the ranch manner born. She is of the West, the West is in her—a plain girl of the plains. Her father wishes her to go to school and become a lady; she wants to be a cowgirl, and is cowed at the prospect of leaving brooks for books, streams for reams, nature for Rand & McNally. It is finally decided to determine her future on the throw of dice. She loses and goes off to school.

Even school has its redeeming feature—vacation. She returns home to the ranch. While there Joe Keene, a gambler, a breaker of banks, homes and hearts, attempts to make love to her. He is just about to kiss her—she screams and snatches his gun—and shoots! The man falls, and thinking she has killed him she calls her brother, explains, and the two drag him to a cave and leave him. With the shadow over her soul, she returns to school.

She meets a friend of her girl chum, Frank Sterling. He looks into her eyes, she looks into his—and in their depths they read the question and the answer—the old, old tale of a man and a maid.

Then Fate returns from her vacation, and resumes weaving her eternal web. Frank tells Betty he must go West. He has received a letter from the sheriff of a small Western town, telling him that a wayward brother, a black sheep who had strayed away from the fold, had met with a disaster that had made his entire past a blank, and was living under the name of—Joe Keene. And Betty thinks the man he was to seek was dead! The years told their secret; the ghost in the closet walked out and proclaimed the truth. That moment some of Betty died.

A few days later she returned the ring with a note telling him why it was impossible for her to marry him. She goes back to the ranch—

Where comes Frank to see her, to plead with her to change her course. The night is the devil's own, a night such as when the gods are vexed. Betty and Frank are standing by the window, battling with the giant shadow that had cast itself over their paths. The door opens, the figure of a man enters the room. A flash of lightning illumines his face; the girl screams—screams as once before she did when that man would violate her honor. There before them stands Joe Keene! That scream! —the mist lifted, the shadow disappeared, a light came to Joe Keene's mind and—he remembered!

It might have been Fate's inexplicable way of deciding Destiny. It might have been Fate's test of love and youth, and their strength to combat doubt and despair. And it might have been—a good deal worse!

FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA
Imp Release, November 20

"From the Bottom of the Sea" is a film that marks an epoch in Imp production in that it is the first 2,000-foot story to be released by that firm. It is one of the most thrilling and meritorious marine stories ever depicted on the screen—a large and ambitious effort—successfully accomplished.

It has to do with the love affair of an ensign on a submarine boat and the daughter of a lieutenant, his superior officer. The scene is laid in the U. S. Navy and a genuine submarine boat was placed at the disposal of the director in the filming of the picture.

The young ensign loves the daughter of the lieutenant and his love is returned. The lieutenant has other aspirations and tells the young man to win his stripes before he will consider his suit. The lover is not crestfallen, as he is ambitious, and the girl is willing to wait. A French army officer also loves the girl but, while he is favored by the father, the girl despises him.

The lieutenant receives a message from naval headquarters commanding him to take charge of the submarine boat on a cruise and to further instruct the ensign in his duties. Prior to his going abroad, the ensign kindly shows the Frenchman, his rival, over the boat. The villain, anxious to avenge himself on the young man, steals the valve handle off the mechanism which controls the buoyancy arrangement when the boat is submerged and carries it away.

The lieutenant boards the boat and she goes on the educational cruise. There are many scenes of the evolutions of the boat and she finally sinks to the bottom. The officers watch the gauge, but find themselves powerless to rise owing to the tampering with the mechanism. They are suffocating for the want of air and are doomed to die like rats in a trap. Then the young ensign shows his mettle. He proposes that his ship-mates shoot him through the torpedo tube and he will swim for assistance. It is a hazardous undertaking, as his life is in danger.

He is shot through the tube, against the wishes of the lieutenant, rises to the surface and swims for it, summoning a submarine boat tender. The boat is anchored over the submerged craft and the emergency expedient is resorted to with success. Air is pumped into the receptacles and the vessel rises and the crew is saved through the heroism of the young officer. The Frenchman is suspected of the trickery and is punished.

It is needless to chronicle that the ensign made good, and the lieutenant removed all objections to his marriage with the daughter.

EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY
Imp Release, November 23

Dan Fuller, an honest mechanic, is the victim of circumstances. He is ill one day and the rent collector, who is an unprincipled masher, with insinuating manners, calls and grossly insults his wife, attacking her in a familiar manner. Dan is aroused and rushing into the room administers a beating to the rascal which results in a serious injury.

Fuller is arrested and, having no friends, is convicted on a charge of felonious assault, the mitigating circumstances not being considered.

He is serving a sentence in the penitentiary when he receives a letter informing him he is the father of a child. Obsessed by the injustice of his incarceration and insane with a desire to see his wife and child, he eludes the guards and makes his escape from prison, exchanging garments with a scare-crow.

He visits his home, to find his aged mother at the bedside of the young wife. Without awakening his wife, he kisses her and the baby and returns to prison and voluntarily gives himself up.

The facts connected with his conviction have reached the Governor, who has decided to pardon him on Thanksgiving Day. When it is reported he has escaped the official reconsiders his intention and Fuller is destined to serve his full sentence.

The daughter of the Governor reads in a newspaper that Fuller escaped to visit his wife and baby, and then returned to prison of his own volition and the incident touches her heart. She implores her father to be merciful, and he relents.

Fuller is released from prison on Thanksgiving Day. He returns home to find a bountiful Thanksgiving dinner provided by the daughter of the Governor, and the corn beef and cabbage his mother has prepared for the occasion is laid aside. The coming of the husband is unexpected by the wife, and there is a happy reunion witnessed by the daughter of the chief executive, who looks on approvingly.

BABY NEEDS MEDICINE

Solax Release, November 15

Mr. Smith has a gold mine for sale. He receives a letter from his attorney stating he has found a possible purchaser in Robert Moore, president of a well-known trust company, and they will arrive in time for luncheon. Mrs. Smith is worried, the baby seeming to be ill, but refusing to take any medicine. The attorney and the president of the trust company arrive; the baby is worse, and mother rushes in, begging father to make him take his medicine. Mr. Smith explains to the two gentlemen, who try to bribe the baby with money and candy to take the medicine. Father arranges water in one glass and medicine in another, which act baby sees. While the men are busy talking baby changes the position of the glasses and then tells his father if he and the two gentlemen will drink with him he will take his medicine. The three men all drink from the glass containing the medicine, while baby drinks water. At luncheon one after the other is taken ill, while baby eats heartily. Whether Mr. Moore bought the gold mine is an open question.

ONLY A SQUAW

Solax Release, November 17

Mary, a ranchman's little child, is gathering wild flowers in the fields. She meets Nona, an Indian girl, and gives her a bunch of flowers. Nona is greatly pleased and gives Mary a string of beads. An Indian, of the same tribe as Nona, tries to steal a horse belonging to little Mary's father, but is caught and given a severe beating. The Indian sees the child and decides to get revenge by kidnapping her. He watches his chance and when she is playing alone he grabs her and takes her to his camp. Nona recognizes her and by clever strategy takes her away from the camp. Mary is missed at home and cowboys go in search for her. They find Mary with Nona, and thinking her the one who had stolen the child, they treat her very roughly and take little Mary home, where she tells the whole story. The cowboys are then sent to find the Indian squaw. They attack the Indian camp and find Nona tied to a post. After killing several of the Indians and putting the rest to flight, they rescue Nona and take her to the welcoming arms of the ranchman's household.

RIVALS

Powers Release, November 21

You may say what you please in defense of our good country cousins, but they sure do have to look to the city man to learn how to make love, and this picture proves it. Of course, it is not the good old-fashioned way they talk about, but then, is not all fair in love and war? So it happens that when Si and Hiram confide in citified Jack that they are rivals for the hand of winsome Sue, that young gentleman essays to help them. And he does help them—to lose; for he loves her himself. He assumes to demonstrate to each of the rubes how a gift should be presented to a lady, and in so doing he appropriates all the favor that goes with candy and flowers that the rubes paid for to learn the art of courtship. It finally comes down to a point where the best man in a scrap is to win, and when they both appear after the fracas they both win—a kiss. Jack wins the girl.

VIEWS OF MONTSERRAT, ITALY

A cooling, refreshing glimpse of some grand Italian peasant landscape, from a railroad that wends its perilous way up the precipitous incline. Occasionally we stop for a view of a quaint old prayer house, and occasionally, just as if we begged the engineer to stop so that we may longer admire some particular view, we get a sweeping view of the majestic mountainland. Up hills, around gorges, and through dark tunnels we go, until the signs of village life tell us that the finest part of the trip is over.

JUG O' RUM

Powers Release, November 25

With the release of this film the jug of rum takes its place in history, occupying without question the niche so long filled by that famous apple from the Garden of Eden. As usual, the man is innocent of all blame, for he was a total abstainer and as far as he was concerned Aunt Maria could have been as militant as she pleased in her determination to keep liquor out of the hands of her husband, her son, the farm hands and every other man who crossed her path. Even little Toodles, her grand-daughter, had learned that the stone jug in the hayloft with the word "poison" painted across its width was good for rheumatism, but young Henry didn't even know that. He was growing lazy, it seemed to Aunty, but the truth is that he was deeply in love with Helen. Hired man though he was, his heart was deeply wounded by her indifference, and at last he decided to end it all. So he got a rope and the jug marked "poison" and hied himself to the elm tree. The hanging process, he found, was more painful than he thought, so he took a deep draught of the jug, then another, then still another, until the contraband liquor rendered him helpless. And it was just his fortune to be so found by Aunt Maria, and that good soul promptly decided that poor Henry was the real guilty party who had been encouraging drinking around the farm. And that same, poor, innocent Henry is promptly subjected to the Keely cure in its most primitive form—beneath the old farm pump.

A RENDEZVOUS IN HYDE PARK

Great Northern Release, November 18

Jack writes Mary a note asking her to meet him at three o'clock in Hyde Park. Highly elated, Mary asks her parents' permission to keep the appointment, but paterfamilias refuses consent. Lily has also an appointment with her lover at the same place at the same time. The two concoct a plan which in effect amounts to the substitution of each other's hats and jackets, and by this means they are able to get out of the house. Their absence is discovered, and their irate parents proceed to track them down. Meanwhile, their disguises have led to endless confusion between the girls and their lovers, but eventually matters have righted themselves, and when the happy quartet are discovered by their parents, the latter's ruffled tempers are smoothed down, and the double event soon occurs.

HIGH SCOTLAND

In this film we are taken by the Scotch Express to the heart of the Highlands, and thence to High Scotland. We pass through the beautiful scenery only to be found in the land o' cakes. Salmon fishing, a trip on the lochs, and mountain grandeur pass before the gaze in rapid succession, and the eye is charmed and the vision delighted by views of wondrous waterfalls and beautiful cascades. A film that should be an eye-opener to thousands and demonstrate the charms of Scotland's many natural beauty spots.

Telephone: 1664 Spring
Kitab Engraving Company
Makers of MOVING PICTURE NEWS HALF TONE CUTS
401 Lafayette Street, NEW YORK

FREE
CHRISTMAS DINNERS
FOR
300,000 POOR PEOPLE
Will be supplied by
The Salvation Army
Throughout the United States
Will you help by sending a donation, no matter how small
TO COMMANDER
MISS BOOTH

118 W. 14th Street, New York City
Western States, Commissioner Estill, 669 S. State St., Chicago

GET READY!

I am buying all those big feature films the Independent manufacturers are releasing. To make dead sure that you get them for your house, hook up with one of my offices and put a most beautiful crimp in your competitors. You can't get live stuff out of a junk graveyard. Come to headquarters for Laemmle films, Laemmle service and "Laemmle luck."

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

Headquarters:
New number 204 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Sykes Block, Minneapolis, Minn.
1312 Farman St., Omaha, Neb.
1110 Wyandotte St., Kansas City, Mo.
515 Mulberry St., Des Moines, Iowa.

The biggest and best film renter in the world.

(Make use of my Free Employment Bureau. It's the real thing!)

THE WORLD'S GREATEST THEATRE CHAIR

Sanitary, Space-Saving, Life-Saving, Money-Saving.
To Use This Chair Is to Make Your Business Grow.
Write Today for Circular W.

HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio.

QUICK—CHEAP—GOOD

OPERA CHAIRS

Ask for Catalog 306

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.,
218 So. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Theatre Sales Co.

211 Dearborn Street, opposite Post Office
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
Long Distance Phone, Harrison 341

Dealers in Theatres anywhere in the United States and especially Chicago. Write or Call.
Make Known your Wants

25c IN STAMPS GIVES YOU ONE COPY OF

HALLBERG'S

1912 MOTION PICTURE CATALOGUE AND REFERENCE BOOK

Special Jobber of

EDISON POWERS MOTIOGRAPH

Moving Picture Machines

The "Hallberg Economizer"

Used in connection with any of the above moving picture machines, produces the finest results on your screen that money can buy.

I Equip Theatres Completely

And carry in stock only the highest grade goods required for your theater.

Free catalogues, circulars and pamphlets furnished of individual items you require.

J. H. HALLBERG, 36 East 23d St. New York City.
Write for Free Catalogue No. 2.

One of the Most Modern European Film Manufacturers

Specialty: { MONOPOLY FILMS
SENSATIONAL FILMS
FEATURE FILMS

Will arrive in America about November 15th. All persons interested, write "M. O. R.," Moving Picture News

JUST OFF THE PRESS—THE NEW

MADISON'S BUDGET No. 14

By far the best book of comedy material I have ever written. Contents include 20 sure-fire parodies, 11 great monologues, 10 fine acts for two males, 6 acts for male and female, a splendid minstrel first part, an original one-act comedy, also brand-new acts for quartettes and sister teams, besides an almost endless assortment of newest gags, jokes, sidewalk patter, etc., etc.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR

MADISON'S BUDGET No. 14 is sold with the guarantee of being absolutely satisfactory in every way or money instantly refunded. Send orders to

JAMES MADISON
1404 Third Avenue, New York

AMUSEMENT MANAGERS

Learn of our AERIAL ATTRACTIONS, TOY RUBBER GAS BALLOONS, ELECTRIC SPARKLERS and Parade Torches. Illustration shows our COMET BALLOON in action. TWO complete large outfits $1. Write to-day and learn to-morrow of our many unique but effective AERIAL ADV. STUNTS that will arouse public interest and gather the crowds and shekels.

BRAZEL NOV. CO.,
Northside, Cincinnati, O.

BARGAINS. BARGAINS.

Motion Picture Machines $35 up. Lubin Cineograph, $65.

Motiograph $75. Motiograph and 3,000 feet of film, $125.

Motiograph (as new), $100. 20th Century Marvel $100. Powers Cameragraph No. 5 only $110. Model B Gas Outfits $25.

Mica Unbreakable Slides 50c each, by mail. Edison Model B, and Powers No. 6 Cameragraph new, are specialties.

Send for Supplement No. 33 Bargain List.

Motion Picture Machines Wanted.

HARBACH & CO., 809 Filbert St., Phila., Pa.

HAVILAND'S MOVING PICTURE PIANISTS' ALBUM and the MOVING PICTURE NEWS for one year, 52 issues. $2.00

Moving Picture Theater Pianists and Musical Directors should not forget that we give a copy of the F. B. HAVILAND MOVING PICTURE PIANISTS' ALBUM free with a year's subscription to the MOVING PICTURE NEWS.

WANTED

MOVING PICTURE PHOTOGRAPHER to take charge of Studio in Portland, Ore. Must own Moving Picture Camera. State experience and reference. Address ROSE CITY FILM EXCHANGE, Portland, Ore.

Advertisers want results. When writing to them it is our due that you mention The Moving Picture News

When Writing Advertisers Please Mention Moving Picture News

Data from Manufacturers' List of Releases

MEMBERS OF SALES CO.

AMBROSIO

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Sept. 27—Tweedledum's Auto Skates (Com.)
Oct. 4—Wrestlers and Wrestling.....
Oct. 11—The Little Chimney Sweeper.....
Oct. 14—Tweedledum's Monkey .....
Oct. 14—One of Tweedledum's Tricks (Com.)
Oct. 18—The Conversion of St. Anthony....
Oct. 25—Salambo .....
Nov. 1—Judas (Dr.) .....
Nov. 8—Dolly's Doll .....
Nov. 8—Tweedledum's Motor Car.....
Nov. 15—The Convict's Song (Dr.).....

AMERICAN

Oct. 9—The Land Thieves (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 12—The Cowboy and the Outlaw (Dr.).1000
Oct. 16—Three Daughters of the West (Dr.) 850
Oct. 16—The Caves of LaJolla (Sc.)..... 150
Oct. 19—The Lonely Range (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 23—The Horse Thief's Bigamy (Dr.)..1000
Oct. 26—The Trail of the Eucalyptus (Dr.).1000
Oct. 30—The Stronger Man (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 2—The Water War (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 6—The Three Shell Game (W. Dr.)..1000
Nov. 9—The Mexican (W. Dr.).....1000
Nov. 13—The Eastern Cowboy (W. Com.)..1000
Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Com.).....1000
Nov. 20—The Test (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 23—The Master of the Vineyard.....
Nov. 27—Jolly Bill of the Rollicking R.....
Nov. 30—The Sheriff's Sisters.....

CHAMPION

Oct. 4—As Things Used to Be..... 950
Oct. 9—The National Guard Encampment at Fort Riley 950
Oct. 11—What the Indians Did..... 950
Oct. 16—A Girl and a Spy (Dr.)..... 950
Oct. 18—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.).... 950
Oct. 23—The Copperhead 950
Oct. 25—Law or the Lady..... 950
Oct. 30—Field Day Sports at Ft. Riley, Kansas 950
Nov. 1—The Cowboy's Pies..... 950
Nov. 6—Folks of Old Virginia..... 950
Nov. 8—The Moonshiner's Trail..... 950
Nov. 13—The Redemption of a Coward..... 950
Nov. 15—The Passing of Sal..... 950

COMET

Nov. 20—Office Boy's Dream.....

ECLAIR

Sept. 11—How Teddy Lost His Bet (Com.).. 335
Sept. 18—Magic Music 330
Sept. 18—When the Leaves Fall..... 665
Sept. 25—A Just General (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—Hearts and Eyes 630
Oct. 2—For Your Hats, Ladies..... 370
Oct. 9—Better to Have Remained Blind (Dr.) 740
Oct. 9—The Motor Chair (Com.)..... 260
Oct. 16—A Lucky Change (Com.)..... 805
Oct. 16—Lake Garda (Scenic)..... 185
Oct. 23—Youth! Queen of Hearts" (Com.). 740
Oct. 23—Percy Gets Tired of the Theater (Com.) 260
Oct. 30—A Father's Heart (Dr.)..... 920
Nov. 7—Hands Across the Sea.....

GREAT NORTHERN

Aug. 12—Teddy Trained by His Mother (Com.) .....
Aug. 19—The Victory of Love (Dr.)..... 950
Aug. 26—A Traitor to His Country (Dr.)....
Sept. 2—The Foundling (Dr.).....
Sept. 9—A Dream with a Lesson.....
Sept. 16—The Conspirators (Dr.).....
Sept. 23—Caught in His Own Net (Dr.)....
Sept. 30—The Conspirators (Dr.).....
Oct. 7—The White Tulip (Com.).....
Oct. 7—Barcelona (Scenic) .....
Oct. 14—Secret of the Underground Passage (Dr.) .....
Oct. 21—His Fidelity Investigated (Com.)..
Oct. 28—The Vicissitudes of Fate (Dr.)....
Nov. 4—The Actor as Soldier (Com.).....
Nov. 11—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....

IMP

Independent Moving Picture Co. of America.

Sept. 14—The Brothers (Dr.).....1000
Sept. 18—The Great Charleston Hurricane Flood .....
Sept. 18—The Bicycle Bug's Dream.....
Sept. 21—By Registered Mail.....
Sept. 25—The Co-Ed. Professor (Com.)..... 750
Sept. 25—Through the Dells of the Wisconsin in a Motor Boat (Sc.)..... 250
Sept. 28—'Tween Two Loves (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 2—The Rose's Story (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 5—Through the Air (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 9—The Sentinel Asleep.....
Oct. 12—The Better Way.....
Oct. 16—Uncle Pete's Ruse.....
Oct. 19—The Aggressor .....
Oct. 23—The Biting Business.....
Oct. 26—The Waif .....
Oct. 30—His Dress Shirt.....
Oct. 30—A Few Minutes with Steeplejack Lindholm .....
Nov. 2—King, the Detective.....
Nov. 6—Waiting at the Church (Com.)...1000
Nov. 9—The Wife's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 13—The Fallin' Out.....
Nov. 16—Breaking the Seventh Commandment
Nov. 20—From the Bottom of the Sea.....
Nov. 23—Executive Clemency .....

ITALA

Aug. 17—Toto's Little Cart.....
Aug. 17—In the Valley of Viege.....
Aug. 19—Foolshead—Manikin .....
Aug. 19—The Blunt Sword.....
Aug. 24—Modern School of Italian Cavalry..
Aug. 26—Foolshead—Chauffeur .....
Aug. 26—For a Straw.....
Sept. 2—Clio and Phyletes.....
Sept. 7—The Infinitive Ways of Providence (Dr.) .....
Sept. 9—Foolshead Hypnotizer (Com.).....
Sept. 9—Toto Has a Purse.....
Sept. 16—The Horse of the Regiment (Com.)
Sept. 16—Foolshead Charges Himself with Removal (Com.) .....
Sept. 23—The Mask of the Red Death.....
Sept. 23—The Hornet .....
Oct. 7—Foolshead a Model Guest.....
Oct. 21—Foolshead Quarrels With His Sweetheart .....
Oct. 28—Toto and the Dummy (Com.).....
Oct. 28—The Rearing of Pheasants (Dr.)..
Nov. 4—Foolshead's Holiday (Com.).....
Nov. 11—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....
Nov. 11—A Victim of Competition.....
Nov. 28—Second Dr. Crippen.....

LUX

By Prieur.

Sept. 29—The Little Goatherd (Dr.)..... 386
Oct. 6—Bill Has a Bath (Com.)..... 452
Oct. 6—Neighbors (Com.) 488
Oct. 13—A Dog in a Coiner's Den (Dr.).... 593
Oct. 13—Bill, Police Cyclist (Com.)..... 390
Oct. 20—Bill Pays His Debts (Com.)..... 442
Oct. 20—Henpecked Bertie Goes Fishing (Com.) 514
Oct. 27—Bill, His Wife and the Water (Com.) 455
Oct. 27—Bertie and His Rivals (Com.)..... 472
Nov. 3—Bill and the Bear (Com.)..... 554
Nov. 3—Tommy's Camera (Com.)..... 393
Nov. 10—Bill Taken for a Ghost (Com.).... 426
Nov. 10—The Diversions of a Nursemaid (Com.) 495
Nov. 17—Saas Grund, a Village in the Alps (Sc.) 295
Nov. 17—The Mystery of Beaufort Grange (Dr.) 695
Nov. 24—Bill and Bertie Get Married (Com.) 325
Nov. 24—A Passing Cloud (Dr.)..... 658

MAJESTIC

Nov. 26—The Courting of Mary (Com.)....

NESTOR FILM COMPANY

Oct. 14—Mutt and Jeff and the Blackhand (Com.) .....
Oct. 14—Romance and Uppercuts (Com.)..
Oct. 18—The Town Marshal (Com. Dr.)....
Oct. 21—Mutt and Jeff Join the Opera Co.
Oct. 21—The Blessed Baby (Com.).....
Oct. 25—Lone Bill's Last Ride (Dr.).....
Oct. 28—Mutt and Jeff Discover a Wonderful Remedy (Com.).....
Oct. 28—Dippy Advertises for a Pup (Com.)
Nov. 1—Big Noise Hank (W. Com.).....
Nov. 4—Mutt and Jeff and the Lady Stenographer (Com.) .....
Nov. 4—The Suit Case Mystery (Com.)....
Nov. 8—A True Westerner (Dr.).....
Nov. 11—Desperate Desmond Almost Succeeds
Nov. 18—Mutt and Jeff and the Unlucky Stars (Com.) .....
Nov. 15—The White Medicine Man (Dr.)..
Nov. 18—That Kid from the East (Com.)...
Nov. 20—His Vacation .....

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. ("Bison")

Sept. 26—Lucky Bob .....
Sept. 29—White Fawn's Peril.....
Oct. 3—The Red Man's Penalty.....
Oct. 6—Range Justice .....
Oct. 10—The Pioneer's Mistake.....
Oct. 13—The Indian Rustlers.....
Oct. 17—A Western Bride.....
Oct. 20—A Warrior's Treachery.....
Oct. 24—A Noble Red Man.....
Oct. 27—An Indian Hero.....
Oct. 31—The Cattlemen's War.....
Nov. 3—A Young Squaw's Bravery.....
Nov. 7—A Race for a Bride.....
Nov. 10—Wenona's Broken Promise.....
Nov. 14—The Winning of Wonega.....
Nov. 17—The Ranchman's Mother-in-Law (Com. Dr.) .....

POWERS' PICTURE PLAYS

Sept. 26—Imaginative Willie (Com.)..... 670
Sept. 30—The Half-Breed's Atonement (Dr.) 970
Oct. 3—The Call from the Hills (Com.)...
Oct. 3—A Matrimonial Idyl (Dr.).....
Oct. 7—The Branded Indian (Dr.).....
Oct. 10—Large Lakes of Italy (Scenic).... 285
Oct. 10—Thou Shalt Not Steal (Com.)..... 700
Oct. 14—Running Fawn's Chief (Dr.)..... 990
Oct. 17—Yarn of a Baby's Shirt (Com.)...
Oct. 17—First Mail by Aeroplane (Topical).
Oct. 17—Headline Acrobats (Com.).....
Oct. 21—The Awakening of John Clark (Dr.) .....
Oct. 24—John Baxter's Ward (Dr.).....
Oct. 24—The Little Brown Calf (Dr.).....
Oct. 28—The Revenue Officer's Last Case (Dr.) .....
Oct. 31—Apples and Destiny (Com.).....
Oct. 31—The Progressive Book Agent (Com.)
Nov. 4—The Pride of the West (Dr.).....
Nov. 7—Mobilization of the American Fleet
Nov. 11—For the Tribe (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—When First We Met (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Tell-Tale Parasol (Com.).....
Nov. 18—The Old Leader (Dr.).....

RELIANCE

Oct. 21—Divorce .....
Oct. 25—The Empty Crib.....
Oct. 28—The Test of a Man.....
Nov. 1—A Mix-up in Suitcases.....
Nov. 4—The Greater Love.....
Nov. 8—Marriage .....
Nov. 11—The Track Walker.....
Nov. 15—The Moonshiners .....
Nov. 18—The Injustice of Man.....

REX

Sept. 14—Faith (Dr.) .....
Sept. 21—The Rose and the Dagger (Dr.)..
Sept. 28—The Derelict (Dr.).....
Oct. 5—Lost Illusions (Dr.).....
Oct. 12—Chasing a Rainbow.....
Oct. 19—Her Sister .....
Oct. 26—A Breach of Faith (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—The Tale of a Cat.....
Nov. 9—Saints and Sinners.....

SOLAX COMPANY

Oct. 11—He Was a Millionaire (Com.).....
Oct. 13—His Mother's Hymn (Dr.).....
Oct. 18—A Corner in Criminals (Com.)....
Oct. 18—A Lover's Ruse (Com.).....
Oct. 20—His Better Self (Mil. Dr.).....
Oct. 25—Percy and His Squaw (Com.).....
Oct. 27—For Big Brother's Sake (Dr.).....
Nov. 1—Following Cousin's Footsteps (Com.)
Nov. 3—A Heroine of the Revolution (Dr.)
Nov. 8—An Interrupted Elopement (Com.).
Nov. 10—Grandmother Love (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

Aug. 29—The Moth.....
Sept. 1—Romeo and Juliet, Part I.....
Sept. 5—Count Ivan and the Waitress.....
Sept. 8—Romeo and Juliet, Part 2.....
Sept. 12—The Buddhist Priestess (Dr.).....
Sept. 15—In the Chorus (Dr.) .....
Sept. 19—The Lie (Dr.).....
Sept. 22—The Honeymooners (Dr.).....
Sept. 26—Lochinvar (Dr.).....
Sept. 29—Love's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
Oct. 3—The Five Rose Sisters (Dr.).....
Oct. 6—The East and the West (Dr.).....
Oct. 9—The Higher Law (Dr.).....
Oct. 13—The Tempter and Dan Cupid (Dr.)
Oct. 17—The Early Life of David Copperfield
Oct. 24—Little Em'ly and David Copperfield
Oct. 31—The Loves of David Copperfield...
Oct. 20—The Satyr and the Lady (Dr.)....
Oct. 27—The Jewels of Allah (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—Their Burglar .....
Nov. 7—The Missing Heir (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—The Last of the Mohicans (Dr.)...
Nov. 14—The Higher—the Fewer (Com.)..
Nov. 17—A Mother's Faith (Dr.).....

YANKEE FILM COMPANY

Sept. 8—Mesmerizing Moe (Com.).....
Sept. 8—Faded Roses (Dr.).....
Sept. 11—Tangled Heartstrings .....
Sept. 15—Woman .....
Sept. 18—The Star Reporter.....
Sept. 22—The Girl and the Chauffeur (Dr.)..
Sept. 25—For the Wearing of the Green (Dr.)
Sept. 29—Man (Dr.) .....
Oct. 2—She Never Knew (Dr.).....
Oct. 6—The Goose Girl (Dr.).....
Oct. 9—His Second Wife.....
Oct. 13—Society Hobos .....
Oct. 16—The Lost Handkerchief (Com.)....
Oct. 20—The Man Who Came Back (Dr.)..
Oct. 23—The Drummer Boy of Shiloh (Dr.)
Oct. 27—Flower of the Forest (Dr.).....
Oct. 30—The Van Osten Jewels (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—At Daisy Farm (Dr.).....
Nov. 6—A Coward's Regeneration (Dr.)....
Nov. 10—He Didn't Like the Tune (Com.).
Nov. 13—Into the Light (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Two Rooms (Dr.).....

LICENSEES OF PATENTS CO.

BIOGRAPH

	Feet
Sept. 21—A Convenient Burglar (Com.	534
Sept. 25—The Revenue Man and the Girl (Dr.)	999
Sept. 28—Her Awakening (Dr.).....	997
Oct. 2—Too Many Burglars (Com.).....	499
Oct. 2—Mr. Bragg, a Fugitive (Com.).....	497
Oct. 5—The Making of a Man (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 9—Italian Blood (Dr.).....	999
Oct. 12—Trailing the Counterfeiter (Com.).	529
Oct. 12—Josh's Suicide (Com.).....	469
Oct. 16—The Unveiling (Dr.).....	998
Oct. 19—The Adventures of Billy (Dr.).....	999
Oct. 23—Through His Wife's Picture (Com.)	530
Oct. 23—The Inventor's Secret (Com.).....	468
Oct. 26—The Long Road (Dr.).....	999
Oct 30—Love in the Hills (Dr.).....	998
Nov. 2—A Victim of Circumstances (Com.).	382
Nov. 2—Their First Divorce Case (Com.)..	616
Nov. 6—The Battle (Dr.).....	1084
Nov. 9—The Trail of Books (Dr.).....	994
Nov. 13—Dooley's Scheme (Com.).....	530
Nov. 13—Won Through a Medium (Com.)..	467
Nov. 16—Through Darkened Vales (Dr.)....	990

EDISON

Oct. 25—The Fairies' Banquet (Com.).....	400
Oct. 25—How the Telephone Came to Town (Com.)	600
Oct. 28—An Island Comedy (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 28—The Kid from the Klondyke (Com.)	1000
Oct. 31—The Reform Candidate (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 1—The Rise and Fall of Weary Willie (Com.)	1000
Nov. 3—The Girl and the Motor Boat (Dr.).	1000
Nov. 4—Love and Hatred (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 7—A Modern Cinderella (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 8—Logan's Babies (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 10—The Black Arrow (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 11—Willie Wise and His Motor Boat (Com.)	650
Nov. 11—Icebergs Off the Coast of Labrador	340
Nov. 14—Ludwig from Germany (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 15—The Living Peach (Com.).....	600
Nov. 15—The Young Men's Christian Association	400
Nov. 17—The Ghost's Warning (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 18—The Story of the Indian Ledge (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 21—Life in the United States Army...	1000
Nov. 22—The Bosun's Watch (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 24—Home (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 25—A Perilous Ride (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 28—The Lure of the City (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 29—The Troubles of a Butler (Com.)..	1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Oct. 25—Athletics vs. Giants in the World's Championship Baseball Series of 1911 (Topical)	1000
Oct. 26—Too Many Engagements (Com.)...	1000
Oct. 27—Pals (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 28—The Forester's Plea (W. Dr.).....
Oct. 31—Outwitting Papa (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 2—The Right John Smith (Com.).....	364
Nov. 2—Hi Feather at the Fair (Com.)....	636
Nov. 3—Bill Bumper's Bargain (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 4—The Outlaw Deputy (W. Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 7—He Fought for the U. S. A. (Dr.).	1000
Nov. 9—Showing Uncle (Com.).....	400
Nov. 9—Gee Whiz (Com.).....	600
Nov. 10—The Empty Saddle (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 11—The Girl Back East (W. Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 14—Hubby's Scheme (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 16—President Taft at San Francisco..	1000
Nov. 17—The Point of View (Com.).....
Nov. 17—Excess Baggage (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 18—The Cattle Rustler's Father (W. Dr.)	1000

GAUMONT
G. Kleine

Oct. 3—Ajaccio, the Birthplace of Napoleon (Trav.	325
Oct. 7—The Upward Way (Dr.).....	726
Oct. 7—Cintra, a Picturesque Town of Portugal	269
Oct. 10—The Missing Bracelet (Dr.).....	1150
Oct. 14—Rejected (Dr.)	845
Oct. 14—Pansies (Botanical)	155
Oct. 17—Done Brown (Com.).....	837
Oct. 17—A Fairyland of Frost and Snow (Scenic)	163
Oct. 21—The Masked Huntsman (Dr.)....	784
Oct. 21—Opening Flowers (Botanical).....	216
Oct. 24—Jimmie in Love (Com.).....	555
Oct. 24—The Ostrich Plume Industry, France (Ind.)	428
Oct. 28—Fridolin	578
Oct. 28—The Principality of Monaco.....	400
Oct. 31—The Widower	1020
Nov. 4—The Jesting Princess (Com. Dr.)..	787
Nov. 4—Belgian Cavalry at Exercise (Mil.)	200
Nov. 7—The Vagabond (Dr.).....	623
Nov. 7—A Trip on a Dirigible Balloon (Topical)	331
Nov. 11—The Hour of Execution (Dr.).....	787
Nov. 11—Manresa, a Spanish Town (Travel)	200
Nov. 14—Jimmie and His Country Uncle (Com.)	820
Nov. 14—The Outskirts of Paris (Scenic)..	164
Nov. 18—The Reckoning (Dr.).....	875
Nov. 18—A Trip to Saxony.....	150
Nov. 21—The Sealed Confession (Dr.).....	900
Nov. 21—A Stone Quarry in Saxony.....	75

	Feet
Nov. 25—The Escape from the Dungeon (Dr.)	825
Nov. 25—Cave Homes in the Canary Isles..	180
Nov. 28—A Busy Cupid.....	758
Nov. 28—Review of the Austrian Army.....	232
Dec. 2—The Promoter (Dr.).....	1140

KALEM CO.

Oct. 6—The California Revolution of 1846 (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 9—The Mistress of Hacienda Del Cerro (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 11—For the Flag of France (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 13—The Smugglers (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 16—The Colleen Bawn (3 reels).....	3000
Oct. 18—Daniel Boone's Bravery (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 20—The Mesquite's Gratitude (Dr.)....	1000
Oct. 23—A Prisoner of Mexico (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 25—The Lost Freight Car (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 27—The Peril of the Plains (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 30—For Her Brother's Sake (Dr.)....	1000
Nov. 1—The Greatest of Engineering Feats.
Nov. 1—The Plot Against Bertie (Com.)...
Nov. 3—The Price of Ambition (Dr.).....
Nov. 6—The Luck of Reckless Reddy (Com.)	1000
Nov. 8—White Brave's Heritage (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 10—The Engineer's Daughter (Dr.)....	1000
Nov. 13—When California Was Won (Dr.)..	1000
Nov. 15—The Desert Well (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 17—The Fishermaid of Ballydavid (Dr.)	1000

LUBIN

Oct. 16—The Maniac (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 18—The Cure of John Douglas (Dr.)..	1000
Oct. 19—Git a Hoss (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 21—Tobacco Industry (Edu.).....
Oct. 21—Her Exclusive Hat (Com.).....
Oct. 21—Willie's Conscience (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 23—The Scandal Mongers (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 25—The Tars Ashore (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 26—A Rural Conqueror (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 28—Love's Victory (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 30—Somebody's Mother (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 1—A Gay Time in Atlantic City (Com.)	1000
Nov. 2—One on Reno (Com. Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 4—The Mexican (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 6—Aunt Jane's Legacy (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 8—Who Owns the Baby (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 9—Jack's Umbrella (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 11—The House that Jack Built (Dr.)..	1000
Nov. 13—His Chorus Girl Wife (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 15—Some Mother-in-Law (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 16—A Newsboy's Luck (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 18—A Romance of the '60s (Dr.).....	1000

G. MELIES.

Sept. 7—The Hobo Cowboy (Dr.).....	1000
Sept. 14—A Shattered Dream (Dr.).....	1000
Sept. 21—$200.00 (Dr.).....	1000
Sept. 28—The Mission Waif (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 5—The Stolen Grey (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 12—Tommy's Rocking Horse (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 19—The Cross of Pearls (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 26—The Gypsy Bride (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 2—Right or Wrong (Dr.).....	360
Nov. 2—Mexican as It Is Spoken (Com.)..	590
Nov. 9—The Spur of Necessity (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 16—The Miser Miner (Com. Dr.).....	1000

PATHE FRERES

Oct. 13—Raffles Caught (Dr.).....
Oct. 13—Guerrero Troup
Oct. 14—Maroonod (Dr.)
Oct. 16—The Gamhler's Dream (Dr.).....
Oct. 17—Pathe's Weekly No. 42.....
Oct. 18—The Ranch Girl's Terrible Mistake (Dr.)
Oct. 19—The Renegade Brother (Dr.).....
Oct. 20—A Trip Down the Magdapis River (Scenic)
Oct. 20—Eva Moves In (Com.).....
Oct. 20—Up the Flue (Com.).....
Oct. 21—A Puritan Courtship (Dr.).....
Oct. 23—The Traitor (Dr.).....
Oct. 23—Nomadic Tribes in El Kantara Gorges (Algeria) (Sc.).....
Oct. 24—Pathe's Weekly No. 43———
Oct. 25—Revolution in a Bachelor's Club (Com.)
Oct. 26—In Frontier Days (Dr.).....
Oct. 26—The Island of St. Kilda, Scotland (Sc.)
Oct. 27—Mother is Strong on Hypnotism (Com.)
Oct. 27—Funeral in Annam (Sc.).....
Oct. 27—Logging and Milling in Sweden (Sc.)
Oct. 28—Saved by the Flag (Dr.).....
Oct. 30—Grandfather's Violin (Dr.).....	754
Oct. 30—A Burlesque Bullfight (Com.).....	210
Nov. 1—Love Moulds Labor (Dr.).....	941
Nov. 2—A Sioux Lover's Strategy.....	899
Nov. 3—An Episode Under Henri III.....	968
Nov. 4—The Coward (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 6—Pathe's Weekly (No. 45).....
Nov. 7—Uncle's Money (Com.).....	321
Nov. 8—The Story of the Typewriter.....	960
Nov. 10—The Bandit's Bride (Dr.).....	236
Nov. 20—Pathe's Weekly
Nov. 21—Cain and Abel.....
Nov. 21—A Grouch Cure (Com.).....
Nov. 22—A Pinch of Snuff (Com.).....
Nov. 22—The Bari Tribe (Sc.).....
Nov. 23—Cowboy Life
Nov. 23—The Kioday Equilibrists.....
Nov. 24—Two Daughters of Havana (Dr.)..

	Feet
Nov. 24—Comic New Year Games in Singapore
Nov. 25—The Lost Necklace (Dr.).....

SELIG

Oct. 13—Seeing Washington (Sc.).....	575
Oct. 16—Making a Man of Him (Com. Dr.).	1000
Oct. 17—On Separate Paths (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 19—The Run on the Bank (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 20—His Better Self (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 23—Coals of Fire (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 24—Why the Sheriff is a Bachelor (Dr.)	1000
Oct. 26—Lost in the Jungle.....	1070
Oct. 27—A Painter's Idyl.....	1000
Oct. 30—Little Injin (Dr. Com.).....	1000
Oct. 31—Captain Brand's Wife.....	1000
Nov. 2—The Inner Mind.....	1000
Nov. 3—His First Long Trousers (Com.)..	500
Nov. 6—The Coquette	1000
Nov. 7—Western Hearts (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 9—Old Billy	1000
Nov. 10—Lieutenant Grey	1000
Nov. 13—In the Days of Gold (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 14—The Bootlegger (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 16—The New Superintendent (Dr.)...	1000
Nov. 17—A Spanish Wooing (Dr.).....	1000

URBAN ECLIPSE
G. Kleine

July 19—The Tie That Binds (Dr.).....	760
July 19—A Round-Up In Chili.....	240
July 26—An Amateur Skater.....	440
July 26—Satan on a Rampage.....	660
Aug. 2—The Struggle for Life.....	650
Aug. 2—On the Coast of Bengal.....	326
Aug. 9—The Heiress	705
Aug. 9—Lyons, the Second City of France.	295
Aug. 16—For the Honor of the Name (Dr.)..	790
Aug. 16—Moss-Covered Ruins on the Isle of Wight	245
Aug. 23—Condemned for Treason (Dr.).....	815
Aug. 23—Wool Industry of Hungary.....	135
Aug. 30—A King for an Hour (Com.).....	572
Aug. 30—Sights of Berlin.....	423
Sept. 6—Clever Beyond Her Years (Dr.)...	675
Sept. 6—Lake Thun in Switzerland (Scenic)	325
Sept. 13—The Hand of the Law (Dr.).....	665
Sept. 13—Norwich and Vicinity, England (Travel)	330
Sept. 20—In Ancient Days (Dr.).....	1000
Sept. 27—The Trials of a Tall Traveler (Com.)	458
Sept. 27—Manufacturing Fireworks (Ind.)..	542
Oct. 4—A Jealous Wife (Com.).....	338
Oct. 4—The Grand Chartreuse (Trav.)....	292
Oct. 4—Ezra and the Fortune Teller (Com.)	348
Oct. 11—Pardoned by the Governor (Dr.)..	646
Oct. 11—Making Cheddar Cheese (Ind.)...	342
Oct. 18—Ordered to Move On (Dr.).....	605
Oct. 18—Madeira, Portugal (Travel).....	385
Oct. 25—A Woman's Slave (Dr.).....	950
Nov. 1—Trapped (Dr.)	975
Nov. 8—An Eye for an Eye (His. Dr.)....1000
Nov. 15—The Hindu Jewel Mystery (Dr.)..1015
Nov. 22—Guy Fawkes (Dr.).....	1010
Nov. 29—The Mysterious Stranger (Dr.)....	610
Nov. 29—Salt Industry in Sicily.....	372

VITAGRAPH

Sept. 22—Forgotten (Dr.)	1000
Sept. 23—Over the Chafing Dish (Com.)....
Sept. 23—The Tired, Absent-Minded Man (Com.)	1000
Sept. 25—By the Camp Fire's Flicker.....	1000
Sept. 26—His Sister's Children.....	1000
Sept. 27—A Western Heroine.....	1000
Sept. 29—The Ninety and Nine.....	1000
Sept. 30—Her Hero	1000
Oct. 2—Our Navy	1000
Oct. 3—The Wager (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 4—The Mate of the John M. (Dr.)...	1000
Oct. 6—Carr's Regeneration (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 7—Ups and Downs (Com.).....	1000
Oct. 9—Daddy's Boy and Mammy.....	1000
Oct. 10—The Missing Will.....	1000
Oct. 11—The Indian Flute.....	1000
Oct. 13—Answer of the Roses.....	1000
Oct. 14—By Way of Mrs. Browning.....	1000
Oct. 16—The Fighting Schoolmaster.....	1000
Oct. 17—Vitagraph Monthly	1000
Oct. 18—Selecting His Heiress (Com.)....	1000
Oct. 20—The Cabin Boy (Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 21—Lady Godiva (His. Dr.).....	1000
Oct. 23—The Foolishness of Jealousy.....	1000
Oct. 24—Wig Wag	1000
Oct. 25—Aunt Huldah, the Matchmaker....	1000
Oct. 27—Kitty and the Cowboys.....	1000
Oct. 28—Regeneration	1000
Oct. 30—Captain Barnacle, Diplomat.....	1000
Oct. 31—Madge of the Mountains.....	1000
Nov. 1—Southern Soldier's Sacrifice (Dr.).	1000
Nov. 3—The Gossip (Com.).....	1000
Nov. 4—A Message from Beyond (Dr.)....	1000
Nov. 7—Auld Lang Syne (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 8—Arbutus (Dr.)	1000
Nov. 10—Who's Who (Com.).....	1000
Nov 11—An Aeroplane Elopement (Com. Dr.)	1000
Nov. 13—Suffer Little Children (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 14—The Girl and the Sheriff (Dr.)....	1000
Nov. 15—Their Charming Mamma (Com. Dr.)	1000
Nov. 17—The Little Spy (Dr.).....	1000
Nov. 18—Vitagraph Monthly of Current Events	1000

Solax

WEDNESDAY—COMEDY

"BABY NEEDS MEDICINE"

(COMEDY)

RELEASE OF NOVEMBER 8th

"HUSBANDS WANTED"

(COMEDY)

RELEASE OF NOV. 22nd

A rare good comedy of the right sort.

FRIDAY—MILITARY AND DRAMA

"ONLY A SQUAW"

(INDIAN DRAMA)

RELEASE OF NOVEMBER 17th

Wonderful Indian pictures, beautiful photography and well acted.

"THE WILL OF PROVIDENCE"

(COMEDY DRAMA)

A beautiful picture of heart interest and some very laughable scenes.

WE WANT— EVERY BUYER of films to take the pains to see our present productions— WHATEVER your opinion of our pictures in the past—TODAY you are sure to admit they are equal to the best turned out in this country—GO AND SEE THEM

Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE FLUSHING, L. I.

REMEMBER—ALL OUR FILMS ARE TINTED AND TONED
Sold exclusively through M. P. D. & S. Co.

Get on the Right Tack. The Power's Cameragraph No. 6 is the STAR PILOT

There are no breakers ahead for users of
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6
It is the machine above all others that insures easy sailing. Thousands of customers have read the "message in the stars" and purchased POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6—an investment that means a sure voyage to the "harbor of success."

Fourteen years of experience with POWER'S machines has taught the Moving Picture World that "POWER'S" means PERFECT.

It is superior to all other machines in its absence of flicker, steadiness of picture, ease of operation and freedom from noise.

POWER'S No. 6 is the latest product of the POWER'S factory.

POWER'S No. 6 is a money-maker every day in the week—it is never on the sick-list.

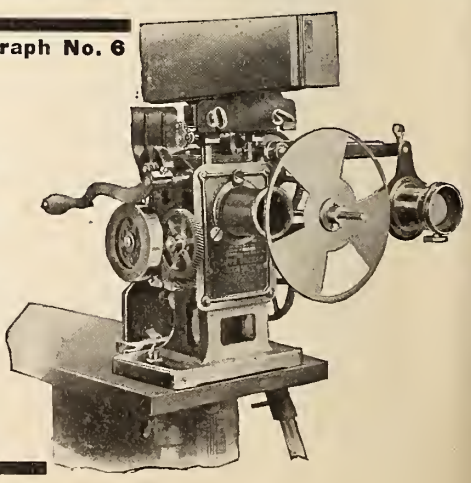
Send now for Catalogue D—and our special proposition.

NICHOLAS POWER CO.
115-117 NASSAU ST., NEW YORK
For fourteen years the leading makers of motion picture machines.



America, We Thank Thee!

After months of ceaseless struggle, after days and nights of anxiety and careful deliberation, gradually signs of understanding and recognition made themselves apparent until, finally, the vast majority of Independents in America gave promise of earnest support for our first Release in the land of Uncle Sam:

Hands Across the Sea in '76

(Released Tuesday, Nov. 21)

For this invaluable evidence of confidence in ECLAIR we are indeed thankful, and by our films will strive to merit the distinction shown us. Exchanges have nobly rallied to our side, nor have we advised a single exhibitor, among the thousands who wrote, to demand our first release. (Force is a poor weapon when measured with Quality, and the Legitimate Exchange is always anxious to please its clients.)

To those few whose order to the Sales Company has not gone forward, we would advise immediate action.

Our Releases for the Future

Send for our new Booklet, and keep posted on the coming issues.

ECLAIR FILM CO., STUDIO AND OFFICES FORT LEE, N. J.

BRANCHES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

SIXTY-ONE

BUYING EXCHANGES

CANADA
Applegath, L. J., & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Canadian Film Exchange, Toronto, Ont.
Gaumont Co., 154 St. Catharine St., Montreal, Que.
Gt. Western Film Co., 613 Ashdown Block, Winnipeg, Man.
Canadian Amusement Co., c/o Western Film Exchange, Savoy Theater Bldg., Vancouver, B. C.

CALIFORNIA
California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Bros., 1145 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Bros., 411 West 8th St., Los Angeles.
California Film Exchange, 514 So. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles.

COLORADO
Co-Operative Ind. Film Co., Barclay Block, Denver
W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 301 Railroad Bldg., Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
Washington Film Exchange, 428 9th St., N. W.

GEORGIA
Consolidated Film and Supply Co., Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS
Anti-Trust Film Co., 128 W. Lake St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 208 Fifth Ave., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Exchange, 98 Jackson Bldg., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 168 W. Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA
Central Film Service, 119 North Illinois St., Indianapolis, Ind.

IOWA
Laemmle Film Service, Suite 2 and 3, 515 Mulberry St., Des Moines.

KANSAS
Wichita Film & Supply Co., 122 N. Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA
Consolidated Film & Supply Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS
Boston Film Rental Co., 665 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Green Film Exchange, 228 Tremont St., Boston.

MARYLAND
Baltimore Film Exchange, 610 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore.

MINNESOTA
Laemmle Film Service, 256 Hennipen St., Minneapolis.

MICHIGAN
Michigan Film & Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.
Cadillac Film Exchange, 92 Griswold St., Detroit.

BUYING EXCHANGES

In the United States and Canada. If your Exchange is not on the list you had better look up the nearest one to you and make arrangements for your service there.

WEEKLY PROGRAM

MONDAY—Imp, Comet, American, Champion, (Nestor starts November 20th).

TUESDAY—Thanhouser, Bison, Powers, (Eclair-American starts November 21st).

WEDNESDAY—Champion, Solax, Reliance, Ambrosio, Nestor.

THURSDAY—Rex, American, Itala, Imp, Eclair.

FRIDAY—Comet, Solax, Lux, Thanhouser, Bison.

SATURDAY—Powers, Itala, Great Northern, Nestor, Reliance, Republic starts December 9th.

SUNDAY—Majestic starts November 26th. Republic starts December 10th.

ADDITIONAL RELEASES COMING (Exact Release Dates to be announced later—Solax, Imp, Rex and Powers).

BUYING EXCHANGES

MISSOURI
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.
Western Film Exchange, 15 W. 10th St., Kansas City.

NEBRASKA
Laemmle Film Service, 1312 Farnham St., Omaha.
Progressive Film Exchange, Elite Theater Bldg., Omaha.

NEW YORK CITY
Empire Film Exchange, 150 E. Fourteenth St.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 E. Fourteenth St.
Peerless Film Exchange, 5 East Fourteenth St.
Metropolitan Film Exchange, 110 Fourth Ave.
Western Film Exchange, 145 W. 45th St.

NEW YORK
Rex Film Exchange, 84 N. Pearl St., Albany.
Victor Film Service, 39 Church St., Buffalo.

OHIO
Buckeye Lake Shore Film Co., 422 N. High St., Columbus.
Central, 109 W. 5th St., Cincinnati.
Cincinnati Buckeye Film Co., 315 W. 4th St., Cincinnati.
Lake Shore Film & Supply Co., 106 Prospect Ave., S. E., Cleveland.
Toledo Film Service, 120 Erie St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OREGON
Independent W. F. Exchange, 84 Seventh St., Portland.

OKLAHOMA
United Motion Picture Co., 112 Main St., Oklahoma City.

PENNSYLVANIA
Eagle Film Exchange, 23 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Exhibitors' Film Service Co., 49 So. Penn Ave., Wilkesharre.
Philadelphia Film Exchange, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Projection Co., 44 No. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Swaab Film Service Co., 129 N. 8th St., Philadelphia.
Independent Film Exchange, 415 Ferry St., Pittsburg.
Pittsburg Photoplay Co., 412 Ferry St., Pittsburg.

TENNESSEE
Cons. Film & Sup., 95 S. Main St., Memphis.

TEXAS
Texas Film Exchange, 1315½ Elm St., Dallas.

WASHINGTON
Western Film Exchange, 807 Third Ave., Seattle.
Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN
Western Film Exchange, 307 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK

NOV 22 1911

MOVING PICTURE NEWS

Volume IV
No. 46

November 18
1911

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
NOV
23
1911
MEDICAL DIV.

PRICE
TEN CENTS

Scene from

"Hands Across the Sea in '76"

ECLAIR Release of November 21st

"REMEMBER THE MAINE"

Mr. State Right Buyer, and wire in your bid for the

SUREST SUCCESS

since the birth of Moving Pictures

The Awe Inspiring Two Reel Historical Feature

Every Man, Woman and Child in YOUR STATE

1898

Taken by Special Permission of United States Government

! ! !

"THE MYSTERY OF THE MAINE"

1911

Will be Waiting Anxiously to See These Wonderful Pictures

! ! !

Do not let this golden opportunity to secure the biggest money maker in America get by YOU as we are getting offers EVERY HOUR!

Write or Wire to the

RAISING-THE-MAINE FILM COMPANY

145 West 45th Street Suite 804 NEW YORK CITY

The MAJESTIC

Desires to publicly thank the Exchanges which have placed standing orders for MAJESTIC PICTURES

¶ THE EXCHANGES have placed their orders without the formality of seeing our product—we are doubly thankful for this confidence and consequently cannot and will not disappoint them.

¶ THE EXHIBITORS should not hesitate to cooperate with all exchanges which constantly strive to improve the Independent Service.

¶ Ninety per cent of our pictures will be high class comedy and split reels.

¶ THE FIRST MAJESTIC, "THE COURTING OF MARY," will be released on Sunday, November 26th, and the many friends of LITTLE MARY PICKFORD and OWEN MOORE will have the opportunity of renewing their acquaintance with these favorites.

SECOND MAJESTIC RELEASE—December 3
"LOVE HEEDS NOT SHOWERS"

THIRD MAJESTIC RELEASE—December 10
"THE ULTIMATE END"

FOURTH MAJESTIC RELEASE—December 17
"LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD"

EXHIBITORS—DO YOUR BOOKING IN ADVANCE

THE MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.

145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Sold through Motion Picture Dist. & Sales Co.

THE THANHOUSER WO-A-WEEK

Let Us Help Decorate Your Lobby for the Holidays —Mail Us the Coupon in the Lower Left Hand Corner

RELEASED TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 28

SHAKESPEARE'S — THE TEMPEST — COMPLETE IN ONE REEL

Here is another in the Thanhouser Shakesperean series that you'd better get busy featuring. The storm effects are exquisite—easily better than any ever seen in a stage production of this play. The subject gives chances aplenty for pretty settings, and you'll see that our producers utilized them to the extreme. The story is a very smooth-running, simple and familiar one. It will be relished in all corners of the house.

SCENE FROM "THE TEMPEST"

RELEASED FRIDAY, DECEMBER 1

The Story of a Test

BENEATH THE VEIL

she faced him and tried him. He encompassed the trial successfully and furnished this film with its great big climax. She was a dashing beauty and he—an artist who loved the beautiful—loved her for her good looks alone. She lost these in a sudden accident. And with her pretty face, she lost him. At least, she appeared to lose him, and here came his great trial. The film describes it fittingly and prettily pictures its very dainty sequel.

DON'T FORGET THE GREATEST IN FILM HISTORY

DECEMBER 12 (TUES.) LADY FROM SEA, (IBSEN)
22 (FRI.) CINDERELLA
26 (TUES.) "SHE"

THANHOUSER CO., NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.:—Send me FREE Lobby Decorations for your "Greatest December" features. I am not getting "The Thanhouser News." I am (NAME).....

(ADDRESS).....

(EXCHANGE).....

CLIP AND MAIL THIS DAY

THANHOUSER CO.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.

Sales Company agents for U. S. and Canada.

Cines Company of Rome

STUDIOS AND FACTORIES Rome and Padova

CAPITAL

PREFERRED STOCK	LIRE 2,000,000
ORDINARY STOCK	3,750,000
FULLY PAID UP	LIRE 5,750,000

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR THE FIRST SERIES ARE NOW ALL SOLD, AND THE NEXT SHIPMENT EXPECTED ABOUT END OF MONTH, SHOWING AVIATORS IN WARFARE, EPISODES OF LAST ENGAGEMENT, INSURRECTION OF ARABS. APPROXIMATELY 1,000 FEET.
ORDERS EXECUTED IN STRICT ROTATION. POSTERS.

BRANCH FOR THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

445 Broome St., Cor. Broadway, New York City

TELEPHONE: SPRING 9232 TELEGRAPH: CINES NEW YORK

©Cl.B249489

"The contents of this issue are copyrighted"

The Moving Picture News

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY

The CINEMATOGRAPH PUBLISHING COMPANY, 30 West Thirteenth Street, NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 4092 Chelsea

Sole Agent and Correspondent for advertisements in Great Britain
B. Allan, 8 Sherwood St., Piccadilly Circus, W., London

Chicago Representative: Warner Kennedy.
844 Waveland Ave. 'Phone 3818 Lake View

ALFRED H. SAUNDERS, Editor.

This newspaper is owned and published by the Cinematograph Publishing Company, a New York corporation. Office and principal place of business No. 30 West 13th Street, New York. Alfred H. Saunders, President; John A. Wilkens, Secretary, and W. M. Petingale, Treasurer. The address of the officers is the office of the newspaper.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Postpaid in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada and Foreign Countries: $2.50 per year. All communications should be addressed to The Moving Picture News, 30 West Thirteenth Street, New York City.
ADVERTISING RATES: $60 per page, $30 ½-page, $15 ¼-page, single column $20, $2 per inch. Discounts, 20% 12; 10% 6; 5% 3 months.

Volume IV November 18, 1911 Number 46

THE DAILY PAPERS

WE must confess to be completely puzzled regarding the attitude of the daily press, especially some of the narrow-minded and prejudiced parsons, bishops, archbishops, and whatever sort of things they like to call themselves, in the action they are taking in protesting against the moving picture. It is a well-known fact that many of these men have never placed their foot inside a moving picture show, and when they have been forced to attend they have altered their opinion considerably. At one of the missionary meetings some short while ago one prominent Canon made a statement that every moving picture show was a sink of iniquity. We made the offer to take this man from the Battery to the Bronx, from the Bronx to Harlem, from Harlem to the Battery again, visiting every show that we met on our way, and if he could find a single show showing indecent or objectionable films, we offered to give $1,000 towards an enterprise in which he was very strongly interested. The only reply we got was: "Oh, I have not got time, besides I would not degrade myself by visiting such places." We know of many religious people who are constantly using the moving picture show for the education of themselves and also for a little amusement, that have nothing but the highest praise to speak concerning the same. On other pages will be found due and fair criticisms of the New York World, which are justly deserved and which is acting in a narrow-minded, prejudiced and illogical method of work, and if those enquirers would put sensible men to examine the condition of affairs, we feel sure that they would take a right-about face in their methods of criticism and they would acknowledge that the moving picture show is the poor people's house of amusement and that they fill a long-felt want, and while some of the pictures should be suppressed owing to the ridiculous nonsensical attitudes used in Wild West and such like pictures—and in one instance we noticed a modern American flag with all the stars therein used in a picture representing the time when only thirteen states were in the Union—leaving these small things out, we feel sure that nothing but advancement and education follows in the wake of the moving picture.

In contradistinction to the New York World we want to turn to the New York Evening Journal who simply stole our thunder on the education of the future. If our readers will get the Evening Journal for Friday, November 10th, they will find therein an article on "Show Children the Real World. The Moving Picture—the Great Educator of the Future." They will observe that articles which have been written by Miss MacDonald, Mrs. Metcalfe, especially with her psychology for education ,and ourselves, they will find an exemplification of the saying that "great minds run in grooves together." We commend the New York Journal for its stand and trust that they will use our columns for still greater power in educating their readers ,and if the exhibitors in the various districts (where some of these antagonists, through a mistaken motive, are trying to create disturbances) would invite the whole of the community to a free exhibition to their show for one night and show them the quality we feel sure that it would be the best advertisement they could ever obtain, when the exhibitors have risen to the occasion, when they can expunge the silly Wild West pictures out of their programmes, leaving the better class Western dramas, they will have secured a wonderful educational advance for moving pictures in the localities which are now so blackened by yellow jaundice journals.

THE COPYRIGHT ACT

WE are gratified to find that the Supreme Court of the United States has upheld the copyright in stories, and that in future it must be the province of every producer of a film seeking permission from the owners of the copyright before they produce the story in detail. The following is a report of the act taken on the "Ben Hur" picture film:

SCENES TAKEN FROM COPYRIGHTED BOOKS ARE INFRINGEMENTS

Moving picture show promoters received a blow to-day when the Supreme Court of the United States decided that moving pictures, based on the scenes of a copyrighted book, may constitute an infringement of the copyright on the book or the reserved rights to dramatize.

The court's decision was announced in a contest over the copyright of General Lew Wallace's famous book, "Ben Hur." The copyright was owned by Harper & Brothers, book publishers. This company granted to Klaw & Erlanger, of New York, the sole right of producing a dramatization of the story.

It appears that the Kalem Company employed a writer to read the story and write a description of certain portions of it, and that from this a moving picture film was produced. The Federal courts of New York held that the Kalem Company was a contributory infringer, not of the copyrighted book or drama, but on the author's exclusive right to dramatize his writings and publicly to perform that dramatization. The Kalem Company was enjoined from continuing to produce or sell the films.

The Supreme Court affirmed this action in an opinion by Justice Holmes.

In referring to the above we want to go back to the time that the Kalem people were about to produce this "Ben Hur" picture, and while it is not our province to say "We told you so," yet at the same time we want to point out that to both Mr. Marion and Mr. Long, of the Kalem Company, we expressed our opinion strongly and freely on the foolishness of their producing "Ben Hur." We had quite a lengthy argument and were told we did not know what we were talking about.

It has always been our contention that a copyright paper, book, or writing should not be used without full permission from everyone concerned in this matter, and as such the Moving Picture News has always acted, and every article we publish is copyrighted and can be used by all asking or acknowledging the source from whence they obtained it. If we use a story or an article from any other paper or magazine we always gain permission first to use the same, then we know we are on the right side. We always fully believe that credit should be given where credit is due, and when stories, or tales, or books, are copyrighted, it is better to pay the royalty demanded rather than hold themselves amenable to the law, and if the Kalem Company had taken our advice they would have been spared a vast amount of expense.

We had in mind when we argued with the Kalem people (especially with Mr. Marion) the fact that the Riley Optical Company had produced a series of lantern slides and they had been prosecuted on this copyright work and lost in the general run. The Supreme Court held that they were only entitled to use special pictures that they had had drawn, but no lecture should ever be given or any reading should follow or illustrate the lantern slides exhibited. This ought to have been sufficient to debar anyone else using the same stories without full permission.

We specially refer to the above in the hope that our readers will take notice in the future, and avoid using anything of the nature of copyright products without gaining the consent and full permission for the use. The same advice also applies to the films that are imported into this country and copyrighted, and we believe that foreign books are also now protected under the International Copyright Laws so that authors are now getting to be better safeguarded as to their rights and privileges for the use of their brains.

WILD WEST PICTURES

THE vast amount of letters sent to us regarding the Western film stories if published in our columns would about fill three issues, and out of this batch there is not one single letter in favor of the production of this class of films. The public is getting utterly sick and tired, utterly disgusted with the bad photography, the illogical stories, the poor acting, the general shooting and hold-up, that is being illustrated in these Wild West pictures, and, with the exhibitors, we feel the time has come when some stay should be made in thrusting these subjects before the public. Not only are the Wild West subjects absolutely incongruous, but they offend the better taste of the Western people, the settlers in Western towns, and all who are trying to uplift the industry from an educational standpoint. The stories as a general rule are so ridiculous, the chases are so long carried out and long-winded, with very little point or pointers attached to them, and the most foolish scenes of the whole lot are the vast number of revolver shots fired in such an aimless, nonsensical, idiotic manner. A party of dressed-up poor actors fire dozens upon dozens of shots, and not a single man is hit by the bullets, making the whole film ridiculous and the actors taking part in the productions of these films laughing stocks to the people of Nickelodia.

A letter from an exhibitor on another page meets with our full sympathy. We believe the time is ripe when the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League should vote against the exhibition of such foolish pictures in their houses. Some of the pictures show, or attempt to show, in an extremely foolish manner, Indian life which is about as absurd a caricature as it is possible for any set of men to depict. We do not wonder that Indians object to having themselves shown in such a foolish, illogical manner as is represented and portrayed in the moving picture film.

If it is necessary to produce Western subjects, let them be produced with an elevating, uplifting story, so that some lesson may be taught in the production. Within the last three months we have made a special study of Western films, and not only have we not taken one, but every manufacturer who produces these films and have tried to find a lesson in some of the stories and, in our opinion, we think it would have been better taste for the exhibitors to have eliminated every single one of the films we have seen during the past three months.

It is not a question with us as to who manufactured the films. It is a question if that or those films are of any real utility to the people of Nickelodia. It is a question whether they gain any advantage from witnessing such illogical, far-fetched scenes in which there is not one iota of truth, or possibility, or probability of anything of such like nature ever happening. In fact, they are so farfetched that we might describe them as an abomination or tissue of false impressions. It has been to us a wonder that the Censorship Board has not to some extent put their foot down with a view of suppressing such a large number of shootings, which have a tendency to impress the young mind and make them feel that these are every-day occurrences instead of mere flights of imagination resulting in bad photography, and still worse posing and acting.

We feel quite sure that in putting the above before our readers and making an appeal to the manufacturers that these men whom they employ either as directors, or actors, or producers, or scenario writers, are better fitted to write and produce real good plays of an uplifting nature which will be very much superior to the products they are now turning out. In the writing of the above we are voicing the sentiment of many members of the Exhibitors' League as well as hundreds of patrons of the moving picture theater.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," advises us that he has been appointed wholesale jobber of Edison Moving Picture Machines by the Thos. A. Edison Co., Inc., and is in position to make immediate shipment of latest model machines with improved large lamphouse, etc. He also reports the sale of two Model B. Edison Moving Picture Machines with Hallberg Economizers to A. Schurman, Asheville, N. C.; and one Edison Model B., with Hallberg Economizer, to C. E. Jourdan, Durham, N. C.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE CINEMATOGRAPH
THE PRESS AND THE PICTURE

By Leonard Donaldson

I HAVE read your editorial anent the daily press and moving pictures with interest. It is with little surprise that I notice the moral and uplifting tendencies of the motion picture have been questioned. These matters are continually receiving the careful attention of a "spleeny" press, on the other side, who have failed to draw an advertising revenue from the film industry, and in England at this time, although the malady has temporarily ceased in London, it has commenced in the provinces. A daily newspaper with a large circulation in and around Birmingham has discovered that the public do not wish to be educated, but, rather, prefer to be entertained and amused with a lurid melodrama or the comedy chase film.

"The picture theater has now been with us so long, and promises to remain so firmly established, that it is interesting to inquire into the causes of its astonishing poularity," says the journal in question. "For this there are diverse explanations. The promoter wishes to demonstrate that the films possess great educational value. His theory of the picture theater is that the general public pays to be educated, and that the only really popular films are those representing foreign lands and customs, the lives of flowers or animals, or interesting events of the day. The mind of the patron is to be expanded, and so the philanthropic promoter is to train his audience up to the level of his pictures. But practice points to a different idea. The cheapest kind of theater should be the best example of the tastes of such a public as attends this species of entertainment, and in there it will almost invariably be found, as far as London is concerned, that the astute manager, discarding his glorious educational theory, suits his pictures to his audiences. The public, in reality, does not wish to be educated, and the result is the inclusion of only one educational film in a whole program. The remainder is a very good reflex of the everyday London character. A lurid melodrama evokes storms of applause, and many patrons are reduced to tears by the combined effect of picturesque murder and the diligent five-finger exercises of the pianist. Almost as popular is what is known as the "Comic," which rivals the music halls in the primitive nature of its humor, and the hero must be a man of iron nerve, for his adventures are greatly of the most harrowing description. For the rest, the greatest favor is shown to "potted" love affairs, especially if they be between Red Indians; while only scant applause is given to the various audacious compressions of famous books that appear from time to time. In one London suburb, for instance, there are being played at the same time extracts from the "Inferno," the "Iliad," and the Bible; a truly electric combination for penny standing room and two-penny "tip up" seats.

I suppose, patient reader, you and I should feel "floored" at these assertions, and that the M. P. N. is conducting a vain and fruitless campaign in the cause of the educational film. Our contemporary's arguments are altogether too childish to merit an analysis. I have no hesitation as a Londoner in asserting that not one of the statements quoted have the slightest relation to facts, and further dare to contend that every positive statement in the article in question, except that in reference to the popularity of the picture theater, is the precise antithesis of the fact. In my opinion, criticism of this type might be described in strong terms, but the "means" is not of sufficient importance to justify the "end." These facts do not, and will not, affect another fact, which is really the all-important one, that this form of entertainment has come to stay, develop and educate, and that it is not going to be sneered or snuffed out by a bigoted press who have been unable to secure the advertising support of those they are attempting to kill! That the picture theater is growing in influence and importance day by day is demonstrated, were proof needed, by the venomous attacks with which it is from time to time assailed.

THE FAMILY THEATER

Father's Idea

I often go to the picture show
After my work is done.
There I can see what pleases me,
As the plays are run.
Price is small, within reach of all,
Show is just long enough.
Grave or gay—I invariably say:
A picture show's the stuff!
I generally go to the Nickelo.

Mother's Opinion

I frequently go to the picture show
For a little relaxation,
And obtain a view of what is new
Over our State and nation.
Neighbors attend, they like it, friend;
See how they are dressed!
Women's clubs mean sniffs and snubs,
A picture show's the best!
I always go to the Nickelo.

Daughter's Statement

I like to go to the picture show,
And my "steady" goes along.
We fancy reams of those love scenes,
They cannot come too strong!
Most any night when things are right
We take in every stand.
I always feel, with each new reel,
That picture shows are grand!
I love to go to the Nickelo.

Willie's Assertion

It's great to go to the Nickelo.
Teacher likes to go, too.
Ain't no harm, sez our school mar'm,
Fer it teaches us somethin' new.
Wuz out last night; seen th' derndest fight;
An' they shot a crockodile!
Seen a 'mobile race, an' a cowboy chase—
A picture show's worth while!
It's bully to go to th' Nickelo.

—William Lord Wright.

THE AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

This company through their manager, Mr. Nehls, and press agent, Mr. Doud, are issuing some very attractive four-scene posters. Either of them could be made a special for itself or the whole four posted on a board. They would certainly attract a great deal of attention. The picture and condensed synopsis are in the center, making a very effective and an attractive showing. We think this is a step towards popularizing their products.

DOROTHY GIBSON

It was the pleasure of one of our staff recently to meet and converse with Miss Dorothy Gibson of the Eclair Company of America. The accompanying reproduction of a photograph of Miss Gibson, and which is true to life, speaks for itself of the almost faultless beauty of the original. However, beauty of feature, coloring, and form, is not Miss Gibson's only charm. By conversing with her it is found that she is a most charming and unassuming young woman, who uses that beauty not merely as a medium to arouse envy in others of her sex, but as a beautiful gift from her Creator, by the grace of which gift, accompanied by remarkable talent as an actress, she earns an honest living.

Miss Gibson was for some time the model of Harrison Fisher, and belonged to the stock company of Lubin and others before becoming a member of the stock company of the American Eclair. Said Miss Gibson, of her employers, "They are the most charming people to work for. I think the reason why I like my work so much now is because I have such nice people to work for."

MISS DOROTHY GIBSON

Miss Gibson played the part of Mollie Pitcher in "Hands Across the Sea in '76," and her work will be seen to advantage in many Eclair releases to come.

THE PROPOSED ORDINANCE AND ITS ENEMIES

By Margaret I. MacDonald

CIVILIZATION is a heavy, cumbersome load for the evolutionists to carry along. The clumsiness of some of the methods of progression as applied by some of our would-be philanthropists is a menace to the bulwarks of rapid progression. In no instance is this evidenced more strongly than in the attitude of many of the clergy and others interested in philanthropic work toward the moving picture and the moving picture theater.

To those who have taken the trouble, as some members of our staff have done, to investigate in the smaller show houses of our city, and having found therein no harm, it ceases to be amusing, but on the other hand becomes an annoyance to be obliged to listen to behind-the-times criticisms of a not only useful industry, but a vehicle for the distribution of knowledge such as the world has never known.

It is true that man has not yet attained to a perfect moral development, and among some 800 managers of moving picture shows in so large a city as New York, it is not to be wondered at if some one or two have failed in their duty toward humanity. In fact, to unprejudiced investigators the marvel is that so much good and so little bad is to be found in these same much-abused picture houses. To impress on the public mind that what constituted a condition of yesterday may be absent from a condition of to-day, seems well nigh an impossibility. We are not deteriorating, my friends. Each day shows some advancement along the road of progression. If you have found to-day a condition which has displeased you, it would be best to look again to-morrow, before speaking of it, to make sure that it has not taken wings in the night. Evolution is at work; therefore do not be guilty of stretching forth your hand to retard her progress.

As the moving picture show is to-day there is little harm for the child. The majority of the moving picture theaters are now almost as light as the ordinary theater. The modern moving picture screen is so constituted that extinguishing of lights is unnecessary.

Every day that goes by lessens the danger in moving picture houses, in both a physical and moral sense.

We might remind the clergymen who are so loud in their denunciation of the proposed ordinance regulating moving picture houses that within their own circle are to be found men who are no more responsible so far as guidance and association with the young is concerned than are some of the least responsible of our exhibitors.

I have infinite respect for Mr. John Collier, who in his unprejudiced way sees not one side alone, but two sides to the question. I agree with Mr. Collier that next to church and home the coming moving picture show will be the best place in the city for children to congregate, and that they will be much better off there than in the street.

As the Lord said unto Abraham in question of the wickedness of Sodom "If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city, then I will spare all the place for their sakes." And Abraham, continuing down the scale until the number ten was reached, said, "Oh, let not the Lord be angered and I will speak yet but this once: peradventure ten shall be found there?" And the Lord said "I will not destroy it for ten's sake."

And now since the above quotation dates back several hundreds of years, may we not in deference to our present advanced state of civilization venture to revise the suggestion: peradventure that among 800 moving picture exhibitors there be ten irresponsible human beings, wolves in sheep's clothing, reptiles with the semblance of doves, or whatever other synonym you choose to apply, shall all of the 790 responsible exhibitors be made to suffer because of these ten? It seems to me that such a proceeding would be entirely at variance with our modern ideas of justice. Why not eliminate from the ranks of the moving picture exhibitors such men as wilfully encroach upon the laws of decency and moral judgment instead of branding the entire industry.

I want to say to the clergy, among whom I have met many a good fellow, if you will only take the time to go about among the moving picture houses, large and small, you will be greatly surprised to find in any of them very little, if anything, to offend the moral sense, and a great deal to satisfy the desire to educate the masses. Here the person who has a limited opportunity for travel or for mixing in scientific circles gets a knowledge of the homes and customs of their brothers and sisters in foreign lands, as well as an insight into sciences to which they have given little thought if any. Mixing with manufacturers, one of the great delights of my life is to witness the honest sincerity of the moving picture man, and his earnestness in persuing an elevated ideal. The moving picture has not reached perfection by any means, and the manufacturer of the moving picture to make it the success that it is bound to be in the artistic and educational world requires a great deal of intelligent, careful thought, prior to the preparation for the photography of any subject. The making of the moving picture is on its way to being classed among the fine arts. Criticism without proper investigation is very bad; and this is what we feel has occurred with regard to disapproval of the recent proposed ordinance.

Gentlemen of self-imposed service upon the jury to pass sentence on the moving picture show, please investigate more thoroughly before you again advance a verdict, and let your investigation be that of to-day and not yesterday. Evolutionists and advanced theorists have not time to loiter. They are hurrying toward a perfect civilization.

Marion Leonard

A Message from the Stars to the Brightest One of Them

TWINKLE, TWINKLE, LITTLE STAR,
HOW WE WONDER WHERE YOU ARE!
UP ABOVE OUR SALARIES SO HIGH—WILL YOU TELL US BY AND BY?
* * * * * * *
AND ECHO ANSWERS, "WHERE?"

A NEW ONE! A DUPLEX STUDIO!

P. A. Powers takes the latest honors for originality. In planning his new studio on West 42nd street, he conceived the idea of getting four times the work out of it that such a studio can ordinarily do, and it is all summed up in the words—Duplex studio.

It typifies the new Powers system of time and labor saving moving picture production, embracing an ingenious arrangement of portable lights and two stages. The work of this novel arrangement will be watched by the trade with interest, and we have no doubt but that Mr. Powers will make the word "Duplex" stand for the highest in picture quality.

Aided by Tom Evans and Leon J. Rubenstein, Mr. Powers is now gathering a mighty staff about him, and the trade will get its Christmas present in advance of the day, in the shape of the first release from the Powers Duplex studios.

Winston-Salem, N. C.—W. E. Pike will erect theater here.

Tampa, Fla.—Orpheum Theater Co. will expend about $7,000 to remodel the Orpheum Theater.

Louisville, Ky.—Fidelity Trust Co. will expend about $4,000 to remodel building at 226 West Market street for moving picture theater.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.—Eli Nelson, of the Gem Theater, will erect a new theater building at Ladysmith. W. H. Goff, of Bruce, has contract.

Mason City, Ia.—The Wilson Theater, which was destroyed by fire, will be rebuilt.

New York, N. Y.—Sam Schwartz will establish a moving picture theater in the building at 120th street and Sylvan Place to cost $5,000.

La Grange, Ohio.—Princess Company, capital $1,600, will erect new theater; O. B. Ratcliffe, W. O. Ratcliffe and J. N. Frankel.

WHAT SHALL THE YOUNG PEOPLE READ?

Extreme Impressionable Period in Early Youth—Sights Create Impressions—Impressions Charge the Sub-conscious Self for Future Thought—Thought Suggests Acts—Deeds Make or Mar the Character of the Man

By Mary Lawton Metcalfe, D. A. R.,
Electra Sparks National Press

SOME few years ago the clubs for so-called child study became so popular that it amounted to a positive fad. All over the world learning to interpret the mind of the child from its first "mewling cries" seemed to be a subject of primary interest to professors and young mothers. Even bachelors and maids of the teachers fraternity formed child-study clubs.

Perhaps it was this great wave of concentrated enthusiasm for the welfare of the life of each little future citizen which stirred the minds of twenty-eight of the greatest American scholars to meet in weeks of a conference to a specific question: What shall young folks read?

It was decided that it is necessary to preserve psychological laws of child-development in providing ideas from the earliest stages of intelligence. The Young Folk's Educational League for supplying pure literature from kindergarten grades through high school was organized in New England.

The first point conceded by these twenty-eight American men and women of colleges and universities was:

To make impression on the mind, we must get the attention of the child.

In my constant talks to the mothers' and teachers' clubs in Greater New York that has been the keynote of suggestion.

Get the attention, teacherettes and suffragettes. It is my personal experience, as a teacher and organizer of relief and civic clubs, that I could put in more spice in ten minutes fresh talk with attention of the crowd than some people who grind out apologies for their remarks, until the audience begin the whispering tête-à-têtes and then behold—the best ideals fall flat as cold buckwheats.

It seems positively ridiculous that an intelligent man, or committee of men or women, should say that they see no good in moving pictures and stereopticon teaching in the public school system. It simply shows what incompetent persons are filling the most important offices, directly and indirectly preventing the practical education of young people.

Let me say with the word made flesh in my mind:

The moving picture has no rival in the classroom or in the church to attract attention.

Every Board of Education in the United States will be forced to recognize this fact when mothers are allowed to act officially as members of American Boards of Education.

Oh, it is sickening to read the names of those to whom are entrusted the million lives of future men and women.

Conservatism? Bah. Yes, there are parents to-day who say in cold complacency: "What was good enough for my grandfather is good enough for me." Whole communities are muzzled in progress by this so-called conservatism.

It is the same with the churches. Righteous bishops, priests and deacons are so afraid that more people will wake up to know what Our Father really means that they shut out every new thought idea to distribute knowledge, as the work of what the old colored preacher calls "De Debble."

The primary advantage of the moving picture is to attract attention. The attention may be for the purpose of teaching in the school room. This attention may be for attracting men to be taught in the doctrines of religion. This attention may be needed to correct wrong ideas of life.

It is the ideas that are seed in the mind. How stupid then for a whole community to permit such an act by municipal authority to deny license to a moving picture theater, whether good or bad.

One might as well forbid the use of electricity in town, because it sometimes gives bad light, and leaves a place totally in the dark as to why an electric company is licensed. Every city and village needs the lecture room provided with its moving picture apparatus. I talked this matter over with the manager of a traveling library of a borough this week.

She agreed with me exactly and urged that I should bring this matter before the authorities of the New York Public Service.

Miss X, I want to give you my reason for that assertion. You see I live in a suburb of New York City. In my own home I began a library center for the distribution of knowledge. Then it outgrew the home and we secured free space in the corner of a grocery store. From that corner the club circulated seven thousand books in one year from the traveling library of New York City. They have rented a small building and pay a librarian, as the conservatism of the community prevents all citizens working together to demand a New York City library and reading room.

The people who read because they have a natural mental hunger are, for the most part, children. Their parents do not care what they get and thus the child can take out any story, however silly, that stuffs its brain with wrong pictures of life and which do no end of harm.

Once a week there should be a set of pictures thrown on canvas, suggestions to the young of books they must read. The interesting moving pictures of happenings in the history of the United States and other countries will create a demand for the books. Scenes of foreign countries will create a desire for geography.

So, too, with new literature for grown-ups. Important new books should be introduced to every library center by their advance picture claims.

A public library is like a republic, it has its good and its useless members. The children get only the merest smattering of learning in the overcrowded class rooms; it is the supplementary home reading under expert leaders which gives ideas to the boys and girls in selecting their life work.

The manager of the traveling library agreed with me enthusiastically on every point. I had her attention because I was a moving picture of new ideas.

There is the Rev. George J. Becker, of Grace Presbyterian Church, Montclair, New Jersey. The town council ruled out the moving picture men in denying them the license. Some may have had very ugly ideas, but at least one orthodox preacher was brave enough to show that the Bible can be taught as the holy guide for the Golden Rule by moving pictures.

The reverend gentleman read the stories of ecclesiastical history and the moving pictures showed a packed house that the attention of the crowd for the Good Book comes through what it sees and not that which it hears of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego.

What a new asset has the preacher, whose weekly tragedy is the sermon! Let them get the manufacturers to make the pictures and turn them loose in the church if they want to get attention of black sheep and wandering Willie's. Amen.

MOVING PICTURE SHOWS IN MEXICO

Editor, Moving Picture News:

Dear Sir: Under the above caption I have just read an article in current issue of your paper, and while one is generally prepared to accept Consular reports as correct, I cannot but add some modification to Consul W. W. Canada's remarks, probably the result of observing things in Mexico from a different angle.

To be brief in the matter is to be almost brutally frank with regard to Vera Cruz. The films shown are strictly anything but first-class. I am speaking from personal observation up to last May, for a period of over twelve months.

The average program sent to Vera Cruz, Cordoba, Puebla, Toluca and other large towns would not rank in quality with even "commercial run" in United States. I have seen many programs consisting of reels three years old, with added "Estrenos" or specialties that have seen much over eighteen months' service.

The Compania Explotadora Cinematografica is well known to me, and this company supplies the majority of the theaters throughout the Republic. Their films are well cared for, and on the whole satisfactory—but first class! Ye shades of night.

The above company is known by common consent as Pathé Frères, although the only connection between the great French producer and itself is indicated by a notice board that hangs over the office, to the effect that this company is the "sole importing agent in Mexico for Pathé Frères."

Regarding the instance where a thousand persons attended a show one night, and but six next evening, I do not think the main cause was the repetition of the films. Vera Cruz is a peculiar city, climatically and otherwise. And even in the very best theaters in Mexico City, supplied by this same rental exchange, it is not uncommon for a film to be shown at the same house eight or ten times in as many months.

Regarding the showing of American films, the main reason so few are seen is that the American makers do not care to print titles in Spanish for so limited a sale.

There are about 270 theaters in the Republic showing pictures, and in addition to the exchange named above, there is the Union Cinematografica—a small concern renting commercial stuff (very) and another that started last February, with a stock of about seventy-five reels of two to five-year old stuff.

Please understand, I do not take exception to the Consul's reports as such, but what I have added can very readily be verified by a glance at any current program of any of the following theaters—Teatro Principale, Toluca, Salon Rojo, Mexico City, Cine Palacio, Mexico City.

Mexico is going to be a good field for rental of American films, but the time is not yet.

LINDSAY BANCROFT.

THE TERPSICHOREAN ART FOR THE MOTION PICTURE

By Margaret I. MacDonald

THE terpsichorean art is an art not lost, but little understood. It is an art encompassing not only rhythmic motion with the feet, but with the body as well. It is the body expressing the poetry of the mind. It is a story told in motion. It is emotion expressed not merely through expression of face, or in words, but a muscular interpretation of every thought or emotion that is capable of expression in life.

Of this beautiful and expressive art I would like to speak in connection with the motion picture. The motion picture is coming to be recognized among us more and more as a vehicle of knowledge—a distributing vessel of marvelous capacity and penetration—an invention born to be the servant of the sciences, and the great "white way" of the fine arts. Then here is another of the arts—a most beautiful and fascinating art whose inner secrets are capable of being understood by presentation through the motion picture.

I have recently been lured time and again to the studio of New York's foremost teacher of the terpsichorean art. From the first time that I had entree there I have been deeply impressed with the graceful beauty of the art, and it is with a great deal of pleasure that I avail myself of every opportunity to witness the interrpetation of different tone poems through the medium of the dance.

The studio of Madame Elizabetta Menzell, the Knickerbocker Conservatory, 22 East 16th Street, N. Y., is a quaint long room, lined with photographs of its many successful pupils who have gone out into the world to seek fame through their knowledge of the terpsichorean art. With this famous teacher have studied Julia Marlowe, who, as an actress, recognized the necessity of grace in motion; Mademoiselle Dazie, Maud Allen, Ruth St. Denis, Gertrude Hoffmann, and many others of modern fame. Madame Menzeli was selected from among the dancers of Europe and America by Verdi to stage the religious dances in his greatest opera, "Aïda" on its first presentation in America.

There is at this studio, at the present time, and almost every day in the week to be seen a petite Jewish maiden of exquisite grace and winsome ways. This child of some twelve or thirteen years has a body of such strong, subtle grace that every motion is a dream to look upon. Sweet and unassuming, she pirouettes about the room with toes scarce touching the floor; one almost wonders how the body floats about with apparently so little support. This is "Petite Julie"—"a second Genee, or better," is the prophecy for her.

Only a few days ago I was completely entranced by another of the pupils of this school, when it was my pleasure to witness Madame Menzeli's interpretation of the "Lorlei," by Madamoiselle Wihr, a graceful classic figure. In fullsome pale green draperies, she floated, and whirled, and eddyed thro' the story of the Lorlei's wicked passion, which is told in the following poem:—

Sea weed, and sea shells, and white feathery spray,
Coquetting erstwhile where the Lorlei lay.

Whenever God

creates a beautiful woman, the devil jots something down in his notebook. We who have pressed soft hands, looked into tender eyes, whispered nothings in eager ears—we who have loved a rag and a bone and a hank of hair and found she was a woman who didn't care and never could understand,—we know

THE PRICE!

And when the immutable law of the years takes its course, and youth and beauty fly, bringing regret and repentance, the woman knows

THE PRICE!

AND YOU WILL KNOW

"THE PRICE"

RELEASED THURSDAY, NOV. 23,

IF YOU ASK YOUR EXCHANGE FOR IT!

It's a story as old as the Garden of Eden, and as new as the latest divorce suit, a page of human history from Adam to Eternity, a tale of temptation, transgression, travail and tears!

"THE PRICE!"

is the prize that will be the price of more admissions than the S. R. O. ever represented. And the price to you is "THE PRICE."

MARATHON IT!

REX

REX MOTION PICTURE MASTERPIECE CO.

573 ELEVENTH AVE.,
NEW YORK CITY

Sales Co. says "The Price" is a dear story!

You Couldn't Run Three Reels Without A Western Picture

Well balanced programs always show AT LEAST ONE Western film—and, that being so, why don't you use the BEST?

We're "SPECIALISTS"—and as specialists best able to serve you.

——Our Western Studio in Beautiful, Enchanted El Cajon Valley, Southern California, is especially designed for the production of the highest possible character of work—

———Our Stock Company—well, you know our reputation for detail—we've improved where we could but there isn't much room for improvement. AMERICAN pantomime ALWAYS HAS BEEN THE STANDARD.

"The Angel of Paradise Ranch"

(RELEASE DECEMBER 4)

Jack, with a sick mother on his hands and poverty staring him in the face, gives up placer mining, seeks a job on a nearby ranch, is refused and, in desperation, joins the cattle thieves. The ranchman's daughter catches him in the act and, when Jack confesses his plight, accompanies him home and nurses the sick mother back to health. A time comes when Jack returns that kindness. How—you should see. A really wonderful tale of surpassing interest. 1000 Feet Approx. Length.

"The Smoke of a Forty-five"

(RELEASE DATE DECEMBER 7)

She is the daughter of a cattle thief and falls in love with a neighboring ranger. There is an elopement, a marriage at the point of a gun—a marriage founded on hate from which she is soon released. A truly Western tale, bristling with adventure and dealing with those elemental passions whose appeal is universal. 4000 Feet Approx. Length.

American Film Mfg. Co.

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK CHICAGO

The little sea children gambled and played,
Dancing to music by white pebbles made.

Avaunt! She awakens! Dive quick in the sea,
Pert little sea nymphs, as saucy can be.

The Lorlei arises, leans, scans at a glance
The wide waste of water; looks heavenward askance.

Backward to slumber-land gently she steals
When lo! the horizon a white ship reveals.

Swift, willowy fingers from a silver harp guide
Sweet sounds of subtle power o'er dark waters glide;

Aloft, o'er the heavens dark clouds quickly close,
And to lightning's flash thunder's gruff answer arose.

On, on came the white ship, lured thence by the song,
The song of the Lorlei, so winsome and long;

On the breast of the charmer its white sails it flung,
Hark! the cry of deep anguish from a broken heart wrung;

For the swift, white limbed Lorlei from a wild embrace fled,
Dashed the ship on the rocks to a cold, cruel bed.

And the sea children scampered and scampered with glee;
"Come, sea nymphs! My children rejoice now with me!"

Then back to her niche in the gray, rugged rock,
The Lorlei slumbered, and slumbering forgot.

The presentation of the scene as it will be presented in the near future, with soft colored lights playing over the Lorlei discovered asleep on the rock, the little children representing sea nymphs dancing around her, disappearing at her awakening, her sighting of the ship, her luring of it to its doom, the representation of the fury of the storm and the lashing of the waters, her subsequent satisfaction—all will be a beautiful vision and a valuable lesson in the terpsichorean and pantomimic art.

Why not some manufacturer give a series of moving pictures of this style. It would be beautiful and unique, and I would be glad to give what aid I could in interesting some of the dancers for that purpose.

Italian-Turkish War Scenes

It was our privilege and pleasure to witness the first exhibition of the war pictures produced by the Cines Company of Rome in Tripoli, showing the Italian and Turkish troops in their various maneuverings and some of the moves of the war game. The pictures are wonderfully clear and distinct and the whole of the two reels are full of life and vigor of the military centers. Talking with Mr. Barry, the New York agent of the Cines Company, he informed us that these films are now ready to be distributed to the trade, and any exchange being fortunate enough to secure this magnificent subject is sure of an extended patronage. The immense audiences in the Unique Theater on Fourteenth street, New York, were enthusiastic in their praise and appreciation of the scenes thrown upon the screen, and if we take that as a criterion of what an audience or audiences may be, we feel sure that the country will be all the better for viewing these scenes and having accorded to them the highest education it is possible for them to get from Cinematography.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Bell Theater Co., 1415 Fourth street, S. E., will erect moving picture theater to cost $1,800.

Sandwich, Ill.—William Burkhart has leased the Bleitz Building and will remodel first floor into moving picture theater.

FILMORE'S FILM FACTS

This Time on a Variety of Subjects—Papers, Magazines, Books, Editors, Writers, and "Little Bangs"

WHETHER the proposed regulations permitting children to enter picture shows under certain conditions ensuring their perfect well-being, are favored by the New York Board of Aldermen or not, the New York World's "crusade" on the regulations will always reflect disgrace on that leading newspaper. The vicious, denunciatory style in which the cheap reporter handled his story indicated only ignorance to veterans in picture knowledge, but what effect it had on the minds of the aldermen is another matter. And there's the rub. Any beggar of an editor can send out a reporter to "crusade," and while the reporter's opinion is merely that of a down-and-out who owns nothing but debts, isn't worth salt, that opinion in print under huge headlines, likely adorned with a picture or two, becomes of weight. Yes, it has caused many a good man to decide against the right thing, because the wrong thing seemed "public opinion." Small wonder that in some sections the courts will not permit the newspapers to comment on an action at law until it has been decided. And don't you believe for an instant that this whack at the "freedom of the press" hasn't benefitted the innocent man—who would have come into court convicted, in yellow journalistic New York.

* * *

The warmth of expression I use above shows I wrote in some anger—but then one has a right to anger when he sees the setback these hired-and-fired newsgatherers would inflict on the exploitation of the greatest invention of recent years. In fact, the next "picture crusade" story I read will cause me to reprint here some of the "medical" ads that the offending paper publishes for all who have a cent to see.

* * *

The World only recently, in telling that a candidate for Governor of Kentucky was touring the wild mountain regions with speeches and moving pictures, spoke of the latter as a civilizer. That's the odd part of the World's attitude; editorially it says nice things—in the news pages bad things. The bad things are usually said of the folks in the show end of the business—of the little fellow who can't fight back, who finds it all he can do to make ends meet "civilizing" at five cents per head. The big American producer is rarely railed at; in fact, he is complimented on some feat that places his country a little higher in the annals of Cinematograph achievement and he is encouraged in his strenuous effort to outdo in enterprise his French and other competitors.

* * *

But where would the best of American producers be if the shows did not prosper at least enough to rent his pictures? Which goes back to the old truism that on the show depends the industry. And when the show offers to provide matrons and other protection for the young, as in the New York instance, it is unfortunate that a foremost newspaper must print so one-sided and vicious a story as that in the New York World.

* * *

The World's reporter said in the story that even though the proposed regulations might look to the safety of the children once they were in the show, who would look to their safety as they went to and fro? Why, the shows would provide uniformed guards, or maybe transport the youths in taxicabs! Who looks after the reporter's children as they go to and fro in attending school? Do any greater dangers lurk on the way to the picture house than on the way to school—or the grocer's? This World statement is a splendid sample of the utterly ridiculous methods employed in the newspaper "picture crusades." The youngster's only danger on the way to and fro from the picture show is that he might buy a copy of the New York World at the newsstand and learn that sinning is safe because the cure is handy—from World "medical" advertisers.

* * *

The World goes on to say that "after the board met with some difficulties"—just what the difficulties were it DOESN'T say—"and reorganized into a national institution, the Woman's Municipal League was asked to co-operate, and this it did. A motion picture committee was appointed and Mrs. Montague took up the work in earnest. Recently she has been conducting an investigation of the method of censoring, and as a result has recommended that the league withdraw and that it ask the city to take up the matter.

"The moving picture people are fighting just such a move," according to G. H. Montague, of No. 55 Liberty street, counsel for the Woman's Municipal League.

"Last January, when a resolution was introduced into the Board of Aldermen providing for an official censorship, John Collier appeared at the Aldermanic hearing and argued against the proposition," Mr. Montague said yesterday.

Why, sure Mr. Collier did, or should, and so should any one who had the best interests of the moving picture entertainment at heart. What show would the fat-pursed film manufacturers stand with the Tammany aldermen? If Tammanyites are only one-quarter as crooked as the World painted them, it would have been a give-up game all around. No, the manufacturers are thoroughly contented to have Mr. Collier and the enlightened, non-political men and women associated with him continue judging the pictures ON THEIR MERITS ALONE.

* * *

The attitude of another New York paper, The Telegraph, toward the Board of Censorship, is another puzzle. Everybody in the industry knows that the National Board has helped put the Cinematograph entertainment in the high place it occupies to-day and that the entire business took on a class and tone it never knew before the board's advent. The manufacturer was persuaded to banish the objectionable subject—to his own advantage, as it proved, for the best people the country over came to see the censored pictures and the manufacturer came to enjoy his greatest period of prosperity. You will find evidence of this in the Telegraph's own pages; see how many manufacturers' ads they had before the National Board became a fact and see how rich in manufacturers' ads they are now. Hence the puzzle, for it is notorious that Telegraph "crusades" are not inspired by sentiment. And, after all, doesn't it seem ridiculous and unfit that the sheet that fosters "Hassard," "Jerry Dunn," "Ross Van" and the rest of the racing tipsters becomes a reform organ to abolish a board of censorship of motion pictures?

* * *

Anent the question, "Is the Modern Moving Picture as Baneful as Modern Literature?" it is interesting to note that in "Making a Living by Literature" in the current Saturday Evening Post, a writer tells how he visited a magazine editor and asked for the prescription for successful fiction writing. The editor pointed out a serial story then running in his magazine: It was called "The Red Hand," or something like that, and it was one of those stories that begin like this:

"Richard Abercrombie leaped lightly to one side and the blow which had been aimed at him from behind whistled harmlessly by. The three dark figures which loomed suddenly out of the mist, huddled together. Swiftly, and in silence, Richard struck. One of the figures fell, an inert mass on the pavement at his feet. The others fled. He shrugged his shoulders disdainfully and stooped to pick up his walking-stick which had fallen from his hand. As he did so the gleam of something white on the pavement caught his eye. He picked it up. It was a woman's handkerchief—a filmy nothing of lace—and as he raised it to scrutinize it more closely his nostrils inhaled a subtle and lovely perfume, faint but almost intoxicating. And at this a voice—"

"'That's the sort of thing for you to do,' said the editor. 'We can use worlds of that stuff. We never get enough of it. Give it to us in sixty-thousand-word lengths, with a big bang at the end of every ten thousand for an instalment ending, and a little bang at least every thousand words!'"

* * *

Oh, you Little Bang!

* * *

If a film producer admitted that his product must have "little bangs" in it to excite the spectator, every female notoriety-seeker, who ought to be at home with the babies, would send a letter to the press and the authorities, and yell about the scandal at the next meeting of the woman's civic club. On her way to the meeting she passes a multitude of stationers, book shops and newsstands with the magazine of "little bangs" freely exposed for sale. But it doesn't draw her crusading attention. In fact, she's been a 'satisfied subscriber" to it from almost its inception, and it's home now on her library table!

* * *

Don't mistake the meaning of the "little bangs" that the author of "Making a Living by Literature" tells of. He undertook to write 'em along the lines of the editor's model. He says:

"I attacked the job in a spirit of savage hostility toward it. That editor wanted punch, did he? Well, he should have it! I had two deliberate murders, a suicide, an unsuccessful attempt at poisoning and three justifiable homicides in self-defense, in the course of that sixty thousand words, together with a passionate love story that occupied at least one chapter in each instalment. That editor thought he knew what he wanted, did he? Well, I'd see whether he did."

* * *

So into the sanctum went the lurid creation, and by return mail came a check for six hundred dollars. Rejoicing at his success, the writer got busy again. We read:

"I made up a new plot—that was easier, after all, than stealing an old one and transposing it."

* * *

Stealing and transposing—can you beat it?

* * *

And then: "A representative of a big book publishing house in New York came to Chicago and ran out overnight to the town where I live to see me. He wanted to know what I was doing, for being a good friend, he had been worrying about me more or less. I hadn't meant to tell anybody about this new occupation of mine, but I felt so good over having come to life again that I couldn't keep it back. He laughed over the idea and wanted to know what the stuff was like, so I handed him out the carbon of that manuscript. He read the first chapter under my eye, then asked if he might carry it back to Chicago with him.

"'It won't do you any good,' I said. 'I wouldn't sign it.'

"He said he didn't care whether I did or not and carried it off with him, and a week later I got a letter from him offering to publish it as a regular dollar-and-a-half book over the pen name I had used in the magazine."

Now the "little bangs" are REAL literature—from magazine pages they have ascended to the heights of the high-priced book. Again merit is its own reward.

All of which will cause careful parents to keep "modern literature" away from their offspring and send said offspring to the picture show instead—if the "woman's civic clubs" will give the matter publicity at their meetings—while the reporters jot it all down.

* * *

But, Oh, Sugar! The paper editors wouldn't print it; the book publishers are there with the advertising. In which connection it is inspiring to note that the picture shows aren't!

* * *

And so Young America is persuaded to prefer "literature" with its overflow of "bangs" to the film entertainment with its scarcity of them.

* * *

The humble film scenario-readers have been charged with (to quote the phrase again) "stealing and transposing," but have you ever heard of one who admitted it, as does the eminent literary man who turns out the "bangs" that youth is not barred from "enjoying?" And evidently the author's ethics are the editor's, too, for the "Making a Living by Literature" man goes on to tell how his editor ordered a story:

"'I'll pay you a cent a word,' he said. 'Don't take longer than three weeks. You'd better take an old plot—'Othello,' 'The Lady of Lyons'—anything. Transpose it, of course. Give it a modern twist and there you are.'"

When the literats draw attention to their own profession it doesn't look nearly as snow-white as the motion picture business that so many of them attack!

SCENARIO WRITERS

We have established a Clearing House for Scenarios. We buy your Scenarios outright or place them on a commission basis. A preliminary fee of one dollar is charged for handling, to cover expenses, and must accompany each manuscript. Call on us for a personal interview.

GALLY & MILLER, SCENARIO BROKERS,
1531 Broadway, Room 404, New York City.

THE AMERICAN FLAG

While I do not agree with the Overseas Club of Toronto, who demand that the American flag should be expurgated from all American films, I do think that manufacturers make our flag too cheap. It is used in every place and time possible. All films, where there are soldiers, carry a large flag, in fact it seems that is all that particular soldier has to do. I saw a film the other day, where a man away back in the 60's, needing some help to kill some Indians, at once rode off and found a dozen very modern United States cavalry soldiers wandering about in a field with an enormous flag. Again, in most pictures of the Civil War, you see the flag being waved about on the firing line—we also see our flag carried to foreign countries, as in the case of the "American and the Queen," where both marines and flag appeared almost as suddenly as a trick film. The above film was taken for a comedy in Europe, I feel sure. By no means bar the Stars and Stripes from all films, but a little judgment should be used and made to appear at the right time and proper place. There is an old saying in the show business, that "the Stars and Stripes have saved many a rotten show," and, believe me, the same flag has saved many a rotten film. Yours truly, OBSERVER.

IT WASN'T A "POWER'S No. 6"

This man didn't know,
So he saw through a show
Where the pictures were all of a flicker.
Had the machine been a "POWER'S,"
He'd have passed pleasant hours;
As it was, he grew sicker and sicker.

The Moving Picture public will not stand for anything but the best; your patrons, who seek enjoyment and relaxation from care, will not come again if you give them poor pictures.

In POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6 all flicker has been eliminated; the pictures are clear, sharp and absolutely steady. The result is satisfaction to your patrons, steady business and increased profits for you.

"POWER'S No. 6" is built to wear; it is the finished product of fourteen years leadership in the manufacture of motion picture machines.

In every corner of the civilized world "POWER'S No. 6" leads the procession; it is the recognized standard of merit, the last word in moving picture machines. Our catalog D will tell you all about it. Ask for one now and get our special proposition.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, 115-117 Nassau Street, NEW YORK

For fourteen years the leading manufacturers of moving picture machines.

SEE THIS

Mother Goose Series

1st Edition Released Nov. 27th

HERE IS A SPLIT-REEL OF NOVEL TURN

When you see it on the screen, you'll hark back to the school where we learned all about Jack and Jill, Rock-a-by Baby, and the Young Lady Who Rode a Cock Horse to Banbury Cross.

"SEEIN' IS BELIEVIN'" Sez Farmer Hank, SO SEE IT

THE TWO BROWNS

RELEASED NOVEMBER 29TH

VIRGINIA DARE is beloved by two rivals bearing the same name. One, however, is a scoundrel who meets defeat through his own chicanery, to the profit of his rival and the girl in question.

YANKEE DOODLE and OUR NAVY

2ND EDITION OF MOTHER GOOSE. ANOTHER CORKER. DECEMBER 4TH.

This is another split-reel and is most original in conception. In fact, it's an enthusiastic booster for live exhibitors.

We'll Mail You Lobby Sheets Upon Receipt of a Postal

CHAMPION FILM COMPANY

Sold thro Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

MARK M. DINTENFASS, GEN. MGR.,
12 EAST 15TH STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

AN OPERATOR'S QUERIES

Mr. A. H. Saunders.

Dear Friend: Am in a tight place and would like to have your assistance. Have 110 volt 60-cycle current here; am using Powers inductor and getting a very good light, but my boss (formerly an operator), wants a stronger light. Can you tell me how to go about it? I have a 9 x 12 picture at a 50-foot throw. Have a little trouble with condensers; tried a pair of 7½, then a pair of 6½, but had to go back to 6½ and 7½. No matter how I try I don't seem to get the "nigger" out entirely. How can I get the side play out of the intermittent sprocket on a Powers No. 6? Can you tell me what is the best preparation to paint a sheet with? I have a number of other questions I would like to ask, but will not take up any more of your valuable time at present. Will close, thanking you in advance. I remain,

"CANUCK IN THE CATSKILLS."

In publishing the above letter which comes to us with a request that we make a Weekly Parliament for Operators and put them in a column apart for themselves instead of answering these questions as expounded by "Canuck in the Catskills," we will throw our columns open for the most expert operators or those who can write to try and elucidate and help such operators by their advice. If this scheme answers we will extend it and make it one of the most useful operators' column in the trade. If, in the course of the next week or so, no operator is able to answer these questions we will give our own explanation.

Ed. M. P. N.

THE MOVING PICTURE LEAGUE OF AMERICA

Cleveland, O., Nov. 10, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture News,

Dear Sir—At the regular meeting of our Local held on November 8, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, that The Moving Picture League of America, Cleveland Local No. 1, do not approve of any exhibitor showing the picture of the Johnson-Jeffries fight, or any other objectionable pictures.

That it is the object of this League to keep the standard of the motion picture theaters on a level with the most refined and moral places of amusement.

L. H. WILK, Secretary.

MR. JOHN C. HEMMENT IN BRITISH EAST AFRICA WITH HIS CAMERA

By Our "Roving Commissioner"

OWING to the previous agreement of Mr. Paul Rainey with "Outing" to give them the interesting story of the hunting and picture-making tour of himself and Mr. John C. Hemment, I was unable to gain all the information which I would so love to have had regarding the thrilling incidents attendant on such an enterprise. It was of necessity that I contented myself with "gathering up the fragments from the rich man's table." From the ragged edge I was obliged to cull the little leftovers so kindly scraped together for me by Mr. Hemment, the fearless camera man of the party. However, I will endeavor to weave from the various bright-hued threads a coat of many colors, to conceal the nakedness of the well-picked bones which I am about to serve up to my readers on this occasion.

MR. JOHN C. HEMMENT

British East Africa, the scene of the adventures of these men of the camera and gun, lies on the east coast of Africa, midway between Abssynia on the north and German East Africa on the south. Landing at Mombassa they continued on to Narobi, which place served as a base of supplies for the party. It was from Narobi that the sarfari started which carried their supplies, and guided them through the tall jungle grass and the brilliant African forests, of which later Mr. Hemment says: "If I would tell anyone the different varieties of shades and colors which I saw among the trees of the African forests, they would not believe me. It is just as though some one had taken a paint brush and dipping it into different colored paints had gone about among the trees daubing them full of it without any intent or purpose of blending. It is really indescribable—from the yellow ochre on the tree trunks to the ordinary green of our own native trees—every color that you could imagine was represented there. It would be a wonderful spot for Kinemacolor to work in!"

"Were you not afraid, Mr. Hemment?" I asked, womanlike, always considering the danger.

"Oh, not in the least; I never thought of being afraid," was his reply.

Mr. Hemment had five men employed to carry his supplies, and for the benefit of my readers I will say that the sarfari, of which we have spoken, consists of a train of men who walk single file. and carry on their backs the grub and general supplies of the hunting or exploring party,

Mr. Rainey with Colobus Monkeys killed at Kijabi, April 11, 1911.
Copyright by Paul J. Rainey—special permission of Outing Magazine.

after a spot has been reached where the ox wagon, which is generally used where accessible, cannot penetrate. On the wagons is left the bulk of supplies, from which the grub supply of the party is replenished at intervals. In this way, with the sarfari and a couple of guides, they file along for miles over the plains, or through the mountain passes to the hunting ground. At night a couple of askaris are stationed without the camp to keep watch over those that sleep, in order that no wild animal shall be given an opportunity of a midnight feast at the expense of the camp.

Hunter Allan Black Paul J. Rainey Hunter George Outram
Copyright by Paul J. Rainey—special permission of Outing Magazine.

"Are there not a great many reptiles there?" I asked.

"Oh, plenty of them. The python was of course the worst that we encountered. One day I was walking out through the tall grass, with a couple of men on each side of me at intervals apart, and all of a sudden one of them set up a cry of alarm in his native tongue, and looking up I saw an immense python just raising his head up out of the grass, and flattening it to spring. I happened to have my rifle in my hand loaded at the time, and I just let her go, and shot the snake full in the head and killed it."

Of course, I screwed all up in a knot at this snaky tale,

An Impala (wounded) shot by Mr. Rainey at 432 yds distant.
Copyright by Paul J. Rainey—special permission of Outing Magazine.

for although I am able to see a wealth of beauty in all the universe, I have not yet been able to school myself to an admiration for our graceful friend, the snake.

It might not be out of place just at this point to copy an extract from a letter written by Mr. Hemment to his son from Lucy's Hill on the veldt, British East Africa. The following is with reference to the photographing of a wounded lioness: "The lioness had been wounded a few moments before with a bullet in the loin. She lay a while snarling. I thought she was done for—perhaps paralyzed in her hind legs, but still full of fierce and bitter fight.

"After she had made one or two attempts to get on her

The first lion killed that was hunted by Mr. Rainey's bear hounds.
Copyright by Paul J. Rainey—special permission of Outing Magazine.

feet and failed, I advanced on her to get a close-range moving picture of magnificent muscle movement and the opening of her awful mouth when she roared. She was distant about forty yards. I wanted to get nearer and was fascinated with the possibility of getting the very best picture of the lion breed in anger that had ever been obtained. This fascination carried me to the point of recklessness.

"Suddenly she stopped snarling and growling. She crouched low to the ground and lashed her tail ominously. I picked up some sticks and stones and threw them at her. Hunter Allan Black warned me not to go closer, but I was so carried away with her magnificent possibilities for a moving picture that I couldn't help moving up twenty feet nearer.

The lioness that charged Mr. Hemment while he made a moving picture of her. The mark over the right eye shows where the bullet entered the brain when Hunter Black shot her only 15 ft. from the camera.
Copyright by Paul J. Rainey—special permission of Outing Magazine.

"The lioness looked at me contemptuously and snarled ominously, as though to say: 'Only wait until you have that pretty thing up and I will show you how soon I can spoil it.' She was now a trifle less than forty yards. Her eyes were shining like big balls of fire. A crouching movement forward of six inches at a time marked her progress. Not a sign that she was wounded. Just advancing with

The Rhino that Hunter Black shot after a picture of 300 ft. of films was made of him on the Veldt.
Copyright by Paul J. Rainey—special permission of Outing Magazine.

deadly intent was she, waiting for the psychic moment —to her—when the final, supreme crouching effort should be made and she should launch in the air on the leap that would land her on me and the camera, one to be torn apart as easily as the other.

"There was a tense period such as comes between the bolt of lightning and clap of thunder, when heads are involuntarily bowed, waiting for the inevitable crash. I took pictures all the time and despite the peril, oddly enough, I wished she would come nearer and still nearer. I no sooner wished it than I was obliged. This apparently helplessly wounded creature was up and at me, bounding on its four feet, coming as straight as an arrow for the camera.

"On and on it came, leaps and bounds lessening the space between herself and me so quickly I really believe I did not draw one breath from the moment she sprang from the earth until she plunged head foremost, stone dead, four feet from my camera. I kept on turning the handle of the camera until she looked so big and close that I knew she was out of focus. Then I grabbed the legs of the tripod and tried to raise them to plunge into her, when I realized she lay at my feet."

Mr. Hemment found out afterward that the final felling of the lioness was due to the faultless aim of Hunter Black of the party who, realizing the danger in which Mr. Hemment was placed, shot at the animal, hitting her just over the right eye and straight into her brain, thereby saving Mr. Hemment's life.

It was in March that the Rainey party arrived in Africa. Some 26,000 feet of negatives were taken by the party, of which 11,000 feet were spoiled by delay in getting to its destination during the marine strike in England. The first lot of film sent home by mail came through in excellent shape; it was the second lot that was ruined by the delay on the docks at Liverpool, after coming through the terrific heat of the Mediterranean sea. "The Charging Rhino" is considered by Mr. Hemment to be the best picture that he took. This film is some 300 feet in length. In speaking of the pictures Mr. Hemment said: "We photographed everything interesting that we came across. We got one picture of 10,000 head of game at one time, consisting of the kongoni, the topi, the gazelle, the zebra, the wildebeeste, the hartebeeste, the ostrich, the impala, eland and others." All of these films will be utilized for Mr. Paul Rainey's private use. The hunting and picture making of the party was done on the Northern and Southern Guase Nyiaro. On being asked if he contemplated another like journey, Mr. Hemment answered: "Yes, I would like to go back again next year if I can get anyone to back me up. I would like to go there to photograph, but not to kill. I would like to take a series of educational pictures showing the natives, their homes, habits, etc. There is a great deal of interest to be told in picture form of the natives of British East Africa. Although they know not a thing of the Bible, yet you see them there to-day doing the exact things of which you read in the Bible—grinding corn, etc."

In Africa the women work and the men look on. "You will see the women carrying fire-wood for miles on their backs to sell to the different homes, and the men walking ahead of them with spears for their protection," said Mr. Hemment, and continuing: "The climate in parts of British East Aprica is very fine, and the greatest danger of sickness comes from the variation of the thermometer between sunset and early morning, which varies from forty to fifty degrees. The best time for taking pictures, and, in fact, the only time that really successful work can be accomplished there, is before nine o'clock in the morning and after three o'clock in the afternoon. In the intervening hours it is impossible to get artistic shading on account of the fact that this portion of Africa is directly under the equator."

Says Mr. Hemment of the lion: "It is a noble beast. The lion, although he seldom attacks unless first attacked or wounded, stands in his native forests and jungles supreme master of all he surveys. There is no other animal that has ever been known to kill a lion except a certain kind of dog that they have there, packs of which will hunt the lion and kill him.

"I believe in my heart," continued Mr. Hemment, "that the lion is a coward. In the graveyards there you will notice on the gravestones, 'Mr. So-and-So, killed by a lion,' but if you inquire into the matter you will find in most instances that it has been a wounded lion that killed the man."

Said he: "One day I shot at a bird in a tree. The report of my rifle roused two lions that were basking in the sun on a slope behind some underbrush adjacent to the spot where I was. All they did was to raise their heads up and look at me, then quietly settled themselves to sleep again, while I walked away."

It is hard for me to get away from a subject so interesting, for while I write my spirit seems to have been transported to scenes which my physical eye has never contemplated; yet at this moment I see in my fancy the brilliant forests. I hear the crackling of the underbrush as I force my way through it. I hear the roar of the wild beasts and the unfamiliar voices of the strange, bright-plumaged birds; now I am walking through the jungle—beyond me, banked up against the horizon, are the mountains; and now the rustle of the reptile in the tall grass at my side startles me, and I awake again to a realization of the fact that after all I am only repeating the story of another, and that I may never be prevailed upon to enter in the physical body the depths of the African jungle.

Mr. Hemment brought with him from Africa one of the finest collection of birds that has ever been brought into this country.

REX STILL AT IT!

Rex cannot restrain the enterprise and energy which have characterized all their deeds. When they are not improving the pictures themselves—some things cannot be improved very much more—when they are not busy concocting some novelty in the productions themselves, they are on the alert to manufacture ideas that are as new and effective as anything ever turned out in the huge workshop of the human mind. They went a mile and three-quarters ahead of any other manufacturer with their posters; but that was not the limit with them—there is none. They were not content until they had imported a poster from the country that knows what crowns are—you've guessed it—from England. One look at the accompanying photograph is enough, but we infer that you'll take two looks without knowing it, if you have an eye for beauty—which you must have, since you read the News. (This is our own little advertisement, we admit, but it fits in so well we could not overlook the opportunity.) The poster is really beautiful, to return to the most important topic in hand, and truly representative of the art and general excellence of Rex. The idea is as novel as it is effective, as well executed as it is a credit to the trade at large. The other manufacturers should not feel much put out by this coup of Rex, strange as this may sound; they should rather look upon the incident as a boon to the entire industry; a chain cannot be stronger than its strongest link, and the other links should all link together and give thanks that there is a stronger one amongst them.

We do not doubt that the exhibitors throughout the country will grasp the opportunity of obtaining these posters from their exchanges with haste and glee. It is a tribute to commercial and artistic ingenuity, and a lithograph of such merit cannot but make any house more attractive. To our minds, it is a privilege to be able to hang it outside a theater, and the exhibitors should be deeply grateful to Rex for making it possible to procure such elaborate—and expensive—posters.

We don't know just who is responsible for the scoop. But still we gaze and still the wonder grows how one small head can carry all he knows!

"A GYPSY'S LOVE"

BY S. J. COTTON

Adapted from the synopsis of the film soon to be released by the St. Louis Motion Picture Co.

SOMETIMES among uncultured, illiterate people there is born one who is far above his kind—whose soul is alive to the more subtle beauties of Life and Nature. And to these, sorrow must almost surely come. He can seldom reach the things to which he aspires because of his environment, and certain traits he cannot eradicate in the short space of a lifetime.

Such a person was Lelia. Born and reared in a gypsy camp, and with a long line of gypsy ancestors, she had in her the great love of the open. But to this love was added an appreciation of the beautiful things in Nature; the changing sky, the flowers, the birds, and the deep, dark woods. When, sometimes, in the hot weather, she lay outside her tent and looked up at the stars, she felt more than the sense of freedom felt by her companions. She felt the vastness of space, and a longing for and reaching out toward something she knew not what—a bigger, better something than what she knew, but she could not have given it a name.

But deep down in the nature of this girl were the traits of the tribe; passionate love, bitter hate, cunning and cruel revenge. They were buried very deep, for nothing had yet come to Lelia to stir them.

When the band had settled in the neighborhood of a town for a prolonged stay, it was the custom of the girl to go from house to house with her baskets of needlework. She knew many strange and beautiful stitches which had been taught her by her grandmother, who, in turn, had learned them from her grandmother. The proficiency of her work and her dark beauty and bright manner won for her many customers in the town, and she seldom returned home with much in her baskets.

One very warm afternoon Lelia was returning from the town with empty baskets. June was almost gone, and the air was filled with the drowsy hum of insects as they hung over the fields and the blooming weeds along the roadside. Slowly and more slowly walked the girl, until, when she came to a beautiful green bank a little above the road, shaded by a spreading beech with the freedom of a child of nature she threw herself down under the tree and was soon fast asleep.

She had not slept long when there were voices at her side. But she did not hear them. Two tramps on their way to the town had caught sight of her. "Say, Bill," said one. "I see a prize. Gee, she looks good enough to eat."

"All right, you eat 'er," said Bill, "I'm gonna see wat's in 'er pocket."

Then Lelia was suddenly and roughly aroused from her nap. She screamed, but there was no one in sight, and she had little hope of her cries reaching any one. She struggled desperately and fought with tooth and nail like some wild wood creature.

She had almost given up when she saw the ruffians fall back, and first one and then the other drop to the ground. And there before her stood what seemed to her confused senses an angel of deliverance. In a moment she saw that it was a young man in white flannel, but to her he seemed an angel, so bright and beautiful he looked.

So struck was he with the girl's strange beauty as she sat gazing at him with wide open eyes, that he forgot the men he had thrown to the ground. When he looked for them they were disappearing down the road in a cloud of dust.

He stooped to raise the girl from the ground. "My name's Joe Lessing," he said. "Won't you let me walk home with you? You are still a bit upset, and I don't wonder. Those beasts!" And he looked in the direction the men had gone, and clenched his fists. "I wish I'd had sense enough to look at them better. I could never identify them now." He turned back to Lelia. "Well, I'm mighty glad I came along anyway. I was just cutting across fields to a friend's to play tennis."

"Then you go now," said the girl.

"Oh, no; I'm covered with dust now. And besides I'd rather walk home with you. Where do you live, anyway?" replied the young man.

Lelia hesitated for an instant before replying. "I live—gypsy camp—you know."

"Oh, you are a gypsy. I might have known it. Well, let me tell you, little girl, you are a mighty pretty gypsy."

Joe Lessing was a good fellow, and he would not have harmed a woman in the slightest degree if he could help it. But he was only recently home from college, and these pretty speeches and mild flirtations were understood and thought nothing of. But not so with this simple girl. She lowered her eyes and blushed through her dark skin, which made the young man look at her all the more admiringly.

He took her baskets and they walked slowly along toward the camp. Lelia talked little excepting in answer to his questions about her people, her life, what she did with her time, etc.

When they reached the path which led from the road, through a small wood, to the camp, Joe took the girl's unresisting hand. "I'd like mighty well to see you again," he said.

"By the woods I get berries—mornings," answered Lelia in her broken English.

"All right, don't get too far away or you might get into trouble again. But if you need assistance just call for me, and I'll be there soon." He pressed her hand and looked into her eyes for a moment, then he swung lightly up the road.

The gypsy girl stood still and kept her eyes on the retreating figure, and even when he had disappeared through a hedge she still gazed at the spot where he had entered it.

Lelia did not tell her people of her adventure as they sat around after their evening meal and recounted the experiences of the day; she said nothing but that she had been fortunate and sold all her work in town. And when the camp was still she took her blanket and lay under the stars. That night she thought more than she had thought in her whole life before. She was not ignorant of the cause of her wakefulness, and her thoughts were not vague, as are the thoughts of some young girls under like conditions. She knew that she loved a man, and that she desired to possess him, but she also knew that there was a gulf between them—although she probably did not put it so.

Did he love her? Would he take her to him? Or would he be one of them? These and other questions went through her mind. Then she remembered his beautiful white skin, his soft hands and his lovely clothes that he had soiled in defending her. No, he could never be one of them. And was it less impossible for her to go to him? She feared not. So, over and over she asked herself the torturing questions as she lay on the grass wrapped in her blanket.

While Lelia lay on the ground that night and awoke to a consciousness of self that she had never before experienced, Joseph Lessing did two things. The first few hours he spent with his sweetheart in the town nearby, and the rest of the night he spent in sound and healthful sleep that should come to a young man who has nothing on his conscience.

Louise Jackson was one of the finest young women in the town, and every man thought Joe Lessing a mighty lucky fellow when she promised to marry him.

They had corresponded during his last year at college, and when he came home they became engaged almost immediately and set the wedding for the autumn.

"Do you know, Louise," he said on the night of his adventure, "do you know that your future husband is a hero? He saved a lady's life to-day."

"Really?" she said, with open eyes and mock solemnity of tone. "Tell me about it."

So he told her, and at the end he said: "She was mighty pretty, too; I think I'll go out and make love to her. Do you care?"

"Oh, I'm dreadfully jealous," she laughed, and then added, "Joe, dear, I'm so perfectly sure of you that I give you full permission to flirt with any other woman you want to. But you must remember that women are sometimes susceptible to the charms of handsome young men."

He arose and made her a low bow as he said: "You flatter me, lady." Then he took her in his arms. "You must go to bed. I mustn't rob you of your beauty sleep, for you must be the most beautiful bride in town."

He went home and to bed, thinking he was the most fortunate of men, and not once did the gypsy girl cross his mind.

Every morning as Lelia picked berries along the roadside or at the edge of the wood she looked up and down the road from time to time, always hoping, hoping. It seemed he would never come. Nor did he intend to come for the purpose of seeing her, but one morning about a week after the adventure he was riding past the place he had left her on that day. The air was fresh and cool, for it was early, and the birds were singing for the very joy of expression. So, when Lessing saw Lelia by the roadside, herself a part of Nature, and when he saw the glad welcome and the admiration in her eyes as she looked up at him, is it any wonder that he dismounted and told her how fresh and pretty she looked!

If he had stopped there all might have been well. But he did not stop. As they turned to walk along a little path that entered the wood she tripped on a root, and he caught her in his arms. Her face was so close to his, and all the ardent love-nature of the gypsy seemed to be glowing on her lips. Before he knew what he was doing he drew her to him and kissed her. In a moment her arms were around his neck, and with lips close to his ear she was telling him in her own language how much she loved him. He did not understand her words, but her tone was enough to bring him to his senses. He realized what he had done. He was as much ashamed as though he had spied on some one. He had uncovered a woman's secret that he had no right to know.

He tried to loosen her arms, but he could not. She clung to him with utter abandon.

Suddenly a man's voice was heard calling. She dropped her arms and sank down on the ground. Lessing felt like a coward to leave her in distress, but he knew that he could not help her, and he would only compromise her if they should be seen together.

He sprang onto his horse, which was grazing peacefully by the roadside, and galloped home as quickly as he could. He was ashamed and chagrined. He felt as though he would lose all faith in himself if he gave himself time to think.

When he reached home he went to his room and locked himself in.

Two hours later he unlocked the door, still feeling ashamed, but understanding himself and many things better; after all, he thought, he hadn't really harmed the girl. He would keep away from the neighborhood of the camp and she would soon forget him.

His first impulse was to go to Louise and tell her all about it; but after all, had he the right? Was it honorable to tell another woman the secret of even this simple gypsy girl which he had discovered by his lack of control? He concluded that it was not.

It was not until the early autumn that Joe went near the camp. All through July and August the young people of the town had made frequent trips to have their fortunes told. Louise had told him she wanted to go, but he had always put her off with some excuse. Finally, she would not take an excuse, and he consented to go. He thought the gypsy girl would have gotten over her fascination for him, and besides, he might not see her even if he went to the camp.

Had the young man seen the face of the girl as she stood in the shadow of a tent he would not have been quite so easy in his mind. Had Louise seen the look of hatred darted at her she might have understood better some of the things told her by one of the other gypsies. "You marry man you love. He loves you, too, but he bring you great sorrow if he marry you. You no marry heem. You no have these sorrow." This the woman said as she held the girl's hand, and looked alternately at it, and at her face. Louise said nothing, but on the way home she asked Joe if he thought the woman could really know the future. Joe assured her that he thought she could not, and Louise was satisfied.

All these weeks Lelia had waited in vain. Many sleepless nights she spent. To her way of reasoning he must love her or he would not have kissed her as he did. And yet, if he loved her, why did he not come to her? Twice she saw him in the town, but he did not see her, and she made no sign. For even a gypsy has pride, and Lelia was above her kind.

DOT FARLEY
As "Lelia" in "A Gypsy's Love"

She believed he would come some time, so she waited. Then when he did come, and with him another woman, all her love seemed to turn to hatred and desire for revenge.

One day in early October, Lelia was going with her baskets from door to door, when she saw in front of a church a crowd of people waiting. The girl joined the crowd to see what was going to happen. Soon a wedding party came down the steps and entered carriages drawn up to the curb. In a moment Lelia had recognized the bride and groom. Her eyes narrowed and her body became tense. Within her raged the most furious primitive passions. She longed to spring upon her rival and tear her in pieces, but she was dimly conscious that she would never be able to reach her in the crowd. In her heart she took an oath to revenge herself as quickly as she could. She realized that the opportunity might not come soon, but she would wait for it even to the day of her death.

* * * *

It seemed to Joe Lessing at the end of the fifth year after his marriage that the gods had certainly smiled upon him. He often told Louise that he didn't deserve such blessings. She straightway silenced him with a kiss, after which he always said the same thing, "There you are simply proving what I said."

Beside the blessing of their love for each other there was the possession of a dear little baby girl who was born to them a year after their marriage. For her sake they had built a house at the edge of town that she might have plenty of room to grow.

It was about as much as one nurse could do to care for her. She loved to play in the fields, and sometimes she would slip away by herself.

On a warm, sunny afternoon in September the nurse was left alone with the little girl for the afternoon. She lay so still on the rug the nurse had placed for her on the grass that Martha thought she would close her eyes for a moment—just a moment. It was so soothing—the September air—so drowsy—just a moment, and away to dreamland she went. Poor Martha, it was only for a moment.

Not so baby. She saw her chance, and as sly as a little fox she slipped through the gate and away she went up the road. Oh, the pretty flowers! Just the kind for baby. She knew them. Nurse had told her, goldenrod.

In a few moments she was in the midst of them, tugging away at the stems with her little hands.

What a little thing sometimes decides the future of a person. Ten minutes sooner or later in the happening of a certain thing, and the whole world seems changed.

As the baby delightedly gathered her flowers a string of wagons came along the road. It was the old gypsy band returning for the winter. One man saw the little child and thought she must be lost. He stopped his wagon and went to her. Then, as he saw the child so richly dressed, the thought came to him that she might be held for ransom. So he carried her gently and handed her up to a woman on the wagon, telling her in few words, his plan. It was Lelia. She was still pretty, but a hard, cunning look had come to her mouth and eyes. She was still waiting for her opportunity.

When Martha awoke and found the baby gone she ran to the gate. It was standing open. She ran into the road and called. There was no answer. Then she lost her head, and stood wringing her hands. So the child's parents found her when they returned a short time afterward. They assured her the child could not be far away and began a search of the grounds. Long they hunted, from time to time stopping to reassure one another with a confidence which was rapidly lessening.

They went outside their own grounds, and searched. When they had gone over and over the ground in the immediate neighborhood without success they telephoned the police. And then the search began in earnest. In the early morning they came upon the gypsy camp. Of course, they asked many questions, and even searched the camp, but such was the gypsies' cunning and so innocent did they look that they were soon left in peace. But not before Lelia had learned one thing—that her opportunity had come. She had in her possession the child of the man she had loved so desperately—the child of the woman she hated so fiercely, and at whose happiness she had been waiting so long to strike a blow. Now was her chance!

The next question to decide was what to do with the child. She knew she could not keep it there. Then she remembered passing a convent in their travels—it must be twenty miles away. She knew what she would do.

That night she dressed the child in clothes of one of the gypsy children and walked all the way to the convent.

She was admitted and told her story. The good sisters believed her, and promised to care for the little one, but she must pay so much for her board and education. This Lelia agreed to do. By working very hard she thought she could manage.

When she returned to the camp at daybreak the next day, and without the child, she was met with a torrent of abuse. She stood it all, for she knew they dare not expose her.

The band camped first one place and then another within a radius of fifty miles, for a number of years. Lelia would go to the convent to see the little girl and feed her spirit of vengeance on the thought that the mother was being deprived of her child, and when she was in the old camp grounds she would go to the mother's house to sell something only that she might see her misery.

But somehow, as time went on, she seemed to get less and less enjoyment out of her revenge. She began to really love the little girl, who soon grew to think of her as her own mother. After all, what was she gaining, she thought. But a gypsy's vow cannot be broken, so she must carry it out to the end.

* * * *

Often, when we look back over the years, and think of the suffering we have borne, we wonder how we had the strength.

It had been twelve years since the disappearance of the Lessing baby, but to look at Mrs. Lessing one might easily think it had been twenty. The doctors had advised a trip abroad many times, but she always refused, saying she felt nearer baby there.

She sat on the front porch one afternoon as Lelia came up the walk. She had not been there for four years, for the band did not camp in that neighborhood any more. She was living alone, any place it suited her to live.

When she came up the steps and looked into Mrs. Lessing's face it seemed as though something suddenly awoke in her. She fully realized for the first time what this woman had suffered. And the man she had loved so much, he must have suffered as much. She did not know what had happened to her. Why revenge was no longer sweet. She did not know that her own long suffering and her love for the child she had stolen had awakened the soul within her and brought forth through much pain a feeling that was divine. She only knew that she must confess to some one, and there was no one but the Mother Superior. So she turned and went away without asking Mrs. Lessing to buy; leaving her to wonder at the strange action.

The next morning she was at the convent. On her knees she poured out her story and asked for guidance. The Mother told her there was but one thing to do—return the child. When Lelia shrank from doing this the Mother said she would go with her.

The child was sent for, and she came in rejoicing that her mother had come. She was now sixteen and a girl to make proud the heart of her parents.

When Lelia saw her she burst into sobs. The girl ran to her and threw her arms around her neck.

"My dear mother, why do you cry?" she asked. "Has any one hurt you? If they did I should hate them," she cried vehemently.

"No, no; my little girl. You must never hate anyone. Oh, promise me you will never hate anyone," and then she told the child all that she had done and asked her forgiveness.

"I do forgive you," she answered. "I have been very happy and I love you."

"But don't you want to see your parents—your own father and mother?"

The girl acknowledged that she did, but always adding that she loved Lelia.

The next morning they reached the Lessing home. The Mother Superior went ahead to prepare the mother and father. So gently did she do it that they were outwardly composed when Lelia and their child arrived. Silently the mother took her baby in her arms, and Lelia fell at her feet and begged her to forgive her. Mrs. Lessing did so freely. Who would not forgive at such a time?

Lessing gently raised Lelia to her feet. "I must be forgiven, too," he said. "I was young and thoughtless, and I did not know."

Lelia nodded her head. She forgave as she had been forgiven, but what had she before her now? Long years of hopeless longing and loneliness. And yet in her heart was a sweet peace—sweet in spite of the great suffering, or perhaps because of it.

So engrossed were they all with each other that they did not see her slip silently through a long window and across the lawn to the woods nearby. That night she took the road that would lead her to her old band.

"AN EXHIBITOR'S COMPLAINT"

November 9, 1911.

To Editor Motion Picture News,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

I am writing this letter to you with the hope that same will be published in your valuable paper. Why? Again I repeat, Why do so many of the manufacturers of motion pictures cling to that idea that the American public is Western and Indian picture mad? Mad they are, and I can assure you that they show their madness every time they come up to the front of my playhouse, and see a poster depicting some Western or Indian picture—fact of the matter is they become so confounded mad they take one look, show their disgust and then turn right around and walk away to the other picture house where they again repeat the aforesaid look of much disgust, and again do that walk away stunt. What we exhibitors want is a walk in and not a walk away. The manufacturers (that is many of them) are doing their utmost to crab our business right at a time they ought to be furnishing us with subjects that will get the business. While I am writing this letter I can see many of my best customers come up, take a look, and go away and methinks I can hear that nickel jingle, but not in my pocket. Oh, no! far be it from so. An Indian picture occasionally doesn't hurt, but when they come as fast as the manufacturers are now putting them out, then I say to you that the manufacturer is hurting our business, and I know whereof I speak. What we want is more dramatic subjects that will interest, entertain and instruct. We exhibitors are getting tired of shooting a couple hundred Indians every week, and both my operators and piano players are actually becoming saddle sore. I do hope you will publish this letter of mine, as I am satisfied that all of the better class of exhibitors are with me in this. Trusting this letter will help to accomplish that which it is intended to do, I remain,

Yours very truly,

CARL F. MILLER,
Proprietor Wonderland Theater.

Fremont, Ohio.

JULIUS STERN ENGAGED

We had the pleasure to interview Mr. Julius Stern, general manager of the Imp Company, just before he left Chicago on the Twentieth Century for New York. Mr. Stern stated that the Imp Company is working day and night turning out better quality of pictures than ever before, and that the Imp plan of three releases a week will be the best money getting proposition for exhibitors.

Although it seemed as if Mr. Stern's entire time was taken up in his visitation of the exchange men and exhibitors, who heartily congratulated him on the quality of the Imp, Mr. Stern found time to become engaged to Miss Minnie Dienstag, who lives at 3558 Grand Boulevard, the most fashionable neighborhood of Chicago, and who is a very popular member of the Chicago young society set, and will, undoubtedly, bring Mr. Stern into the social limelight. A reception was tendered the young couple and over 300 of their friends joined in the merrymaking of the evening. Mrs. Fleckles and also Mrs. Laemmle were among the guests present.

WM. LORD WRIGHT'S PAGE

AROUND THE EDGES

By Wm. Lord Wright

"Where are you going to send this story?" I queried a scenario writer the other day.

"To the 'Sunset Moving Pictures Company,' of course," was the prompt reply.

"Why to that concern?" I asked curiously.

"Well, when they cannot use my stuff they send it back along with a nice letter pointing out the faults. I know when you get a personal letter from the editor that your story has some talent even if they can't use it. I send all my stories to the Sunset Company first of all."

Of course, the name "Sunset" is fictitious. If you wish, you can substitute one or two well-known moving picture companies. Any scenario writer, successful or unsuccessful, will supply the correct names.

By a little extra trouble these concerns are getting the first reading of a majority of work from the pens of free-lance authors. By the personal letter method, these editors occasionally uncover a jewel of a scenario and, incidentally, a new writer who may become of great value to the manufacturer.

Printed rejection slips save time and bother. To enclose a printed card or slip with a rejected manuscript undoubtedly saves the salary of an extra stenographer and mayhap an assistant scrip reader. But the personal-letter-to-authors method pays.

An unknown author writes a scenario. It may be impossible to film. But that writer has expended time, money and much anxiety on his beloved script. It is the offspring of his mind and heart. Tenderly he prepares it, places it in the mails and counts the days until a report should come. The manuscript comes back. It is accompanied by a printed piece of paper or a card. The message reads:

"The editor regrets that your scenario is unavailable." That is all.

The slip doesn't inform the anxious author of his mistakes nor does it really encourage him to continue.

Take the "Sunset" method. The manuscript returns just as promptly, but with it is a friendly letter telling the author of the personal regret the editor has experienced because the script is not suitable to his needs. The story is too long, or too complex, or the subject has been used previously. Try again, urges the editor.

The writer is pleased. His effort merits careful attention. If he tries another story the "Sunset" concern gets it first. It may be a good story, too. The "Sunset" company also gains a friend who has good words for that particular company and its releases.

One prominent manufacturer orders that every contributor to the scenario department be written a personal letter. There is no deviation to the rule.

It's just the old jingle of "little drops of water, little grains of sand" applied to the moving picture business.

* * *

While on the subject of scenarios, let us repeat a criticism we heard a clergyman deliver not so long ago. "I can see no harm in moving picture plays," said he, "but the monotony of the stories filmed is what keeps so many of the educated from constant attendance."

Pressed for an explanation of the word "monotony," the clergyman stated: "After you have seen a number of picture stories you are struck with the monotonous ending or climax of them all. The lovers are always united, or there is a happy marriage; or they embrace and it's all over. Why not, for a change, occasionally film a story in which the man and maid, through strange circumstances, fail to reach an understanding; where the villain is not successful until the very last moment, or where the lover or heroine sacrifices self at the final moment for a principle? Certainly, I understand, the majority wish the happy ending to the story. But why not occasionally, for the sake of variety, tempt the great minority with a radical change in plot and climax?"

* * *

Some moving picture playlets are pathetic and they require music of the tremolo variety. The other evening the pianist was playing sadly, softly, as a guardian of the peace, who tips the scales at 300 pounds, tiptoed down the theater aisle and whispered in the ear of an usher to please find him two empty seats. The usher saw immediately the necessity for two seats and showed the patron the only two that were left together, well down in front. The pianist was in the most affecting part of her selection, when there was a sudden crash, not at all in line with the temperament of the music and the scenic effect. The crash was followed by a thump that sounded like Bill Taft falling down a stairway. After a few moments of confusion the rotund form of the policeman emerged from the wreckage of two broken seats and tiptoed toward the door. As he passed the doorway he was heard to mutter something decisive about managers who equipped their theaters with pasteboard seats.

* * *

Managers of the moving picture theaters in smaller towns have conditions to contend with that are unknown to amusement promoters of the larger cities. The smaller communities ofttimes have a superabundance of the narrow-minded who have nothing to do save to roam the fields and forests seeking that which they may devour. In many of the small cities recently well-meaning people have become active against the picture plays, claiming that many of the plots shown are not elevating to the young. Such activity in the larger cities is not serious, but in smaller communities much annoyance is caused picture play managers because the movements gain in importance through misguided persistence.

In one little city recently the W. C. T. U. drafted resolutions against picture theaters because Rex's carefully prepared and impressive film "The Dagger and the Rose" was claimed to have a suggestive dance. Then to cap the climax the same body of women protested against the showing of Nestor's moral playlet "The Parson and the Bully" because it was said to contain a prize fight! The chief of police was appealed to to stop the show. Of course, the appeal was fruitless but just the same prejudice against the picture theater was aroused. What made the movement the more unusual was the fact that the regular theater in the town was presenting such plays as "The Blue Mouse" and "Madame Sherry" without one word of opposition from the energetic ladies. Consistency would indeed be a jewel in this particular case.

The little city in question is in a "dry" community. The several picture theaters cater to high-class patronage composed largely of church people. The managers set about to offset the adverse sentiment aroused. One manager started to advertise his evening program in the afternoon newspapers. He gave a synopsis of each plot to be shown that night so that no more snap judgments of "prize fights" and "immodest dances" could be brought forth. The Sons of Veterans, a very influential and aristocratic organization in this particular city, was to give a home talent performance for the purpose of collecting funds with which to erect a shaft to the memory of the soldier dead in the city cemetery. This moving picture proprietor prepared slides and each evening for a week before the entertainment a free announcement of the coming event was flashed on the screen. High-class music was given in each theater. The audiences became larger and the prestige of the moving picture theater was saved.

The S. of V. officials, after the entertainment, published cards of thanks in the newspapers, expressing their appreciation of the aid extended to their cause by the moving picture theater proprietors.

With a little nice diplomacy, the villifiers of the moving picture were silenced. It is suggested that other theater managers in like circumstances go and do likewise. It is a much better method than replying hotly to such attacks through the medium of publicity.

* * *

Although some Canadian cities bar picture films that show the American flag, American gold and silver coins bearing the American emblem are still politely tolerated across the border, pertinently remarks the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

* * *

Willie Loveman must be "some adapter" according to the following caught from the columns of the Cleveland Leader:

The Richard Wagner of the moving picture theater, the perfect physio-psychological pianistic performer, the link between the white screen and the audience, between the moving picture playwright and the spectators, and the interpreter par excellence of the celluloid films has been found.

He is William Loveman, alias Willie Loveman, alias Willie, who holds forth nightly and eke matineely before the piano forte and organ forte, as the musicians would say, at the Penn Square moving picture theater.

What the great Richard did for music and the drama the equally great Willie in his own way has done for the moving picture. He has taken it, a flat thing of mixed shadow and light, from the screen, added depth to its length and breadth, breathed the breath of life into the lungs of the humans and made them pulsing, living, sentient beings.

How? By his organo-pianistic interpretation. This means that he performs on the organ as well as on the piano, and watching the picture like an orchestra director does his score. Willie interprets and translates every little movement in the pictures that has a meaning of its own. Willie calls to his aid thousands of popular songs that have left their impression on his memory. And that's the secret of the whole thing. Sounds extremely simple, doesn't it?

You and I and a lot of others could do the same thing, couldn't me? We could sit at a piano and when the picture showed a loving couple, of course, we would play Ernie Ball's "Love Me and the World is Mine," and when it showed a Revolutionary war scene, why we would play, "The Star Spangled Banner," or "The Red, White and Blue," wouldn't we, thinking it was eminently fit and proper?

But not so Willie. Not in a thousand years. Here is just where Willie shows his genius and mastery. Do you think for a minute that he would commit such an anachronism as to play "The Star Spangled Banner" or "The Red, White and Blue" for a Revolutionary war scene? Not Willie. Willie would play "Yankee Doodle." The other two songs were written long after the Revolution. See?

When William Loveman sees a married man in the picture commencing a quiet little flirtation with a willing young woman he spiels out on the piano, "Oh, What I Know About You"; when he sees a man putting a ring on his intended's finger forth comes, "Every Little Movement Has a Meaning of Its Own." Can you beat it?

When the reel shows a girl jilting a fellow, Willie accompanies it with "I Don't Care"; with a rube piece goes "The Chicken Reel"; for a sunset or sunrise "Glow Worm" is used; for a traveling man stunt, "When You're in Town," "I've Got You on the List" and "Call Me Up in the Afternoon," which is sizing them up very well. What? When a woman leaves her husband after a matrimonial fuss he uses "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," which needs no explanation. For particularly solemn and sad pieces Willie uses the organ and you can't miss the dolorous sentiment when he does.

William is but twenty years old and when one sees what he has accomplished in just a score of years one wonders what he will bring forth in the next twenty. He has been performing publicly, at dances, and translating and interpreting moving pictures for the last eight years. He memorizes a score after one reading and can follow you on the piano no matter what song or air you whistle or sing.

"There are not many moving picture pianists doing what I am doing," says William Loveman. "There are very few good pianists in the business and the good pianists that there are are not appreciated by the general public. They don't seem to appreciate just how hard it is to give exactly the right music at the psychological moment in the picture."

THE CARL BARCKHOFF CO.
BUILDERS OF PIPE ORGANS
With or Without Self Playing Attachment
POMEROY, OHIO, U. S. A.
Established 1819

Over 3000 Barckhoff Organs in use, which testify to their superiority and durability in construction, workmanship and sweetness of tone.

We make a specialty of Organ Chimes, made by no other builder.

You are dealing with the Manufacturer, no commission.

EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY

Imp Thanksgiving Story in Which a Convict is Made Happy on the Day of Thanks

In "Executive Clemency" the Imp Company has produced a story that is interesting in theme, timely in production, well staged and excellently acted. King Baggot has the principal part, and it gives that sterling actor one of the best opportunities of his histrionic career. The story has to do with the fortunes of a poor man and his wife. He is thrown in prison for defending the honor of his wife, protecting her from the attentions of a rascally rent collector. The collector has rich and influential friends, and the natural action of the poor mechanic is made to take on the mien of an unwarranted attack, a policeman appearing as a witness against him. The persecuted man bears his shame with fortitude that is commendable, making a model prisoner. His actions attract the attention of the governor, who probes the matter and ascertains that he is being unjustly detained in prison. He decides to give him his liberty on Thanksgiving Day but the prisoner is not aware of the intended clemency. A few weeks before the holiday he is overjoyed to receive a letter telling him he is a father. He is almost insane with joy and chafes for the first time under imprisonment. He decides to escape and see his loved ones. He is employed in a stone quarry, and, watching his chance, secretes himself in a wagon until the men have been herded and taken to prison. Escape is easy and he exchanges clothing with a scarecrow and makes his way home without being discovered. He enters the house to find his wife and her babe sleeping. He kisses them gently without awakening them and returns to prison and gives himself up. This has the affect of making the governor recall the pardon, but the daughter of the chief executive interests herself in behalf of the prisoner, learns the true conditions, and she prevails on her father to reconsider his action. The heart of the governor is touched, and he grants the pardon. The daughter visits the humble home laden with good things for Thanksgiving, and the husband and wife are happy on the day of thanks.

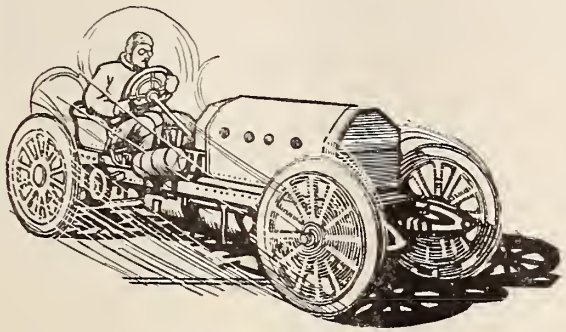
NORDISK FILM TIDNING
The first trade paper in Scandinavia.
Best advertising medium in North Europe.
Subscription 6 shillings.
Sample copy free upon request.
Editor, A. SEABURY, Post Box 163, Stockholm, Sweden.

GET A REP GET A REP GET A REP GET A REP GET A REP GET A REP

All Speed Records Will Be Broken at the Savannah Automobile Races

IT'S UP TO YOU TO BREAK ALL SPEED RECORDS TO GET YOUR BOOKING IN ON TIME FOR THE MOST THRILLING EVENTS IN AUTOMOBILE RACING HISTORY.

BREAK ALL BOX OFFICE RECEIPT RECORDS BY SHOWING THIS UP-TO-THE-MINUTE "REP."



GETTING A "REP"

DON'T WAIT. GO TO YOUR EXCHANGE AT ONCE AND BOOK IT. A "REP" THAT WILL MAKE A "REP."

WE HAVE THE EXCLUSIVE PRIVILEGE OF TAKING THESE PICTURES, GUARANTEED UNDER A CONTRACT WITH THE SAVANNAH AUTOMOBILE CLUB.

REPUBLIC FILM COMPANY

SUITE 805-812, 145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

GET A REP GET A REP GET A REP GET A REP GET A REP GET A REP

THANHOUSER ENTERS PSYCHOLOGY WITH "THE LADY FROM THE SEA"

The Moving Picture News was accorded an advance view Thursday of "The Lady From the Sea," the Ibsen story that was filmed by Thanhouser. This is the reel that marks a new epoch in film production, in that it introduces the psychological subject. Psychology is a field that has heretofore been a foreign one to the film maker, and the Thanhouser entrance is an important one. The News' view of the picture in question will appear in next week's issue; this week we give you a running story of the play. In the main, it tells just how a young and imaginative girl can be affected and cowed by a thoroughly meaningless ceremony.

The girl, Ellida, was the daughter of a lighthouse keeper, and spent many hours near the water's edge, dreaming of the great ships that she could daily see sailing by her home.

While she was still scarcely more than a child, one of these ships put in for repairs at a fishing village near the lighthouse, and its second officer, while on a day's outing to kill time, visited the lighthouse. He there met Ellida, whose youth and beauty he admired. His stories of the sea and "the great beyond" won the immediate interest of Ellida. He paid frequent visits to the lonely lighthouse, and the girl's interest in him soon developed into a fascination which almost amounted to a spell, which he cast upon her when he was in her presence.

While his ship was still undergoing repairs, the second officer quarreled with his captain, and a fight ensued in which the captain was killed. The guilty man escaped from the ship, and making his way to the lighthouse forced Ellida to assist in his flight. Before going he compelled her to plight her troth with him, inventing a strong ceremony to impress her, by fastening a ring which she wore to one of his, and casting them both into the sea. As soon as he had gone, Ellida realized that to engage herself to this fierce and dominant man was sheer madness. And she wrote as soon as she could obtain his address, telling him that she would not consider the engagement binding, and that she would expect him to release and forget her, as she intended to release and forget him.

The sailor paid no attention to her letter, and simply wrote that some day he would return and claim her and that she must wait for him.

Being left alone by the death of her father, Ellida finally consented to become the wife of Dr. Wangel, a friend of her father's, who had long admired her. The doctor was a widower with two grown daughters, and Ellida found herself a stranger in her new home, and spent much of her time alone. Her loneliness naturally led to mental depression, and as the years passed, an awful dread grew in her mind of what her fate would be if her sailor lover returned to claim her.

Her imaginings had so strongly worked upon her, that when the sailor did finally return from the sea, she entreated her husband to allow her to go to him, although she feared and had grown to hate the strange man. Dr. Wangel tried to show her that her duty and her happiness lay with her husband and her home, but feeling that she would never be perfectly content with any fear darkening her life, he decided to tell her that she was absolutely free; he would not hold her to her marriage vows.

When Ellida found that she was free to choose between the sailor and her husband she realized that this man who had been a fearful mystery, whose very existence she concealed from everyone, including her husband, was simply a man whom she disliked, and whom she could freely marry or dismiss at her pleasure. Of her own free will, she ordered the sailor to leave her, telling him that he no longer had power to intimidate or mystify her.

With perfect trust and no secrets between them, Dr. Wangel and his Ellida started life anew, with no bar to their complete love and understanding.

The picture is released Tuesday, December 12th, complete in one reel.

Boston, Mass.—Superb Theater Co., capital $25,000; H. M. Ramback, O. Grodburg and W. Roxbury.

DER KINEMATOGRAPH, DUSSELDORF

The leading Organ for the Motion Picture Trade in Germany.

Special Supplement for Talking Machines, &c.
Published every Wednesday. Annual Subscription 11/- Post Free.
Advertisements (4 columns to page); 2s. 6d. per inch. Situations Wanted, 1½d. per line.
Reduced Price for a Series of Insertions.
Publisher—ED. LINTZ. Chief Editor—EMIL PERLMANN.

EXHIBITORS' MASS MEETING

A mass meeting, under the auspices of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York, was held on Monday, November 13, at the Star Theater at 482 Third avenue.

This meeting was called for the purpose of discussing the draft of the new ordinance drafted by Mayor Gaynor's specially appointed committee, and to enter a protest against the scathing denunciations published in some of the daily newspapers of the city.

The meeting was called to order at 11:45 P. M. by Mr. Samuel Trigger, who presided, and there were fully one hundred and fifty exhibitors present which, considering the unseemly hour, was considered a very creditable showing.

Addresses were made by Mr. Trigger, Mr. Sidney Asher, secretary of the association, and Mr. Arthur D. Jacobs, treasurer of the association, in which these various gentlemen embodied in their addresses a summary of what took place at the Mayor's hearing in City Hall on Saturday, November 4, and each one of these speakers impressed on the exhibitors present the necessity of them banding and sticking together in the organization to successfully combat the powerful forces in the shape of various civic bodies and bigoted reformers that were arrayed against them.

Mr. Trigger addressed the members at great length, advising them just what was being done for the benefit of the industry by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, and advising all those who were not already members to immediately join and give their financial as well as moral support to the organization.

Secretary Asher explained in detail what had been done by the committees appointed to represent the exhibitors at the public hearing and stated that at the request of the chairman of the mass committee, he (Mr. Asher) on behalf of the Moving Picture Exhibitors of New York, had greatly amended the draft proposed in the ordinance, and had made quite a number of additions and corrections which he, from his practical experience as an exhibitor, knew would tend to benefit the industry.

A profound impression was created among the exhibitors present by a statement from Treasurer Arthur D. Jacobs, in which he quoted Superintendent McClintock of the Society for the Prevention of Crime as saying that he was heartily in favor of passing laws that would eventually drive out everyone of the exhibitors in New York City with places having the regulation number of 299 seats or less; Mr. Jacobs urged upon the Exhibitors present the advisability of maintaining a stronger and more powerful Exhibitors' organization, and as a result of his remarks, ten new members were enrolled and the treasury was immediately swelled by payments from members aggregating over one hundred dollars.

In commenting upon the bitter attacks made on Moving Pictures industry by various newspapers, in particular the New York World, it was suggested that a mass meeting be called at Cooper Union or some other available hall to which the public should be invited, and at which they should be addressed by prominent speakers, and in this was trying to influence public sentiment in favor of the Motion Picture Exhibitors. No definite action was taken on this suggestion (which a great many Exhibitors present heartily approved of), as it was thought best to leave this important matter to a regular meeting of the organization or its board of directors.

Dr. Lamberger made an address in which he informed the Exhibitors present that in order to raise funds to defray the expenses of the organization for meetings, press work, legal services, drafting, legislation, etc., The Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of New York was going to hold an entertainment and ball, for which purpose Palm Garden, at Fifty-eighth street, near Third avenue (adjoining Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theater), had been engaged for Monday, January 29, and all Exhibitors were requested to lend their aid in selling tickets and soliciting advertisements for a Handsome Souvenir Journal to be gotten up for the occasion.

S. S. HUTCHINSON TO ERECT MANSION

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president The American Film Mfg. Co., Chicago, has purchased of Edward Hines, the millionaire lumber magnate, an exceptionally fine piece of Chicago property on which the genial president of the American expects to erect a magnificent home. Chicago daily papers, commenting on the big deal, have called it one of the really big purchases of the year.

Mr. Hutchinson, it is said, will erect a residence costing in excess of $50,000, and which is expected to be one of the show places of the famous Chicago lake shore. The property has a west frontage and a ground area of 50 by 250 feet to the lake. E. N. Weart & Co., Chicago, were the brokers who negotiated the deal.

* * * *

Work is going forward on the new factory now in course of construction by the American Film Mfg. Co., and promises to live up to the expectations of its architect in being ready for occupancy by January 1. The realty secured for the factory lies in the heart of the exclusive residence district of the lake shore. It is believed to be a good speculation if property continues to treble in value in that section as it has during the past five years.

THE TEMPEST

Thanhouser again comes to the front with specimens of beautiful photography and artistic conception of theme. Of that quaint play of Shakespeare, "The Tempest," so full of the freshness of youth, and the old, old story of simple love, surrounded by a rustic atmosphere, so rustic that one can almost imagine that the odor of the leaves and the fragrant grasses comes floating on the air, Thanhouser has made a very pretty production indeed, keeping the heart interest which permeates the entire story intact. Release date of this film November 28th.

Proven by actual tests to be the world's best Rollable Curtain and Screen
Besides the cheapest, saves one-third of your juice bill.

NO HAZE. NO GLARE. NO EYE STRAIN

Used on our battleships and cruisers. The government standard. Universally adopted all over the world in the largest theatres. Weekly shipments over 100 Curtains and Screens

Used by New York City Budget Exhibit

SUNLIGHT, OR ANY OTHER LIGHT HAS NO EFFECT ON

MIRROROIDE

MEANS PERFECT PROJECTION, PERFECT PICTURES

Mr. Chapman,
Gem Theatre, Utica,
tells us that he is showing pictures with our curtain that is the talk of Utica. He is turning them away. What Mirroroide has done for him it will do for you. Call on him and get his personal endorsement or let us furnish you with other testimonials. Over 500 curtains sold since Aug. 3d. We send you samples; we show you. Demonstration size 50 cents, ordinarily 4 cents covers cost of mailing. Beat your competitor to it. Mirroroide is really the greatest necessity to perfection—use it. Watch the money roll in.

THE BENJAMIN-GENTER CO. Newburgh, N. Y.

THE ECLAIR CO.

Announces Its Second American Release

OUT TUE NOV 28 A ROLLICKING COMEDY, DESIGNED FOR LAUGHING PURPOSES ONLY, AND NAMED

Miss Masquerader

Attention Is Directed To Its Rare Photographic Excellence.
Length, 950 Feet. Elegant Posters.

AND THE SAME WEEK—ON THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30

TWO LIKEWISE HUMORESQUE SUBJECTS—ON ONE REEL

The Five Daughters of Durand

Novel in theme story and action, with photographic originality wonderfully displayed throughout.
Length, 660 Feet.

Gussie's Congratulations

A plain, wholesome laugh-provider made for brain-fagged mortals who seek relaxation after the daily grind.
Length, 330 Feet.

TUE THU TWICE EACH WEEK, ECLAIR FILMS ARE NOW ISSUED TO RESPONSIBLE AND WORTHY EXCHANGES TUE THU

MAKE NO MISTAKE Eclair Master Products are Not Sold Promiscuously to Unreliable buyers. Only those proving proper Financial Standing and Catering to First Class Exhibitors are given circulating privileges.

NEW STOCK PHOTOS SOON READY

Handsome Set of Real Photographs Mailed to Live Theatres at Bare Cost of Production. Complete Set $1.50

GET ON OUR MAIL LIST

ECLAIR FILM CO., General Offices and Studios Fort Lee, N. J.

Branches Throughout The World.

A FULLY EQUIPPED 1912 MOTOR-DRIVEN MOTIOGRAPH FOR $268.50 UP

THE LATEST ADDITION TO THE MOTIOGRAPH LINE

A snappy, up to the minute, 1912 model machine, that for grace of design, perfection in construction, "and picture," cannot be equalled.

Naturally you wonder how we can give such astonishing value for the money. The reason is simple—we have been building machines for years. Have a splendidly equipped factory, and the wonderful success of the MOTIOGRAPH has done away with heavy experimental expense.

Dependable Service is what you are after, and every MOTIOGRAPH sold is our silent salesman. When you buy a MOTIOGRAPH and like it you tell your friends, and when they are in the market their decision is influenced by the wonderful results you have obtained.

We are always glad to demonstrate our line. Call at the factory and learn more about us and the MOTIOGRAPH.

Good MOTIOGRAPH operators: Get in touch with us.

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564 W. Randolph St., CHICAGO

For Sale by Live Dealers Everywhere

HAVE YOU WRITTEN YET FOR PARTICULARS CONCERNING THE

MOVING PICTURE TALES

A PERSONAL LETTER FROM ALFRED H. SAUNDERS TO THE EXHIBITOR

MR. EXHIBITOR:

You no doubt have been aware that for some time past some of the small dailies throughout the country, and, sorry to say, one or two of our cosmopolitan dailies, have published editorials denouncing the moving picture exhibitor, his films, his theaters and his business in general. It behooves the moving picture man to protect himself, his business, and his patrons, and it is for this reason that I have started the publishing of a periodical called the "MOVING PICTURE TALES," which will be devoted exclusively to the publishing of short stories of the different films shown on the screens of the moving picture theaters throughout the country.

This paper will enable you to attract a larger and more intelligent audience to your theater and will maintain an interest that cannot be produced in any other way. There will be no cost to you, but rather a profit.

Yours for the Education of the People,

Alfred H. Saunders

Don't delay, write now, as only a limited First Edition of 25,000 will be disposed of

5c

Every Exchange Man Will Need 1000 Copies There Are 61 Exchanges

Let Us Know At Once How Many

WINNERS OF THE PRIZE NAME COMPETITION

Some weeks ago there appeared in our paper an ad announcing that $50 in prizes would be awarded for the best name of a brand of independent films to be placed upon the market. The prizes were to be distributed as follows:

$25.00 to the first,
15.00 to the second, and
10.00 to the third.

The three winners were selected from a batch of 1,863 letters, many of which contained splendid suggestions for names.

The advertisers were The Republic Film Company, 145 West 145th Street, New York City.

Following are the prize-winning letters:

Muskogee, Okla., August 23, 1911.

Gentlemen—I herewith enclose you my suggestion concerning name for your film, as per adv., namely:

Republic and XL (Excel). Submit two names, thinking possibly some other film manager may be using similar title.

The enclosed sketch, submitted as an illustration to convey a partial idea only.

Trusting you may find my suggestions to your favor, I am,

Very truly yours,
F. W. BOCKENHEUSER,
133 South Third St.

Mr. F. W. Bockenheuser,
Muskogee, Okla.

Dear Sir—We take great pleasure in forwarding you herewith our check for $25, being the first prize money in the contest for the best name for our company and brand. We wish to compliment you also upon the clever sketch you submitted accompanying the name.

We shall always be glad to hear from you with any advertising suggestions for our brand.

Don't fail to notice our advertising contest in this week's trade papers.

Complimenting you upon the cleverness of your suggestions, we beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
HLM/SF REPUBLIC FILM CO.,
Enc:check) General Manager.

August 23, 1911.

Submitted by Mrs. H. C. Wilbur,
The Register, New Haven, Conn.

1. Tiro—vo Firoman—After Tiro, the famous freedman, and learned amanuensis of Cicero. As Tiro was the originator of the Tiroman notes, the foundation of shorthand, it seems appropriate that his name be used in abbreviated drama. Trade sign, Head of Roman crowned with laurel on shield device and over shield eagle with widespread wings.
2. Viator—Trade sign: Circle of revolving light about letter.
3. Nomad—Trade sign: Owl with moving eyes.
4. Sarno—Trade sign: Large hand—palm facing outward, on tip of each finger letter spelling name.
5. Hupa—Trade sign: Four-leaf clover, each petal bearing letter of name.
6. Vitalia.
7. Kracke.
8. Kelso.
9. Gaddis—Trade sign: raceful greyhound in full flight.
10. Holeo.
11. Astor.
12. Yale—Trade sign: Diamond-shaped shield bearing name.
13. Chieftain.
14. Algona—Trade sign: Head of Indian Chief.
15. Sovereign—Trade sign: Lion's head.
16. Republic—Trade sign: Statue of Liberty.

Mrs. H. C. Wilbur,
Care The Register, New Haven, Conn.

Dear Madam—We enclose you herewith our check for $15, being the second prize money in the contest for the best name for our company and brand. The same name was submitted from one other party, Mr. F. W. Bockenheuser, Muskogee, Okla., but antedating the receipt of yours.

Complimenting you upon the cleverness of your suggestions, we remain,

Yours very truly.
HLM/SF REPUBLIC FILM CO.,
Enc) General Manager.

Everett, Mass., August 5, 1911.

Gentlemen—My choice for a name for the new moving picture is "Reputation Films."

Hoping that I am the successful one and wishing you success in your business,

I remain,
ELTON MACK,
46 Wellington Ave., Everett, Mass.

Mr. Elton Mack,
46 Wellington Ave.,
Everett, Mass.

Dear Sir—We enclose you herewith our check for $10, being the third prize money in the competition for the best name for our company and brand.

While you did not submit a name to be used for our company you gave the suggestion for the name of the brand.

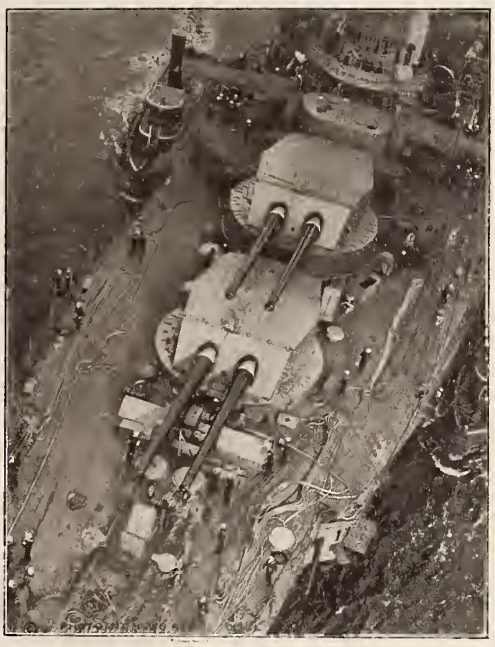
Complimenting you upon the cleverness of your suggestion, we remain,

Yours very truly,
HLM/SF REPUBLIC FILM CO.,
Enc:check) General Manager.

Yankee Doodle and Our Navy

This is the title of Champion's release for Monday, December 4th, and is a split reel of a most novel character. Both subjects are beautifully blended in a theme.

Intensely patriotic.



HIGH PRAISE FOR AMERICAN FILMS

The Wm. H. Swanson Company, of Denver, Col., is high in its praise of American releases. This exchange handles both the Monday and Thursday Americans and finds them more than satisfactory from the exchange man's standpoint. An interesting excerpt from one of the recent "reports on new releases" issued by this company, comments on "The Eastern Cowboy," an American picture of November 13, in the following language:

"This picture is a very high class comedy, with a very interesting life-story intermingled, illustrating the well-known fact that 'the course of true love never runs smoothly.' The opening scene of this picture at a lotus pond is very realistic and beautiful.

"The first scenes of this picture are taken in the Eastern end of our country and then swings to the orange groves of Southern California, giving us at the same time scenes of a typical Western ranch. This photoplay is without doubt one of the very best comedies ever told and an exceptional addition to any program. Beautiful scenery, excellent photography, and splendid acting. Right up to the minute in every detail. The 'Flying A' people are to be congratulated on issuing so valuable a film."

Olin, Ia.—The old opera house is being torn down to make way for a new one to be erected here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Fern Amusement Co. will erect a new theater at Third and Clark streets.

HANDS ACROSS THE SEA IN '76

We feel that the Eclair Company of America have scored a great success in their production of "Hands Across the Sea in '76." Much more marvelous than a masterpiece from the painter's brush is this living picture of bygone days. Just as a historical drama is presented to us on the theater stage, is this wonderful film given to us by Eclair, only with more vivid reality even, because we have the actual battle scene given us, showing all its terrible consequence to man and beast. The scene "Before Yorktown," and the battlefield after the battle, with the women moving quietly among the dead and the dying, ministering to the comfort of the surviving ones, stand out by themselves as masterpieces of motion picture photography and intelligent artistic production. The opening scene, which is visionary, is emblematic of the surrender of the British and is a unique innovation. To be sure, the production, generally speaking, is not without its weak spots; it would scarcely be expected that it should be, no more than is the first production of a new opera or drama; if perfection had been attained there would be little left to strive for, but in this production the strong places so overbalance the weak places that one comes away from an exhibition of the film feeling a consciousness of having beheld a masterpiece.

Apart from the artistic and entertaining part of the picture it is a wonderful lesson in history, and is worthy a place both in the schools and other educational institutions of the country as well as in the archives of the city as the active reproducion which we have with which to remember the noble deeds of the great Washington, the loyalty of Benjamin Franklin to the cause of his country, and the generous good will and unselfish spirit shown by the French officers Lafayette and Rochambeau toward the Americans. It will tend to foster in the children of the republic a reverence and love for the father of their country, and an appreciation of the efforts of the early patriots on behalf of posterity. It will help them better to appreciate the peace and power and liberty which is their heritage, and for which their fathers fought.

In conclusion I would say that "Hands Across the Sea" as produced by the Eclair Company of America is a proud step forward for the Independents.

SALES COMPANY LETTER TO MAYOR GAYNOR

November 7, 1911.

To the Honorable William E. Gaynor, Mayor of New York City, and Committee on Proposed Ordinance Regulating Moving Picture Theaters,

Dear Sirs—The Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company, representing a great number of moving picture exhibitors in Greater New York, desires to call your attention to Sub-section J, page 13, of the proposed ordinances regulating moving picture theaters. Sub-section J, line 6, reads as follows:

> "But the Bureau of Licenses shall have power in its discretion to enforce the provisions of said Paragraph 3 of Section E as to exits and courts."

Please read Section E, paragraph 3, and appreciate the power this would place in the hands of the Bureau of Licenses. It gives a discretionary power for the exercise of the grossest favoritism. Motion picture houses that in no way comply with the sections referred to could be kept open at the discretion of the Bureau of Licenses, while others, much better equipped in regard to exits and courts, might be closed up because they did not cater to the Bureau of Licenses, or for any whim of the head of said bureau. For instance, should he have a particular friend running a picture house in a certain neighborhood, he could have all the opposing houses closed that did not comply with Section E, paragraph 3, even should his friend's house be grossly behind the requirements of the section and paragraph referred to.

We trust that the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen will see that such a dangerous discretionary power shall not be placed in the hands of any one man. Laws should be made to apply to all equally and not be discretionary powers that may harass one citizen for the benefit of another. Picture exhibitors have no objections to comply with reasonable laws that treat all of them alike, but they will rise in a storm of protest if any such discretionary power as is here set forth be given to the Bureau of Licenses.

In regard to Sub-section D, article 3, we would suggest the following amendment:

That the Bureau of Licenses, upon the request of an applicant, shall without delay notify the Fire Department, Bureau of Buildings, Police Department, Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity and Department of Health to inspect the premises for which the application is made, requesting that the inspection be made without delay and report thereon returned to the Bureau of Licenses within two weeks. Upon receipt of reports from the departments in question, the Bureau of Licenses shall immediately pass upon the location of the moving picture theater and upon the character of the applicant requesting the licenses and if provisions of this ordinance be complied with, the Bureau of Licenses shall forthwith grant the license requested.

Yours very truly,

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY.

A REPUBLIC SCOOP

The Republic Film Company secured from the Savannah Automobile Club the exclusive right to make the moving pictures of the greatest international automobile events of the year.

The Republic will, no doubt, record many thrills in filming the events described in the official circular of the Automobile Club, as follows:

Third International Road Race

Under the auspices of the Savannah Automobile Club. Sanctioned by the Automobile Club of America, for the grand prize of the Automobile Club of America, the Gold Challenge Cup of the value of $5,000. To be run at Savannah, Ga., Thursday, November 30, 1911.

The length of the course is approximately seventeen miles, which will be covered twenty-four times, making the distance of the race about 408 miles.

The award of the trophy carries an additional award of $7,000 in cash.

The race will commence at 9:00 a.m., Eastern time, Thursday (Thanksgiving Day), November 30th. It will be the fastest, most thrilling and spectacular race ever run in this or any other country. The highest horsepower, the speediest cars and most famous drivers of the world, including Nazzaro, Wagner, De Palma, Bruce Brown and many others will participate. All so-called thrillers of the past will seek the level of child's play when compared with this race. There will not be a dull moment from the time the cars start until the big race is ended. Every minute will be thrilling and exciting. At times you will witness two cars abreast, racing at an awful speed for supremacy.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr. Cup Race

Conducted by the Savannah Automobile Club, Monday, November 27, 1911.

The length of the course is approximately seventeen miles, which will be covered seventeen times, making a total of about 289 miles.

To the car covering the required distance in the shortest elapsed time there will be awarded the William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Cup. The award of the cup carries an additional award of $2,000 in cash. To the winner of the cup and cash there will be awarded a special "Donor's Trophy," for permanent ownership.

Tiedeman Trophy Race

Under the auspices of the Savannah Automobile Club, Monday, November 27, 1911.

The length of the course is approximately seventeen miles, which shall be covered ten times, making a total distance of approximately 170 miles.

To the car covering the required distance in the shortest elapsed time, there will be awarded the Tiedeman Trophy.

The award of the trophy carries an additional award of $1,000 in cash.

The Savannah Challenge Trophy

Conducted by the Savannah Automobile Club, Monday, November 27, 1911.

The length of the course is approximately seventeen miles, which shall be covered thirteen times, making a total distance of approximately 221 miles.

To the car covering the required distance in the shortest elapsed time, there will be awarded the Savannah Challenge Trophy.

The award of the cup carries an additional award of $1,000 in cash. To the winner of the cup there will be awarded a special "Donor's Trophy" for permanent ownership.

PRESTO

Poster frames, the best poster frame made, $1.75 each in quantities up to five. Six or more $1.50 each, cash with order.

ELECTRA Pink Label Carbons 5/8 x 6 soft cored, $2.00 per 100. $19.00 per 1,000, cash with order.

Swaab Film Service Co.

Pioneer Film Exchange
129 N. EIGHTH STREET PHILADELPHIA
Power's and Motiograph Machines

Powers Weekly Corner

FOR TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 28th
More generous than ever with split reels

"THE WANDERER'S RETURN"

In which drama turns to comedy, and
"VIEWS OF LAKE COMO, ITALY."
You've read of this famous beauty spot—here it is.

FOR SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2

"TOO MUCH INJUN"

The first Indian COMEDY ever made—a novelty.
AND
"THE LINEMAN AND THE GIRL."
More reel comedy—how's that for split reels?

POWERS MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
511 West 42d Street NEW YORK CITY

The Course

Drivers of international fame have pronounced the Savannah course the safest and fastest in the world. The course will be oiled to keep down the dust and make it faster. All previous world's records will be lowered.

WHO WAS THE REAL "LADY FROM THE SEA?"

Chief Character in Play Enjoying Stage Revival and Picture Premiere Evidently Suggested by an Authoress

The Thanhouser picture production and the New York stage revival of "The Lady From the Sea" has again brought attention to that old Ibsen classic and to the question, "Was there a lady from the sea?" There was, according to the latest reliable information, as given out by William Archer in his introduction to "The Lady From the Sea" (Scribner's), or at least he comes pretty near locating a lady who, while by no means from the sea, is quite certain through other characteristics to have suggested the play character of Ellida. Mr. Archer quotes John Paulsen as saying that the stranger's dæmonic power over Ellida was suggested by Welhaven's strange influence over Camilla Wergeland. Says Mr. Archer:

"This receives some confirmation in a letter which Ibsen addressed on May 3, 1889, to the lady from whom Paulsen mentions. This was Camilla Collett, born Wergeland, a sister of the great lyric poet, Henrik Wergeland, and the authoress of a book, 'From the Camp of the Dumb,' which is said to have greatly influenced Ibsen's attitude towards the woman question, and to have stimulated him to the production of 'A Doll's House.' I do not know the story of her relation to J. S. C. Welhaven, a distinguished poet, and her brother's chief rival, but it is clear from Ibsen's letter that she was in some way present in his mind during the composition of 'The Lady From the Sea.' This is what he wrote: 'Allow me to send you a few words of very sincere thanks for your comprehension of "The Lady From the Sea." I felt pretty sure in advance that from you more than any one else I could rely upon such comprehension, but it gave me inexpressible pleasure to find my hope confirmed by your letter. Yes, there are points of resemblance—indeed many. And you have seen and felt them—points, I mean, which I could arrive at only by divination. But it is now

Great Northern

THE "KING PIN" OF QUALITY FILMS

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18TH

A RENDEZVOUS IN HYDE PARK

A case of mistaken identity. A ludicrous Comedy film well enacted. On the same reel:

HIGH SCOTLAND

A travel film which will delight everybody. Charming scenery, beautiful water effects, national dances, and manoeuvres of the famous Highlander Corps.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25TH

THE THEFT OF MONA LISA

A splendidly enacted comedy, with a novel and interesting plot. Length, 804 feet.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR PRODUCT!

The Bear-on-the-Globe trade mark is the emblem of high quality

GREAT NORTHERN FILM COMPANY

7 EAST 14TH STREET, NEW YORK

ALL FILMS SOLD THROUGH THE SALES COMPANY

many years since you, in virtue of your spiritual development, began, in one form or another, to make your presence felt in my work.' Camilla Collett died in 1895, at the age of eigthy-two."

The film production is released Tuesday, December 12th.

"THE LADY FROM THE SEA"

Where Ibsen Got His Inspiration for the Play that Is Enjoying a Stage and Picture Revival

While society is seeing Ibsen's "Lady From the Sea" at high admissions at a fashionable New York playhouse, the poorer-in-pocket will be enabled to enjoy it for a nickel or a dime, thanks to the enterprising Thanhouser producers. And it is likely that they will find more of the atmosphere of Norway about the film production than in the stage one. The camera can do such wonders!

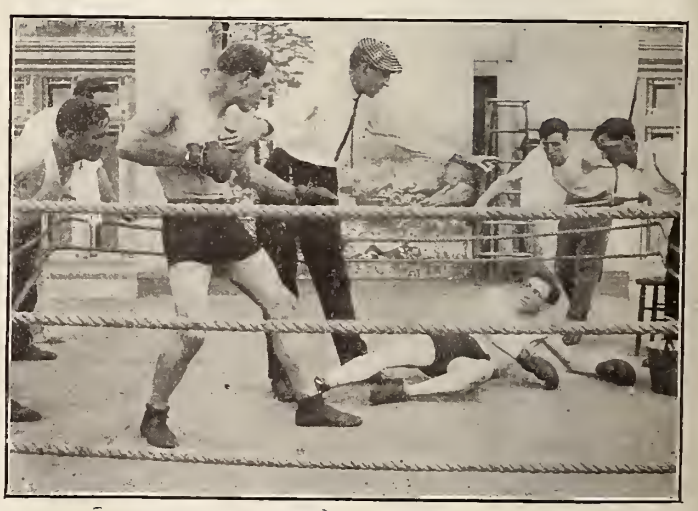
The picture is released Tuesday, December 12th. It is complete in one reel. Readers who are familiar with the releases that have gone before in the Thanhouser Ibsen series will look for a strong drama with the human interest element very heavily featured. In the matter of the source of inspiration of this great work, it is interesting to note that in his introduction to "The Lady From the Sea" (Scribner's) William Archer, who knew the playwright personally, says:

"Ibsen's birthplace, Skein, is not on the sea, but at the head of a long and very narrow fiord. At Grimstad, however, and again at Bergen, he had for years lived close to the skerry-bound coast. After he left Bergen, he seldom came in touch with the open sea. The upper part of Christiania Fiord is a mere salt water lake, and in Germany he never saw the sea; in Italy only on brief visits to Ischia, Sorrento, Amalfi. We find him in 1880 writing to Hegel from Munich 'Of all that I miss down here, I miss the sea most. That is the deprivation to which I can least reconcile myself.' Again, in 1885, before the visit which he paid that year to Norway, he writes from Rome to the same correspondent, that he has visions of buying a country house by the sea, in the neighborhood of Christiania. 'The sight of the sea,' he says, 'is what I most miss in these regions, and this feeling grows year by year.' During the weeks he spent at Molde that year, there can be no doubt that he was gathering not only the political impressions which he used in Rosmersholm, but the impressions of the ocean and the fiord, and of the tide of European life flowing past, but not mingling with the 'carp-pond' existence of a small Norwegian town, which he was afterwards to embody in "The Lady From the Sea." That invaluable bibliographer, Halvorsen, is almost certainly wrong in suggesting that Veblungsnes, at the head of Romsdalfiord, is the scene of the play. The "local situation" is much more like that of Molde itself. There Ibsen must frequently have seen the great English tourist steamer gliding noiselessly to its moorings, before proceeding up the fiord to Veblungsnes, and then, on the following day, slipping out to sea again.

"Two years later, in 1877, Ibsen spent the summer at Friederikshavn and at Saeby in the north of Jutland, not far from the Skaw. At Saeby I visited him, and from a letter written at the time I make the following extract. He said that Fru Ibsen and he had just come to Friederikshavn, which he, himself, liked very much—he could knock about all day among the shipping, talking to the sailors and so forth. Besides, he found the neighborhood of the sea favorable to contemplation and constructive thought. Here, at Saeby, the sea was not so easily accessible. But Fru Ibsen didn't like Friederikshavn because of the absence of pleasant walks about it, so Saeby was a sort of compromise between him and her. I remember that he enlarged to me at great length on the fascination which the sea exercised over him. He was then, he said, 'preparing some tomfoolery for next year.' On his return to Munich, he put his ideas into shape, and 'The Lady From the Sea' was published in November, 1888."

THE COWBOY PUGILIST

This is the title of the Nestor release for Wednesday, November 22, and, being invited to take an advance peep at this new Nestor "knockout" picture, we sallied forth in high spirits. Well, we went, we saw, and "The Cowboy Pugilist" conquered us. The story, though quite interesting, would not matter much were it not for the clever manner in which it is handled. A young cowboy, thoroughly conversant with the art of self-defense, meets and nearly vanquishes a professional pugilist, thereby winning two hundred dollars, the purse offered to any one able to go four rounds with the challenger. With the money thus earned, the cowboy satisfies the greedy landlord's demands, and his sweetheart and her grandparents remain in their present abode. Such is a cursory outline of the story around which the Nestor people have succeeded in building a photoplay of highest excellence, and which will, perhaps, outrival and outlast the tremendous popularity gained by a former Nestor masterpiece, "The Parson and the Bully."



CAN THIS BE TRUE?

San Francisco, October 5, 1911.

Moving Picture News.

Gentlemen:—Having read a number of your issues I know that the following incidents will prove of interest to your readers. It is showing how the Patents Co. procures cameras by systems that can almost be called theft. About six months ago I bought an optigraph mechanism from the Novelty Moving Picture Co., a Trust exchange of this city, and used it for some time as a projecting machine in my home. At this time I was employed by Miles Bros., and being in close proximity to a number of cameras I started to figure how I could make one. I soon worked out a plan by which I could use my optograph as the mechanism by revising a few minor details in its construction. Upon finishing the camera I found it up to my highest expectations. Sometime later a gentleman giving the name of Mr. C. C. Davis, of Los Angeles, called upon me and stated that he had a partner who owned a half million dollars of oil property near Bakersfield who wanted ten thousand feet of film made showing the oil industry in California, and he also said that he had a contract with the Board of Education of Los Angeles to supply them with films for school purposes. This so-called Mr. Davis struck me as being a straight man and I actually believed his cock and bull story, and showed him my camera. But after his telling me that he had such an enormous project on hand I advised him to buy a good camera and have me operate it for him on a salary, as the camera I had made could not be guaranteed to do the work as well as it might. This proposition seemed to satisfy him and he asked me if I knew of anybody who had a camera that he could buy. I happened to know of a Mr. Kanzee who owns a camera, and told Mr. Davis about him. I also knew of a Mr. Brodsky who owned a camera. Mr. Davis told me to go to these gentlemen under the pretext that I wanted to buy their cameras for my own amusement, as he claimed he was afraid they might find out what he wanted them for. These gentlemen having refused to sell their cameras, Mr. Davis claimed he had received a letter from his partner in Bakersfield, Mr. Smith (a very odd name by the way) stating that Miles Bros. had an Urban camera that they wanted to sell. Just before meeting this Mr. Davis I had given up my position at Miles Bros., and thought it very strange that they should have a camera for sale, but anyhow I went up to see Mr. Miles and he said that I must have been misinformed, as he had no camera to sell at any price. Having met with such failure, Mr. Davis thought that if he was to offer Mr. Brodsky a good enough price for his camera he would sell it. So he and his partner, who had come up from Bakersfield, and myself went up to see Mr. Brodsky and offered him $400 for his camera. Mr. Brodsky refused to sell. So Davis offered him $500 for it. Mr. Brodsky then saw through Mr. Davis's shallow game and said that he had no camera. We then started downtown and while waiting for a car I told Mr. Davis that I thought Mr. Brodsky had an idea that he was a detective from the Patents Co. Davis then threw back his coat, displaying a star on which was printed "Detective Motion Picture Patents Co.," and said, "Well I am." What I then said to Mr. Davis, alias Kelly, would not be fit to publish in your paper. Kelly said that he wanted to speak with me about something very important. I went to his apartment with him and upon arriving there he took a revolver out of his pocket and laid it near him. After displaying this formidable looking weapon he asked me if I would be so kind as to identify Miles Bros.' camera by means of drawings he showed me. I told Kelly that I knew nothing at all of Miles Bros.' cameras and if I did I wouldn't be fool enough to describe them to him. Kelly then said that if I would turn my camera over to Miller and White, the Patents Co.'s attorneys in this city, and made no rumpus about it he would see that I got a position that I had been after for some time, with the Essanay Co., who are located in San Rafael, Cal. Again I made a very serious mistake and turned my camera over to the very brilliant gentlemen who are representing the Trust. After having journeyed up to San Rafael several times I managed to get a hearing from Mr. Anderson in reference to the position Kelly had promised me. Mr. Anderson referred me to Mr. Portell, who told me to speak to Jesse Robbins, the camera man. Jesse told me to speak to Obrien, the business manager. Obrien told me to speak to Anderson again and I suppose I would be running around to different members of their company yet if I had not seen my mistake. After about a month I again went up to see the estimable gentleman and on being ushered into Mr. White's office was asked by him what I wanted now. I told Mr. White that the day after turning the camera over to him I requested him to mail me a receipt. He then offered to make one out for me, but I told him I had changed my mind and had decided to take back my camera. Mr. White said that that would be impossible, as upon turning the camera into his hands I had made an unwritten agreement with him of which I am entirely ignorant. He then asked me if that was all I wanted to see him about, and started to make out a receipt to me for my camera. I told him that it was a good waste of writing paper to do so as I would not leave his office until he turned over my own property to me. Then he rang a bell and called in his stenographer—a frail appearing girl by the way—to show me the door. Rather than to gain the notoriety of being arrested I walked out, but Mr. Kelly and Messrs. Miller and White can rest assured that any opportunity that comes within my reach to expose the Motion Picture Patents Co. will not be passed by. Furthermore, I wish to state that I am at present constructing another camera that it will take a whole army of Kelly's and gentlemen lawyers to get away from me. Hoping this rather long letter will prove a warning to other owners of cameras who are in danger of being robbed of their lawful property by the highly respected corporation known as the Motion Picture Patents Co., I remain very respectfully yours,

HAROLD L. MOHR,
2254 Van Ness avenue, San Francisco, Cal.

P. S.—A word to the wise is sufficient, General Film Co.

(We publish the above with all reserve, especially as our correspondent signs his name and gives his address. We cannot understand why the M. P. P. Co. want to do this, as there are no patents on cameras now, and cinematographers are at liberty to use any make without molestation. Will the Patents Co. give us their version?—Ed. M. P. N.)

THE WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE
OF NEW YORK

CITY CUSTOMERS ARE ALL SATISFIED

NOW READY TO CATER TO OUT-OF-TOWN BUSINESS

LET US HEAR FROM YOU

Telephone 2892 Bryant 2893

Forty-Fifth St. Ex. Bldg.
145 WEST 45th STREET

AUTHOR'S QUESTION BOX

A. B. C.—We are inclined to think that the caption: "A Human Doughnut," would be inappropriate for a picture playlet.

Maiden Lady.—Yes, love scenes are presented as naturally as possible. No; the gentleman who proves such an unmitigated scoundrel in the picture generally rents a pew in the Methodist church and reads the Ladies' Home Journal after the day's work.

Young Author.—Editors, as a rule, object to manuscripts written with pencil on both sides of the paper.

Ambitious.—You are right. It's a trifling matter to pose for the pictures. The few necessary qualifications are natural talent, theatrical experience, versatility, attractiveness and years of hard study.

Curious.—Thanksgiving pictures will not be taken in Turkey this season.

Colonial.—It is strictly au fait to blow out candles in picture plots of colonial day environments. To blow out the gas in latter-day scenes would not be apropos.

Suburban.—So far as we know, the chickens appearing in rural scenes are real chickens. We are unable to speak authoritatively on this subject, however, not having had the pleasure of gazing into the face of a chicken for some time, owing to the H. C. of L. 2. It is doubtful if any director is at present in the market for a gentleman expert as a human plow.

Artist.—No, moving pictures are not painted.

* * * *

C. B. Hoadley, popular editor of the Independent Moving Pictures Co., was once sporting editor of the old Toledo, Ohio, Bee.

* * * *

"Did you ever read, 'The Fall of the House of Usher?'"

"No; I was in the house when the usher fell, but I didn't think it would be worth reading about."

LUX FILMS

THE FILMS THE EXHIBITORS DEMAND

RELEASED FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1911

A Passing Cloud

DRAMA Approx. length 655 ft. A Drama of Emotional Interest.

Bill and Bertie's Wedding Day

COMEDY Approx. length 325 ft. A Short, Bustling Comedy.

R. PRIEUR, 10 East 15th Street, NEW YORK CITY

TELEPHONE 3427 STUYVESANT

Sold only through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

ONLY EASTMAN RAW STOCK USED.

THE CINEMATOGRAPH IN CHINA

(From Consul C. L. L. Williams, Swatow.)

Daily Consular and Trade Reports

Of recent years the cinematograph shows have made great strides in public favor in China, until now almost every port boasts of at least one theater, and many of five or six.

In the city of Swatow, which is one of the smaller ports as regards population, there are two theaters now in operation, and in the consular district of Swatow, geographically one of the smallest in the Empire, there are four or five traveling shows, in addition to the two theaters. Peking, Tientsin, Shanghai, Hankow, Hongkong and Canton each support several theaters and there are numerous traveling shows in the neighboring country districts.

Naturally there is a great demand for films, and to a lesser extent for apparatus. A well-known French company has a practical monopoly of the market so far as southern China is concerned, and it is said that the same state of affairs exists in northern China. The usual practice is for the theater or traveling show to rent such films as it may require, and to supply this demand the French firm has an agency in Hongkong. This firm's monthly charges and conditions for the hire of films are as follows:

Length	Two changes a week. Series A. Mexican	Series B. Mexican	Series C. Mexican	One change a week Series A. Mexican	Series B. Mexican	Series C. Mexican
500 meters ...	$500	$500	$300	$300	$200	$150
1,000 meters...	800	650	500	500	400	300
1,500 meters...	1,200	950	750	700	550	400
2,000 meters...	1,500	1,100	900	800	650	500

Prices are given in Mexican dollars, as in this business quotations must be in the currency actually in use. The Mexican dollar equals $0.423 in American currency, and the meter equals 3.28 feet. Series A comprises a program of films never before seen in the locality; series B, a program seen in one cinematograph in the locality; series C, a program seen in various shows. Series B films may be rented for one performance at the rate of 2 cents per meter per day; series C films at 1 cent per meter per day.

The rent for films is payable in advance, and the rentee must make a guaranty deposit, which is refunded without interest on return of the last lot of films. The foregoing prices are, of course, for ordinary "dramatic" films, and for "historic" films after their first novelty has worn off. Much higher prices are charged for films depicting special events.

Second-hand Films—Methods of Entering the Market

Secondhand films find a ready market in China, although the prices naturally vary considerably, according to condition and subject matter, etc. One operator here states that he has recently purchased a secondhand English film, in good condition, for a farthing ($0.005) a foot, f. o. b. London, which worked out at about $0.006 a foot landed in Swatow. The same man stated that he had tried to buy secondhand films in the United States, but that as a rule the prices asked were higher than English or French prices. In treaty ports and the larger cities electricity is usually available, but the traveling shows generally depend on some other artificial lighting system.

The only agency for the sale or rent of American films in the Far East, so far as can be learned, is located in Manila. If the American manufacturers can meet the French prices, there should be a good market for their films in China. There should be at least two depots—one in Shanghai for the Yangtze Valley and North China, and one in Hongkong for the southern coast ports and West River Valley. It is useless to attempt to conduct this business from the United States, as these theaters are usually concerns commanding but little capital. They require a few films at a time, but at least weekly changes. The import tariff on films and apparatus is five per cent ad valorem.

(A list of prices asked for apparatus by the French firm and the names of the proprietors of two Swatow theaters may be had from the Bureau of Manufacturers.)

Cricks & Martin had their housewarming at "Kinematograph House," 101 Wardour street, on Tuesday, when all the shining lights of picturedom gathered to wish good luck to Mr. G. H. Cricks, who is one of the veterans and yet at the head of one of the most go-ahead of cinematograph houses. The general opinion of the new officers was that they were in every way worthy to be the home of the "Lion's Head" films, both spacious and attractively filled, with a particularly cosy projection theater showing a good picture.

B. A.

TEN COMMANDMENTS

From Flickers

1. Thou shalt not wait for something to turn up, but thou shalt pull off thy coat and go to work that thou mayest prosper in thy affairs, and make the word "failure" spell "success."

2. Thou shalt not be content to go about thy business looking like a loafer, for thou shouldest know that thy personal appearance is better than a letter of recommendation.

3. Thou shalt not try to make excuses, nor shalt thou say to those who chide thee, "I didn't think."

4. Thou shalt not wait to be told what thou shalt do, nor in what manner thou shalt do it, for thus may thy days be long in the pob which fortune hath given thee.

5. Thou shalt not fail to maintain thine own integrity, nor shalt thou be guilty of anything that will lessen thy good respect for thyself.

6. Thou shalt not covet the other fellow's job, nor his salary, nor the position that he hath gained by his own labor.

7. Thou shalt not fail to live within thy income, nor shalt thou contract any debts when thou cannot see thy way clear to pay them.

8. Thou shalt not be afraid to blow thine own horn, for he who failest to blow his own horn at the proper occasion findest nobody standing ready to blow it for him.

9. Thou shalt not hesitate to say "No" when thou meaneth "No," nor shalt thou fail to remember that there are times when it is unsafe to bind thyself by a hasty judgment.

10. Thou shalt give every man a quare deal. This is the last and great commandment, and there is no other like unto it. Upon this commandment hang all the law and profits of the business world.

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO.

SHAMROCK FILM

Scenes from

"WHITE FAWN"

ROMANTIC INDIAN STORY

Another of those heart stories that hold an audience spellbound from the opening scene to the end of the story, so realistically told as to bring tears to the eyes and a throb to the heart and peace to the weary mind, a firm determination to profit by so beautiful an object lesson, reminding us one and all that there is "A destiny that shapes our ends, rough-hew them as we will."

"HOW HE WON HER"

HIGH CLASS COMEDY

"ON THE VERGE"

TENSE PROBLEM DRAMA

"A PETTICOAT RANCH BOSS"

BREEZY WESTERN COMEDY

"BEN SAUNDERS' REDEMPTION"

A STRONG MELODRAMA

And MANY OTHERS Ready to Announce

We intend to produce nothing but the best and along the lines demanded by the critical, brainy patrons of that most wonderful institution, The Motion Picture Theatre.

ST. LOUIS MOTION PICTURE CO., St. Louis, U. S. A.

OUR MUSIC COLUMN

M. D., Alabama, writes:—"I have just started in playing for pictures in one of the theaters in our city, and as I have had no experience in this line of work, I wish you would be kind enough to tell me what kind of music I need and a few suggestions on how to use it, etc. I am very anxious to get started off right, so any advice you give me will be more than acceptable."

Letters such as the above are always interesting from their sincerity. The writers are all in the same position as "yours truly"—they want to know how, why, what, when and where. Now the best any of us can do is to offer suggestions, for it all rests with you, your application to the work, experience, individuality, etc. I have in previous articles, on this page, endeavored to set forth my ideas as to the principles of the application of music to the pictures, and any suggestions I might make could only be general in character, for as I have stated before there cannot be any set rule which will apply to all pictures alike, for their character and possibilities are so great and varied, and each musician must work them out according to his own ideas. There is one thing that the musician must at all times strive to do, that is, get into the spirit of the picure, allow yourself as much as possible to become enveloped in the atmosphere that you think the producer was trying to accomplish, bring out each and every point as clear and distinct as possible. If the picture is a comedy, help it along and thus help carry out the idea the producer had in mind. A drama may have both serious and comic elements in its make-up; very often in a dramatic picture it is possible to introduce a laugh where none was intended, and this you must be very careful to avoid at all times as it is very liable to interfere with a serious or important scene, for there is always some ass in the average audience who will laugh at anything, at any time.

"What kind of music is needed?" is another very natural question, and one that can be answered very briefly—"every kind." You need a library that is varied from all of the "rag time" to grand opera—for there is no limit to what you might be able to use, or may be in need of at a moment's notice. If you will consult some of our back numbers you will find many suggestions as to what you might be liable to need in case you have not the music mentioned in them.

It should be plain to every one that no one "system" or method of playing for pictures can be laid down or followed. You must use your "gray matter" a little, and it will be very liable to work out in the proper direction.

A. R. T., Wisconsin, writes:—"What music can you suggest to be used, for pictures of 'Ancient Egypt,' etc.? I am 'up a stump,' so will be pleased to learn of some."

Answer.—In case you have not the following they can all be used to serve as a musical background for this sort of a picture: "Vision of Salome," "Salambo," Beethoven's March from the "Ruins of Athens," March from "Aida" (Verdi), "Anthony and Cleopatra" (Grunewald), "Iris," Pryer's "Egyptian Love Dance," "Zallah," "The Caravan," etc.

R. F. D., Pennsylvania, writes:—"While I may be a little out of order in my request to you, I am going to ask and trust to your generosity to grant my request. I would like a list of German Home Songs and will be more than grateful if you will name some for me."

Answer.—It is true your request is a little out of order, but we are here to please, we are open day and night, our keys are in the river, so here is a list as per your request; trust it is what you desire: 1. "Lang! Lang! Ist's Her." 2. "O du lieber Augustin." 3. "Die Lorleiee." 4. "Im Wald und aufder Heide." 5. "Wenn die Schwaeben heimwarts zieh'n." 6. "Grad'aus den Wirthshaus." 7. "Im tiefen Keller." 8. "Du, du Liegst mir am Herzen." 9. "So wie du." 10. "Die Wacht am Rhein." 11. "Hoch sollen sie Leben." 12. "Zu Lauterbach hab'imein Strumpf verloren." 13. "Trink wir noch ein Tröpfchen." 14. "Die Holzauction." 15. "Mädele ruck, ruck, ruck."

Goodness, man, never again ask me to do anything like that, or I'll never be forgiven. Mercy, think of the poor typo who has to set all of that up. I'll forgive you this time, but never again.

S. P. DeB., New Jersey, writes:—"What can you suggest to me for cowboy pictures. I've been looking for some new music for them 'till I'm black in the face, but outside of what I already have my search has availed me nothing. Please come to my rescue."

Answer.—If you want your music to say "Yip! Yip! this is a cowboy picture." I cannot suggest anything except the cowboy songs that were so very popular a few years ago. There are many who object to these because they are so old, but what else can be offered. There has been a few new ones to appear in the past year or so, but the vogue is passing away so rapidly that they did not achieve much popularity, so they might not be well enough known to have the desired effect on the audience. A few strains from "Idaho," "My Cowboy Girl," "Pony Boy," "San Antonio," or any of the other songs of like character will impress on the observer that he is looking at a cowboy. Don't try to depend on these alone for this class of a picture. Use them when you desire to mix in a little "local color" and for the rest of your picture let the nature of the picture determine what kind of music you should use. Simply because your piece is one of Western character, etc., is no reason why your music should all be suggestive of cowboys, etc. While I like to see the "local color" inserted, and believe in it, yet it can be overdone and thereby destroy much of the value of the picture. Work up the picture just the same as you would any other and insert your cowboy music just to keep the atmosphere of the picture, and you have done about all that can be done for a picture of this kind.

The season of cold and dampness is now upon us and the nature of drum-heads causes them to absorb moisture readily, and when a drum-head once becomes damp it is bound to lose its brilliancy.

The problem of how to overcome this annoyance has always been a source of trouble to the drummer and many plans have been tried, but have always proven either impracticable or unsatisfactory.

The Leedy Manufacturing Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., have recently put on the market the only real drum-heater. This heater is an efficient, practical device that is inserted through the vent hole and can be attached to any drum in a few minutes without marring the shell in any manner. Though the heat generated is sufficient to keep your drum brilliant and snappy, regardless of atmospheric conditions, it is evenly distributed and so regulated that it never becomes hot enough to bake or dry out the heads.

The electric heater gives no light, never burns out, can be turned on or off at will, or if desired, entirely removed in a few seconds. The entire outfit, including the heater proper, which is 9½ inches in length by ⅜-inch in diameter, six feet of cord, and the two connecting plugs, weighs but eight ounces—the heater alone but two. One very good feature of the heater is that it is light, compact and durable. It can be easily carried in a drum case.

The regular model should be connected with a 110-volt incandescent lamp socket, but they are prepared to make them to fit any other voltage desired.

This article is an excellent investment for any drummer, as it always keeps the drums in the very best playing condition possible, regardless of the weather, and saves worry and expense of replacing broken heads, or having to take your drums apart to put in a new lamp in case you are using an incandescent lamp for a heater.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 11, 1911.

Editor Moving Picture News:

Dear Sir—Can you tell me if the woman who played the adventuress in the Rex picture, "A Breach of Faith," is now with the Rex Company and her name? Your kind attention in the inquiry column will be appreciated.

Yours truly,
M. B. MANLEY.

[The lady mentioned is Miss Lois Weber. She is still with the Rex Company.—Ed.]

SAY, MR. EXHIBITOR

Why pay an enormous price for Film Service when you can be supplied from our monster stock of FEATURE FILMS at the following prices:

2 reels six times per week.....$14.00
2 reels seven times per week.....$15.00
3 reels six times per week.....$16.00
3 reels seven times per week.....$17.00

WRITE FOR FILM LIST.

NATIONAL FILM BROKERS
186 N. LaSalle St., CHICAGO.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

FROM THE OBSERVATORY
By G. F. Blaisdell

MONTCLAIR and Newton are both in New Jersey. While the former will not permit the establishment of a picture show within its limits, the latter town is peopled by a different kind of men. In Newton the local lighting plant proved to be insufficiently equipped to furnish power for the street lamps and the moving picture shows. Of course, the shows had to be supplied. Hundreds of the village residents find their only amusement in the picture places, and the officials of the company reasoned that the lesser evil would be in darkened highways rather than in darkened projectors. Newton must be a good town to live in.

* * * *

Although the aldermen of Portland, Me., in March, 1908, passed an order requiring the examination for fitness of all operators in picture houses, the provisions of the act have never been carried out. Measures are being taken to secure the enforcement of the rule.

* * * *

Dr. Elduras Richmond, of Philadelphia, talking on "Pictured Truth" before the Washington District Sunday School Association, said that if the Protestant church is to keep up with the march of progress it must utilize the moving picture. Dr. Richmond said that as Christ had taught by means of symbols it was in no wise irreverent to use the varied advantages of the moving picture to promulgate Scriptural teaching.

* * * *

Some of the operators in Albany are joining the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and are trying to induce all the others to join, but in some instances are meeting with stiff opposition.

* * * *

Ministers in Topeka, Kan., have taken up moving pictures as an adjunct of Sunday evening services. The Rev. Robert Gordon, of the First Baptist Church, will use pictures for five consecutive Sunday evenings. The theme will be the life of Moses.

* * * *

E. H. McManus, a real estate dealer of Salina, Kan., has been elected president of the Liberty Motion Picture Manufacturing Company, recently incorporated under the laws of Missouri. The company is capitalized at $100,000.

* * * *

The American Film Manufacturing Company is to picture Los Angeles and Pasadena.

* * * *

Moving pictures played an important part in the political fight in Alexandria County, Va. On the day before election a screen was erected in front of the Court House, and the voters were shown pictures of alleged gambling houses and "speakeasies" in operation.

* * * *

The Buffalo Express hands out a good one. It is a story of a dog. The dog is named Trix. Trix, so the story goes, officiates as the side partner of the squawk man in a Buffalo picture show. His station is behind the screen. When there is thrown on the screen the picture of a dog Trix is on the job. The squawk man subsides, signals to the dog, and the real thing in the way of a bark is the result. The feature is said to make a hit, which is more than can sometimes be said of the human noise-making agencies.

* * * *

G. B. Barratta, an Atlantic City hotel man, is entertaining his guests with selected reels of pictures.

Commissioners Weatherly and Exum, of Birmingham, Ala., after inspecting "The James Boys" declared they could see no valid reason for barring the pictures.

* * *

If John Kamuda had remained away from the Star Theater, in Warren, Mass., after he had quit his job he would also have kept away from trouble. The proprietor of the Star was tipped that John was thinking of making a visit to the operating booth. The police chief was notified, and he secreted himself and awaited John's arrival. John arrived and immediately got busy. Before the chief could get to him John had damaged things. After spending the remainder of the night in the lockup John was fined $5 and ordered to repair the damaged machinery.

* * *

Lieutenant George R. Goethals, U. S. A., this week lectured on the Panama Canal before the four thousand delegates in attendance at the Trans-Mississippi Congress in session this week at Kansas City. Lieutenant Goethals is an official representative of the Canal Commission. His lectures were illustrated by moving pictures, giving a complete history of the work on the canal.

* * * *

T. F. Wilkerson, manager of a picture theater in Durham, N. C., recently exhibited a set of films purporting to show events in the life of Beulah Binford. He was arrested and convicted of exhibiting improper pictures. The judge declined to have the pictures introduced as evidence, declaring the girl's life history could hold no good moral lesson. Sentence was deferred.

* * * *

Miss Kate Davis, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., talking in Detroit, batted out some real hot stuff. Miss Davis is described as a well-known social "worker" in the East. "Moving picture shows," she declared, "as they are now conducted are hotbeds of iniquity, training schools for criminals, and recruiting stations for the white slave traffic." Miss Davis recommended that a special board of censors be appointed by the state of Michigan to look over all pictures shown in the state and strike out objectionable features.

Why not also have a board of censors to pass on the inexplicable ebullitions of garulous females? There would seem to be work a-plenty for such a board.

By the way, Pennsylvania legislators this year threw a sop to the censor clamorers by creating a board of two—and then quietly omitting to provide salaries. There would seem to be work at home for Miss Davis to do. Miss Davis thought so, and volunteered her services. Up to date there is no record of their acceptance.

* * * *

The Rev. J. M. Gaul, director of the children's department of the United Charities of Houston, Texas, in an article treating of child life, assails moving pictures, describing them as a force for evil that in a sense is peculiar to every city. Mr. Gaul admits there are a few exceptions, but declares that for the most part the scenes depicted in the picture shows are such as should never be seen by a child and certainly in his opinion are not beneficial to the average adult.

It would be interesting to know what particular films the reverend gentleman had in mind when he wrote the foregoing. In the wholesale condemnation of pictures there is generalization a-plenty and—a paucity of specification.

* * * *

The Auto-Foto New York Company has been incorporated at Albany, with a capital of $1,400,000, to deal in automatic picture machines and to carry on a general photographic business.

CHICAGO LETTER

The editor of one of the prominent daily papers has realized the scope of moving pictures as an educator and upliter of youth; his manifestations may be seen in an editorial, under the heading of—"The Moving Picture—the Great Educator of the Future," printed in the Chicago Evening American, of Monday, November 13, 1911. It was all well brought out that anything actually perceived by a child is much better remembered, and that the child has a more definite idea of the subject when seen than when expiained in the tiresome and dry manner of the present day school books.

We cheerfully thank the editor of the Chicago Evening American for his hearty editorial in furthering the advancement of moving pictures, and we sincerely hope that his suggestions will be followed.

* * * *

During the week a benefit entertainment was given for St. Mary's of the Lake Church. The program consisted of a dance and an hour moving picture show of "The Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered." Same was held at the Arcadia Hall, Evanston and Sunnyside avenues; price of admission was fifty cents, and over two thousand people attended, consisting of some of the most select society of the North Side. Both financially and otherwise, the affair was a great success. Certain individuals, who probably had never witnessed a motion picture before, were indeed amazed by the realistic and excellent portrayal on the screen of Tasso's famous work—"The Crusaders, or Jerusalem Delivered." The novelty took the audience by surprise, and a delighted and happy crowd left the Arcadia Hall, well pleased and with pleasant memories of a delightful and instructive evening. The affair was conducted under the management of Mr. Beahan, of the Industrial Moving Picture Company, who is well known in the north shore society circles.

* * * *

Recently an article in a certain Chicago paper stated that 1,000 feet of film burned and the operator was seriously injured at the Bessemer Theater, South Chicago; instead the operator was unharmed and about fifty feet of film burnt, which was settled for by the I. A. T. S. E. It seems that the newspaper men in this city are always on the wrong track concerning the correct news of moving picture accidents.

* * * *

The Monroe Theater, at Fifty-fifth and Monroe streets, which was recently a straight vaudeville house, is now under the management of Mr. William Jenner, recently of the Cox Vaudeville Agency. The "Monroe" is a good live theater with a first-class program consisting of five vaudeville acts and three reels of first-class Independent pictures supplied by the Standard Film Exchange. The admission is five, ten and fifteen cents, the lowest that can be charged for a show of this kind and still large profits are obtained.

* * * *

The Hamburger Amusement Company Houses, The Apollo, The Monroe, The Ellis, and The President were placed on the unfair list last week by the I. A. T. S. E.

* * * *

Two new theaters have been erected at Milwaukee avenue and Division street. They have a seating capacity of three hundred and Independent pictures are shown.

* * * *

Recently a moving picture theater was erected at Campbell and Division streets, but the builder forgot to wire it until he finally discovered that he wanted to use the elecric power.

* * * *

Mr. Mark Dintenfass, general manager of the Champion Film Co., was in the city last week and paid a friendly visit to the different exchanges here.

* * * *

Mr. W. E. Franck, the well-known auditor of the Laemmle Film Company, has returned from his trip West for Laemmle's interests.

* * * *

Mr. W. C. Roskofp, proprietor of the Lyric Theater, Marshalltown. Iowa, has arranged for first-class Independent service with the National Film Brokers.

WARNER KENNEDY.

Augusta, Me—Roxbury Scenic Theater Company; capital, $250,000; E. J. Pike and L. J. Coleman.

Belfast, Me.—The contract for erecting the new theater on Phoenix Row has been let to J. L. Russell, of Pittsfield, Me.

Medford, Mass.—The opera house which was damaged by fire to the amount of $4,000 will be rebuilt.

Lawton, Kan.—A new theater to be called the Cassin will be built here to replace the Ramsey Theater, and will cost $10,000.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE

Fort Myer has again been the scene of motion picture dramas, the actors being those of the Lubin Company of Philadelphia, and the soldiers of the fort. Of course, Captain Dean was in evidence, as usual. Director Melville will probably infuse into the Lubin organization some of the popularity which was experienced by the Solax Company with photoplays among real army life at Fort Myer. During the sojourn here the players and director were entertained by Treasurer Long of Chase's Theater.

* * * *

"The Mobilization of the American Fleet" has had a popular run in Washington, having made its first appearance at the Plaza and the Empress. At the Sunday concerts at the Academy and the Gaiety it was enthusiastically received.

* * * *

The entering of additional film companies into the manufacturing field has given to the motion picture theaters a wider scope for choice as well as more first-runs, for which there is always a great demand. The theaters of Washington have welcomed this, and especially will they be glad to get a Sunday release from the Majestic. The amusement houses are permitted to be open on Sunday afternoon and evening here, so that a feature especially for such performances will be appreciated by both public and managers.

* * * *

A new theater has arranged service for motion pictures. This is the Imperial, a high-class vaudeville house of unique architecture and artistic finish. Motion pictures are certainly a demanded amusement of the times.

* * * *

The Colonial, the home of the pipe organ, featured the first appearance of "Auld Lang Syne" in a ten-cent show, using additional reels to make an hour and a half performance. All who saw this reel have spoken highly of the realistic Scotch element it contained, while the story itself is charming. A comprehensive program with the cast of characters and explanatory notes was distributed to the patrons of the Colonial. Manager Brylawski announces that this playhouse "will present a series of magnificent picture plays, dramatization of the popular novels, accepted by the public schools as the best in literature." This is one of many educational and progressive steps of Manager Brylawski in the motion picture industry.

* * * *

The Edison Thanksgiving reel of "Home" is being heavily booked by the General Film Company, as its domestic sentiment is one that will appeal to everyone.

* * * *

Mother Goose has been welcomed by the Independent houses as an appropriate Thanksgiving holiday release.

* * * *

As an extra reel, The Empress recently showed the Roman play of "Virginius." It added something of a classic element surrounded by modern dramas of American life.

* * * *

"The Track Walker," by the Reliance, may be classed as one of the finest balanced plays of human passions and ambitions we have seen lately. Its best elements are the natural drawing of character, and the unique overcoming of emergencies.

* * * *

With a view of centralizing strength, workmanship and interests, the motion picture operators have formed a union, which includes almost all of those now at machines. This is an excellent showing to commence with, and there is little doubt that the others in this business will fall in line. It is hoped by the exhibitors that such an organization will cause more care with machines and films. The officers, meetings, and particular aims will be announced later.

W. H.

OUR WESTERN CORRESPONDENT

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 15.—The week's feature of the amusement world to be recorded by "yours truly" has a suggestion of things pugilistic, and while on contained such disturbing elements as to shatter the rules and regulations of "Uncle Sam," who has decreed that if there is a mix-up due to be pulled off that the parties involved "pull their freight" to some other locality other than the government reservation.

Just because this warning was not heeded Carl Hansen, trap drummer at the Lyric Theater, conceded also to be the most accomplished drummer in the South, with more traps than any other two men, and his former sweetheart, Myrtle Eazell, engaged in a controversy, with the result that both landed in the city bastile and later paid fine and costs before Judge Leslie, of the United States court.

Carl has been a particular friend of mine for some time, but this is not the first incident in which he and the Eazell woman were important factors. On other occasions, however, we have kindly refrained from including such events in the routine of the day's news, but the past week was of such a nature that Carl had it coming to him and we just couldn't keep it quiet.

The feminine part of the trouble obtained a divorce some time ago and alleges that she gave Hansen $250 of the $500 her former lord and master bestowed upon her. She charges that Carl has ceased to care for her, so when she met him on the reservation opposite the Lyric, where he works up the effects for the pictures, she engaged him in conversation which soon grew into a genuine "scrap," with the result, Carl informs me, that Myrtle reached down, picked up a half of a brick, and proceeded to indent her money ram in the handsome drummer's ribs. Not caring to be made the recipient of this kind of attention, Carl struck the girl and then Government Detective Bloom arrested the pair. The following day, upon the advice of her attorney, she brought suit against Mr. Hansen for the return of $250, charging the money was obtained by false representation, and this case is to be tried before Justice of the Peace Smith. The details promise interesting reading, and among other statements made to her attorney, James L. Graham, the girl claims that Hansen had promised to marry her as soon as he got a divorce from his present wife, which caused some surprise, for but few were aware that there was a "Mrs." who had a claim on him. Hansen has any number of friends in this city, who were sorry to learn that his acquaintance with the Eazell girl had resulted as it did.

In my last week's letter I stated that a prize had been offered by the management of the new theater for a suitable name. Well, one was selected out of a thousand submitted. The new theater will be called the Central, which is appropriate, for the reason that it is above all things centrally located. The prize was won by Dr. H. P. Collings, who immediately turned the award, a five dollar gold piece, over to St. Joseph's Infirmary. George Walker, who will manage the new theater, and Sydney Nutt, who will look after the business and financial side of the proposition, inform me that their theater will be open about January 1. A change in the plans have been made by adding a fly gallery to the stage and a special line of scenic equipment has been ordered, which indicates that vaudeville may find a place to show, after all, or if not that then some nice little stock company. The house will have a seating capacity of 640, with arrangements for galleries in case the business demands this increased seating capacity.

I was much interested in the friendly query propounded in last week's Moving Picture News by the gentleman from Port Jarvis. I have a very warm place in my heart for that little New York town, for the reason that it was there one starry Sunday night a few years ago that "The Lady in the Baths" and myself, after a happy little romance of one month's duration, stole away from the other members of the stock company we were with at the time and decided to have a minister say those words that would enable us to go down life's path hand in hand together for the remainder of our days. Now, my inquisitive "Canuck" in the Catskills, do you wonder I am a "happy guy?" I try to be, and when I am burdened with man's share of business cares I have the clouds chased away by the result of that ceremony in Port Jarvis, and you may inform Rev. Dr. Wesley Martin, if he is still there, that this was one knot that sure has held. Ask the manager of the "opry" house if he remembers the first appearance in Port Jarvis of the Chauncey-Keiffer company and the time the leading man and the "heavy" woman were married. Our opening bill Monday night was "The Kidnapped Bride," too. Some consistency, that—what? Happy, you ask, well r-a-w-t-h-e-r! And then some.

We had the "Black Patti" company here this week, and it was the limit. There was a time when this wench could sing, but she has lost her voice of old and it has given place to a set of shrill pipes that would make good on the East Side selling fish. Mutt and Jeff are due this week, as is also Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Woman." The best vaudeville acts of the week were Prof. Apdale's trained animals, and this set the city "dippy." This was the first time that my better half had seen Jack Apdale since they were both associated in stock together. At that time Apdale was Wormwood's right-hand man, and now he has a wonderful vaudeville feature of his own. The Killarney Girls were also here. This is a wonderfully clever singing act and they were great drawing cards.

In view of the fact that the Sunday saloons were closed here for the past few weeks on the Sabbath, "The Water War," an American film, was received with a great deal of interest. "Folks of Old Virginia," a Champion, was also a good reel, "King," emulating the art of Nick Carter, gave his friends in this city much to be thankful for. "The Jewels of Allah," a Thanhouser, was interesting, but spoiled by numerous inconsistencies and improbable situations. Among the Trust reels that scored this week were: "The Long Road," Biograph; "The Living Peace," Edison; "Outskirts of Paris," Eclair; "A Gay Time in Atlantic City," Lubin; the Pathe Weekly and Vitagraph Bulletin.

Manager Frank Head has given the College Boys' Minstrels assurance that they can have their show in the Auditorium Thanksgiving night and they have buckled down to rehearsals in great shape. The show will be stronger than before and an afterpiece treating of recent political events will be one of the features.

THE MAN IN THE BATHS.

Savannah, Ga.—The Montgomery Amusement Co. has purchased the Odeon and Folly Theaters and a new theater will be built on the site of the Odeon Theater.

Sacramento, Cal.—Florence J. Clumie will remodel the interior of the Clunie Theater at a cost of $800.

South Bend, Ind.—Mrs. Helen Druzbicka is erecting a new moving picture theater on West Division street at a cost of $8,000.

SECOND GRAND
ENTERTAINMENT AND BALL
OF THE Moving Picture Operators
Benevolent Association
AT ARLINGTON HALL, 19 to 23 St. Mark's Place
Thursday Evening, Nov. 23d, 1911
Entertainment Starts at 8.30 Sharp
TICKETS, Admitting Gent and Lady, 50 Cents
Music by PROFESSOR LOUIS FISCHER
Dancing at 11 o'clock

WHEN IN DOUBT SELECT A "COMET"

COMET RELEASE, MONDAY, NOV. 27th

GRANDMA'S TOOFACHE

A Sparkling little pathetic touch that will add friends galore to the cause of the "Comet."

RELEASED FRIDAY, DECEMBER 1st

THE LATE MRS. EARLY

A splendidly photographed, superbly staged and excellently acted comedy of domestic trials and triumphs.

COMET FILM CO., 344 East 32nd Street, NEW YORK

Released through Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

The Optic, Main, between Fifth and Sixth streets, which changed to Independent service a short time ago, is certainly making good. In spite of the fact that there are two trust houses in the same block, this theater is packing them in.

The big drawing card there last week was the first of the Imp detective series with King Baggot in the leading role. Believe me, King is some sleuth and he certainly made a big hit with the Optic patrons.

Mr. Woodly, the manager of this popular house is one of the most enterprising showmen in the city, and this together with those big Independent features will always fill the seats.

* * *

The Royal Theater, Second and Broadway, has closed. Poor business, due to a bad location, is the reason it closed.

* * *

It is thought that the censoring board will take temporary quarters in the Walker Theater, for after a careful investigation by the city council it was found that if a moving picture outfit was installed in the Temple Block that the insurance would take a big jump skyward. As the Walker has been dark for several weeks there will be no difficulty in securing it.

* * *

The Bell Theater, Silver City, New Mexico, has changed from Trust to Independent. Service is obtained from the Phoenix branch of the California Film Exchange.

* * *

Kemps Travel Talks played the Auditorium Thursday, Friday and Saturday to good houses. They have a number of excellent films of the Panama canal and a fine lecture was given upon the same. Many school children viewed these pictures for their educational value.

* * *

"Divorce," the big Reliance drama, was the attraction at the Shell last change. This is by far one of the best yet produced by the Reliance Company, having a very strong plot and the acting is superb, especially that of Mr. Walthall. This picture is receiving much favorable comment.

* * *

The Quinn Brothers, who control the Banner and the Bijou theaters, have added another house to their list of successful enterprises, having taken over Hyman's at Eighth and Broadway. This house, like their others, is sure to be a success under the competent management of these popular showmen. Three reels of Independent pictures are shown and specialties are introduced between reels. The admission is ten cents.

* * * *

The Electric Theater, Clifton, Arizona, are now taking Independent service from the Phoenix branch of the California Film Exchange.

* * *

The many friends of Mr. E. C. Hamilton will be glad to know that he has completely recovered from his serious illness and is again the chief operator at the Gem Theater.

* * *

Well, at last the exhibitors in Long Beach have woke up, and it is certainly time that they did. Ever since the picture show came to that popular resort the spieler came with it, and when you took in one of the shows you had to endure that shouting of the individual outside. But at last the showmen on the pike put their heads together and did away with the aforesaid noise producers and consequently business is much improved.

* * *

The electric annunciator, which Mr. Stutz has installed in his Gem Theater, is making a decided hit with his many patrons. The Gem is situated across the street from the big Pacific Electric Railway station, and as this novel device, which Mr. Stutz designed personally, announces the cars as they leave the depot, many people that have to wait any length of time for their trains patronize this house, and while they are enjoying the show they are in no danger of missing their cars.

* * * *

The old slogan that "if you once visit Los Angeles you will always come back," is proving itself to be true, for the Biograph Company, which wintered here last year, have come back. And they are not all, for two other companies are soon to arrive in the land of perpetual sunshine, namely, the Majestic and the Nestor companies.

* * *

Mr. Louis Stutz, who is quite conspicuous in a big green beaver hat and a nobby suit, is now managing the National Film Exchange and prosperity is much in evidence.

WITH THE WESTERN PRODUCERS

The American Biograph Company arrived this week and have taken their old quarters on Pico and Georgia streets. This is the second time that they have made Los Angeles their winter home, and there is a rumor afloat that a permanent company will be established here.

* * * *

Mr. David Horsley arrived last week in the interest of the Nestor Film Company. After a careful investigation of the surrounding country, Mr. Horsley secured a tract of land in Hollywood. This is a very pretty suburb near the city and the erection of a magnificent studio will be started soon. The Nestor Company intends to put their Western company where real Western scenes can be secured.

* * * *

Mr. Thomas H. Ince, formerly director of the Imp Company, has been engaged to take charge of the Bison forces.

* * * *

The funeral of Mr. Francis Boggs, former director of the Selig Company, took place last Wednesday. In the death of Mr. Boggs we not only lose a man of the highest personal character, but also one of the ablest workers in the motion picture field. PHIL WHITMAN.

LONDON OFFICE OF THE NEWS

8 Sherwood street, W.

November is already living up to its latter-day reputation as a kind of second April—patches of sunshine alternating with heavy rainfall. We don't have so many of the good old-fashioned fogs nowadays of the kind which used at one time to necessitate the guidance of a man with a torch if you wished to get home after the theater. That was an experience which had a certain amount of charm while the novelty lasted, but it was hardly weather to cheer the heart of the amusement caterer. The kind we are getting at present, however, is calculated to lead to a very gratifying treasury at the various picture theaters; nothing more cheerful when the air outside is raw and damp than a cheerful, well-warmed Cinematograph theater giving a cheerful program. The prophets say we shall have a hard winter, and from a strictly business point of view, at any rate, the picture showmen are not sorry to hear it. There are arrears to make up, for undoubtedly the fine summer hit some of them severely; a recent circularization of theaters, indeed, led to a depressing number of returned letters marked "gone away" or "closed." Most of these, of course, were small establishments which probably would not long have survived the increased severity of competition, but undoubtedly King Sol had something to do with hastening their end.

* * *

By the way, it would appear that the steady increase in the number of really lavishly equipped theaters, seating from 700 to 1,000 people, is likely, to a certain extent, to harm the film makers. I know one district of London where at least three small shows have closed down since a larger theater was opened by one of the powerful companies. Each of these used 6,000 feet or so of film per week; their audiences are absorbed by the new place which, however, uses no more film. The country is not yet supplied with the maximum number of one theatre, but when it is, the makers may find that the possible sales of subjects have not increased as much as they expected.

* * *

It may interest members of the American trade to know that the Moving Picture News is being called for by the English trade in increasing numbers with each issue. Sentiment here as regards American matters is almost entirely favorable to the Independents and keen interest is felt in the accounts of the legal battle which appears in the News. It is realized also that in the matter of films the Independents have now quite as strong a hand as the Patents Company, though undoubtedly the open market, which obtains here, means better programs for the English showman than either party in the States can give to its adherents. We would not like to do without Eclair or Ambrosio or Cines, but neither would we relish being deprived of Vitagraph, A. B. and Selig—particularly the first named, whose subjects are, I am prepared to maintain, easily the most popular in the world with English audiences. They maintain a level which we would like to see reached oftener in the Independent films which reach us, and are as highly esteemed by buyers as by the public. Moreover, it's all clean work, no problem plays, leaving a nasty taste in the mouth, but good, honest drama and comedy which is comedy and not knockabout farce. B. A.

THE PHENOMENAL AND PREDOMINATING QUALITY DISPLAYED IN THIS OUR WEEKLY PROGRAM OF RELEASES

MONDAY—Imp., Comet, American, Champion (Nestor starts November 20)
TUESDAY—Thanhouser, Bison, Powers (Eclair American Starts November 21)
WEDNESDAY—Champion, Solax, Reliance, Ambrosio, Nestor
THURSDAY—Rex, American, Itala, Imp., Eclair
FRIDAY—Bison, Solax, Thanhouser, Lux, Comet
SATURDAY—Powers, Itala, Great Northern, Nestor, Reliance, REPUBLIC (Starts December 9th)
SUNDAY—Republic, Dec 10th. MAJESTIC (Starts Nov 6th)

EMPHASIZES A DISTINCT QUALITY AND CLASS PRE-EXISTING OVER ALL OTHER FILMS SOLD

It is utterly impossible for any one to realize the enormous strength in back of the Sales Company Organization without a clear idea of the manufacturing facilities and requirements of each and every one of the Film Producing Companies whose brands are sold through this company.

To the average man a film studio and plant is merely a factory—a place where films are made. Yet there is the greatest difference in the world. You may have the largest and most expensive plant and still turn out films absolutely flat and uninteresting.

It is the artistic training and years of experience in the Moving Picture Industry of the Manager and Producer combined with high-class talent, always keenly observing the little details, that make the films a success. Originality of Plots and the ability to select only such scenarios that will delight, interest, and instruct one, with a general tendency towards the uplifting of the moral standards of humanity.

We are glad to be able to state that the various manufacturers whose brands we sell spare no expense in securing such geniuses and can honestly say that any film that is sold through this company is of highest Quality.

The words "Sold Through the Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co." is in itself a GUARANTEE OF QUALITY

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.

MANUFACTURERS' SYNOPSES of FILMS

THE PRICE

Rex Release, November 23

A pictorial poem on the frailty of woman.

Some woman's eyes!
Many a man has lost his way,
Many a man has gone astray,
Following, following, all the day—
Some woman's eyes!

The years of our life go by, gliding, descending, as waters move to the sea. In the vastness and illimitable immensity of the cosmic whole our individual selves and sorrows are quite unimportant. The voice of the world calls our sorrows Destiny. But under the depths, fathoms under the tides of life, lie the wrecked and wracked hearts of humans, bare, bruised, bleeding. Whenever God creates a beautiful woman, the devil jots something down in his notebook; and we who have loved a rag and a bone and a hank of hair, we who have given years and tears and the spoil of our heart and hand, and then discovered it all to be hollow instead of hallowed—we know! And the others—they never could understand!

Pretty Ann, and Joe, the 'ostler, one day chance to meet. Strong is Joe, and simple, and Ann is shy and sweet. As man and maid have done before, they love, and marry, too. And live happy ever after?—ah, this tale is new to you! Yes, the tale is drear, prosaic, and so poetry won't do!

A baby boy comes to bless the union. Joe is working in the stables when they tell him of his joy; his heart is gay and happy—and he tells the horses so.

Then—it might be the angels were jealous of such mortal happiness; it might be the devil, seeing the stage so set, entered to play the leading role. The tempter comes to the woman. He is a gentleman, suave, polished, charming, a man of manners. And Ann, knowing not the manners of men, hears and heeds and falls as the angels fell from heaven, another Eve heeding the serpent's call, facing a morn of desired delight, and the twilight of despair.

One night Joe comes home with a happy cry of "Wife!" But the only answer is the whisper of desolation, the ghostly voice of ghastly vice! He reads the note she left him, and—Joe doesn't know much about God, 'ceptin' what he feels—doesn't know much about anything but hosses—but he asks the Lord to pardon and protect the weak, the weak woman he loved. Like a frail blossom lacking sunshine, the motherless baby droops and dies. Joe goes his way making no complaint—'ceptin' what he tells his hosses, 'ceptin' what he tells his God!

Far away in mighty London, the woman rises into fame. Through her lover's influence and wealth, she becomes a noted actress. Her beauty wins men's homage, and she prospers in her shame. Then—the day of reckoning! Time plays no favorites; the immutable law of the years takes its course; youth flies, her beauty vanishes, her charm withers; and the pretty toy, grown useless, is flung aside, as of old. The wedded morn and roses, and the widowed night—and mourning; light and life to-day; dark and death to-morrow; the errand of folly, and the wage of sin—from Adam to Eternity!

In a far-off country town, youth and strength gone, his soul seared by the sad sorrow of woman's sin, Joe reads in a newspaper how a once-famous actress, alone and in poverty, is dying. The fickle world has forgotten her fame; the fickle worshippers of wanton beauty have forgotten her very name. But Joe has forgotten only her sin and shame; only Joe remembers—only Joe is true.

He comes to her and tells her he forgives her, tells her he loves her for what might have been, for the soul he would meet again in the Far Away, in the Beyond, across the vale. Held in his arms, the eyes that had seen sin look into the cleansing tears in his, and close in death!

On the stone over her grave Joe wrote one word—the honored name of "Wife."

A blossom we fain would pluck to-day from the flowers above her dust; a blossom as pure as love that lasts, a blossom sweet as the peace and purity we hope Ann found in the Distant Land.

SHAKESPEARE'S "THE TEMPEST"

Thanhouser Release, November 28

Prospero, the rightful Duke of Milan, is a kindly man, but a student. His fondness for literature gives his enemies a chance to plot against him, and through the machinations of his own brother, Antonio, and the King of Naples, Prospero is dethroned and Antonio assumes his throne. The conspirators are afraid to execute Prospero, who is beloved by the people, so they take him to sea, and set him adrift in an open boat with his little daughter, Miranda, expecting that they would never be heard of again.

Fortunately for Prospero and the child, they drift ashore on an island. It is inhabited solely by good fairies and wicked sprites. Prospero wins the favor of the former, and is able to subdue the latter and make them subservient to his will. On this island father and daughter reside for twelve years. Then Prospero learns by his magic that his brother, the King of Naples, and the latter's son are passengers on a ship that is sailing near the island. By aid of his powers, he is able to draw the ship to the island, where it is wrecked, but Prospero so arranges it that no lives are lost. His enemies now being in his power, he proceeds to punish them.

Antonio and the King of Naples are forced to wander around the island, while Aeriel, a good but mischievous fairy, plays all manner of pranks upon them. Ferdinand is conducted to the presence of Prospero, and set to menial work. He meets Miranda, and falls in love with her, the very thing that Prospero had set himself to bring about. In the end, Prospero forgives the two men who have wronged him, on condition that they relinquish their thrones to Miranda and Ferdinand, who have agreed to marry and live happily forever afterwards.

BENEATH THE VEIL

Thanhouser Release, December 1

A young artist is a great lover of the beautiful, and has a natural horror of anything repulsive. He falls in love with a girl who satisfies his artistic requirements. But he fails to realize that love, unless founded on something deeper than mere beauty, is not love at all.

The girl's father, a worldly-wise inventor, does not approve of his daughter's choice. He realizes that the young artist has many limitations, and doubts if he will make his daughter happy. The girl, when told of his fears, at first laughs them to scorn. Then she begins to doubt, herself.

Finally, a chance comes to test the father's theory. There is an explosion in the laboratory, and the girl, in trying to save her father, is badly injured. The artist hurries around to the house, and finds that the girl he loves is disfigured for life. She offers him his freedom and returns him his ring.

The young man is not of the stuff of which heroes are made. His love cannot survive the loss of the girl's beauty. He takes the ring and hurries away. And the fears of the father are proven justified.

As time rolls on the artist finds that he cannot forget the girl he once hoped to wed. Gradually he forgets her beauty, and thinks more and more of her character and mental attributes. He realizes at last that it is the girl he wants, and even were she as ugly as a hag life will be a wilderness without her.

Humbly he returns to the house, and again pleads his suit. At first the girl repels him; finally she consents to take him back, after he has convinced her of the sincerity of his love. She is heavily veiled when they meet, but she does not raise the veil, neither does he ask her to. Her physical appearance is of no importance, he tells her, and so far as he is concerned this is the truth. For he is no longer the artist, he is the sincere lover.

Still wearing her veil, but her beauty regained, the girl accompanies him to the altar. When they return to his studio the veil is lifted, and with a radiant smile she goes to his arms.

Their love has been cruelly tested, but the artist has proven that he is a man well deserving of the happiness that now is his.

HUSBANDS WANTED

Solax Release, November 22

Dick Abbot, a confirmed bachelor, is left a large fortune by his uncle's will on condition that he is married within a month. Dick wants the fortune and not knowing any girl he would want for a wife, he advertises. Gladys Bennett, a very pretty girl, who works in a millinery store, is lonely and tired of living in a small furnished room. She reads Dick's ad and writes him a letter. Dick makes an appointment for her to meet him at a certain restaurant at five o'clock, stating he will wear a white carnation and asking her to wear one also, that they may know each other. Gladys accidentally drops her letter from Dick in the park. A matrimonial agent picks it up. He rushes to his office, where a crowd of old maids, widows, etc., are awaiting him. He sends each one to the restaurant wearing a white carnation. The proprietor of the restaurant is greatly pleased with the crowd, and seeing them all wearing white carnations he gets a large bouquet of them and puts one on each member of the orchestra, also all other customers. Each woman darts for a man with a white carnation. The place is in an uproar when Gladys enters, only to get knocked down by a big Irish woman. Dick comes along in time to help her up and they lose no time in getting away from the howling mob.

THE WILL OF PROVIDENCE

Solax Release, November 24

An old miser, before dying, writes his will and sews it up, with all his money, in the lining of an old coat. The will reads that whoever finds the money can keep it. He gives the coat to his landlady, but she is disgusted and sells it to a second-hand dealer. An amateur actor later buys the coat. He makes a failure in his first tryout and, blaming his bad luck on the coat, takes it back to the Jew. A little waif, without a home, father or mother, knocks at the door of a poor journeyman tailor. The tailor's family share their humble abode with the little waif. The poor child is in rags and the tailor goes to the second-hand store to get him something to wear. He buys the miser's old coat, thinking he can cut it down for the little waif. The child helps to cut the lining out of the coat, when out drops the old miser's money and the will, and the tailor and his family are amply repaid for adopting the waif.

UNCLE'S VISIT

Imp Release, November 27

A rapid-fire comedy in which a faithful young wife incurs the enmity of her husband through being overzealous.

Mr. and Mrs. Sperry, newlyweds, are expecting a visit from Mr. Sperry's uncle, a wealthy cattle raiser, from Kansas. He has never met the wife and she is anxious to make a good impression. She receives a letter from another relative warning her that, inasmuch as the man from the cyclone country is quite eccentric, he may come disguised to test her qualities.

She remembers the admonition and when "Slimmy," a typical nomad, puts in an appearance, he is royally received. The knight of the road is agreeably surprised. He thoroughly enjoys the situations of being guessed out as the expected relative. He is wined and dined like a prince and tops it off with a fragrant cigar, finishing up by appropriating the contents of the box.

In the meantime Uncle Silas arrives and calls at the office of the husband, where he is given a royal greeting. Business is dropped and the nephew proudly escorts the man from the West down the street, having in prospect a happy surprise for his wife.

They enter the hall and the fumes of a cigar greet their nostrils. The uncle is shocked and inquires sternly if the wife is addicted to the use of tobacco. They go into the room and find "Slim" enjoying all the comforts of a privileged guest. There is consternation. The husband fires out the tramp and the perplexed wife tries to explain, but the irate husband will not listen. The uncle is also exasperated and announces his intention of boarding the next train for Kansas. Finally the wife shows the letter and it all dawns on the husband.

There is an explanation to the uncle and a happy reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Sperry. The story closes with the tramp inhaling the fragrance of a choice cigar, his hunger appeased, about to take passage up the road on the bumpers of a freight car.

OVER THE HILLS

Imp Release, November 30

A story of the rocky mountains in which a miner finds a wife with some embarrassing circumstances connected with his strange courtship.

Ethel Edgar is a wild rose of the peaks, whose only associates are rough, honest miners. Her father and brother refuse her permission to accompany them on a prospecting trip, giving as an excuse that she is a girl and cannot withstand the hardships. She is peeved and decides to go gold hunting on her own hook. Procuring a mirror and a pair of shears, she clips off her tresses, dons male attire and, with revolver and pick, sallies forth in search of adventures.

One comes most inopportunely, for she falls over a cliff and rolls to the rocks below, stunned and amazed. She is rescued by Wayne Holland, a young miner, who lives alone in a cabin on the mountain. He carries her to his home, where she revives. Holland, while not conversant with the ways of women, has an intuition that his newly made friend is masquerading. The girl tries to hide her identity but makes it all the more apparent that she is not what she seems.

Leaving her in the cabin, Holland sleeps in the open and an unsuccessful miner tries to rob him, entering the cabin. The girl screams and Holland is awakened. There is a fight and the thief is sent crashing down the mountain side.

Ethel leaves the cabin and goes home, where she dons suitable wearing apparel. Holland, left alone, cannot forget the sweet face and resolves to seek her. After much primping he dresses in his best suit of clothes and goes to her home, where he discovers her in proper personæ and is smitten by her charms. He endeavors to make love to her, but she will have none of him in his make-up, assumed for the occasion. He returns to his home crestfallen as the result of his courting expedition. Ethel follows him, anxious to make amends for her seeming coldness. There is a pretty scene in his cabin of the happy lovers.

THE MOTHER GOOSE SERIES

Champion Release, November 27

People who are looking for striking and original things in the photo stories will have something to sit up and think about when they see screened the Champion's remarkable "Mother Goose Scries." Think of seeing once again, not in fancy, merely pictured in a child's story book, but right before us in living characters, the familiar figures so dear to our childhood days.

"Rock-a-bye baby on the trectop" and lo! and behold! there is the tree and high in its branches is the cradle and the baby, gently swaying in the wind. And there, too, do we see Mother Goose herself, and not only she, but her big, fat goose also. And there she sits smiling at us benignly, the author of all our delight. "When the bough breaks the cradle will fall," and sure enough the bough breaks and down come cradle, baby and all. But the best part about this Mother Goose scries is its appeal to the grown-up children. And here is where the Champion's originality that we first spoke about shines forth,—that is to say, in the manner of its presentation.

We are introduced to a modern scene, everything cozy and comfortable. There sits the old grandfather in his easy chair. There reclines the younger married folk by the brightly burning hearth-fire. In tumble the youngsters, and the parents and the old grandfather are soon smothered in their childish embraces. Now the crossed legs of Papa and Grandad are brought into play as horses. The gray-whiskered and gray-haired old Grandfather is once more a child. His face lights up with childish enthusiasm as his voice rings out, "Ride a Cock Horse to Banbury Cross, to see a young woman ride a white horse; rings on her fingers, bells on her toes, we shall have music wherever she goes." His joyous enthusiasm becomes infectious as he dashes the little one up and down on his "horse-leg." Soon all the other grown-ups are beating time, and not one in all that room but "as a child" once more.

